UNIVERSITY OF ST. MICHAEL'S COLLEGE
3 1761 01897238 0

THE

NATIONAL GAZETTEER:

A Topographical Dictionary of the British Islands.

COMPILED FROM THE LATEST AND BEST SOURCES,

AND

ILLUSTRATED WITH A COMPLETE COUNTY ATLAS, AND NUMEROUS MAPS.

UNIVERSITY OF ST. MICHAEL'S COLLEGE LIBRARY

VOL. III.

NAAS TO ZOUCH MILL.

AND

APPENDIX, CONTAINING A TABULAR VIEW OF THE UNITED KINGDOM, SUMMARY OF POOR LAW RETURNS, AND DIGEST OF CENSUS RETURNS FOR 1861.

LONDON:
VIRTUE AND CO., CITY ROAD AND IVY LANE.
1868.

LONDON:
PRINTED BY VIRTUE AND CO.,
CITY ROAD.

THE NATIONAL GAZETTEER OF Great Britain AND IRELAND.

The Custom House, Dublin

THE

NATIONAL GAZETTEER

OF

GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND.

[LIST OF ABBREVIATIONS.—par., parish; tnshp., township; vil., village; hmlt., hamlet; chplry., chapelry; tythg., tything; ext. par., extra parochial; lib., liberty; div., division; hund., hundred; wap., wapentake; bar., barony: prov., province; co., county; dioc., diocese; archdeac., archdeaconry; rect., rectory; vic., vicarage; cur., curacy; perpet. cur., perpetual curacy; don. cur., donative curacy; presb., presbytery; pat., patron; patron., patronage; val., value; the asterisk (*) denotes that there is a parsonage and glebe belonging to the living.]

NAAS, NORTH and SOUTH, two bars. in the co. of Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. The former is bounded by North Salt, South Salt, South Naas, Connell, Clane, and co. Wicklow. Its area is 25,579 acres, and it contains the pars. of Bodenstown, Johnstown, Kerdiffstown, Naas, Rathmore, Sherlockstown, Tipper, Whitechurch, and part of that of Killashee. The latter is bounded by North Naas, Kilcullen, and Connell, and co. Wicklow. Its area is 27,478 acres, and it contains the pars. of Ballybought, Ballymore-Eustace, Brannockstown, Carnalway, Coghlanstown, Gilltown, Jago, Tipperkerin, and parts of Kill and Killishee.

NAAS, a par., market and post town, in the bar. of North Naas, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, 19 miles S.W. of Dublin, Ireland. The par. is 3½ miles long by 2½ broad. The surface is flat, and the soil good. The Liffey touches it on the W., and the interior is intersected by the road from Dublin to Waterford, and by a branch of the Grand canal. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kildare, val. £323. The church is very old, and was enlarged in 1822. There are Independent and Roman Catholic chapels; also a convent, National and other day schools, belong to the parish. The town stands on a branch of the Grand canal, and on the road from Dublin to Carlow. It consists of one main street, and contains a court-house, gaol, military and police barracks, a dispensary, and union poorhouse. In the vicinity are numerous seats surrounded by plantations. Its trade has much declined of late years. Naas was formerly a place of importance and a parliamentary borough. It was in very early times the seat of the kings of Leinster, and numerous interesting relics of its former consequence are still to be traced. Quarter sessions are held in the town. Mondays and Thursdays are market days. Fairs are held on 15th January, 16th February, 17th March, 15th April, Holy Thursday, Whit-Monday, 19th June, 11th July, 10th August, 10th September, 20th October, 22nd November, and 14th December.

NABURN, a parochial chplry. in the par. of Acaster-Malbis, wap. of Ouse, East Riding co. York, 4 miles S. of York, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Ouse, close to the ferry, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is of a loamy nature, with a subsoil of clay. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £80. The church, dedicated to St. George, is a stone structure of recent erection, and has a spired tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum. There is a school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Bell Hall, Lincroft Lodge, Deighton Grove, and Naburn Hall are the principal residences—this last is a mansion commanding extensive views of the valley of the Ouse. The Rev. William Palmer is lord of the manor.

NABY, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Cotherston, North Riding co. York, 4 miles N.W. of Barnard Castle.

NACHORE, a mountain in the co. of Antrim, Ireland, 6 miles N. by W. of Glenarm. It is situated near Garron Point, and has an altitude of 1,179 feet.

NACKINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Bridge, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 2½ miles S.W. of Canterbury, its post town. The village, which is inconsiderable, is situated on the line of the ancient Stane Street, and is wholly agricultural. The land is partly in hop-grounds. The parish is of small extent, comprising only 887 acres, of which the greater part is arable, with about 90 acres of woodland. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £52, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. Lord Sondes is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

NACTON, a par. in the hund. of Colneis, co. Suffolk, 4 miles S.E. of Ipswich, and 8 from Woodbridge. It was either in this parish or else at Rushmere that Earl Ulfketel fought a battle with the Danes in 1010. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the banks of the river Orwell, and came through the Fastolfs to the Brokes. The par. includes Alnesbourn-Priory, Halfway House, and Purdis Farm. At Seven Hills, on the road from Ipswich to Trimley, are several barrows where human bones have been found. The land is partly in common. The soil is of a sandy nature, with subsoil of sand and crag. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £525, subject to rates. The living is a rect.* annexed to that of Levington, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £250. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, is a rubble structure with a tower. Broke Hall and Orwell Park are the principal residences. Captain Sir G. N. Broke, C.B., Bart., is lord of the manor. The Woodbridge union poorhouse is situated in this parish.

NACUNG, a small lough in the northern div. of co. Donegal, Ireland, 7 miles N.E. of Dunglow. It is situated under the Arrigal Mountain, and is about 3 miles long by 1½ mile broad.

NADDER, a small river of the co. Wilts, flowing into the Avon at Wilton.

NADDLE FELL, a lofty summit in the co. of Cumberland, near Thirlemere.

NAFFERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Ovingham, E. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 2 miles N. of the Prudhoe railway station, and 8 E. of Hexham. The township, which is of small extent, is situated on the road from Corbridge to Newcastle-on-Tyne, and is about 2 miles N.W. of the river Tyne. There are vestiges of an old monastic building, said to have been occupied by banditti in the reign of Henry VI. In this township is a colliery giving employment to many of the inhabitants. It is a meet for the Tindale hounds.

NAFFERTON, a par. in the wap. of Dickering, East

Riding co. York, 2½ miles N.E. of Driffield, its post town, and 4 from Burton-Agnes. It is a station on the Bridlington, Hull, and Scarborough section of the North-Eastern railway. The village, which is extensive, is situated on the road from Driffield to Scarborough. The Driffield canal passes through the parish. A place called "Danes-Graves" is said to have been a Danish place of interment during the Danish invasion. The par. comprises the tnshps. of Nafferton and Wansford, also the hmlt. of Pockthorpe. There are several malting-houses, and an extensive corn-mill. The manufacture of linen cloth, ropes, and twine is also carried on to a small extent. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1769. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £300, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient stone edifice with a square embattled tower crowned with pinnacles, and containing a clock and two bells. The interior of the church contains an ancient stone font restored in 1846, also an E. window inserted in 1854 by John Dickson, as a memorial to his late uncle, Richard Dickson, Esq. The church was restored in 1846, at which time a new raised roof was added, the original one having been flat. The register dates from 1564. The charities consist of two trusts—viz. the parish trust, £48 16*s.* 6*d.*, and the poor's trust, £44 2*s.* 6*d.*—realised from houses and land. There are an endowed National school for both sexes, an infants' school, and a day school for the Wesleyans. The Primitive Methodists, Wesleyans, Independents, and Baptists have each a place of worship.

NAFFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Eckington, hund. of Pershore, co. Worcester. It was formerly a distinct parish, but is now united with Eckington. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1773. The church, formerly dedicated to St. James, has long been demolished, and the living consolidated with that of Eckington.

NAFOVEY, a lough in the co. of Galway, Ireland. It is about 3 miles in length by 1½ mile broad, and lies to the W. of Lough Mask.

NAGLES, a range of mountains in the co. of Cork, Ireland, 7 miles W. of Fermoy. They attain an elevation of nearly 1,400 feet.

NAHANAGAN, a small lough in the co. of Wicklow, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Laragh. It is situated at an elevation of 1,385 feet above the sea-level.

NAILSBORNE, a hmlt. in the hund. of Taunton Dean, co. Somerset, 3 miles N. by W. of Taunton, and 7 S.W. of Bridgwater. It is situated in a fertile spot near the river Tone and Bridgwater canal.

NAILSEA, a par. in the hund. of Portbury, co. Somerset, 9 miles S.W. of Bristol, its post town. It is a station on the Bristol and Exeter railway. The village, which is of large extent, is situated on the road from Bristol to Clevedon. The par. includes the tythgs. of East, West, and Middle Nailsea. There are numerous collieries and stone quarries, which employ about half the population, also a tannery, brewery, corn and saw-mills, and extensive glass-works. A large portion of moorland was enclosed in 1813 by Act of Parliament. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £430. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £300. The parish church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is an ancient stone structure with a lofty embattled tower crowned with pinnacles, and containing six bells. The church was thoroughly restored in 1861. The interior contains a curious stone pulpit richly sculptured, and is ascended by a winding flight of steps in the wall. There is also the district church called Christ Church, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £120. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There are National schools for both sexes. The Independents, Wesleyans, United Methodists, and Free Church have each a place of worship. Sir J. H. Greville Smyth, Bart., is lord of the manor.

NAILSTONE, a par. in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 3 miles N. of Market-Bosworth, its post town, and 3 W. of the Bagworth railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Anker. The par. includes the vils. of Burton-in-the-Beans and Normanton-le-Heath. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The surface is gently undulating, and the soil a rich loam. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £570. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £500, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure with a spired tower containing three bells. There is a chapel-of-ease at Normanton-le-Heath. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. Earl Howe is lord of the manor.

NAILSWORTH, a chplry. and post town in the pars. of Avening, Horsley, and Minchinhampton, co. Gloucester, 2 miles S.W. of Minchinhampton, and 4 S. of the Stroud station on the Great Western railway. The village is situated on the high road from Bath to Stroud and Cheltenham. The woollen cloth trade is carried on very extensively, giving employment to the chief portion of the inhabitants. There are also manufactures of bedsteads, walking-sticks, &c., which have materially decreased the beech-woods, once very abundant. In the village is a philosophical institution, and in the vicinity numerous barrows have recently been opened. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £100, in the patron. of trustees. The church was erected in 1798 in that part of the village which is in the parish of Avening. There are places of worship for Wesleyans, Independents, Baptists, and Society of Friends, also National and British schools for both sexes. A small customary market is held on Saturday.

NAIRN, a par., seaport, market town, royal and parliamentary burgh, and county town, in the co. of the same name, Scotland, 11 miles W. of Forres, 15 N.E. of Inverness, and 194 N.N.W. of Edinburgh. It is situated on the left bank of the river Nairn, near its confluence with the Moray Frith. The parish forms part of the great plain of Moray, on the Highland boundary, and is bounded on the N. by the Moray Frith, and on its other sides by the pars. of Ardersier, Auldearn, and Calder. Its greatest length from N. to S. is 8 miles, with a breadth of 6 miles near either extremity, but narrowing towards the centre, so that it resembles somewhat the figure of an hourglass. Besides the county and market town of its own name, it includes the village of Seatown-of-Delnies, both near the coast, which is low and sandy. The surface is in general level, the only eminence of any note being the hill of Urchany, near the southern border, which has an elevation of 500 feet above the sea-level. The soil on the banks of the river Nairn, which nearly bisects the parish in a north-easterly direction, in its course from the Highlands to the Frith, is a mixture of loam and clay, alternating with sand, which largely predominates near the sea-coast, but in the southern district it is a rich heavy mould. Nearly two-thirds of the land are under tillage, and the remainder nearly evenly divided between pasture, woodland, and waste. The climate is dry and healthy, which causes it to be much visited in the summer months for sea-bathing. The principal landed proprietors are, the Earl of Cawdor, Mackintosh of Geddes, Robertson of Househill, Rose of Kilravock, and Grant of Viewfield, all of whom have seats in the parish. The road from Elgin to Inverness traverses the parish, and the Inverness and Nairn railway crosses the western portion, and has a station near the town. The estates of Kilravock and Geddes in this parish were granted by King John Baliol to Hugh Rose of Geddes and the Lady Kilravock his wife, in 1293, and are still possessed by his descendants. Of this family was H. Mackenzie's mother, the heroine of Lord President Forbes's song.—The town, originally called Invernairn, was founded by William the Lion, and appears to have undergone many changes. Its first site was half a mile at least from the place where it now stands, and was defended by a castle, the ruins of which are so covered by the sea that the foundations of it are only visible at spring tides. It is of considerable importance, being the county town and a parliamentary borough, though in 1861 its population amounted to only 2,533, having decreased since 1851, when it numbered 2,672 persons. Its principal street, called Main-street, runs in a south-westerly direction from the river bank for near 4 furlongs, and has a dingy, antiquated appearance, partially relieved by the modern public buildings. It is tolerably spacious and regular, with numerous small streets branching off on either side. To the N.W. of the old town, along the margin of the town-links overlooking the Frith, are several modern streets, as Cawdor-street, Cumming-street, and Charles-street, but these are as yet only partially edificed. The pavement, until recently notorious as the worst in Scotland, has been relaid, and the town is well lighted with gas. The principal public building is the town and county hall, a modern pile surmounted by a spire. Its interior contains, besides the hall (sometimes used as a ball-room), the town and county gaol, and other offices. There are besides, the hospital, a modern building of Italian design; three commercial banks, a savings-bank, Richardson's inn, on the same side of the street as the townhall, where the "Nairnshire Harvest Home" is held; and at the S.W. end of the town stands the academy, which has a monument to the memory of John Straith, once schoolmaster of the parish. The other public institutions are, the news-rooms, library, gas-works, and several societies. —A weekly newspaper, the Nairnshire Telegraph, is published in the town on Wednesdays.—The bridge which crosses the Nairn at the town was originally a substantial stone structure, erected in 1631, but was much damaged by the floods of 1782 and 1829, which spread devastation along the lower part of the river bank.—The harbour, which is formed by the mouth of the Nairn, is a subport to Inverness, and is well situated for trade, but is liable to be shilted up with sand, as after the great floods of 1829, when the works constructed by Mr. Telford were partially swept away. It has since been improved by the construction of a breakwater projecting about 1,200 feet seaward from the mouth of the river, and affording complete shelter to vessels from the only winds to which the harbour is exposed. It has 15 vessels belonging to it, besides about 70 fishing boats, and is also a place of call for the steamers between Inverness and the Forth. The principal exports are, fir-timber, salmon, and herrings, the last being principally taken off the Caithness coast. The imports are, coal, lime, colonial produce, and general merchandise.—Its original charter is lost, but its privileges as a royal burgh were confirmed by Act of Parliament in 1597. Under the new Municipal Reform Act it is governed by a provost, 3 bailies, dean of guild, and 11 councillors. The corporation revenue now amounts to only £700, the greater part of the landed property which once belonged to it having been alienated. It contributes with Forres and Fortrose to Inverness in returning one member to the imperial parliament. Constituency in 1855, 117. The sheriff's court for the county is held during session every Wednesday and Friday, and occasionally during vacation, and for small debts on Friday only. The justice of the peace small-debt court is held on the first Monday of every month, and the commissary court occasionally when required. The court of quarter sessions sits the first Tuesdays in March, May, and August, and on the last Tuesday in October.—Nairn gave the title of baron in the Scottish peerage to the ancient family of Nairn, which subsequently passed to a younger branch of the Athole family, and is supposed now to be vested in the Baroness Keith of Banheath.—This par. is the seat of a presb. in the synod of Moray. The minister's stipend is £294 2*s.* 1*d.*, besides glebe valued at £18. The church was anciently a mensal church, attached to the deanery of Auldearn. The present parish church was built in 1811. There are besides a Free church; United Presbyterian church, built in 1815; an Independent chapel; two Episcopalian chapels—one English, the other Scotch. There are parochial schools, a General Assembly's school, a school in connection with the Free Church, a monitory school, and two finishing schools for young ladies.—On the bank of the river, a little to the S. of the town, is the Constabulary Garden, with the ruins of a castle of which the Thanes of Cawdor were hereditary constables till 1747. The other antiquities are, the original castle, mentioned above, to the N. of the town: its site is now covered by the sea; also the vitrified fort called Castle Finlay; and another at Rait. Roman coins have also occasionally been found.—Weekly markets are held on Tuesday and Friday, and a corn market on Thursday. Fairs are held on the third Friday in April, 20th June, or Wednesday after, 13th August, fourth Tuesday in September, Friday after third Tuesday in October, and on the first Friday in November, chiefly for the sale of horses and cattle, but also for the hiring of servants.

NAIRNSHIRE, a small maritime co. in the N.E. of Scotland, lying between 57° 20′ and 57° 40′ N. lat., and between 3° 40′ and 4° 6′ W. long. It comprises a main body and several detached districts in the ancient province of Moray, and a detached district in the earldom of Ross. It is bounded on the N. by the Moray Frith, on the E. by Elginshire, and on the W. and S. by Inverness-shire. Its greatest length from N. to S. is 19 miles, and greatest breadth 16½ miles, but its mean breadth not over 8 miles, being at the southern extremity of the county only 3¼ miles. The area of the whole county is about 200 square miles, or 128,000 acres, of which about 70,000 are cultivated, 30,000 unreclaimed, and 28,000 unprofitable. The population in 1851 was 9,956, and in 1861, 10,065.—The line of sea-coast, which is low and sandy, extends about 9 miles, with the town of Nairn upon it near the mouth of the river Nairn. To the eastward are the Maviston sand-hills, whence the great sand-floods which about two centuries ago overwhelmed a large tract of fertile land to the eastward are supposed to have been blown by the strong north-westerly winds; while to the westward the sea-shore is low and bare, sheltered by a raised beach or terraced bank, which runs nearly parallel with the coast, and is composed of gravel, sand, and boulders, intermixed with sea-shells of existing species. The surface of the county, like that of the other parts of the province of Moray, consists of two entirely distinct portions, the lowlands and highlands. The former, or sea-board district, forms a continuation of the rich alluvial plain of Moray, with a breadth of from 1 mile to 5 miles from the coast, the surface being in general low and flat, and characterised by a light and gravelly soil, resting upon Old Red sandstone, with some deposits of clay and protruding rock. This portion is occupied by cultivated fields, gardens, and orchards. The latter, or highland district, occupies above two-thirds of the county, extending from the southern boundary to within a few miles of the sea, consisting chiefly of mountain ranges or primitive rock, comprehending granite, gneiss, mica slate, primary limestone, and quartz. The summits are in general bare, and frequently cloven; but the slopes are covered with heath or moorland pasture, and abound with thriving plantations of Scotch fir, larch, and hardwood, particularly on the Earl of Cawdor's estate. This highland district is ploughed throughout its entire length by the vale of the Findhorn, on the banks of which are some extremely fertile spots, but the arable land bears but a small proportion to the waste.—There are several quarries of freestone, and one of a dark blue stone in the estate of Boath, much used for ornamental building, and possessing the peculiar property of combustion in the fire, but does not lose bulk. The small loch of Conan and the moss of Lilty yield shell marl in abundance, and coal is supposed to exist, but has not been worked.—The climate and agricultural productions closely resemble those of Elginshire, the distribution of lands under crop being in the following order in 1855:—viz. oats, 7,753 acres; turnips, 4,467; barley, 3,044; wheat, 1,714; potatoes, 1,542; rye, 255; peas, 101; bere, 87; vetches, 70; besides 10,321 in grass and hay, and 165 bare fallow in the course of the rotation of the farm. Of late years agriculture has much improved, by the introduction of a scientific system of farming, and better agricultural implements. Much improvement has also been effected in the breeding of cattle, horses, and sheep. The properties are in general large, there being only fifteen landowners, and 29,553 acres of cultivated land in the county. The farms are small, varying from 30 to 200 acres each of arable land. The universal term of lease is nineteen years; and in 1855 the number of occupiers of land paying a yearly rental of £10 and upwards was 428, exclusive of tenants of woods, mills, &c. Of the remainder of the county not in waste and moorland, there are 8,000 acres of natural woods, and about 4,000 in plantations.—The only manufactures are those of woollen cloth and whisky, besides which a remunerative fishery is carried on at Nairn, the sole seat of commerce in the county.—The only rivers are the Nairn and Findhorn, with their tributaries, including the burn of Cawdor, which flows through the richest part of the country, and abounds in salmon and trout. The lochs are numerous, as Cranloch, Loch Lilty, Loch of the Clans, Loch Bellivat, and Loch Lee, several of which are the resort of wild fowl.—The leading lines of turnpike road are those from Nairn to Forres; Nairn to Inverness; Nairn to Fort George, Campbeltown, and the Ferry; and Nairn to Grantown. Within the present century internal communication has been much facilitated by the construction of good cross roads in every direction, especially in the lowlands; and there is now constant steamboat communication between Nairn and Edinburgh, Aberdeen, Cromarty, and Inverness; also a railway which connects the town of Nairn westward with Inverness.—The only royal burgh is Nairn, the capital of the county; the only burgh of barony Auldearn, and the principal villages Calder or Cawdor, Seatown-of-Delnies, and Newtown, besides 15 villages or hamlets. Nairnshire unites with Elginshire in returning one member to parliament, and in 1855 had a constituency of 132. It is governed by a lord lieutenant, 6 deputy-lieutenants, and a sheriff in common with Elgin. The sheriff and other courts are all held at Nairn. The county contains only four entire parishes —Ardclach, Auldearn, Calder, and Nairn; and parts of five others—Croy, Dyke, Moy, Petty, and Urquhart—belonging to the surrounding counties. All the parishes are assessed for the poor. It constitutes the presbytery of Nairn, which, however, does not include the whole of the county, and is comprised within the synods of Moray and Ross.—The principal seats are Cawdor Castle and Delnies House, of the Earl of Cawdor; Boath, of Sir J. A. Dunbar, Bart.; Ivybank, of Gordon; Geddes House, of Mackintosh; Kilravock, of Rose; Kinsteary Lodge, of Gordon; Lethen House, of Brodie; Milbank, of Colonel Findlay; Nairn Grove, of Macfarlane; Nairnside, of Falconer; and Viewfield, of Grant; besides which there are several modern villas near Nairn, and shooting lodges in the highlands. There are remains of Cawdor Castle, the greater part of which was built in 1454, though the popular tradition makes this the castle in which King Duncan was murdered by Macbeth; also of Kilravock Castle, which dates from 1460, and of the chapel of Raith Castle, which belonged to the Cummines. The vitrified fort called Castle Finlay is situated in a hollow part of the hill of Urchany, and Dun Evan on the summit of a hill in the parish of Cawdor. Roman coins have been found, and many stone circles and cairns are scattered over the county.

NAIRN, THE, called in Gaelic Uisge Nearne, or "water of alders," a river in the ancient prov. of Moray, Scotland. It rises in the Highland district of Badenoch, in Inverness-shire, 8 miles to the E. of Loch Ness, and, flowing in a north-easterly direction through the vale of Strathnairn, traverses the adjoining county of Nairn to the Frith of Forth, where it forms the harbour of Nairn. Its banks are skirted by rich meadows and pastures, interspersed with patches of arable, and flanked by barren mountain heights covered with heath, occasionally varied by thriving plantations and ornamental grounds, as at Aberarder and Farr. The length of its course is about 30 miles in a direct line; and its influx to the Moray Frith occurs about 8 miles E. of Ardersier, where the frith contracts, and the same distance S.W. of the embouchure of the Findhorn. The salmon fishery on the water of Nairn is the property of the Earl of Seafield, and of Davidson of Cantray, who have also a stell fishery at the mouth of the river, which are both farmed to tacksmen who drag the stream. During the great floods of 1782 and 1829 it overflowed its banks, carrying away part of the harbour works, and damaging the stone bridge at Nairn.

NAKEEROGE, a small lough in the co. of Mayo, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Achill Head, and 16 N.W. of Newport. It is situated near the foot of a lofty range of mountains between Newport and Blacksod bays.

NALUGHRAMAN, a small lough in the co. of Donegal, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Adare.

NANERTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangerniew, co. Denbigh, 6 miles N.E. of Llanrwst.

NANERTH, a spot on the Upper Wye, co. Radnor, 2 miles N.W. of Rhayader.

NANNAU-ISAFON and UWCHAFON, tnshps. in the par. of Llanfachreth, co. Merioneth, 3 miles N. of Dolgelly. The village, which is considerable, is situated under Moel-Offrwm, which rises to an elevation of 1,200 feet above the sea-level. In the vicinity is Nannau Hall, the old seat of the Vaughans.

NANNERCH, a par. in the hund. of Rhuddlan, co. Flint, 6 miles from Mold, its post town, and 3 S. of Holywell. It is situated under Moel-Arther, a strong British post, defended by two ditches of great depth. It contains Cwm, Llan, Trefechan, and Penbedw, formerly a seat of the Mostyns. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the iron and lead mines and limestone quarries. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £292, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary, has a monument to Charlotte, wife of R. Mostyn, Esq., of Penbedw. The charities produce about £2 per annum.

NANNY WATER, a river of co. Meath, Ireland, rises near Navan, and falls into the Irish Sea, at Julianstown.

NANT, a tnshp. in the par. of Abergele, co. Denbigh, near Abergele.

NANT AND PRESTATYN, a tnshp. in the par. of Meliden, hund. of Prestatyn, co. Flint, 3 miles N.E. of Rhuddlan. It is situated on the coast. "Nant" in Welsh signifies a pass or hollow by a brook, and is frequently used as a prefix to other names.

NANT-CLYWD, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanedilan, co. Denbigh, 4 miles S. of Ruthin. It is situated near the river Clwyd.

NANT CONWAY, a hund. in the co. of Carnarvon, contains the pars. of Bettws-y-Coed, Dolwyddelan, Llan-Rhychwyn, Penmachno, Trefriw, and parts of Llanrwst and Yspytty.

NANTCWNLLE, a par. in the hund. of Penarth, co. Cardigan, 6 miles W. of Tregaron. It is situate on the river Aeron. Pen-y-Gaer camp is in this parish. The village is small and chiefly agricultural. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Cynllo.

NANTDDU, a chplry. in the par. of Cantreff, hund. of Penkelly, co. Brecon, 10 miles S.W. of Brecknock, its post town. It is situated on the greater Taf, near the Beacons. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £60, in the patron. of the Rector of Cantreff. The church is a small ancient edifice.

NANTENAN, a par. in the bar. of Lower Connello, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles N. of Rathkeale. Askeaton is its post town. It is 2½ miles long and 2 broad. The surface includes a large proportion of waste land in bog and rock. The parish is intersected by the roads from Adare to Shanagolden, and from Askeaton to Rathkeale. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. £115, in the patron. of the Precentor of Limerick. The church was built by aid of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits in 1817. There is a Methodist meeting-house and a school. Nantenan House is the chief residence. Fairs are held on 10th July, 5th August, and 12th November.

NANTFORCH, a tnshp. in the par. of Castle-Caereinion, co. Montgomery, 4 miles S.E. of Llanfair.

NANTFRAYER, a tnshp. in the par. of Llandderfel, co. Merioneth, 3 miles E. of Bala.

NANTFYLLON, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanrhaiadr-yn-Mochnant, co. Montgomery, 3 miles N. of Llanfyllyn.

NANTGARW, a hmlt. in the hund. of Kibbor, co. Glamorgan, 5 miles from Cardiff. It is situated in the Taff valley.

NANTGLYN, a par. in the hund. of Isaled, co. Denbigh, 4 miles from Denbigh, its post town, and 8 N.W. of Ruthin. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Clwyd. The par., which is 7 miles by 4 in extent, includes the hmlts. of Blaunan, Gwllwm, Hendre, and Plas. The land is hilly, and is chiefly in pasture. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £222, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. James. The churchyard contains some fine yew-trees. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum. The Calvinistic Methodists have a place of worship. Fairs are held on the 6th May and 27th October for cattle.

NANT-GWYNANT, or NANTHNYNANT, a hmlt. in the par. of Beddgelert, co. Carnarvon, 5 miles N.E. of Beddgelert. It is situated in a valley under Snowdon, watered by the river Avon Glâs, and is said to have been the retreat of Vortigern and the magician Merlin.

NANT-GWRTHEYRN, a dell under Yr Eifl Mountain, in co. Carnarvon, 3 miles N.E. of Nevern, supposed to be the burial-place of the British chieftain Vortigern, who died here of his wounds in 465.

NANTHALAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfyllin, co. Montgomery, near Llanfyllin.

NANT-HANLOG, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangwm, co. Denbigh, 13 miles S.W. of Ruthin.

NANTLLE, a small lake in co. Carnarvon, 5 miles S. of Carnarvon. It is situated under Mynydd Mawr, and forms the source of the river Llyfni.

NANTLLEIDIOG, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfawr, co. Merioneth, near Bala.

NANTMEL, a par. in the hund. of Rhayader, co. Radnor, 4 miles S.E. of Rhayader, its post town, and 11 from Builth. It is situated on the river Dulas, and is 8 miles by 5 in extent, comprising the tnshps. of Coedglasson, Gwaestedin-fawr, Maesgwin, and Vainor, also Llyn Gwin and two camps. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £400, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Cynllo. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. There is a chapel for the Independents.

NANTMOR, a hmlt. in the par. of Beddgelert, co. Merioneth, 5 miles N.E. of Tremadoe.

NANTPERIS, a pass near Llanberris, co. Carmarthen. It lies between Snowdon and Glider Fawr.

NANTWICH, a hund. in the co. of Chester. It contains the pars. of Acton, Audlem, Baddiley, Coppenhall, Marbury, Church-Minshull, Nantwich, Wistaston, Wrenbury, Wybunbury, and parts of Barthomley, Sandbach, and Whitchurch, comprising an area of 87,640 acres.

NANTWICH, or NAMPTWICH, a par. and market town in the hund. of its own name, co. Chester, 20½ miles S.E. of Chester, 161 N.W. of London. It is a railway station on the Crewe and Shrewsbury line. It is situated on a level plain on the old road leading from London to Chester, and principally on the right bank of the river Weaver, which is here crossed by a substantial stone bridge of one arch. At the lower end of the town is an aqueduct for the Grand Junction canal, which passes over the road by an iron bridge, and unites in the neighbourhood with the Chester, the Ellesmere, the Liverpool and Birmingham Junction canals, and the Middlewich branch canal. The par. is of large extent, comprising, besides the town of Nantwich, the chplries. of Alvaston and Leighton, and the hmlts. of Willaston and Woolstanwood. The land is chiefly rich pasture, appropriated for dairy farming, and the cheese made is highly esteemed.—The town of Nantwich is mentioned in the Domesday Survey by the simple designation Wick, witch in Saxon signifying salt-works, for which the town was anciently famous, and subsequently took the prefix nant from its situation in the rich valley of the Weaver. It was at one time called Wich-Malbane, from William de Malbane, to whom it was granted by Hugh Lupus, Earl of Chester, who had built a castle here shortly after the Conquest. It was then enclosed by the river on one side, and on the other by a ditch. Its early history is closely connected with the border wars of the Welsh. In 1113 the town was laid in ruins by the Welsh; but in 1146, having again devastated the surrounding country, they were met at Nantwich by the king's forces, and entirely routed. In 1282 Edward I. advanced to Nantwich against the Welsh, and granted the citizens certain privileges. In the reign of Henry III. the brine pits were filled up, in order to distress the Welsh, who carried on a considerable traffic in salt; but on the restoration of peace the wells were again sunk, and the manufacture of salt continued to be the source of wealth and employment to the inhabitants for several centuries, there being no fewer than 300 salt-works in operation in Leland's time, some of which belonged to the crown and some to families of distinction. Shortly after this period the industry began to decline, and in the reign of Charles I. the pits scarcely averaged half the former number—the decline being chiefly owing to the discovery of superior springs lower down the Weaver, where the advantage of water carriage was more readily accessible.—The town was twice almost consumed by fire, in 1438 and 1583, and the plague appeared in June, 1604, when nearly 500 persons were swept away in less than one year. During the period of the civil war of Charles I. it was taken in 1642 by the royalists, but soon after garrisoned for the parliament, and besieged in January, 1644, without success by Lord Byron, who was here routed by Sir T. Fairfax.—The town at present consists of three principal streets, which unite near the church, and some other smaller streets connecting these. The streets are indifferently paved, and many of the houses, which are commonly built of timber and plaster, with large bay windows and projecting upper stories, are as old as the 16th century, and were probably built of the timber from the forest of Delamere, presented by Queen Elizabeth towards the more speedy completion of the town after the great fire of 1583. The principal public buildings are the market-house, built in the last century on the site of the old market cross—it is a small covered erection supported on pillars; the police office, on Snow-hill, built in 1848, with a large room where petty sessions are held, and a residence for the superintendent attached; the savings-bank, in Welsh-row, a brick edifice erected in 1846 at a cost of £1,000; the mechanics' institute, in High-street, established in 1846; the Manchester and Liverpool district bank, situated in Mill-street, and two other branch banks; also the union poor-house, a spacious brick building situated on Beam Heath, about a mile from the town. The number of inhabited houses in 1851 was 1,120, with a population of 5,426, which had increased during the decennial period of 1861 to 1,310, with a population of 6,225.—The government of the town is under the management of a local board of health, which has recently effected great improvement in the drainage and water supply. The chief manufactures are shoes and boots for houses in London and Manchester, leather, and gloves, also a cotton factory in Mill-street. There are some malting establishments, and cheese is extensively made in the neighbouring farmhouses. In the vicinity of the town are many residences surrounded by parks and gardens: amongst these are Cholmondeley Castle, a seat of the Cholmondeley family, who take the title of baron from this place; Crewe Hall (burnt down 1866), of Lord Crewe; Doddington Hall, Doddington Park, Peckforton Castle, Combermere Abbey, Dorfold Hall and Park, Shrewbridge Hall, and Nantwich Rookery.—The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £300. The church, dedicated to SS. Mary and Nicholas, is a cruciform structure with an octagonal tower 110 feet high, rising from the intersection of the nave and transepts, and containing a peal of six bells. The interior of the church has a groined roof, large E. window, consisting of a repetition of small windows of flowing tracery, and crowned externally with a crocketed canopy. The chancel is separated from the nave by a stone screen, and has canopied stalls said to have been brought from Vale Royal Abbey; also sedilia and canopied niches on either side of the E. window. Just without the chancel, at the northern angle of the screen, is a carved stone pulpit, for some years disused, also a carved font and several monuments and brasses. The restoration of the church, which has been going on for several years, is now (1865) nearly completed. There are places of worship for the Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, Independents, Baptists, Wesleyan Association, and Unitarians and Society of Friends, to which last a burial-ground is attached. The new grammar school, situated in Welsh-row, is one of the chief ornaments of the town; it is of brick, and only just completed. There are also National, British, and infant schools, and a large Wesleyan school in Hospital-street. The charities are numerous and liberally endowed, including several bequests for education, also Wilbraham's, Wright's, and Delves' almshouses, and Sprout's charity for apprenticing boys, altogether producing above £800 per annum.—Nantwich poor-law union comprises 86 pars. and tnshps. It is also the seat of superintendent registry and new County Court districts. General Harrison, who fought on the side of the parliament in the civil war of the 17th century, Gerarde the herbalist, who died in 1607, and Whitney the poet, were natives. Minshall Milton's widow died here in 1726.—Saturday is market day for corn and provisions throughout the year, and a cattle market is held on the same day between the months of March and June. Fairs are held on 26th March, second Tuesday in June, 4th September, and 4th December.

NANTYAIN, a vil. in the par. of Maes-Mynis, co. Brecon, 2 miles S.W. of Builth. It is situated in a valley between the rivers Donhiw and Irvon.

NANTYCAIN, a vil. in the par. of Llangwnnor, co. Carmarthen, 2 miles E. of Carmarthen. It is situated near the river Towey.

NANTY-CANDY, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfihangel, co. Montgomery, 5 miles S.W. of Llanfyllyn.

NANT-Y-GLO, a vil. in the hund. of Abergavenny, co. Monmouth, 6 miles W. by S. of Abergavenny. It is situated in a rugged country under the Sugarloaf Hill, which rises to the height of 1,852 feet, and near the confluence of the rivers Gavenny and Usk. The village is considerable, and most of the inhabitants are engaged in the extensive coal and iron works belonging to the Blaen-Avon Mining Company. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church is a modern edifice. There are places of worship belonging to the Calvinistic Methodists.

NANTYGWRYD, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangollen, hund. of Chirk, co. Denbigh, near Llangollen, and 18 miles S.E. of Denbigh. It is situated near the bridge over the river Dee, and at a short distance from the Ellesmere canal.

NANTYMEICHIED, a tnshp. in the par. of Meifod, co. Montgomery, 2 miles S.E. of Llanfyllin.

NANTYMWYN, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandingat, co. Carmarthen, 5 miles N. of Llandovery, and 28 N.E. of Carmarthen. It is situated in the vale of the river Towey, among the hills, and belongs to Earl Cawdor. In the vicinity are extensive lead mines.

NANT-Y-NEF, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanganhafal, co. Denbigh, 3 miles N.E. of Ruthin.

NANTYR, ISAF and UCHAF, tnshps. in the par. of Llansaintffraid-Glyn-Ceiriog, co. Denbigh, 2 miles S. of Llangollen.

NAORSAL, an islet at the entrance of Loch Indal, co. Argyle, Scotland. It is situated off Rhinus Point in Islay Island.

NAPPA, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Askrigg and par. of Aysgarth, North Riding co. York, 2 miles from Askrigg, and 50 N.W. of York. It is situated in Wensleydale, on the river Ure.

NAPPA, a tnshp. in the par. of Gisburn, W. div. of the wap. of Staincliff, West Riding co. York, 7 miles S.E. of Settle. The township, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Ribble. The land is chiefly in meadow and pasture.

NAPPAGH, an islet in the bar. of Moycullen, co. Galway, near Lettermullen Island. It is situated off Gulin Head.

NAPTON-ON-THE-HILL, a par. in the Southam div. of Knightlow hund., co. Warwick, 3 miles S.E. of Southam, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the road from Warwick to Northampton, and near the confluence of the Napton and Oxford canals, the latter having a large reservoir here. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. Napton-on-the-Hill is within the jurisdiction of the county court of Southam, and was once a market town. The land is chiefly in pasture, with a small proportion of arable and woodland. The impropriate tithes are said to have been granted by Queen Elizabeth to Robert Earl of Leicester, by whom they were given as an endowment for the hospital founded by him at Warwick. On the enclosure of the parish in 1778 the commissioners assigned to the hospital 490 acres of land, and to the vicar 201, in lieu of tithes. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £450, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, has a tower containing five bells. In the chancel is a stone supposed to represent a gridiron, symbolical of the martyrdom of the patron saint. The parochial charities produce about £45 per annum. There are places of worship for the Baptists and Wesleyans; also National schools for both sexes. At the northern extremity of this parish, adjoining Leamington-Hastings, is a tumulus called Tornlow, supposed to indicate the site of some ancient battle, human bones being frequently dug up.

NARBERTH, a hund. in the co. of Pembroke, contains Tenby town, with the pars. of Amroth, Begelly, Carew, Coedcanlass, Crunwear, Gumfreston, St. Issells, Jeffreston, Lampeter-Velfrey, Lawrenney, Loveston, Ludchurch, Martletwy, Minwere, Moulton, Narberth, North Newton, Redberth, Reynoldston, Robeston-Wathon, Yerbeston, and parts of Llandewy Velfrey, and Nash.

NARBERTH, NORTH AND SOUTH, a par., post and market town, in the hund. of Narberth, co. Pembroke, South Wales, 11 miles N.E. of Pembroke. The town is situate on elevated ground, near the left bank of the East Cleddau river. It is a petty sessions and polling town, and a new borough under the Reform Bill, contributory to Haverfordwest in returning one member to the imperial parliament. The South Wales branch of the Great Western line has a station at Narberth Road, about 3 miles N. of the town. There are remains of the gateway and other parts of the old Norman castle built by the Perrotts, which came to the Mortimers, Sir Rhys ab Thomas, and now belongs to Baron de Rutzen of Slebech. The town is poorly built, but is an active and thriving place, being the centre of the stone coal, and culm mines district. The living is a rect.* with the curs. of Robeston-Wathon and Mounton annexed, in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £417, in the patron. of the Prince of Wales. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has been rebuilt in the present century. In 1863 a new church was consecrated at Templeton, and endowed out of the tithes of the whole living. The principal residence is The Grove, belonging to C. Poyer Callen, Esq. Templeton, in this parish, formerly belonged to the Knights Templars of Slebech. Market day is Thursday. Fairs are held on the 21st March, 13th May, 4th June, 5th July, 10th August, 26th September, 25th October, and 11th December, chiefly for cattle.

NARBOROUGH, a par. in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 6 miles S.W. of Leicester, its post town, and 3 N.W. of the Countesthorpe railway station. The village, which is large but chiefly agricultural, is situated on the old Fosse Way, near the bridge over the river Soar. The par. contains Huncote, the site of a royal palace of the Norman kings, at which Henry I. held his court in 1124, and a portion of the hmlt. of Littlethorpe. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in lace making. About half the land is arable, and the other chiefly meadow and pasture. The surface is flat, and the soil a light mould alternating with a clayey marl. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £363. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £437. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing a clock and five bells. There are National and Sunday schools. The Independents have a place of worship. John Pares, Esq., is lord of the manor. The Rev. Isaac Crouch, formerly rector, bequeathed a house and £200 in the three per cents. for establishing a school.

NARBURGH, or NARBOROUGH, a par. in the hund. of South Greenhoe, co. Norfolk, 5½ miles N.W. of Swaffham, its post town, and 8½ S.E. of Lynn. It is a station on the Lynn and Dereham railway. The village, which is small, is of ancient date, having been a British city in the 5th century. It is situated on the road from Lynn to Norwich, and on the southern bank of the river Nar, or Sechy, which takes its rise near Litcham, and flows to the Wash at Lynn. There is a wharf for barges on the bank of the river. An extensive trade is done in corn, malt, coals, and timber. About half the land is in pasture, common, and woodland, and the other half arable. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £363. The living is a vic.* with Narford united, in the dioc. of Norwich, joint val. £519. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient flint structure, with a square embattled tower containing one bell. The interior of the church contains several monuments and brasses of the Spelman family bearing date 1496. The register dates from 1596. The parochial charities produce about £48 per annum, of which £5 go to Spelman's Sunday-school. There is a parochial school for both sexes supported by voluntary contributions. In the neighbourhood is a Saxon camp and a dyke extending to Beachamp, separating South Greenhoe hundred from that of Clackclose. Narborough Hall, the principal residence, is a building of ancient date.

NARFORD, a par. in the hund. of South Greenhoe, co. Norfolk, 5 miles N.W. of Swaffham, its post town, and 1½ mile from the Narborough railway station. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on the S. bank of the river Nar, and is wholly agricultural. The land is partly in common with a sandy soil and gravelly subsoil. The village, which consists of a few farmhouses, is said to have been a mile long in the time of William the Conqueror, and in the reign of Edward III. Sir Thomas de Narford obtained for it a market and two fairs, which have long since fallen into disuse. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £185, and the vicarial for £144 17*s*. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Narburgh, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is an ancient structure with a square tower. Narford Hall, built by Sir Andrew Fountaine, vice-chamberlain to Queen Caroline, and a friend of Pope and Swift, is situated in a well-wooded lawn watered by a small lake of about 60 acres. It is at present the seat of Andrew Fountaine, Esq., whose ancestors have held it for many generations. The above-named gentleman is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

NARAN, a hmlt. and seat of a post-office in the par. of Iniskeel, bar. of Boylagh, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Ardara. It stands on the coast of Gweebarra Bay, opposite to the island of Iniskeel. It is a poor fishing hamlet, and contains a church and Methodist meeting-house.

NARRAGH AND REBAN, EAST, a bar. in the co. of Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. Its boundaries are Kilcullen, co. Wicklow, Kilhea, Moone, West Narragh and Reban, and West Ophaly. It is 6½ miles in length, and the same in breadth. It contains the pars. of Davidstown, Timolin, Usk, and parts of Fontstown, Moone, Narraghmore, and Tankardstown, with the vil. of Ballitore.

NARRAGH AND REBAN, WEST, a bar. in the co. of Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is bounded by West Ophaly, East Narragh and Reban, Kilkea, Moone, and Queen's County. It is a little over 5 miles in length, and nearly the same in breadth, and contains the pars. of Churchtown, Kilberry, and parts of Narraghmore, St. John's, and St. Michael's, with the town of Athy.

NARRAGHMORE, a par. in the bars. of East and West Narragh and Reban, Kilkea, and Moone, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N. of Ballitore, its post town. It is 7 miles long by 2½ broad. The surface is somewhat hilly, including the hill of Carmen. The river Greis traverses part of the interior. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. £506, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church has recently been put into repair. There are two Roman Catholic chapels and a National school; also a police station. Narraghmore House, the chief residence, was burnt down in 1798. Blackrath Castle and the fort of Mullamast are interesting objects of antiquity.

NARROWDALE, a mountain pass near the river Dove, in the par. of Allstonefield, co. Stafford, 4 miles S. by E. of Longnor, and 23 N.E. of Stafford.

NASEBY, a par. in the hund. of Guilsborough, co. Northampton, 3½ miles S.E. of Welford, its post town, and 7 S.W. of Market-Harborough. The village, which is extensive, is situated on the lias hills near the centre of England, between the heads of the rivers Nen and Avon, the former of which flows eastward to the North Sea, and the latter westward into the Severn at Bristol. The village was formerly a market town. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. On the N. side of the village is Naseby field, where a pillar has been erected in commemoration of the great battle in which Cromwell defeated Charles I. and Prince Rupert on the 14th June, 1645. The views from this spot are very extensive, the surface being so elevated that upwards of thirty churches are plainly visible. Near the churchyard is a new stone cross, erected on the site of the old market cross which formerly stood here. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1820. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £84. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a square embattled tower containing a clock and five bells. The church has some stained windows. The parochial charities consist in 12 acres of land and some cottages, the proceeds of which go towards the restoration of the church. There is a parochial school for both sexes, also an infant school. The Methodists have a place of worship. Mrs. Mary Frances Fitzgerald is lady of the manor.

NASH, a vil. in the par. of Owenduff, bar. of Shelburne, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S.S.E. of New Ross. It is situated on the Tintern road. Fairs are held on the 24th June, 15th August, and 20th November.

NASH, a hmlt. in the par. of Whaddon, hund. of Cottesloe, co. Bucks, 5 miles S. by W. of Stoney-Stratford. It is situated near Nash Common, and is a meet for the Whaddon Chase hounds. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Act of Enclosure in 1830. Here are two endowed almshouses.

NASH, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Cowbridge, co. Glamorgan, 2 miles S.E. of Cowbridge. Nash House is the principal residence.

NASH, a hmlt. in the par. of Presteigne, hund. of Wigmore, co. Hereford, 1½ mile S. of Presteigne. In conjunction with Rodd and Little Brampton it forms a tnshp.

NASH, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Peter, Isle of Thanet, and lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, near Margate.

NASH, a par. in the lower div. of Caldicott hund., co. Monmouth, 3 miles S. by E. of Newport, its post town, and 5 from Caerleon. It is situated on the Bristol Channel, near the mouth of the river Usk. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £30, and the vicarial for £26. The impropriation belongs to the Provost and Fellows of Eton College. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £80, in the patron. of Eton College. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £30 per annum, realised from poor's land.

NASH, a par. in the hund. of Castlemartin and Narberth, co. Pembroke, 2 miles N.E. of Pembroke, its post town. The par., which is inconsiderable, contains Upton. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, with the cur. of Upton annexed, val. £130. The church is an ancient structure.

NASH, a tnshp. in the par. of Burford, hund. of Overs, co. Salop, 2 miles N. by E. of Tenbury, its post town. Together with Tilsop and Weston it forms a chapelry. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Burford, in the dioc. of Hereford.

NASS, a tythg. in the par. of Lidney, co. Gloucester, 4 miles N.W. of Berkeley.

NASSABURGH, a lib. within the borough of Peterborough, co. Northampton.

NASSINGTON WITH YARWELL, a par. in the hund. of Willybrook, co. Northampton, 2¼ miles S.W. of Wansford, its post town, and 5½ N. of Oundle. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Peterborough railway and the river Nen. It is chiefly agricultural. The appropriation belongs to the Prebendary of Nassington, in the cathedral of Lincoln. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Yarwell annexed, in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £400, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a neat structure, dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £31 per annum. There is a National school. The Wesleyans and Independents have each a place of worship. The Earl of Westmoreland is lord of the manor.

NASTY, or MUNDEN-FURNIVAL, a hmlt. in the par. of Great Munden, co. Herts, 3 miles S. of Buntingford.

NATEBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Garstang, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 2 miles N.W. of Garstang, its post town. The township, which is of irregular form, is situated near the Lancaster canal, and is wholly agricultural. There is a place of worship for the Calvinist Methodists. The executors of the late Richard Thompson, Esq., are lords of the manor.

NATEBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkby-Stephen, East ward, co. Westmoreland, 1 mile S.E. of Kirkby-Stephen. The village is situated near the fall of the river Eden, one of the greatest natural curiosities in the kingdom. The river is here crossed by Stenkrith Bridge. About 2½ miles E. of the village is a lofty fell called the Nine Standards, from some stones erected there to mark the boundary of the cos. of York and Westmoreland. The property comes through the Hastings, Whartons, and others, to the Earl of Lonsdale. A portion of the manor of Wharton is in this township. There is a small endowment of land in the hands of trustees for the education of children. The Earl of Lonsdale is lord of the manor.

NATELY-SCURES, a par. in the upper half of the hund. of Basingstoke, co. Hants, 4½ miles E. of Basingstoke, its post town, and 4½ W. of the Winchfield station on the South-Western railway. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on the road from Hartford Bridge to Basingstoke, and near the Basingstoke canal. It was the Natanleag of the Saxons. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The surface is varied, and above half the land arable, the remainder being pasture and open common. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £215. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £178. The church is dedicated to St. Swithin. It has a highly enriched Norman doorway. Lord Dorchester is lord of the manor. There is a National school.

NATELY-UP, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Basingstoke, co. Hants, 4½ miles E. of Basingstoke, its post town, and 3 N.E. of Odiham. The parish, which is inconsiderable, is wholly agricultural. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Basingstoke, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church, which was erected in 1843, is dedicated to St. Stephen. There is a school for both sexes.

NATENANE, a hmlt. in the par. of Kilcolman, in the bar. of Trughanackmy, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Milltown. Fairs are held on Tuesday and Wednesday in Whitsun week.

NATHANSTHIRN, a manor in the par. of Nenthorn, co. Berwick, Scotland, 3 miles N.W. of Kelso. It is situated near the river Eden, and belonged to the Morvilles.

NATHLASH, ST., a par. in the bar. of Fermoy, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Kildorrery. Mallow is its post town. It is 1 mile in length and the same in breadth. The soil is mostly good. The river Funcheon traverses the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. with Kildorrery, £209, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was a gift from the late Board of First Fruits in 1812. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, a Sunday, and two daily schools.

NATLAND, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. and ward of Kendal, co. Westmoreland, 2 miles S. of Kendal, its post town, and 1¼ mile S.W. of the Kendal Junction railway station. It it situated on the river Kent, near the Lancaster canal. At a bend on the river, called Water-Crook, was the ancient Concangium, a Roman winter station. The Lancaster and Carlisle railway passes through the township. The lands are nearly in equal portions arable, pasture, and meadow, with 100 acres of common. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £96, in the patron. of the Vicar of Kendal. The church, dedicated to St. James, is a modern stone structure, rebuilt in 1825, with an embattled tower erected near its site, at a cost of £550. There is an endowed parochial school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. Helm Lodge is the principal residence.

NATTON WITH FIDDINGTON, a tythg. in the par. of Ashchurch, co. Gloucester, 2½ miles E. of Tewkesbury.

NAUGHTON, a par. in the hund. of Cosford, co. Suffolk, 3 miles E. of Bildestone, its post town, and 5 N. of Hadleigh. The parish, which is inconsiderable, is wholly agricultural. The land is chiefly arable. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £193. The church is a neat edifice, dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. Sir Henry Adair is lord of the manor.

NAUL, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Balrothery, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 18 miles N. of Dublin. The par. is 3 miles long by 2 broad. The interior is traversed by the road from Drogheda to Dublin. The river Delvin bounds it on one side, upon which is situated the village. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Hollywood, £111. The church is small. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, which is united to those of Hollywood and Clonmethan, also a day school. Reynoldstown is one of the principal residences. Naul Castle stands on a lofty and rocky eminence; it is supposed to have been built by the De Genevilles, an Anglo-Norman family, and came to the Cruise family in the 14th century, and afterwards to the Tennisons. There is a police station in the village. Fairs are held on 16th March, 26th April, 21st May, 8th September, and 2nd October.

NAUNTON, or NAUNTON IN THE VALE, a par. chiefly in the lower div. of Slaughter hund., but partly in the hund. of Bradley, co. Gloucester, 5 miles S.W. of Stow-on-the-Wold, its post town, and 12 N.E. of Cheltenham. The village, which is irregularly built, is situated on the river Windrush. The par. includes the hmlts. of Aylworth and Harford. It lies in a valley on the high road between Cheltenham and Stow-on-the-Wold, and is chiefly agricultural. The sub-soil consist of the oolite and marlstone. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £504, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient ivy-mantled structure, with a tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a school for both sexes. The Baptists have a place of worship.

NAUNTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Cheltenham, co. Gloucester, near Cheltenham.

NAUNTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Winchcomb, lower div. of the hund. of Kiftsgate, co. Gloucester, 14 miles N.E. of Gloucester. It is situated near the river Isborne, under the Cotswolds.

NAUNTON-BEAUCHAMP, a par. in the upper div. of Pershore hund., co. Worcester, 4½ miles N. of Pershore, its post town, and 3 N. of the Pershore station, on the Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Avon, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is principally clay. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture. The tithes were commuted in 1771 for 36 acres of land, with a modus. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £96. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, was rebuilt in 1776. It is a brick edifice, with a stone tower containing two bells. The interior of the church contains tablets to the Lyttleton, Dannett, Hunt, and Robinson families. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum, distributed to the poor in bread.

NAVAN, a par., post, and market town, in the bar. of Lower Navan, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 29 miles N.N.W. of Dublin. The par. is 3 miles long and 2 at the widest. The soil is generally poor, and the surface flat. The road from Dublin to Enniskillen traverses the interior. The river Boyne forms the entire E. boundary. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with another, £566, in the patron. of the crown. The church was built in 1818 by means of a gift and loan from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Robinstown. There are several daily schools in the parish. The town is situated at the meeting of the Boyne and Blackwater. It is a station on the Kells branch of the Dublin and Drogheda railway. It consists of three principal streets and several smaller thoroughfares. Two stone bridges span the rivers, upon whose banks are numerous mills. The principal trade of the place is in provisions, and in the supply of the surrounding country. There are manufactories of sacking, flax mills, a tannery, and a distillery. A brisk retail trade in miscellaneous goods is carried on. The principal public buildings are the market and court houses, police station, barracks, dispensary, fever hospital, bridewell, poorhouse, and Alderman Preston's schools. There are a branch bank and a savings-bank. Navan was formerly a borough, sending two members to the Irish parliament before the Union. It obtained its charter in the time of Edward IV. An abbey was founded here by the Nangle family in the 12th century, and shortly after the town was walled round by Hugh de Lacy. Among other ruins is a specimen of a round tower. Boyne Hill is the seat of Lieut.-Col. Gerrard. Navan is the head of a Poor-law Union, consisting of twelve electoral divisions in the county of Meath. Wednesday is market day. Fairs are held on Easter and Trinity Mondays, the 2nd Monday in September, and the 1st Monday in December.

NAVAN, LOWER and UPPER, two bars. in the co. of Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. The former is bounded by Upper Kells and Morgallion, and by Upper Slane and Lune. Its area is 25,835 acres, and it contains the pars. of Ardbraccan, Ardsallagh, Churchtown, Donaghmore, Dunmoe, Liscartan, Martry, Navan, Rataine, and parts of Balrathboyne, and Donaghpatrick. Navan Upper is bounded by Navan Lower, Lower Deece, Lower Moyfenrath, and Lune. Its area is 17,651 acres, and it contains the pars. of Bective, Clonmacduff, Kilcooly, Moymet, Newtownclonbun, Tullaghanoge, and part of Trim.

NAVANRATH, or EAMANIA, the site of the palace of the Ulster kings, in the par. and co. of Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles W. of Armagh. Many Celtic relics, as arrow and spear heads, rings, torques, &c., have been found at this spot, and some are preserved in Mr. Corry's museum at Armagh.

NAVAR, an ancient par. in the co. of Forfar, Scotland, now joined to Lethnot.

NAVE, an islet in Loch Gruinart, co. Argyle, Scotland. It is situated on the W. side of Islay Island.

NAVENBY, a par. in the higher div. of the wap. of Boothby-Graffo, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 17 miles N. of Grantham, its post town, and 9 N. by W. of Sleaford. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Brant, near the Roman road, Ermine Street. The village is a polling-place for Kesteven and Holland divisions of the county, and was formerly a market town. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is clay and loam on a subsoil of limestone. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1770. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £588, in the patron. of Christ College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a tower containing six bells. The parochial charities produce about £101 per annum, of which £33 goes to a school. There is a free school for both sexes, and a place of worship for the Wesleyans. There is a sick club, established in 1811. A fair is held on the 17th October, chiefly for swine, and a pleasure fair on the Thursday before Easter, also a statute fair for the hiring of servants in May.

NAVER, a river and loch in the co. of Sutherland, Scotland. The former rises in Loch Maddie, and, flowing through Strath Naver and the loch of the same name, falls into Torrisdale Bay.

NAVESTOCK, a par. in the hund. of Ongar, co. Essex, 6 miles N.E. of Romford, its post town, and 4 S. of Ongar. The parish, which is of irregular form, is situated on the river Roding, and is chiefly agricultural. Navestock was given by King Edgar to St. Paul's Cathedral, and by Queen Mary to the ancestor of Earl Waldegrave, of Navestock-Hall. The surface is diversified with hill and dale. The soil on the hills is generally light and gravelly, and in the low lands wet and heavy. The vicarial tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £570, and those belonging to Trinity College for a like amount. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £422, in the patron. of Trinity College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas, is an ancient structure, with a belfry tower of wood, surmounted by a shingled spire, and containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £61 per annum. There is a parochial school for both sexes. Navestock Park is the principal residence. The Countess of Waldegrave is lady of the manor. On the common are remains of an ancient fortification, and near it an embankment defended on each side by a moat.

NAVISFORD, a hund. in the co. of Northampton. It contains the pars. of Clapton, Pilton, Stoke Doyle, Thorpe-Achurch, Thrapston, Titchmarsh, and Wadenhoe, comprising an area of 13,090 acres.

NAWORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Brampton, ward of Eskdale, co. Cumberland, 2½ miles N.E. of Brampton, and 11 E. of Carlisle. The township, which is of small extent, is situated on the Newcastle railway and river Irthing, near Lanercost Priory. The tnshp. includes the hmlt. of Boothby. Naworth Castle, formerly the seat of the lords of Gilsland, was built for a stronghold in the reign of Edward III. by Ranulph Dacre. It consisted of a spacious quadrangular structure with two lofty towers, but was almost destroyed by a fire in 1844.

NAWTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkdale, wap. of Ryedale, North Riding co. York, 3 miles E. of Helmsley, and the same distance W. of Kirby-Moorside. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the high road between Beverley and Kirby-Moorside. There are two places of worship for the Wesleyans, in one of which is held a day school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school. Nawton Tower is a castellated mansion situated on rising ground, affording extensive views of the surrounding country. Francis Barr, Esq., is lord of the manor.

NAYLAND, or NEYLAND a par. in the hund. of Babergh, co. Suffolk, 5 miles E. of the Bures railway station, 6 N. by W. of Colchester, and 13 S.W. of Ipswich. It is situated in a fertile valley at the bridge over the navigable river Stour, and was formerly a market town. The village, which is considerable, consists of several streets, the principal of which contains some good modern houses. The manor anciently belonged to Hubert de Burgh and the Scroops, and gave title of baron to the Westons. A brisk trade is carried on in corn, coal, and timber. There is a silk mill, established in 1838 for the purpose of winding and drawing silk, also several malting establishments, a brewery, and three large flour mills. A court-leet is held on Easter Monday, at which the steward of the manor presides. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £220, and the incumbent's for £50 10*s.* The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £139. The church, dedicated to St. Stephen, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing six bells. The interior of the church contains five doubled canopied and other brasses, bearing date from 1430; also a good painting of our Saviour, and several ancient marble monuments. The parochial charities produce about £200 per annum, chiefly arising from land, which is appropriated for the benefit of the clergyman and various charitable purposes. There are British and National schools for both sexes. The Independents have a place of worship.

NAZE, THE, a headland on the N.E. coast of Essex, 5 miles S. of Harwich. It is crowned by an ancient tower nearly opposite Landguard Fort, in Suffolk, and off the coast is a rocky ledge near 2 miles long, with only 5 feet water in some places.

NAZEING, or NASING, a par. in the hund. of Waltham, co. Essex, 4 miles N.E. of Waltham Abbey, its post town, and 3½ W. of Broxbourne railway station. The river Lea is here crossed by a bridge connecting this parish with Hertfordshire. The parish, which is wholly agricultural, is bounded on the W. by the river Lea, a favourite resort for anglers during the season. Near the village are extensive ornamental flower gardens, which are a great attraction during the summer season. The land is principally meadow and pasture, with a considerable extent of common, of which about 450 acres have been recently enclosed. The surface is undulating, in some parts rising into hills commanding a varied prospect. The living is a vic* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £255, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is situated on an eminence. It has a square embattled tower of brick containing five bells. There is a National school. At the eastern end of the parish are traces of an ancient fortification, called Ambersbank, supposed to be British. The living was once held by Dr. Joseph Hall, Bishop of Norwich, and subsequently by Dr. Thomas Fuller, the Church historian.

NEAGH, LOUGH, a lake in the prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It ranks fourth among European lakes in point of size, and is by far the largest in the British isles. Its length from N. to S. is 15 miles, and its breadth about 11 miles, covering an area of above 150 square miles, or 98,255 acres. An abundance of fish are caught, and many beautiful pebbles are found on the banks. Notwithstanding its great extent, it is a very uninteresting expanse of water, being almost destitute of islands to diversify its surface, and surrounded by low moorland shores often flooded or swampy. Its principal feeders are the Upper Bann, Blackwater, Maine, Six-mile, and Ballinderry, and it discharges its superfluous waters at its northern extremity, through Lough Beg, by the Lower Bann. Its waters are celebrated for their petrifying properties. A considerable traffic is carried on by means of steamers, but the sudden squalls to which it is subject render the navigation dangerous for sailing vessels. Several schemes have been devised for deepening its outlet, the surface of the lake being only 46 feet above the sea-level, and by this means about 25,000 acres of land, now annually flooded, might be made available for culture.

NEALE, a vil. in the par. of Kilmolara, bar. of Kilmaine, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles S. of Ballinrobe. Here is a police station. The Neale is the demesne of Lord Kilmaine. Fairs are held on 5th February, 6th May, 4th August, and 5th November.

NEASDON, a hmlt. in the par. of Hendon, co. Middlesex, 3 miles W. of Hampstead. It was the ancient seat of the Attewood family, and was purchased by the Nicholls, who have rebuilt the mansion.

NEASHAM, or NYSAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Hurworth, S.W. div. of Stockton ward, co. Durham, 1 mile E. of Hurworth, and 4 miles S.E. of Darlington. It is a small village situated at the ferry on the river Tees. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture, and in the linen manufacture. There are traces of a Benedictine nunnery founded by the Dacres prior to the reign of Henry II. Its revenues at the Dissolution were returned at £26 9*s.* 9*d.* Neasham Hall, the principal residence, is situated in a commanding position on the N. bank of the river, affording varied and extensive views of the surrounding county. Thomas Wrighton, Esq., is lord of the manor.

NEAT-END-STONE, a hmlt. in the par. of Enstone, hund. of Chadlington, co. Oxford, half a mile S. of Church-Enstone, and 5 miles S.W. of Chipping-Norton. It is sometimes called Road-Enstone, on account of the high road to Birmingham and Worcester passing through it. The waterworks constructed here by Thomas Bushel are now extinct. There is a place of worship for the Methodists.

NEATH, a hund. in the co. of Glamorgan, contains the pars. of Aberavon, Baglan, Briton Ferry, Cadoxton, Glyncorrwg, Kilybebill, Lower-Lantwit, Michaelstone-super-Avon, and Neath.

NEATH, a par., market town, seaport, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the hund. of Neath, co. Glamorgan, 8 miles from Swansea, 30 N.E. of Cardiff, and 208½ from London by the South Wales section of the Great Western railway, on which it is a station; it has also a station on the Vale of Neath line. A steamer runs to Bristol twice a week. Though small in size, Neath is a very active port, being the vent for all the produce of the busy and prosperous vale in which it is situated. It is placed on the eastern bank and near the mouth of the river Neath, or Nedd, which here opens out to a considerable breadth, and has likewise water communication by means of the Abernant and Swansea canals. Though vessels of from 300 to 400 tons can get up the river to the quays at high tide, the trade is chiefly carried on by barges on the canal between the town and Briton Ferry, or Giant's Grave, which lies about 2 miles lower down towards Swansea Bay, of which it is a subport. The harbour, though capacious, is obstructed by a bar at its mouth having from 11 to 17 feet water. It enjoys much prosperity, being placed in the heart of the great coal-field of South Wales, by the resources of which many extensive copper, tin, and iron-works, and other works of a similar character, have been set going.—The town is of great antiquity, occupying the site of the ancient Nidus, or Nidum, mentioned by Antonine, on the Via Julia and Sarn Helen Roman roads. It was given by Robert Fitzhamon, the Anglo-Norman baron, who first conquered the country from the Welsh princes, to his brother, Richard de Granville, ancestor of the noble families of Granville, Marquis of Bath; Granville, Duke of Buckingham; and Lord Granville. He rebuilt the castle of Jestyn-ap-Gwrgan, of which there are now but scanty remains, and subsequently founded the Cistercian abbey called Abbaty Glyn Nedd, or, the "Abbacy of the Vale of Nedd." This latter structure, once "the fairest abbey in all Wales," as described by Leland, is now a ruin defaced by the smoke and coal dust of the neighbouring extensive copper and iron works. Its history is fully given in Tanner's "Notitia Monastica," but all that now remains are the external walls with parts of the chapel, vaulted chapterhouse, refectory, and abbot's house. The architect was one Lalys, who also built Margam and Laleston. It became the sanctuary of the unfortunate Edward II., who took refuge here after escaping from Caerphilly, but his retreat being discovered, he was compelled by the monks to quit, and one of them, as the tradition goes, betrayed him into his enemies' hands at Llantrissant Castle. At the Dissolution its revenues were returned at £132, and the site granted to the Cromwells, from whom it comes to Lord Dynevor.—The town is not remarkable for the neatness of its appearance, the spirit of trade having not diffused itself in well paved streets, these being in general narrow, badly paved and pitched. The principal public buildings are—the townhall, having a corn market in its basement story; a new market-house, commercial branch bank, mechanics' institute, and union poorhouse. There are two immense blast furnaces, an iron foundry, steam-engine factory, tin-plate, fire-clay, and chemical works, these last producing sugar of lead, vitriol, and the purest alum in the kingdom. Two extensive copper works, belonging respectively to the Crown and Mines Royal companies, are situated to the S. on the right bank of the river, and are connected with Swansea Harbour by means of Tennant's canal, which runs from Aberdylais to Swansea. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the export coal and iron trades, in the numerous factories, and in the neighbouring collieries and mines, with which the whole valley abounds. Neath is a borough by prescription, and was first chartered by Edward II. Under the new Corporations Reform Act it is governed by a mayor, four aldermen, and twelve councillors, with the style of "portreeve, aldermen, and burgesses of the borough of Neath." It has a revenue of £1,080, and is one of the five contributory boroughs with Swansea in returning one member to parliament. The petty sessions for the hundred of Neath are holden here, and the midsummer quarter sessions for the county. The new County Court is held here every month for the recovery of small debts. It is also the head of a Poor-law Union embracing thirteen parishes and townships in Glamorganshire, and two in Brecknockshire.—The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. with Llantwit, £353. The parish church, dedicated to St. Thomas, is a large though poor structure, with an ancient tower and some hatchments of the family of Mackworth of Gnoll. There are besides eight chapels and numerous schools. Gnoll, the ancient seat of the Mackworths, is a large mansion on a hill overlooking the town, and was recently the scene of a celebrated educational speculation by Mrs. Bullock Webster, who proposed to turn it into an university, but the speculation failed, and the house is now for sale. Here are also Davies's schools with an income from endowment of £60, and Gibbs's almshouses. The parochial charities produce altogether about £65 per annum. The principal antiquities are the extensive ruins of the abbey mentioned above, and a good gateway and towers remaining of the ancient castle, also a Druid circle on Drymma Hill, and traces of the Roman road Sarn Helen. In Glyn Neath, near Pont-neath-Vaughan, are the falls of Mellte and Hepste. Market days are Wednesday and Saturday. Fairs are held on the Thursday after Trinity Sunday, on the 31st July, and 12th September.

NEATH ABBEY, a vil. in the par. of Dyffryn-Clydach, co. Glamorgan, 2 miles N.W. of Neath. It is a station on the Vale of Neath railway. The inhabitants are engaged in the neighbouring collieries and in the copper and iron works. Here are the ruins of the once famous Neath Abbey. See NEATH.

NEATH, MIDDLE, UPPER, and LOWER, hmlts. in the par. of Cadoxton, hund. of Neath, co. Glamorgan, 2 miles N.E. of Neath.

NEATHAM, an ext. par. lib. in the upper half div. of the hund. of Alton, co. Hants, 2 miles N.E. of Alton. It is situated on the S. side of the river Wey, and was a market town in William the Conqueror's time. A portion of the land is in hop-grounds.

NEATISHEAD, a par. in the hund. of Tunstead, co. Norfolk, 10½ miles N.E. of Norwich, its post town, and 5 E. by S. of Cottishall. The village, which is of ancient date, is situated betwixt the rivers Bure and Ant. In the Domesday Survey it is called Snatesherd, and was given by Canute the Dane to the abbey of St. Bennet at Holm, and the manor is now the property of the see of Norwich. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £291, and the vicarial for £170, with a glebe of 46 acres. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £199, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a small and ancient structure with a modern gallery added in 1840. The register dates from 1676. The parochial charities produce about £48 per annum. There is a National school built in 1849, the gift of Miss Preston.

The Baptists and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. The Bishop of Norwich is lord of the manor.

NEB, a river in the western part of the Isle of Man. It rises under Mount Sartel, and after forming a cataract falls into the Irish Channel near Peel Castle.

NECHELLS, a hmlt. in the par. of Aston and borough of Birmingham, co. Warwick. It is united with Duddeston, and forms a populous suburb of Birmingham. Here are extensive workshops for building railway carriages, also a lunatic asylum. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £59. The church is dedicated to St. Clement.

NECTON, or NEIGHTON, a par. in the hund. of South Greenhoe, co. Norfolk, 6 miles from Shipdham, its post town, 3½ E. of Swaffham, and 2 S. of the Dunham railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The soil consists of clay and loam. About two-thirds of the land are arable, the remainder pasture and woodland. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £900, and the glebe comprises 28 acres. A free chapel formerly stood at Sparham Hall. The living is a rect. and vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £703. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a square embattled tower containing a clock and six bells. The roof is decorated with paintings, underneath which are the effigies of the twelve apostles in oak, richly carved and gilt. There are brasses of J. Bacon and others, bearing date from 1528; also an E. window of stained glass inserted by Colonel Mason. The register commences from 1528. In the churchyard is a tomb with a recumbent effigy, supposed to be that of the Countess of Warwick, who died here whilst on a pilgrimage to the shrine of Our Lady of Walsingham. The parochial charities produce about £200 per annum, of which £100 goes towards the support of a school erected in 1839 at the expense of Colonel Mason. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a place of worship. Necton Hall is situated in a well-wooded park, and is the seat of Colonel Mason, who is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

NEDDANS, a par. in the bar. of West Iffa and Offa, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles W.S.W. of Clonmel. It is 2½ miles in length, and the same in breadth. The surface is undulating and the soil of excellent quality. The river Suir passes through the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. with Ardfinnan, £288, in the patron. of the bishop. Here are ruins of a church and a castle. Neddans House is the chief seat.

NEDDEEN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Magunihy, co. Kerry, Ireland, 13 miles S. of Killarney, and near Kenmare, which was also called Neddeen when first founded in 1670 by Sir W. Petty.

NEDGING, a par. in the hund. of Cosford, co. Suffolk, 1 mile S.E. of Bildeston, its post town, and 4 miles N.W. of the Hadleigh railway station. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Bret, and is entirely agricultural. The land is chiefly arable. The surface is gently undulating, and the soil a rich loam. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £190, and the glebe comprises 27 acres valued at £30. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £165. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small Norman edifice, with a tower containing two bells. The Rev. William Edge is lord of the manor.

NEEDHAM, a par. in the hund. of Earsham, co. Norfolk, 1½ mile S.W. of Harleston, its post town, and 8 miles N.E. of Diss railway station. The village, which is small and straggling, is situated on the river Waveney, and on the road from Bury St. Edmund's to Yarmouth. The river separates this parish from the county of Suffolk. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £310, and those of the incumbent for £25 17*s*. This parish was originally a chapelry to Mendham. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £72. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, with a circular tower of greater antiquity than the nave and choir. The parochial charities produce about £66 per annum, realised from town estate. This par. comprises the five manors following, viz. Bourts-in-Needham, T. B. Frank, Esq.; Witchington Hall, Sir Robert S. Adair, Bart.; Seymours, R. K. Cobbold, Esq.; Gunshaws, the Rev. T. W. Whitaker; and Denisons, Lady George Beresford.

NEEDHAM-MARKET, a hmlt., chplry., and post town, in the par. of Barking, hund. of Bosmere, co. Suffolk, 3½ miles from Stowmarket, and 8¾ N. by W. of Ipswich, and 74 N.E. of London. It is a station on the Great Eastern railway. It is situated on low ground on the bank of the river Gipping, near Bosmere Lake, and on the road to Ipswich and Bury St. Edmund's. It is a petty sessions and polling town for East Suffolk, and was formerly a market town. It is tolerably well built, and is lighted with gas. There are a bank, public library and reading rooms, also paper and glue manufactories. Petty sessions are held every alternate Wednesday at the Swan Inn. The Stowmarket and Ipswich navigation passes along the north-eastern boundary of the chapelry, and is crossed by a bridge leading from the town to Stonham. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £91, in the patron. of the Rector of Barking. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient structure, built about 1450, with a wooden bell-turret. Dr. Priestley first settled at Needham-Market with a small congregation on a salary of £30 a year. The parochial charities consist of almshouses for eight poor persons, also the late Mrs. Lucy Maw's almshouses for four aged persons, besides other donations realising about £60 per annum. The Independents and Society of Friends have each a place of worship with schools attached. The Earl of Ashburnham is lord of the manor. An annual fair is held on 28th October.

NEEDHAM STREET, a hmlt. in the par. of Gazeley, co. Suffolk, 5 miles E. of Newmarket.

NEEDINGWORTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Holywell, hund. of Hurstingstone, co. Huntingdon, 2 miles N.E. of St. Ives, its post town. It was formerly a chapelry, but the chapel, dedicated to St. James, has long disappeared. The hamlet, which is of large extent, was the birthplace of Sir Ambrose Nicholas, Lord Mayor of London in 1576. The Baptists and Wesleyans have each a place of worship.

NEEDLES, THE, a group of sharp-pointed chalk rocks off the W. point of the Isle of Wight, co. Hants, 4 miles S.W. of Yarmouth. They are above water, and are marked by a lighthouse on the opposite cliffs 469 feet high, with a red fixed light visible for 27 miles. The West passage to the Solent lies between these rocks and Hurst Point, having from 5 to 7 fathoms water, with a strong current. One, the highest of these rocks, fell in 1760, and the sea is continually wearing away the chalk.

NEEDLESHAM, a cove on the S.E. coast of co. Devon, near the river Otter's mouth.

NEEDWOOD FOREST, an ecclesiastical district, and formerly a royal forest, in the hund. of Offlow, co. Stafford. It contained, in a circuit of 20 miles, bounded by a bend of the river Trent, about 70,000 acres of hilly ground covered with natural wood. In its ancient state it was divided into five wards, called Barton, Marchington, Tutbury, Uttoxeter, and Yoxhall, and included thirteen parks, which were held by the earls of Mercia. In after times the kings of England often enjoyed the diversion of hunting here, down to the time of Charles I., whose sales and gifts of various parts of it caused a great portion to be disafforested. It continued extra parochial till 1801, when it was wholly enclosed by Act of Parliament, and is now included in the pars. of Hanbury, Tatenhill, Tutbury, and Yoxhall. The tract contains many mansions with extensive parks, and the rest is cultivated, producing good crops, except about 1,000 acres of good oak timber, including the Swilcar oak, 21 feet in girth. It belongs to the honour of Tutbury, in the duchy of Lancaster. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £170, in the patron. of the Duchy of Lancaster. The church, called Christ Church, in Needwood, was erected in 1809, and situated at an equal distance from each of the parochial churches. The tithes have been partially commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act.

NEEN-SAVAGE, or UPPER NEEN, a par. in the hund. of Stottesden, co. Salop, 1 mile N. of Cleobury-Mortimer, its post town, and 12 miles W. of Kidderminster. The village, which is small and of irregular form, is situated on the river Rea, and is chiefly agricultural. The soil consists of cornstone and clay. Paper is manufactured in this parish. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £76, and the vicarial for £424. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £394, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure with a square embattled tower containing two bells. The tower originally had a spire, but it was destroyed by lightning in 1825. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum. There is a free school liberally endowed by the Edwards and Hinckesman families.

NEEN-SOLLARS, or LOWER NEEN, a par. in the hund. of Overs, co. Salop, 3 miles S. of Cleobury-Mortimer, its post town, and 10 S.E. of Ludlow. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Rea and Kington canal, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is chiefly clay, with a gravel subsoil. The land is partly in hop-grounds. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £273, and the glebe comprises 52 acres, valued at £65 per annum. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Milson annexed, in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £360, in the patron. of Worcester College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient cruciform structure with a square tower crowned by a wooden spire. The interior of the church contains a tomb to Humphry Conynsby, the traveller. There is a National school for the children of the parishes of Neen-Sollars and Milson, entirely supported by Mrs. Wickstead. Colonel Rushout is lord of the manor.

NEENTON, a par. in the Chelmarsh div. of the hund. of Stottesden, co. Salop, 6½ miles S.W. of Bridgnorth, its post town, and 22 from Wolverhampton. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Rea, and is intersected by the Ludlow and Bridgnorth turnpike road. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil consists of loam with a subsoil of limestone, beneath which is coal and iron. Stone for building is quarried to a small extent. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £190. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient stone structure with a turret containing two bells. Henry Lyster, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

NEEPSEND, a vil. in the tnshp. of Brightside-Bierlow, borough of Sheffield, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.E. of Sheffield. It is situated near the river Don and the line of the North Midland railway. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the neighbouring ironworks, and in the cutlery manufacture.

NEFYN, or NEVYN, a par., market town, and borough, in the hund. of Dinlaen, co. Carnarvon, 6 miles from Pwllheli, and 18 S.W. of Carnarvon. It is a small but improving town, situated among the hills on the coast, and under Mount Rivel. About a mile to the S. is the well-sheltered harbour of Porth, situated in a sandy bay, and conjectured to have been frequented by the Romans, on account of strong entrenchments in the vicinity still visible, and various Roman urns discovered in the adjoining parish of Llaniestin. Edward I. held a grand triumphal festival here in 1284, to celebrate the conquest of Wales. It was made a free borough by Edward the Black Prince, but never obtained any considerable degree of prosperity. It has no manufactures, and but little trade, the chief import being coal. Some years ago a scheme was formed for improving this unfrequented part of Wales, by bringing the great road from London to Ireland through it, by a new line from Merionethshire across the Traeth-Mawr, and constituting this port a rendezvous for packets to Ireland instead of Holyhead. For this purpose an Act of Parliament was obtained in 1806 to erect a pier and other necessary works, but the government refusing to advance the money, as had been expected, the scheme was abandoned. During the railway mania its claims were again urged against those of Holyhead, and a line of broad-gauge railway was projected from Worcester in connection with the Great Western railway; but this was again given up. For a third time public attention has been again called to its capabilities as a port in connection with the projected railway from Barmouth to Porthmadoc, and thence to Pwllheli or Porthddinllaen. The town, which formerly was a poor fishing village, has been considerably improved of late years, and has several good houses, though not one good inn. It is still irregular, straggling, and rather dirty. The surrounding country is uninviting, and there are no resident gentry, on which account civilisation is very backward, and the habits of the people are extremely primitive. It contributes to Carnarvon in returning one member to parliament. The tithes were commuted in 1840. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the archdeac. of Merioneth and dioc. of Bangor, val. £110. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, or according to others to St. Peter, has a curious narrow tower. There are places of worship for the Wesleyans, Independents, Baptists, and Calvinistic Methodists, which last are the prevailing sect. There is a National school capable of accommodating about 120 children. Saturday is market day. Fairs are held on the 11th April, 18th August, and 20th October.

NEILSTON, a par. in the Upper ward, co. Renfrew, Scotland. It extends in length about 8½ miles, with an extreme breadth of 4½, and is bounded on the S. by Ayrshire, and by the pars. of Lochwinnoch, Abbey of Paisley, Eastwood, and Mearns, on other sides. It comprises the quoad sacra pars. of Neilston, Barrhead, and Levern, and the vils. of Cross Arthurlee, West Arthurlee, Grahamstown, Crofthead, Newton-Ralston, Gateside, and Uplanmuir. It is situated amongst the Lochliboside hills, and is watered by the river Levern, with the lochs Long, Libo, and Knock. Neilston came through the Crocs to the Stuarts of Crocston and Darnley, ancestors of the earls and dukes of Lennox, in the 13th century. There are numerous print-fields, bleach-fields, and cotton-spinning mills, which employ a large number of the inhabitants. The whole neighbourhood is studded with residences. The surface is in general hilly, except in the north-eastern parts, the highest elevation being the Pad, which is 820 feet above sea-level. In the level part of the parish, forming the eastern district, the soil is of a dry loamy nature, with a subsoil of clay, but in the central district the trap rock prevails, with a shallow soil well suited for pasture, while the western district is to a considerable extent moorish. The extent of arable land exceeds 16,000 acres. Trap is the prevailing formation, but sandstone and limestone exist, as also coal, which are worked to some extent. The parish is traversed by the road from Glasgow to Irvine, and is within easy access of the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway. The village of Neilston is about 4 miles S. of Paisley, and 2 S.W. of Barrhead, which see. This par. is in the presb. of Paisley, and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The minister has a stipend of £321. The parish church was erected about the middle of the 15th century, was enlarged in 1798, and has several times been restored. At Barrhead there are a Free church, United Presbyterian church, Roman Catholic chapel, and Evangelical chapel. There are parochial and other schools. The castle of Crocston, now in ruins, was once a pile of great magnificence, standing upon the summit of a little hill. Fairs are held on the third Tuesdays of February, May, and October (old style) for cattle, and a pleasure fair on the fourth Tuesday in July.

NEITHROP, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Banbury, co. Oxford, half a mile N.W. of Banbury, within which borough it is included for parliamentary purposes.

NELL, a small loch in the co. of Argyle, Scotland, 3 miles S.E. of Oban.

NEMPHLAR, EAST, a vil. in the par. and co. of Lanark, Scotland, 1 mile N.W. of Lanark. It is situated on rising ground, extending along the right bank of the Clyde, and contains the site of a ruined chapel which formerly belonged to the Knights Templars.

NEMPNETT-THRUBWELL, a par. in the hund. of Keynsham, co. Somerset, 8 miles N.E. of Axbridge, and 9 from Bristol. Blagdon is its post town. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated under the Mendip hills, near the river Yeo. At Fairyfield is an extensive barrow of an oval form, measuring 180 feet by 60, and 45 in height. Its summit is covered with ash trees and shrubs. On being opened in 1789 it was found to contain two rows of cells, running from S. to N., formed by immense stones set edgeways, and covered by others of larger dimensions. Skulls, a vast heap of bones, and other relics, having been discovered, it is conjectured to have been a work of the Druids, and the cemetery belonging to their great temple at Stanton-Drew, 3 miles distant. The village is small. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in dairy farming. The soil is of various quality, but chiefly good meadow land. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £265. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a tower containing five bells. The register dates from 1568. From the churchyard on Knap Hill an extensive view of the surrounding country is obtained. The charities produce about £30 per annum. The National school is situated in the parish of Butcomb, but serves for this parish also. The Baptists have a place of worship. Sir Charles Kemeys Tynte, Bart., is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

NEN, or NYNE, a river of co. Northampton, rises at Chapel Well, near Naseby, and passing through part of Cambridgeshire, falls into the Cross Keys Wash, near Sutton St. Mary, in Lincolnshire.

NENAGH, a par., post and market town, in the bars. of Lower and Upper Ormond, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 29 miles N. of Tipperary, and 95 from Dublin. The par. is 3 miles long and 2½ miles broad. The surface consists mostly of very excellent soil. It is traversed by the road from Limerick to Birr and Dublin, and by the Nenagh river. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. £580, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits in 1810. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and several day schools. In the vicinity are several residences. The town is situated among the mountains and near the river Nenagh. It is a military and a chief police station, and has barracks, a gaol, court-house, market-house, two banks, savings-bank, library, poorhouse, dispensary, and a fever hospital. Two newspapers are published in the town, the North Guardian and the Tipperary Vindicator. Petty sessions are held once a week, and the assizes twice a year. There are ruins of a castle built in the time of King John by the Butlers, who were the ancient proprietors. Nenagh Poor-law Union contains 24 electoral divisions in cos. Tipperary and Galway. Thursday is market day. Fairs are held on the 24th April, 29th May, 4th July, 1st August, 4th September, 10th October, and 1st November.

NENTHEAD, a chplry. in the par. of Alston-Moor, ward of Leath, co. Cumberland, 4 miles E. by S. of Alston. This place takes its name from its situation near the source of the river Nent, a tributary of the North Tyne. The village, which is considerable, contains a market-house, surmounted by a turret. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the neighbouring lead-mines and smelting-houses belonging to the London Lead Company. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £140, in the patron. of the Vicar of Alston. The church is a modern structure. There are chapels for the Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists, also schools on the National system, established by the London Lead Company.

NENTHORN, anciently Naythans-Thirn, a par. in the co. of Berwick, Scotland. It extends about 4½ miles from S.E. to N.W. in length, by an extreme breadth of 1¾ mile. It is principally bounded by the co. Roxburgh, and on other parts by the pars. of Earlston and Hume. The surface, though in general level, has an undulating aspect, with a rich and fertile soil, especially in the southern part. Sandstone, basalt, and shell-marl are abundant, and there is plenty of whinstone and freestone for building. The air is pure and remarkably healthy. The vil. of Nenthorn is about 3½ miles N.W. of Kelso. The parish is watered by the river Eden, and was formed during the 13th century out of the manors of Nathansthirn and Little Newton, which both belonged to the family of Morville, the hereditary constables of Scotland. These two districts are joined together by a narrow isthmus that is intersected by the river Eden. Nenthorn House and Newton Don are the principal residences. Near the latter mansion the river Eden falls over a steep rock from 30 to 40 feet in altitude. In this parish is a lake called Lurgie Loch. The par. is in the presb. of Kelso, and synod of Merse and Teviotdale, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £172. The parish church was erected in 1802. The original church of Naythans-Thirn belonged to the monks of Coldingham, and was subordinate to the mother church of Edenham. There are parochial and other schools.

NEOT'S, ST., a par. and small town in the hund. of Toseland, co. Hunts, 8 miles S.W. of Huntingdon, and 51¼ from London by the Great Northern railway, on which it is a station. It is situated on the E. bank of the river Ouse, over which is a stone bridge of one central arch, with two smaller ones, over the stream, and continued by six other arches, forming a causeway over the marshy lands adjoining. It derives its name from an ancient Benedictine monastery situated on the opposite bank of the river, at Eynesbury, originally founded in 974 by Earl Alric and his wife Ethelfleda, and dedicated to St. Neot, whose relics are said to have been stolen from Neotstock, in Cornwall, and conveyed hither. In 1113 it was made a cell to the abbey of Bec, in Normandy, by Roisia de Clere, but being afterwards made independent, it existed till the Reformation. Its revenues were returned at the Dissolution at £256 1*s.* 3¼*d., when the site was given by Henry VIII. to the Cromwells, from whom it has descended to Earl Sandwich, of Hinchinbrook, the present lord of the manor. The Earl of Holland was taken prisoner here in 1648, fighting for Charles I. The town, though well built, stands so low that the streets are sometimes inundated. It is distant about 1 mile E. of the Great North road, and consists of three principal streets. It contains a market-house, with a market-square, a good hotel, several extensive breweries, large paper-mills belonging to Messrs. Towgood, and two tanneries. A considerable trade is carried on by the Ouse, which is navigable from Bedford to Lynn. The principal business is in corn, coals, wine, timber, &c., besides a brisk retail trade for the supply of the surrounding country. A considerable portion of the female population are employed in the manufacture of lace. A manorial court is held annually, and a new county court at stated intervals for the recovery of small debts. St. Neot's is the head of a Poor-law Union, comprising 30 parishes and townships, of which 22 are in the county of Huntingdon, 7 in that of Bedford, and 1 in Cambridgeshire. The surface is generally low, and in parts marshy. The land is chiefly arable. The soil is clay and loam, alternating with gravel. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1770. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £163. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a Gothic structure with a tower containing eight bells. It was built about 1507, and has a good timbered roof and some ancient screen-work. There are places of worship for Independents, Baptists, and Wesleyans, to the last of which a school is attached. The free school, for twenty-five boys, between the ages of seven and fourteen, was founded in 1760 by Gabriel Newton, an alderman of Leicester, who endowed it with a rent-charge of £26, subsequently augmented by the bequests of Loftus Hatley and Elizabeth Bailey, so that its income is now about £70. There are besides National, British, and infant schools. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum, distributed in bread to the poor. The only mansion in the parish is Priory Hill, the seat of G. W. Rowley, Esq. Market day is Thursday, for corn. Fairs are held on Holy Thursday, on that day three weeks, the first Thursday after the 11th October, and the 17th December, also a statute fair for hiring servants on 1st August.

NEOT, ST., a par., tnshp., and vil. in the hund. of West, co. Cornwall, 6 miles W. by N. of Liskeard, and 30 from Plymouth. The parish, which is of large extent, comprising an area of 13,997 acres, is situated at the head of a valley watered by a branch of the river Fowey, called the river of St. Neot. It had previous to the Norman conquest a hermitage or monastery of St. Neot, which has given name to the village. More than half the surface is still common and waste, and about 400 acres of woodland. The substratum abounds in granite, greywacke, and slate, which are quarried, and in some places contain veins of stream tin. The soil is clay and loam, producing good crops of corn. In this parish is Dozmere, an intermittent lake, to which various superstitions attach. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £367. The church of St. Neot is in the perpendicular style of architecture, with a tower containing six bells. It contains several ancient brasses and monuments, an antique font, and a register chest. The windows exhibit some remains of the legend of St. Neot in ancient stained glass, by Hedgeland, and sixteen others enriched with subjects from Scripture history, as the Creation, Deluge, Lord's Supper, Crucifixion, &c. The glass was restored in 1824 by the Rev. R. G. Grylls, at an expense of £2,000. There are two places of worship belonging to the Bible Christians, and one to the Wesleyans, also a National and free school for boys and girls, and a Sunday-school. The parochial charities produce about £33 per annum, besides £13 belonging to the free school. The Rev. William Grylls is lord of the manor. In this parish are the ruins of a chapel dedicated to St. Luke, also traces of the monastery or college of St. Neot, said to have been founded in memory of Neotus, a brother of King Alfred. John Austin, the antiquary, was born here in 1699. A cattle fair is held on the second Tuesday in April and November.

NEPHIN and NEPHINBEG, mountains of co. Mayo, Ireland. The former attains an elevation of 2,646 feet, and the latter one of 2,065 feet above the sea-level.

NEPICAR, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Wrotham, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 1 mile S.E. of Wrotham, and 6 miles N.E. of Maidstone.

NERQUIS, or NERCWYS, a tnshp. in the par. and hund. of Mold, co. Flint, 2 miles S. of Mold, its post town. There are several extensive plantations on a moor 800 feet high, which originated from the successful planting of the late Dr. Thackeray of Chester, thus increasing the value of the ground to an immense extent. The village, which is considerable, may be considered a suburb of the flourishing little town of Mold. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the collieries with which this part of the country abounds. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £100, in the patron. of the Vicar of Mold. The church is a commodious structure recently erected. Nerquis Hall, the principal residence, was built by the Wynnes in 1638.

NERSTON, a vil. in the par. of East Kilbride, co. Lanark, Scotland, 1½ mile N.E. of East Kilbride.

NESBIT, a tnshp. in the par. of Doddington, E. div. of Glendale ward, co. Northumberland, 4 miles N. of Wooler. It is situated near Nesbit buildings.

NESBIT, a tnshp. in the par. of Stamfordham, N.E. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 2 miles S. of Stamfordham, and 9 N.E. of Hexham. It is situated near the river Pont.

NESBITT, a tnshp. in the par. of Hart, S. div. of Easington ward, co. Durham, 6 miles N.W. of Hartlepool, and 12 N. of Stockton-upon-Tees. It is situated on the line of the railway to Hartlepool.

NESFIELD-WITH-LANGBAR, a tnshp. in the par. of Ilkley, upper div. of the wap. of Claro, West Riding co. York, 6 miles N. of Bingley, and 2½ N. by W. of Otley. It is situated on the northern bank of the river

Wharfe, and is mostly the property of the Duke of Devonshire.

NESS, a tnshp. in the par. of Great Neston, higher div. of the hund. of Wirrall, co. Chester, 1 mile S.E. of Great Neston. It is situated on the river Dee.

NESS, a loch on the Caledonian canal between Bona Ferry and Fort Augustus, co. Inverness, Scotland. It is about 24 miles long by 1 mile wide, and in parts 810 feet deep.

NESS, a wap. in co. Lincoln. It contains the borough of Stamford, and the pars. of Barholme, Baston, Braceborough, Carlby, Market and West Deeping, Greatford, Langtoft, Stowe, Tallington, Thurlby, Uffington, and part of Fen-Deeping, comprising an area of 29,790 acres. It gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. and dioc. of Lincoln.

NESS. See Noss, co. Caithness, Scotland.

NESS, or CROSSNESS, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of Barvas, Island of Lewis, Western Islands, coast of Scotland, 2 miles S. of the Butt of Lewis. It includes Rona Lewis.

NESS, a glen near Loch Doon, co. Ayr, Scotland.

NESS, EAST, a tnshp. in the par. of Hovingham, wap. of Ryedale, North Riding co. York, 2 miles N.E. of Hovingham railway station, and 9 W. of Malton. It is situated on the river Rye, near the line of the Roman road from Cleveland to Malton. Roman remains and inscriptions were discovered here. Messrs. T. W. and J. Kendall are lords of the manor and sole landowners. The surface is undulating and the soil fertile. The substratum abounds with limestone, which is quarried for building and for burning into lime. About two-thirds of the land are in pasture, and the remainder arable. Near the site of the ancient Hall is the modern residence of John Kendall, Esq.

NESS, GREAT, or NESS, MAGNA, a par. in the hund. of Pimhill, co. Salop, 8 miles N.W. of Shrewsbury, its post town, and 3½ S.W. of Baschurch railway station. The par., which is situated on the road from Shrewsbury to Oswestry, is of large extent, containing the tnshps. of Nesscliff, Hopton, Kinton, Willcot, Felton-Butler, and Alderton. The surface is undulating, and nearly in the centre of the parish is a rocky cliff called Ness Cliff. The soil consists of sandy loam with a subsoil of sand rock. There are quarries of fine red sandstone, from which it is said the stone was raised for building the castle, the abbey, and the walls of Shrewsbury. About two-thirds of the land are arable, the remainder meadow and pasture, with about 150 acres of woodland and plantations. A rent-charge of £30 18s. is paid to this parish out of the tithes of Shotatton. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £305, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing three bells. The church, which appears to have been built at different periods, has a painted window. At Nesscliff was formerly a chapel-of-ease dedicated to St. Mary, the site of which is now occupied by the parochial school founded by John Edwards in 1753. The parochial charities produce £20 yearly. Ness Hall, the principal residence, is situated in an extensive park; it has remained in the possession of the Edwards family since 1660. The Earl of Bradford is lord of the manor. In this parish is a remarkable cave divided into two compartments by a massive pillar of rock, upon which is carved the date 1564, and the initials of the celebrated outlaw Humphrey Kynaston.

NESS, GREAT, a hmlt. in the par. of Sevenoaks, hund. of Codsheath, co. Kent, 2 miles N. by E. of Sevenoaks. It is situated amongst the hills near the river Darent.

NESS, LITTLE, a chplry. in the par. of Baschurch, hund. of Pimhill, co. Salop, 7 miles N.W. of Shrewsbury, its post town, and 2½ miles S. of the Baschurch railway station. The chplry. comprises the tnshps. of Little Ness, Adcot, and Milford. The chapel is an ancient edifice with a gable containing one bell. The interior of the chapel has a stone font of great antiquity.

NESS, WEST, a tnshp. in the par. of Stonegrave, wap. of Ryedale, North Riding co. York, 3 miles N.E. of Hovingham railway station, and 10 N. by W. of Whitwell. The township is of small extent, and the village is situated on the river Rye, which abounds with trout. The soil consists of clay upon a substratum of redston and excellent limestone, which is quarried for building purposes. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. William Rutson, Esq., is lord of the manor. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1776.

NESTING, in the mainland, and in the shire of Orkney and Shetland, with the ancient pars. of Lunnasting and Whalsay and the detached islands of the Skerries, annexed, a par. in the Shetland Islands, Scotland. It extends about 18 miles in length, with an extreme breadth of 4 miles. The inequalities of the surface are considerable, the principal elevations being Catfirth, Doure, and Vidlaw roes. The cultivated portion of the parish is but small, the surface being chiefly bare and mossy. There are neither roads nor bridges, and agriculture is in a very backward state. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the fisheries, and consider the cultivation of the land as only a secondary object. Limestone, granite, syenite, and mica slate are abundant, but gneiss is the prevailing rock. Eswick, Lunnaness, Railsburgh, and Staveness are the chief headlands. The humanity and kindness of the inhabitants to shipwrecked sailors is exemplary, and deserves the highest commendation. The village of Nesting, which stands nearly central of the eastern district of Shetland, is distant about 12 miles N. of Lerwick. This par. is in the presb. of Olnafirth and synod of Shetland. The minister has a stipend of £150. There are three churches, all in good repair, where the minister officiates in rotation, first at Nesting; secondly and thirdly, at Whalsay; and in the summer he visits the Skerries for about a week. There is a parochial school, also two other schools.

NESTON, GREAT, a par., post and market town, in the higher div. of the hund. of Wirrall, co. Chester, 4 miles W. of the Hooton station on the Birkenhead, Lancashire, and Cheshire junction railway, and 11 N.W. of Chester. It is situated on the S.W. side of a peninsula formed by the estuaries of the rivers Mersey and Dee, opposite the co. of Flint. The par. comprises the tnshps. of Little Neston, Ledsham, Willaston, Thornton Hough, Ness, Raby, and Leighton, and the flourishing bathing place of Parkgate. Neston is a petty sessions town, and the magistrates' sittings are held at the court-house; also a court leet and baron are held yearly. The board of guardians meet at Clatteridge and Birkenhead every Wednesday alternately. The village derives its chief support from visitors, who resort to it during the summer months for the benefit of bathing. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £535, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to SS. Mary and Helen, is an ancient stone structure, with a square tower containing six bells. The interior of the church contains an antique font, old register chest, and numerous monuments. The parochial charities produce about £42 per annum. There are National and infant schools; to the former is attached a small lending library free to the inhabitants. Market day is Friday, but the market is unattended. Fairs are held on 2nd February, 29th May, and 29th September, for cattle. Races are held on Whit-Monday and the two following days.

NESTON, LITTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Great Neston, higher div. of the hund. of Wirrall, co. Chester, 1 mile S.E. of Great Neston. It is situated near the river Dee, opposite Flintshire.

NESWICK, a tnshp. in the par. of North Dalton, Bainton Beacon div. of Harthill wap, East Riding co. York, 4½ miles S.W. of Great Driffield. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1774. Neswick Hall is the principal residence.

NETCHWOOD, a hmlt. in the hund. of Stoddesden, co. Salop, 5 miles W. by S. of Bridgnorth. It is situated near the river Severn.

NETHANFOOT, a vil. in the par. of Lesmahago, co. Lanark, Scotland, 8 miles S.W. of Lanark. It is situated on the banks of the river Nethan, a tributary of the Clyde, from which it takes its name.

NETHER-ALDERLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Alderley, hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester. See ALDERLEY, and the like for other places with this prefix not occurring in the following order.

NETHERAVON, a par. in the hund. of Elstub, co. Wilts, 5 miles N.W. of Amesbury, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Avon, and is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the tythg. of Chisenbury-de-la-Folly, and the well-wooded park of Netheravon. The soil is fertile. The tithes were commuted for corn-rents, under an Enclosure Act in 1788. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £131, in the patron. of the Bishop of Salisbury. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient edifice, with a square embattled and pinnacled tower. It has been recently repaired and restored. The parochial charities are £7 yearly. There is a National school. The Baptists and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. Netheravon House, formerly a seat of the Duke of Beaufort, is a brick mansion, now the residence of Sir M. E. H. Beach, Bart., who is lord of the manor.

NETHERBURY, a par. in the hund. of Beaminster-Forum, Bridport div. of co. Dorset, 2 miles S.W. of Beaminster, its post town, and 5 N. of Bridport. The parish, which is extensive, is situated on the river Brit, near the coast. It contains the tythgs. of Ashe, Melplash, Bowood, and Loscombe. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the flax mills. There is also an iron foundry. The land is very fertile, and is watered by numerous small streams flowing through woody ravines, with numerous cider orchards. There are several limestone quarries, in which are found numerous fossils, including belemnites, ammonites, univals, bivalves, and screw shells. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £750, and the vicarial for £400. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Ash annexed, in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £300, in the patron. of the Bishop of Salisbury. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing six bells. The chancel, which has recently been restored, contains a monument to one of the More family. Besides the parish church there is a district church, called Christ Church, erected in 1847. There was formerly a chapel-of-ease at Mangerton, but it has long been in ruins. The parochial charities produce about £204 per annum, of which £140 goes to the grammar school. There is also a mixed National school. The Dissenters have several places of worship. Strode House and Parnham House are the principal residences. The old manor-house, formerly the seat of the More family, is now a farmhouse.

NETHERBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Arthuret, ward of Eskdale, co. Cumberland, 2½ miles N. by E. of Longtown. It is situated on the bank of the river Esk, and was anciently a Roman station in connection with the Picts' wall. In Netherby Hall, late the seat of Sir James R. G. Graham, Bart., are preserved numerous Roman coins, altars, fragments of domestic utensils, &c.

NETHERBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkby-Overblow, upper div. of Claro wap., West Riding co. York, 4½ miles S.W. of Wetherby. It is situated on the river Wharfe, and is in conjunction with Kearby. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans.

NETHERCOTE, a hmlt. in the par. of Warkworth, hund. of King's Sutton, co. Northampton, 1 mile from Warkworth.

NETHERCOTE, a hmlt. in the par. of Tackley, co. Oxford, 3 miles N.E. of Woodstock. It is situated on the Oxford canal and the river Charwell.

NETHERCOTE, a hmlt. in the par. of Wolfhamcote, co. Warwick, 6 miles N.E. of Southam. It is situated near the Oxford canal.

NETHERCROSS, a bar. in the co. of Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. Its boundaries are the Irish Sea and the bars. of Balrothery, Coolock, Castleknock, and co. Meath. Its area is 21,818, containing the pars. of Donabate, Killossery, Killeek, Kilsallaghan, Portraine, and parts of Finglass and Swords.

NETHERFIELD, a hund. in the rape of Hastings, co. Sussex. It contains the pars. of Brightling, Dallington, Mountfield, and Penhurst, comprising an area of 10,880 acres.

NETHERFIELD, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Battle, rape of Hastings, co. Sussex, 3 miles N.W. of Battle.

NETHER-FOLD, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Kimberworth, par. of Rotherham, West Riding co. York, 2 miles W. of Rotherham. It is situated on the line of the Sheffield railway, near the river Don.

NETHERGATE, a vil. in the hmlt. of Westwoodside, par. of Haxey, co. Lincoln, 3 miles S.W. of Epworth.

NETHER-GRAVESHIP, a tnshp. in the par. and ward of Kendal, co. Westmoreland. This township is divided into four parts, three of which are situated on the E. side of the river Kent, and the other on the fell side.

NETHER-GREEN, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Upper Hallam, West Riding co. York, 4 miles W. of Sheffield.

NETHER-HADDON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bakewell, hund. of High Peak, co. Derby, 2 miles S.W. of Bakewell, its post town, and 6 W. of Rowsley. The vil. of Over Haddon in this tnshp. is on rising ground. The inhabitants are wholly engaged in agriculture. Haddon Hall was erected at different periods, some portions of it so early as the reign of Edward III., but the greater part in Elizabeth's time. The buildings enclose two quadrangular courts. The chapel is a small edifice erected in Edward VI.'s time, and has a painted window of the Crucifixion, bearing date 1427.

NETHER-HEYFORD, a par. in the hund. of Nobottle-Grove, co. Northampton, 2½ miles S.E. of the Weedon station on the London and North-Western railway, and 6 S.W. of Northampton. The village, which is small, is situated on the Grand Junction canal, and is chiefly agricultural. There are some extensive smelting works. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £152. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, has a square tower containing a clock and four bells. There is a mixed school for Upper and Nether Heyford, endowed above a century and a half ago with £400 by William Bliss, and is open to all children of the name of Bliss within 5 miles. There are places of worship for the Baptists and Primitive Methodists. Sir Charles Knightley, Bart., is lord of the manor.

NETHER-KINGCOMBE, a tythg. in the par. of Toller-Porcorum, hund. of Beaminster-Forum, Bridport div. of co. Dorset, 1 mile from Toller-Porcorum, and 11 miles W. of Dorchester.

NETHERLEE, a vil. in the par. of Cathcart, co Renfrew, Scotland, 2 miles S.E. of Pollockshaws.

NETHERMAINS, a vil. in the par. of Kinnaird, co. Perth, Scotland, 7 miles N.E. of Perth.

NETHERMORE, a tythg. in the par. of Chippenham, co. Wilts, 2 miles S.E. of Chippenham. It includes the hmlt. of Tytherton-Stanley.

NETHER-SHIRE, a vil. in the tnshp. and par. of Ecclesfield, wap. of Strafforth, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N. of Sheffield.

NETHERTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Thorpe-Salvin, West Riding co. York, 10 miles S.E. of Rotherham.

NETHERTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Fyfield, co. Berks, 5 miles N.W. of Abingdon.

NETHERTON, a hmlt. in the par. and lordship of Frodsham, co. Chester, near Frodsham, and 10 miles N.E. of Chester. It is situated near Delamere Forest, between the rivers Mersey and Weaver.

NETHERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bedlington, co. Northumberland, 3 miles S.E. of Morpeth. Until recently it formed part of Durham. It is situated near the river Blyth. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the collieries and stone quarries.

NETHERTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Hatherop, co. Gloucester, 2 miles N. of Fairford.

NETHERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Sephton, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 7 miles N. by E. of Liverpool. The village, which is inconsiderable, is situated on the river Alt, and is intersected by the Leeds canal. The inhabitants are wholly engaged in agriculture. The land is chiefly arable and meadow. There is a place of worship for the Roman Catholics. The Earl of Sephton is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

NETHERTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Cropthorne, middle div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, co. Worcester, 4 miles W. by S. of Evesham. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The chapel has been rebuilt, the former edifice having fallen into ruin. There is a place of worship for the Baptists.

NETHERTON, a vil. and chplry. in the pars. of St. Thomas and St. Edmund, Dudley, co. Worcester, 1 mile S.W. of Dudley. It is situated on the Stourbridge canal, in the heart of an extensive mining and manufacturing district. There are extensive collieries and mines of ironstone. The inhabitants are mostly employed in the numerous furnaces for smelting iron ore, and in the manufacture of nails. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £300, in the patron. of the Vicar of Dudley. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, was erected in 1831, by grant from the parliamentary commissioners. There are several places of worship belonging to the Baptists, Wesleyans, New Connexion and Primitive Methodists. There are National and other schools.

NETHERTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Kidderminster, co. Worcester, near Kidderminster.

NETHERTON NORTH SIDE, a tnshp. in the par. of Alwinton, W. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 4½ miles N.E. of Alwinton, and 14 N.W. of the Alnwick railway station. The township, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Allen or Alwin, a branch of the river Coquet. Walter Selby, Esq., is lord of the manor.

NETHERTON QUARRY, a vil. in the par. of East Kilpatrick, co. Dumbarton, Scotland, 9 miles E. of Dumbarton.

NETHERTON SOUTH SIDE, a tnshp. in the par. of Alwinton, W. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 4 miles N.E. of Alwinton, and 6 N.W. of Rothbury. It is situated on a branch of the river Coquet, adjoining the tnshp. of Netherton North Side.

NETHERTOWN, a hmlt. in the par. of Hamstall-Ridware, co. Stafford, 4 miles E. of Rugeley. It is situated on the river Trent.

NETHERWENT. See ST. BRIDES, cos. Monmouth and Pembroke.

NETHERWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of Thornbury, co. Hereford, 4 miles N.W. of Bromyard.

NETHY, a rivulet of co. Inverness, Scotland, rises under Cairn Gorm, and joins the river Spey near Abernethy.

NETLEY, a tythg. in the par. of Hound, hund. of Upper Mainsbridge, co. Hants, 3 miles S.E. of Southampton. It is situated on Southampton Water, near Hound Castle. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £128. The church is a modern structure.

NETTESWELL, or NETSWELL, a par. in the hund. of Harlow, co. Essex, 2 miles S.W. of Harlow, its post town, and 1 mile S. of Burnt Mill railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Cambridge section of the Great Eastern railway, and about 2 miles from the Stort Navigation. The manor was given by King Harold to Waltham Abbey. The inhabitants are wholly engaged in agriculture. The surface is undulating and the land chiefly arable, with some pasture, woodland, and common. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £230. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £179. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a spired tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £35, which goes to Martin's free school and almshouses.

NETTLEBED, a par. in the hund. of Ewelme, co. Oxford, 5 miles N.W. of Henley-on-Thames, its post town, and 6 from Wallingford. The village is situated on the Chiltern hills, 820 feet above the level of the sea. It is intersected by the road from London to Oxford, and is a polling-place for the county. It contains some good shops and inns, also brick and lime kilns and a saw-mill. A brisk trade is done in timber. The land is partly in wood and common. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £101. The church is dedicated to St. Bartholomew. The cost of its erection was defrayed by voluntary contributions, and by a grant of £200 from the Church Building Society. A new school-room has recently been built. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. It is a meet for the Bramshill hounds. A fair is held on the Monday prior to the 29th October.

NETTLECOMBE, a tythg. in the par. of Poorstock, co. Dorset, 4 miles N.E. of Bridport. It is in conjunction with Mappercombe.

NETTLECOMBE, a tythg. in the pars. of Whitwell and Bonchurch, co. Hants, 7 miles S.E. of Newport.

NETTLECOMBE, a par. in the hund. of Williton, co. Somerset, 3 miles S.W. of Williton railway station, 7 N. by W. of Wiveliscombe, and 15 W. of Taunton, its post town. The village, which is small and straggling, is wholly agricultural. The soil consists of a rich loam, with a mixture of clay on a subsoil of marl. The surface is undulating and well-wooded with oak, elm, and Spanish chesnut of luxuriant growth. About half the land is arable, and the remainder meadow and common. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £468, and the glebe comprises 60 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £445. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small edifice, with a square tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. Nettlecombe Court is situated in the midst of an extensive park abounding with deer. Sir Walter Trevelyan, Bart., is lord of the manor.

NETTLEDEN, a chplry. in the pars. of Ivinghoe and Pitstone, hund. of Cottesloe, co. Bucks, 3 miles S. of Hemel-Hempstead, its post town, and 2½ N.E. of Berkhampstead. The village, which is inconsiderable, is situated near the line of the North-Western railway. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in straw plaiting and in agriculture. About 410 acres are comprised within the demesne of Ashridge Park, late the seat of the Countess of Bridgwater. The remainder of the land is distributed between arable, meadow, and pasture in nearly even proportions. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £58. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, was partly rebuilt by the late Duke of Bridgewater. The interior contains a marble tablet to the memory of Robert Clark, Esq., who was auditor to the late Duke and Countess of Bridgewater. Earl Brownlow is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

NETTLEHAM, a par. in the wap. of Lawress, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 3 miles N.E. of Lincoln, its post town. The village is of small extent and wholly agricultural. The surface is hilly and the lower lands are watered by a small rivulet. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1776. The bishops of Lincoln had formerly a palace here. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £350, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The interior has a new font presented in 1849 by John Lewis Fytche, Esq. of Thorpe Hall. Nettleham Hall is the principal residence. The Bishop of Lincoln is lord of the manor.

NETTLESTEAD, a par. in the hund. of Twyford, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 7 miles S.W. of Maidstone, its post town, and half a mile from the Wateringbury station on a branch line of the Maidstone railway. The village, which is small and wholly agricultural, is situated on the navigable river Medway, near Brand Bridge. The land is partly in common, with some hop-grounds. The living is a rect.* annexed to that of West Barming, in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £442. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a small tower containing three bells. The interior of the church has tombs of the Pimpes, Scotts, and Botelers, of whose old seat there are still traces. The register dates from 1450. There is a National school for both sexes. The Earl of Gainsborough is lord of the manor.

NETTLESTEAD, a par. in the hund. of Bosmere, co. Suffolk, 2½ miles W. of Claydon railway station, and 6 N.W. of Ipswich, its post town. The village, which is inconsiderable, is wholly agricultural. The manor was formerly held by the earls of Richmond, Peter de Savoy, the Tiptofts, Despencers, and Wentworths, who had a seat here, and who took hence the title of baron. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £193 10s. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £192. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. It has a brass of a knight in armour. The register dates from 1618. Nettlestead Hall has an ancient gateway bearing the quarterings of the Wentworth family, to whom it once belonged. The mansion has been modernised and new fronted.

NETTLESTONE, a vil. in the par. of St. Helen's, lib. of East Medina, Isle of Wight, 2 miles E. by S. of Ryde.

NETTLETON, a par. in the hund. of North Damerham, co. Wilts, 8 miles N.W. of Chippenham, its post town, and 10 N.E. of Bath. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the Roman way Akeman Street. It is wholly agricultural, and is remarkable for a large barrow on which are three stones of a cromlech. About two-thirds of the land are arable, and the remainder pasture and meadow, with 40 acres of woodland. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £440. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £408. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing five bells. There are places of worship for Baptists and Wesleyans. Thomas Penrice, Esq., is lord of the manor.

NETTLETON, a par. in the S. div. of the wap. of Yarborough, co. Lincoln, 1 mile S.W. of Caistor, its post town, and 2 miles from the Moortown station on the Lincoln, Market-Rasen, and Hull line of railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated in a valley under the Wolds, and is wholly agricultural. The tithes were commuted for land and money payments under an Enclosure Act in 1791. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £375. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, has a square tower containing a clock and three bells. The parochial charities produce £20 per annum. There is a British school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. Sir Culling Eardley is lord of the manor.

NETTLEWORTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Warsop, co. Notts, 3 miles N. of Mansfield. It is situated near the river Maun.

NETTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Bishopstone, co. Wilts, 3 miles S. by W. of Wilton.

NETTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Durnford, co. Wilts, 2 miles S.W. of Amesbury.

NEVAY, an ancient par. in co. Forfar, Scotland, now joined to Essie.

NEVENDON, or NEWENDON, a par. in the hund. of Barstable, co. Essex, 5½ miles S.E. of Billericay, and 3 N.E. of the Pitsea railway station. Wickford is its post town. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated in a valley, from which circumstance it derives its name. The village is of ancient date and wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £225. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a small ancient structure, with a tower containing one bell.

NEVERN, or NEFERN, a par. in the hund. of Kemess, co. Pembroke, 8 miles from Cardigan, its post town, and 2 from Newport. It is the largest parish in the county, and includes the quarters of Crugian, Kilgwyn, Morva, and Trewern. The village, which is considerable, is situated in a rich vale on the banks of a stream of the same name, which rises under the mountain Vrenny Vawr, and is crossed by a bridge at Pont Baldwyn, where tradition relates that Archbishop Baldwyn, accompanied by Giraldus, first preached the Crusades. On an eminence above the village appear the slight remains of Llanhyfer Castle, formerly a square building with a bastion at each angle. It is said to have been the principal palace of the reguli of Dyfed, and was the seat of Martin de Tours before he married the daughter of Rhysap-Grufydd. On one side it was naturally inaccessible, the wall following the edge of a rocky ravine; on the others it was rendered so by a deep foss hewn out of the solid rock. There are also remains of an old mansion of Henry VII.'s time, inhabited by Sir James ap Owain, besides others of a later date, now converted into farmhouses, viz. Cwm Glöyn, Trellyfant, Tre Wern, and Pentref Ifan. Nevern was originally a chief borough, with a portreeve and "burbages," who held courts for its government. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Kilgwyn annexed, in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £240, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Brynach, is a Norman structure, with a tower. The inside of the church is not paved, and frequent interments have elevated the floor above 7 feet. It contains a coffin lid, with an early Greek cross. In the extensive churchyard, which is planted with yew trees, is a cross of the 9th century, consisting of a tall shaft, like that standing in front of Carew Castle, but more elegantly wrought. It is a single stone, 2 feet broad, 18 inches thick, and 13 feet high, circular at the top, and carved upon all sides with knot work. The charities produce £22 per annum. This neighbourhood abounds with Druidic antiquities, including the gigantic cromlech of Pentre-evan, only equalled in Wales by that of St. Nicholas, near Cardiff. This cromlech, or Druidical temple, is encircled by rude stones 150 feet in circumference, and so high that six persons on horseback can be conveniently sheltered under it. At Llechy-Dribedd, on the sea-coast between Nevern and Cardigan, is another cromlech having a furrow in the incumbent stone.

NEVILL-HOLT, a chplry. in the par. of Medbourne, hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, 6 miles S.W. of Uppingham, its post town, and 3 N. of the Medbourne-Bridge railway station. The village, which is inconsiderable, is wholly agricultural. In the neighbourhood is a mineral spring formerly in great repute. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Medbourne, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church has a lofty embattled tower, crowned with a spire, and containing one bell. The Hall, which is situated near the church, is the principal residence. It is a castellated mansion with a Roman Catholic chapel adjoining, and surrounded by extensive pleasure-grounds. Cosmore Neville, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

NEVIN. See NEFYN, co. Carnarvon.

NEVIS, a stream of the co. Inverness, Scotland, rises under Ben Nevis, and flowing through the vale to which it gives name, falls into Loch Eil near Fort William.

NEVISH, a sea loch, forming an arm of Sleat Sound, in the co. of Inverness, Scotland. It is about 12 miles long by 1½ mile wide.

NEWABBEY, anciently Kirkinder, a par. in the co. of Kircudbright, Scotland. It comprises the vil. of its own name, also the vil. of Drumbarn. It extends about 10 miles in length from S.E. to N.W., with an extreme breadth of about 4½ miles. It is bounded on the E. by the estuary of the Nith, which falls into the Solway Frith, and on the other sides by the pars. of Kirkbean, Colvend, Kirkgunzean, Lochrutton, and Troqueer. Towards the S. the surface is level, and is regularly enclosed and highly cultivated, but in the western extremity it is hilly and interspersed with mosses and extensive muirs. The soil in the uplands is chiefly gravel and loam, and in the level district to the S.E. alluvial clay. The climate, though subject to frequent storms of wind and heavy rains, is nevertheless remarkably healthy. In the southern part of the parish is Loch Kinder, a lake about 1¼ mile long and three-quarters of a mile broad, abounding with trout. There are also two other smaller lakes, each about three-quarters of a mile long, Lochend and Craigend, abounding with pike. The burn, called New Abbey Pows, allows vessels of 60 to 70 tons burthen to come up to the village, importing lime and shells for manure, and some coals. On the N. lie the woods of Shambelly, and to the S. the dark braes of Criffle, the lofty hill of which rises to the height of 2,000 feet above sea-level. Near the shore of Lochend is the spot where one of the early Covenanters of this district met an untimely end. On the Glen Hill, a continuation of the Criffle, stands a monument erected in commemoration of the battle of Waterloo. It is a granite column of spiral form, 50 feet in height and 16 in diameter, and has a spiral staircase within. At Craigend farm there is a rocking stone, consisting of a huge block of syenite, computed to be about 15 tons in weight. There are various mills in the parish. The parish is traversed by the coach road from Dumfries to Kirkcudbright. The village of Newabbey is about 12 miles E. of Dalbeattie, and 7 W. of Dumfries. It is of small extent, and is situated at the eastern extremity of the county, near the mouth of the Nith. It was originally called Kirkinder, but took the name of Newabbey from the once celebrated religious establishment founded in the 13th century for the Cistercian order of monks by Dervorguilla, daughter of Alan, lord of Galloway, and wife of John Baliol, Lord of Castle Barnard, and mother of John Baliol, king of Scotland. Andrew Winton, who was Prior of Loch Leven, informs us that after the death of Baliol in 1269, the Lady Dervorguilla caused his heart to be embalmed and put into an ivory box, which was then embedded in the wall of the abbey church near the high altar, from which circumstance it was styled the Abbey of Sweetheart, though it was afterwards more generally called New Abbey. The ruins occupy an area of 240 by 150 feet. The abbey was a lofty building of the light Gothic style of architecture, supported on arches and Gothic pillars. The area, called the Precinct, is still used as a place of interment for Roman Catholics. The church is the chief portion of the existing ruin. Near it are the remains of an ancient tower called the Abbot's Tower, which was once the residence of the abbots, and from its elevated position commands extensive views. This par. is in the presb. and synod of Dumfries, in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £254. The parish church, which was erected before the Reformation, was rebuilt about half a century back, and has since that period been enlarged. The Roman Catholics have a chapel at Kirkconnel. There are three parochial schools.

NEW ABBEY, an ancient seat in the par. and bar. of Kilcullen, co. Kildare, Ireland, 8 miles E. by S. of Kildare. The remains of this once magnificent mansion, which was given by Queen Elizabeth to the poet Spenser, stand on the river Liffey, near Kilcullen Bridge, occupying the site of a Franciscan monastery founded in 1460 by Sir R. Eustace.

NEW ACCRINGTON. See ACCRINGTON, NEW, and the like for other places with this prefix, not occurring in the following order.

NEWALL WITH CLIFTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Otley, upper div. of Claro wap., West Riding co. York, 1 mile N. of Otley. This township, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Wharfe, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is rich, and of a loamy nature, with a subsoil of clay. Newall Hall and Ashfield House are the principal residences; the former is distant about half a mile, and the latter 1 mile, from Otley.

NEWARK, a quoad sacra par. in the pars. of Kilmalcolm and New Port Glasgow, co. Renfrew, Scotland, adjoining the town of Port Glasgow. It is but a quarter of a mile in length, with a breadth of about one-eighth of a mile. It was established as a separate district by the Court of Teinds in 1855. The greater part of the barony of Newark is in the par. of Kilmalcolm, but the ancient castle stands in that of Port Glasgow. The site of this venerable pile is on a point of land extending into the Clyde. It is of quadrangular form and nearly entire, and bears the arms of the Maxwells over its principal doorway. It forms a most prominent feature in the landscape, and from its top there is a fine prospect. The church or chapel-of-ease was erected in 1774.

NEWARK, a hmlt. and chplry. in the par. of St. John Baptist, soke of Peterborough, co. Northampton, 1½ mile N.E. of Peterborough. The chapel which formerly stood here was dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, but has long been in ruins.

NEWARK, a lib. in the borough and co. of Leicester.

NEWARK, a bay on the E. side of the Orkney group of islands, coast of Scotland, near Start Point.

NEWARK CASTLE, a seat of the Duke of Buccleuch, co. Selkirk, Scotland, 3 miles W. of Selkirk. It is situated on the river Yarrow, and was once occupied by the Duchess Anne, widow of the unfortunate Monmouth, who here listened to the "Lay of the Last Minstrel." There are also several other ruins in Scotland of the same name—one in co. Fife, near St. Monance, once the seat of General Leslie, who disgraced his name by the massacre here of the prisoners taken at Philiphaugh; and an old castle on the W. coast of Ayr, near Maybole.

NEWARK, NORTH, a wap. in co. Nottingham. It contains the pars. of North Clifton, North and South Collingham, Girton, Langford, South Scarle, Thorney, and Winthorpe, comprising an area of 19,600 acres.

NEWARK, SOUTH, a wap. as above, contains the borough of Newark, and the pars. of Balderton, Barnby-in-the-Willows, Coddington, Cotham, East Stoke, Elston, Farndon, Hawton, Kilvington, Shelton, Sibthorpe, Staunton, Syerston, and Thorpe, comprising an area of (Newark excepted) 20,230 acres.

NEWARK-UPON-TRENT, a par., market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the hund. of Newark, co. Nottingham, 124 miles from London by road, or 120 by the Great Northern, and 148 by the Midland railway, 16 N. from Lincoln, and 18 from Nottingham. The old town is said to have been founded by a portion of the ancient Welsh people called the Coritani, and, being destroyed subsequently by the Northmen, the present town was rebuilt, and called New-work or New-wark. The castle of Newark, of which only the ruins remain, is famous as the scene of many historical events. It is supposed to have been originally built by King Egbert, but was almost entirely rebuilt by Bishop Alexander in the reign of King Stephen, who, however, in consequence of that prelate's insurrection, seized it into his own hands. When the castle was besieged by the barons in the interest of the Dauphin of France, King John came to its relief, and died there in 1216. Later it was used as a state prison. It was at Newark Castle that Cardinal Wolsey halted with his princely retinue on his progress to Southwell. In the civil wars of Charles I. it sustained three several sieges, in the years 1643, 1644, and 1645. In 1646 the king commanded Lord Bellasis, governor of the castle, to surrender it and the town to the Scottish army; and the former was then dismantled, the King's and Queen's Sconces, two considerable earthworks, being alone left. On the accession of Charles II. that king granted a new and most favourable charter to the town, and, in return for its loyalty to his father, willed that it should return two members to parliament. It was first chartered by King Edward VI.; and is now governed by a mayor, 6 aldermen, and 18 councillors, with the style of "the mayor and aldermen of the borough of Newark."—The town is situated on the river Devon, which communicates with the Trent both above and below it. It is irregularly laid out in streets, which diverge from the market-place, the latter being about the centre. It reaches about a mile along the bank of the river, and half a mile inland. It is well paved, supplied with water, and lighted with gas. About a quarter of a mile from where the castle stood is the ancient bed of the river Trent, which has been diverted. The population in 1851 was 11,330, with 2,370 inhabited houses, which in 1861 had increased to 11,515, with 2,558 inhabited houses. The limits of the municipal and parliamentary boroughs are coextensive. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the malt and corn trade, which is very extensive, in consequence of the navigation of the Trent, and the facilities of transport afforded by the Great Northern and Midland railways. The corn market, which was built in 1849 at a cost of more than £4,000, is perhaps one of the largest in England. The other public buildings are the townhall, where the sessions are held, and in which assemblies and other amusements take place; the county court house, a gaol, three banks, and a savings-bank; St. Leonard's Hospital, founded in the reign of Charles I.; and Philpott's and Chapman's almshouses. There are numerous breweries, malt kilns, and corn mills. The brick bridge of seven arches was built in 1775, in place of the then wooden one. Large quantities of limestone and gypsum are found round about the neighbourhood of Newark, and there are several large iron and brass foundries.—The living is a vic.* in the archdeac. of Nottingham, and dioc. of Lincoln, val. £325, in the patron. of the crown. The church, which was built in the reign of Henry VI., is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, and is one of the largest in the kingdom. Some parts of it, as the base of the tower, and two piers in the nave, are probably earlier, being Norman. It has sepulchral chapels, and a lofty tower at the western end, which latter is surmounted by an octagonal spire about 245 feet high. The church, which is 218 feet long by 80 feet broad, contains several stained-glass windows, some carvings in oak and stone in the choir and stalls, and a very large engraved brass of the 14th century to the memory of Andrew Flemyng, who died in 1361. There is a peal of ten bells; the tenor weighs more than a ton and a half. The painting at the W. end of the church, the Raising of Lazarus, was presented by Hilton, whose father was a native of the town. Besides the parish church there is a district church, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £148, in the patron. of trustees. This church, called Christ Church, was erected in 1836 at a cost of about £3,000. There are also a Roman Catholic church, and chapels for Wesleyans, Baptists, Independents, and Primitive Methodists. The free grammar school was founded in the reign of Henry VIII., by Archdeacon Magnus, and has two exhibitions to either of the universities of Oxford and Cambridge, of £80, tenable for four years. Here bishops Warburton (a native) and White, and Stukeley, the antiquary, were educated. The library was founded in 1825, the building being presented by Lord Middleton. There are two sets of National schools; that in the district parish of Christ Church was built in 1843 at a cost of £1,400. There are, besides, infant and denominational schools in connection with the several places of worship.—The annual borough sessions, the quarter sessions for the county, and the court of record for the recovery of debts under £300, are held in the townhall. The county court, and the petty sessions of the county magistrates, are held in the sessions room of the county court house, the former monthly, and the latter fortnightly.—The walls of an Augustine friary, the chapel of the Knights Templars, and the remains of other interesting and antiquarian buildings, still exist. Lightfoot, the Hebrew scholar, was a native, and Hartley, the metaphysician, resided here. Newark gives the title of viscount to Earl Manvers of Holme Pierrepoint.—Market days are Wednesdays for corn, and every other Tuesday for cattle. Fairs are held on the Friday in Mid-Lent, 14th May, Whit-Tuesday, 2nd August, Wednesday before 20th October, 1st November, and 11th December, mostly for cattle, except that in October, which is for cheese.

NEWARNE, a vil. in the par. of Lidney, co. Gloucester, 4 miles N.W. of Berkeley.

NEWARP, a sandbank outside Yarmouth Roads, on the E. coast of Norfolk, in N. lat. 52° 45′, and E. long. 1° 53′. It is marked by a lightship at the N. end of the bank, put up in 1791, and visible for 10 miles.

NEWARTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Rathnew, bar. of Newcastle, co. Wicklow, Ireland, 1 mile N. of Rathnew, and 2 miles from Wicklow. It is situated at the bridge on the river Vartry, near the Devil's Glen.

NEWARTHILL, a vil. in the par. of Bothwell, co. Lanark, Scotland, 4 miles N.E. of Hamilton. It is situated on the road from Hamilton to Shotts. There is an United Presbyterian church, erected about 1810, also a parochial school.

NEWBALD, a par. within the lib. of St. Peter's, though locally in the Hunsley-Beacon div. of the wap. of Harthill, East Riding co. York, 3½ miles N.W. of South Cave, and 4 S.E. of Market-Weighton. Brough is its post town. The village, which is large, is wholly agricultural. The soil is of a light nature, with a subsoil of chalk, and in the lower parts sandy. The par. comprises the two tnshps. of North and South Newbald. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £300, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient cruciform structure with an embattled and pinnacled tower rising from the intersection. The windows are of a fine description, and the font is curiously carved. The parochial charities produce about £107 per annum, of which £100 was bequeathed by William Still in 1728, and is divided annually on the 1st January among twenty poor families that have not been relieved by the parish. There is a village school, also a free school, erected and endowed in 1846 by J. Clough, Esq., who is the lord of the manor and chief landowner. The Wesleyans, Independents, and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship.

NEW BANK, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of North Owram and par. of Halifax, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.E. of Halifax.

NEWBATTLE, or NEWBOTLE, a par. in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland. It comprises the vil. of its own name, also the vils. of Stobhill, Easthouses, and Newton Grange. It extends in length 4 miles from W. to E., and about the same in breadth. It is bounded by the pars. of Lasswade, Dalkeith, Cranston, Cockpen, and Borthwick. The greater part lies in a vale, through which the river South Esk flows. From the low grounds the surface rises, in a gradual manner, for the course of 2 miles, to a ridge of hills, the greatest altitude of which is at the Roman camp, which is 680 feet above sea-level. A large portion of the land is in excellent cultivation, and the soil is generally rich and fertile, being in some places upwards of 4 feet deep, except in the upper district, where the soil is marshy and muiry upon a cold till. It is abundant in orchards and gardens. The district is also productive of good coal, lime, and sandstone. The tram railway, 1½ mile in length, and in connection with the Edinburgh railway at Dalhousie Mains, has since been superseded by the Hawick branch of the North British railway, which crosses the Esk valley a short distance from where the old viaduct stood. The mineral wealth of this flourishing district has become of late years equal to any in the kingdom of the same proportion. There are a paper-mill, two corn-mills, and a flour-mill. The north-eastern portion of the parish is intersected by the road from Edinburgh to Kelso by way of Lauder. The decayed village of Newbattle is about half a mile S. of Dalkeith. It is situated on the river South Esk, and in the lower grounds of the Esk vale. The present par. includes the small par. of Maisterton, which lies to the W., and was united to it at the time of the Reformation. Newbattle had a Cistercian abbey, founded by David I. in 1140 as a cell to Melrose, and richly endowed by him and by Malcolm IV., William the Lion, and Alexander II. It was burnt by Richard II. of England, and after the Dissolution the abbey church became the parish church. The estate, which came to the Kers, was made a lordship in 1591, and an earldom in 1606. The Marquis of Lothian now enjoys these extensive possessions.

This par. is in the presb. of Dalkeith, and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale. The minister has a stipend of £183. The parish church was erected in 1727. There are a chapel-of-ease, Free Church preaching station, also parochial schools, and schools at Stobhill. Newbattle Abbey, a large modern mansion, the seat of the Marquis of Lothian, was erected out of the old monastery, and is situated in the midst of a lawn 30 acres in extent. It has a gallery of choice paintings, also some curious illuminated MSS. written upon vellum, in the Norman character. The park is well wooded, and contains some ancient trees, one of which is a beech 19 feet in girth. In the vicinity are several subterraneous chambers cut out of the solid rock, which are thought to have been the retreat of the ancient inhabitants in time of war. Three-fourths of the parish belong to the Marquis of Lothian.

NEWBATTLE, a vil. in the par. of Cockpen, 7 miles S.E. of Edinburgh. It is situated on the South Esk, and is chiefly inhabited by colliers.

NEWBAUN, a par. in the bars. of Bantry and West Shelmaliere, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 7 miles S.E. of New Ross. It is 4 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 2½ miles. The surface consists of a light soil. It is traversed by the road from New Ross to Wexford. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with Adamstown, £595, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a Roman Catholic chapel and two hedge-schools, also a dispensary within the New Ross Poor-law Union. Newbaun House is the chief residence. There are ruins of two castles, and traces of two churches. This spot was the scene of dreadful doings in the rebellion of 1798. It was here the Scullabogue brutality was enacted.

NEWBEGIN, a hmlt. in the par. of Egton, North Riding co. York, 7 miles S.W. of Whitby.

NEWBELL, a hmlt. in the par. of Stainton-by-Langworth, wap. of Wraggoe, and parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4 miles S.W. of Wragby, and 6 N.E. of Lincoln. It is situated on the ancient Fosse Way, near the river Langworth, and includes Coldstead.

NEW-BEWICK, a tnshp. in the par. of Eglingham, N. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 2½ miles N.W. of Eglingham. The township contains but one farm. A. J. B. Cresswell, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

NEWBIGG, a hmlt. in the par. of Haxey, co. Lincoln, 3 miles S.W. of Epworth. It is united with Westwoodside.

NEWBIGGIN, a tnshp. in the par. of Dacre, Leath ward, co. Cumberland, 3½ miles W. by S. of Penrith. The township, which is chiefly moorland, contains a few ancient farmhouses of an embattled construction. There is a school for both sexes. Henry Howard, Esq., is lord of the manor. On the enclosure of the parish in 1772 the tithes were commuted for land and a money payment.

NEWBIGGIN, a tnshp. in the par. of Middleton-in-Teesdale, S.W. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, 2½ miles N.W. of Middleton-in-Teesdale, and 12 N.W. of Barnard-Castle. It is a small agricultural place, situated on the N. bank of the river Tees, which separates it from Yorkshire. The Bowless burn here falls into the Tees. There is a National school with a small endowment. The charities produce about £2 per annum. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. Smelting works have been established for refining the lead ore found in the neighbourhood.

NEWBIGGIN, a tnshp. in the par. of Newburn, W. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 4 miles N.W. of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, its nearest railway station. It is situated on the W. of the high road to Ponteland, and contains only a few farmhouses.

NEWBIGGIN, a chplry. in the par. of Woodhorn, E. div. of Morpeth ward, co. Northumberland, 9 miles E. by N. of Morpeth, its post town, and 4 N. of Blyth. The village is situated on the coast, near Newbiggin Point, and is a favourite watering-place during the summer season. The chief portion of the resident inhabitants are engaged in the fisheries. In due season herrings, mackerel, and other kinds of fish, are caught in large quantities. The bay affords tolerable security and anchorage for small vessels. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Woodhorn, in the dioc. of Durham. The church, which is situated on a rock, near the shore, is dedicated to St. Bartholomew. It has a spired tower, which answers as a beacon at sea. The church was rebuilt in 1846. There is a parochial school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. There are a subscription library and reading-rooms. In the neighbourhood are several collieries. Newbiggin is a coastguard and a lifeboat station.

NEWBIGGIN, a tnshp. in the par. of Shotley, E. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 9 miles S. by E. of Hexham, its railway station. It is situated on the northern bank of the river Derwent, and is wholly agricultural. The Rev. Daniel Capper is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

NEWBIGGIN, a par. in East ward, co. Westmoreland, 7 miles N. by W. of Appleby, and 7 E. of Penrith. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on Crowdundle burn, under Written Crag. It was given by Gamel the Dane to the Newbiggens. Gypsum is found in this parish. It is said that the rocks in this parish formerly bore ancient Latin inscriptions. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £113. The church, dedicated to St. Edmund, is a small ancient stone structure. Newbiggin Hall is the principal residence; it is an old castellated structure, erected in 1533 by Christopher Crackenthorpe, by whom is an inscription over the hall door. William Crackenthorpe, Esq., is lord of the manor.

NEWBIGGIN, a tnshp. in the par. of Aysgarth, wap. of Hang West, North Riding co. York, 4 miles S.E. of Askrigg, and 9 S.W. of Leyburn. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Ure, and is wholly agricultural. There is a school, founded in 1748, with a small endowment.

NEWBIGGIN, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Hutton-Roof, and par. of Kirkby-Lonsdale, co. Westmoreland, 2 miles W. of Kirkby-Lonsdale.

NEWBIGGIN, a vil. in the par. of Ravenstonedale, co. Westmoreland, 1 mile N.W. of Ravenstonedale.

NEWBIGGIN, EAST AND WEST, a tnshp. in the par. of Bishopton, S.W. div. of Stockton ward, co. Durham, 5 miles N.E. of Darlington, and 4½ W. of Stockton-upon-Tees. It contains only two or three farmhouses.

NEWBIGGING, a locality in the par. of Kinnell, co. Forfar, Scotland, 7 miles N. by W. of Aberbrothock.

NEWBIGGING, a locality in the par. of Lethnot, co. Forfar, Scotland, 7 miles N.W. of Brechin. It contains some ruins, and is almost surrounded by the Grampian hills.

NEWBIGGING, a vil. in the par. of Tealing, co. Forfar, Scotland, 6 miles N. of Dundee. It is situated on the southern slope of the Sidlaw hills.

NEWBIGGING, a vil. in the par. of Monikie, co. Forfar, Scotland, 10 miles N.E. of Dundee. The village has an United Presbyterian church. It is situated in a hilly country, near the mouth of the river Tay.

NEWBIGGING, a vil. in the par. of Newtyle, co. Forfar, Scotland, 5 miles E. by N. of Cupar. It is situated under the Sidlaw hills.

NEWBIGGING, a vil. in the par. of Oxnam, co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 4 miles S.E. of Jedburgh.

NEWBIGGING, a vil. in the par. of Carnwath, co. Lanark, Scotland, 5 miles E. of Carstairs. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in weaving.

NEWBIGGING, a vil. in the par. of Auchtertool, co. Fife, Scotland, 4 miles W. of Kirkcaldy.

NEWBIGGING, a vil. in the par. of Burntisland, co. Fife, Scotland, 1 mile W. of Burntisland. It is situated on the Frith of Forth. Limestone is quarried to a considerable extent.

NEWBIGGING, a suburb of Musselburgh, in the par. of Inveresk, co. Edinburgh, adjoining Musselburgh.

NEWBLISS, a post and market vil. in the par. of Killeevan, bar. of Dartree, co. Monaghan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 9 miles S.W. of Monaghan. It is a station on the Irish North-Western railway. It is situated on the road from Ballybay to Clones, near Lough Leesborough. It contains a church, Presbyterian meeting-house, and two schools; also a police station, market-house, and dispensary, which last is in the Clones Poor-law Union. Saturday is market day. A fair is held monthly for cattle.

NEWBOLD, a tnshp. in the par. of Chesterfield, hund. of Scarsdale, co. Derby, 2½ miles N.W. of Chesterfield. The village, which is considerable, may be considered a suburb of Chesterfield. It is united with Dunstan to form a township. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield. The church is modern. There is a free school, endowed by George Milne with land producing an income of £25; also almshouses for three poor women, endowed by Mrs. Elizabeth Tomlinson in 1781 with the interest of £400 in the Four per Cents.

NEWBOLD, a lib. in the par. of Breedon-on-the-Hill, hund. of West Goscote, co. Leicester, 3 miles N.E. of Ashby-de-la-Zouch. It is situated on the Leicester railway.

NEWBOLD, a vil. in the par. of Kinoulton, co. Nottingham, 5 miles S. of Bingham.

NEWBOLD AND ARMSCOTT, a hmlt. in the par. of Tredington, upper div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, co. Worcester, 3 miles N. by W. of Shipston-upon-Stour, and 10 from Evesham. It is situated near the western bank of the river Stour.

NEWBOLD-ASTBURY, a tnshp. in par. of Astbury, hund. of Northwich, co. Chester, 1 mile from Congleton, its post town. It is situated under Mow Cop Hill, near the border of Staffordshire.

NEWBOLD-GROUNDS, a hmlt. in the par. of Catesby Abbey, co. Northampton, 3 miles S.W. of Daventry.

NEWBOLD, LEA, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Oswald, co. Chester, 6 miles S. by E. of Chester. It is a small agricultural place.

NEWBOLD-PACEY, a par. in the Warwick div. of Kington hund., co. Warwick, 5 miles S.W. of Warwick, 6 N.E. of Stratford, and 5½ N. by W. of Kington, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Avon, and is chiefly agricultural. The par. contains the hmlt. of Ashorne. It derives its present name from the ancient family of the Paceys, to whom it formerly belonged. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £639, in the patron. of Queen's College, Oxford. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to St. George. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is a British school, also a place of worship for the Independents.

NEWBOLD-REVEL, a hmlt. in the par. of Monk's Kirby, Kirby div. of Knightlow hund., co. Warwick, 5 miles N. by W. of Rugby. Mr. Drake's hounds meet in this neighbourhood. The hmlt. is in conjunction with Stretton-under-Foss.

NEWBOLD-SAUCEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Ouston, hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, 1 mile N.W. of Ouston, and 7 miles S. by E. of Melton-Mowbray. It comprises only two or three farmhouses.

NEWBOLD-UPON-AVON, a par. in the Rugby div. of Knightlow hund., co. Warwick, 2 miles N.W. of Rugby, its nearest railway station and post town. The village is situated on the Oxford canal, near the Midland Counties railway, which passes through the parish. It is watered by the rivers Avon and Swift. The par. comprises the hmlts. of Cosford, Little Harborough, Little Lawford, and Long Lawford. There are extensive lime quarries. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. It is a meet for the Atherstone hounds. The Master and Fellows of Trinity College, Cambridge, are impropriators of part of the rectorial tithes. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Long Lawford annexed, in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £566. The church, dedicated to St. Botolph, is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing six bells. The interior of the church, which was restored in 1853, contains monuments of the Boughton family, who formerly held the manor. There is also a chapel-of-ease at Long Lawford, recently erected by the late J. Caldecott, Esq. The parochial charities produce about £69 per annum. A schoolhouse, with master's residence, was erected in 1847, at the expense of J. T. Parker, the late vicar.

NEWBOLD-UPON-STOUR. See NEWBOLD AND ARMSCOTT, co. Worcester.

NEWBOLD-VERDON, a par. in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 3 miles N.E. of Market-Bosworth, its post town, and 3 from the Desford railway station. The village, which is of large extent, is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Brascote, and was formerly held by the Verduns, of whose mansion there are still traces. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £500. The church, dedicated to St. James, has a square tower containing two bells. The church was thoroughly restored a few years back at an outlay of £700. The parochial charities produce about £40 per annum, of which £20 goes to Lord Crewe's free school. There is a place of worship for the General Baptists. Sir E. C. Hartopp is lord of the manor.

NEWBOROUGH, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Hanbury, N. div. of Offlow hund., co. Stafford, 3½ miles from Sudbury, its nearest railway station and post town, and 4 N.E. of Abbots-Bromley. The village, which is situated in a narrow vale, is wholly agricultural. The chplry. comprises the tnshps. of Thorney-Lane and Hoarcross. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £107, in the patron. of the Vicar of Hanbury. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a square tower containing a clock. There are a free school for forty girls, and a partly endowed boys' school; the former is entirely supported by T. K. Hall, Esq., of Holly Bush, who provides each of the girls with new clothes at Easter, and a dinner every Sunday. Holly Bush Hall and Hoarcross Hall are the principal residences.

NEWBOROUGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Coxwold, wap. of Birdforth, North Riding co. York, 8 miles S.W. of Helmsley. The tnshp. is of large extent, and includes the ext. par. district of Morton. A priory of Black Canons was founded here in 1145 by Roger de Mowbray, which at the Dissolution had a revenue of £457 13*s.* 5*d.* William de Newburgh, the monkish historian, was a member of this priory.

NEWBOROUGH AND BOROUGH FEN, a par. of the lib. of Peterborough, co. Northampton, 5 miles from Market-Deeping, its post town, and the same distance N.E. of Peterborough. This place, formerly a tract called Borough Fen Common, was about the commencement of the present century elevated into a parish. It is bounded on the S. and S.W. by the Carr Dyke. The parish is very extensive, and the chief part of the land improved by drainage. A great portion of it is used in grazing cattle. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. In the neighbourhood is an interesting structure called the Decoy Farm, belonging to the Williams family, so named from the former occupant's success in the capture of wild fowl. The village, which is small, lies midway between Peterborough and Crowland. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £250, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is a white brick structure, with a small square tower containing two bells. The church was erected in 1830, upon the creation of the parish. There are a National school for both sexes, and a Sunday-school. The Earl Fitzwilliam and the Marquis of Exeter are lords of the manor.

NEWBOROUGH ST. PETER, anciently Llananno, a par. and decayed market town in the hund. of Menai, co. Anglesey, 12 miles from Bangor, and 5 from Carnarvon. It is situated near the coast, and is named by the Welsh Rhôs-hir, from its site on the Moeldraeth Sands, near a long dorsal ridge, covered with heath and rare maritime plants, interesting to the botanist. This place, which is now only a poor, decayed village, was formerly a market town, and had a llys, or royal palace, of the princes of North Wales. Edward I. annexed to it the royalties of the Prince of Wales, and gave it a charter of incorporation, with power to elect a mayor, recorder, bailiffs, &c., which privileges are still nominally enjoyed, though its officers exercise no jurisdiction. It returned one member to parliament in the third year of Henry VIII., and in the first year of Edward VI., but the franchise was subsequently transferred to Beaumaris. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the making of mats, nets, and cordage, from sea-reed grass (Ammophila arenaria), called rhosir-morhesg ropes, which are taken to Carnarvon market; others in husbandry, and a few in fishing. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £214, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Arno or Anno, and subsequently to St. Peter, is an ancient edifice, consisting of nave and choir, forming a single aisle upwards of 100 feet in length. It has a good E. window, and contains a curious font of the 12th century. The Calvinistic Methodists have a chapel. At the extremity of Newborough Warren is the island of Llanddwyn, where are remains of the abbey, but the island is now almost wholly overwhelmed with a mass of sand blown over from the opposite coast of Arvonia. Near the site of the ancient palace is an upright stone bearing a Latin inscription; and at Frondey is another inscribed stone, mentioned by Rowlands. The weekly market, which was on Tuesday, is discontinued. Fairs are held on the 22nd June, 10th and 21st August, 25th September, and 11th November.

NEWBOTTLE, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Houghton-le-Spring, N. div. of Easington ward, co. Durham, 1½ mile N. of Houghton-le-Spring, 2 miles S.E. of Fence-Houses, and 8 N. by E. of Durham. The inhabitants of the village are principally engaged in the collieries and potteries. The soil is of a clayey nature, with a subsoil of clay and limestone. A chapel-of-ease to the mother church of Houghton-le-Spring was erected here in 1850. There is a National school for both sexes, chiefly supported by the Earl of Durham, who is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship.

NEWBOTTLE, a par. in the hund. of King's-Sutton, co. Northampton, 4½ miles S.W. of Brackley, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The par. contains the hmlts. of Astrop, Purston, and Charlton, at which latter place is Rainsborough Camp. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture. The surface is undulating, and the soil light but fertile, producing good crops of wheat, barley, and beans. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £293. The church, dedicated to St. James, has a low square tower containing two bells. The nave contains a monument to John Creswell bearing date 1704, and a brass to Peter Dormer and family. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum. The Independents have a place of worship at Charlton. William C. Cartwright, Esq., is lord of the manor.

NEWBOURN, a par. in the hund. of Carlford, co. Suffolk, 5 miles S. of Woodbridge, its post town, and 7 from Ipswich. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Deben, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is sandy and gravelly, with a subsoil of sand and crag. Coprolites are found in large numbers among the marine deposits. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £220. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient rubble structure, with an embattled flint tower containing one bell. The interior of the church has a font of great antiquity. The register dates from 1561. The church has recently been thoroughly restored. There is a Sunday-school held at the church.

NEWBRIDGE, a vil. in the pars. of Lantwitvairdre and Llanwonno, co. Glamorgan, 5 miles N. of Llantrisaint. It is situated on the river Taff, and near the Taff Vale railway.

NEWBRIDGE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Cowick, and par. of Snaith, West Riding co. York, near Snaith. It is situated on the river Don.

NEWBRIDGE, a vil. in the par. of Terregles, co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 5 miles W. of Dumfries. It is situated near the river Nith.

NEWBRIDGE, a vil. in the par. of Kirkliston, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 10 miles W. of Edinburgh. It is situated on the Glasgow railway and Almond water.

NEWBRIDGE, a small post and market town in the pars. of Great Connell and Morristown-Biller, bar. of Connell, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles E.N.E. of Kildare, and 26 S.W. of Dublin. It is a station on the Great Southern and Western railway. It is situated on the bank of the river Liffey, which is here crossed by a bridge of five arches. The town dates its origin only within the last half century, yet few places in the United Kingdom can boast of greater improvement. A single row of houses opposite the barrack gates constituted the original town, and thus it remained for many years depending on the garrison for support, till the close of the late Russian war. Being the centre of communication between Dublin and the military camp on the Curragh, from which it is distant about 2½ miles, its traffic is very extensive, and the number of houses and inhabitants has increased more than fivefold. Within the last ten years several new streets have been opened, and many blocks of private houses and stores erected. In one of the new streets has been built a commodious sessions and market-house, by Eyre Powell, Esq., a neighbouring proprietor, by whom it was presented to the town corporation. The other principal buildings are, the cavalry barrack, one of the largest in Ireland; the Dominican convent and college, where about 40 students are educated; and the Roman Catholic chapel. These structures, simple in their style, require no particular description. Market days are Tuesday and Friday. Fairs are held on the 1st January, 3rd May, and 15th August.

NEWBRIDGE, a post-office vil. in the par. of Castlemacadam, bar. of Arklow, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles N.W. of Arklow. It is situated on the river Ovoca.

NEWBRIDGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Rathkeale, bar. of Lower Conello, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles S. of Askeaton. It is situated on the river Deel, which is here crossed by a bridge.

NEWBRIDGE, a vil. in the bar. of Duhallow, co. Cork, Ireland, 2 miles from Kanturk, and 28 N.W. of Cork. It is situated on the river Blackwater.

NEWBRIDGE, a vil. in the par. of Hollywood, bar. of Lower Castlereagh, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 1 mile E. of Belfast. It is situated at the bridge over the small stream called the Conn's water.

NEWBROUGH, or NEWBURGH, a parochial chplry. in the N.W. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 5 miles N.W. of Hexham, its post town, and 1 mile from the Four Stones station on the Newcastle and Carlisle railway, which passes through the parish. It is situated on the N. side of the South Tyne, near Procolita-on-the-Wall. The par. is of large extent, and comprises the hmlts. of Allerwash, Woodshields, and Bush. The soil in the valley of the Tyne is rich, but in the higher grounds of inferior quality, being chiefly moorland and pasture. There are two lead mines and a colliery, and lime works at Warden. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Warden, in the dioc. of Durham. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a neat stone structure with a tower containing one bell. There are National schools for both sexes.

NEWBROUGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Coxwold, wap. of Birdforth, North Riding co. York, 5 miles N. of Easingwold, and half a mile from the Coxwold railway station. It is situated near Crake-Castle, and formerly had a priory of Black Canons, founded by Roger de Mowbray in 1145. Newbrough Hall is situated in an extensive park containing the ruins of the above-mentioned priory. There are also traces of a Roman encampment on the S. side of the park, and numerous extensive tumuli, some of which have been explored by T. M. Kendall, Esq., of Pickering. The soil and subsoil are gravelly, with a portion of clay land.

NEWBROUGH, or NEWBURGH, a hmlt. in the par. of Lathom, co. Lancaster, 5 miles N.E. of Ormskirk. It is situated on the river Douglas.

NEWBUILDINGS, a vil. in the par. of Clondermot, bar. of Tirkeeran, co. Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles S.S.W. of Londonderry. It stands on the river Foyle.

NEWBURGH, a par., seaport, and royal burgh, in the district of Cupar, co. Fife, Scotland, 8 miles N.W. of Cupar, and 41 N. of Edinburgh. It is a subport to Dundee, on the Firth of Tay, and contains the post town of its own name. It is a station on the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee railway. It was anciently a chplry. of the par. of Abdie, but was constituted an independent par. in the year 1632, and subsequently extended by the addition of a portion of Abernethy par. Its outline is very irregular, being nearly divided into two parts by the intrusion of part of Abdie on the E., and of Abernethy pars. on the W. It comprises about 5 square miles of surface, and is bounded by the river Tay, and the pars. of Abdie, Collessie, Auchtermuchty, and Abernethy.—The northern section of the parish, in which the burgh is situated, is a rich and finely wooded level stretching along the S. bank of the Tay; but the southern section has a great variety of surface, including part of the ridge of the Ochill hills, the highest summits being Blackcairn and Craigsparrow, attaining elevations respectively of about 800 and 600 feet above the sea-level. The soil of the level lands near the banks of the river is a rich alluvial clay, but the soil of the uplands is light and shallow, being either a loose black loam or a ferruginous mould, and in some places moss on a till bottom. The soil, however, is capable of great improvement by scientific cultivation, as shown by the estate of Pitcairly, which lies among the surrounding Ochills like an oasis in the desert. The prevailing rock formation is trap. The greater part of the land is in tillage, with a large extent of orchard, originally planted by the monks of Lindores.—The parish is traversed by the road from Cupar to Perth, and by the Perth fork of the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee railway.—The chief proprietors are Hay of Leys and Cathcart of Pitcairly.—The town stands on the S. bank of the Tay, and is sometimes called Port Perth. It grew out of Lindores Abbey, which was founded in 1178 by David Earl of Huntingdon, brother to William the Lion, on his return from the Holy Land, in commemoration of his having escaped from shipwreck. It early became a burgh of regality under the abbots of Lindores; and in 1631, after that abbacy was erected into a temporal lordship in favour of the family of Leslie of Pitcairly, Charles I. erected it into a royal borough, but it never made returns to parliament. It is governed by two bailies, a town clerk, and 15 councillors. Its revenue is about £170, and its population a little over 3,000. The town has recently been much improved, and many of the houses are modern. It contains a townhall with a spire, a general post-office, and three commercial banks. Mugdrum House, the seat of the Hays, is a modern building situate near the S. bank of the Tay, at the E. end of the town. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the linen manufacture, and in the coasting trade. The harbour is spacious, and the Tay navigable for vessels of 500 tons as far up as the town.—The par. of Newburgh is in the presb. of Cupar and synod of Fife. The minister's stipend is £255, and glebe worth £80. The parish church is a commodious structure, erected in 1833. There are also a Free church for the joint pars. of Newburgh and Abdie, and two United Presbyterian churches. There are three non-parochial schools, also a structure just completed for a female school on the Madras principle, aided by Dr. Bell's trust.—At a little distance from the town stand the ruins of the ancient abbey of Lindores, much disfigured by the removal of the polished ashlar stones, of which the walls were built, for the construction of the modern town of Newburgh. The vestibule of the ancient church near the centre of the ruin is all that now remains in tolerable preservation; the rest is bare wall, partially mantled with ivy and shaded by some fine old fruit trees. The famous causeway, which formerly extended from the abbey to the church of Ecclesiamagirdle, in the parish of Dron, whither the monks annually went to meet the nuns of Elcho, and join with them in devotion to their patron saint, is now entirely obliterated; but there are still the two holy wells known as the Monks' and the Abbots' wells. In another part of the parish are two ancient crosses called the cross of Macduff and the cross of Mugdrum; the former stands on a point of high ground overlooking the pass of Strathearn, and was thrown down by the Reformers on their way from Perth to Lindores Abbey, so that nothing now remains but the large square block of freestone which once formed the pedestal of the famous cross mentioned in the charter of Malcolm Canmore to Macduff, the Thane of Fife. The cross of Mugdrum stands a little to the W. of the town, and is much more recent than the preceding.—Fairs are held on the third Friday in June, and on the first Tuesday in September.

NEWBURGH, a vil. in the par. of Foveran, co. Aberdeen, 11 miles N.E. of Aberdeen, and 5 S.E. of Ellon. It is a subport to Aberdeen, and has a sandy harbour with 12 feet of water at the river Ythan's mouth. The village of late years has greatly improved, and contains many modern and well-built residences. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the fisheries. Newburgh gives title of earl to the Livingstones of Hassop.

NEWBURN, a par. in St. Andrew's district, co. Fife, Scotland. It includes the vil. of Drumeldrie-Moor. It extends about 3½ miles in length from S. to N., with an extreme breadth of about 2 miles. It is bounded by Largo Bay, and the pars. of Largo, Kilconquhar, and Elie. The surface is moderately flat, the greatest altitude being at Largo-Law, on its N.W. boundary. The soil is generally of a fertile nature. The par. of Newburn is about 2 miles E. of Largo. It is situated on Largo Bay, and the Frith of Forth. It is traversed by the roads from Largo to Anstruther and St. Andrew's, and by the East of Fife railway. It is said to have derived its present name from the diverted course of a brook which runs through a large portion of the parish. Its original and ancient name was Drumeldrie. This par. is in the presb. of St. Andrew's, and synod of Fife. The minister has a stipend of £200. The parish church was erected in 1815. There is a parochial school.

NEWBURN, a par. chiefly in the W. div. of Castle ward, but partly also in the E. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 5 miles W. by N. of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, its post town, and 1 mile N.E. of Ryton railway station. It stretches along the northern bank of the river Tyne, near the line of the Roman Wall, where Lord Conway was defeated by General Leslie in 1640. The par., which is extensive, comprises Newburn Hall, Denton, Wallbottle, and 12 other tnshps. There are extensive steel works in the town, which in the reign of John was styled a borough. Along the bank of the river are several coal-staiths, iron-foundries, glass-works, chemical works, brick and tile manufactories, and a paper-mill. The living is a vic.* with the curs. of Holy Trinity and St. Saviour annexed, in the dioc. of Durham, val. £230, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient cruciform structure with a square tower containing two bells. The church has a stained window, also monuments to the Delaval family. The church was thoroughly restored and partly rebuilt in 1827. The register dates from 1659. The parochial charities produce about £24 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, entirely supported by the Duke of Northumberland, also places of worship for the Wesleyans. A court-leet is held yearly. At Newburn and Lemington Point are salmon preserves, the property of the Duke of Northumberland, who is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

NEWBURN HALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Newburn,

W. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 1 mile E. of Newburn, and 3 miles W. of Newcastle-on-Tyne. It is situated on the northern bank of the river Tyne, and contains the vil. of Lemington, at which place are staiths in connection with the coal-pits at Wallbottle and Wylam. The coals are discharged into keels, and thence shipped to Newcastle and Shields, and various other places. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the collieries and in a flint-glass manufactory. Lemington Hall is the principal residence.

NEWBURY, a par., market town, and municipal borough, in the hund. of Faircross, co. Berks, 56 miles from London by road, or 53 by the Great Western railway, and 16 from Reading. It is situated on the river Kennet, and the Kennet and Avon canal runs through the town. Newbury was founded on the ruins of the Roman city of Spinæ, and was afterwards called Newbyrig, or Newtown, and, according to Camden, "Newburn must acknowledge Speen as its mother." The name of Speen is still preserved in the parish next to Newbury. William the Conqueror gave the town to Ernulph de Hesdin, from whom it descended to the Marshalls of Hampstead Marshall, the Bigods, &c., and so to the Craven family, who are still the owners. It returned members to the parliament of 30 Edward I., and sent three deputies to Edward III.'s councils of state. Newbury is famous as the scene of two bloody battles between the king's and the parliamentary forces in 1643 and 1644, in the first of which Lord Falkland was killed, but both were favourable to the cause of Charles I. In 1645 it was permanently occupied by the parliamentary forces.—The first charter was granted by Queen Elizabeth, but additional privileges were given by James I. and Charles II. The town is governed by a mayor, four aldermen, and 12 councillors, with the style of "mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of the borough of Newbury." It is a sessions and polling town for the county elections. The streets are well paved and lighted with gas. The population in 1851 was 6,574, with 1,362 inhabited houses, which in 1861 had decreased to 6,161, with 1,342 inhabited houses. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the corn and malt trade, which has quite superseded the trade in woollen cloth, which used to be extensively carried on. Some are employed in the manufacture of silk, narrow ribbon, and paper, for which there are several mills.—It is the head of a deanery in the archdeac. of Berks, and dioc. of Oxford. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £455, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which is dedicated to St. Nicholas, was built in the reign of Henry VII., and, among other interesting relics, has the brass of the celebrated clothier, John Winchcombe, or, as he is more popularly known, Jack of Newbury, who, it will be remembered, was visited by Henry VIII., and who sent one hundred of his own weavers, fully equipped at his own cost, to Flodden Field. It was he who chiefly founded the church, and requested the king to disfranchise the borough. The house in which he lived still remains, with the sign of "Jack of Newbury" on it. There is also the district church of St. John's, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £150. There are places of worship for Wesleyans, Baptists, Independents, Presbyterians, Primitive Methodists, and Quakers. The free grammar school, and the borough blue-coat school are both well endowed. There are numerous almshouses, viz. St. Bartholomew's, founded by King John, which has now an income of nearly £1,000 per annum; Raymond's almshouses, with an income of nearly £400 per annum; Coxedd's school and almshouses; Hunt's; St. Mary's Hill; Pearce's and Robinson's almshouses, which have incomes varying from £20 to £110 per annum.—Newbury Poor-law Union contains 18 parishes and townships, with an area of about 47,000 acres. There is a large cemetery. The bridge was rebuilt about 1770. The literary and scientific institution has a library of upwards of 1,000 volumes, to which a museum has been added. The theatre, townhall, union poorhouse, and market-place, with two banks and a savings-bank, make up the list of public buildings. A supply of good peat for fuel is obtained from the river bank.—Baily, the astronomer, was a native; and it gives the title of baron to Marquis Cholmondeley. There are many seats in the neighbourhood, as Hampstead Park, belonging to Earl Craven; Highclere Castle, the seat of Earl Carnarvon; Woolhampton House, the property of Earl Falmouth; Sandleford Priory, lately the seat of Lord Rokeby; and several others of equal importance. Donnington Castle, which is near, belonged to Chaucer, and a ruin called Chaucer's Grove may still be seen.—Market day is Thursday, when much business is done. Fairs are held on Holy Thursday, the 5th July, 4th September, and 8th November, also a statute fair on the first Thursday after 11th October (Old Michaelmas Day), for hiring servants.

NEWBURY, a coal-field on Titterstone Clee Hill, co. Salop, 5 miles E. by N. of Ludlow. It is basin shaped, and is about half a mile in length, consisting of several thin strata of coal, ironstone, and clay, resting on limestone, which are worked at Cornbrook and other places.

NEWBURY, LITTLE, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Farringdon, co. Berks, 2 miles S. by E. of Farringdon, and 30 W. by N. of Reading.

NEWBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Irthington, ward of Eskdale, co. Cumberland, 4 miles S.W. of Brampton, and 6 E. by N. of Carlisle. It is a small agricultural village situated at the confluence of the rivers Irthing and Eden.

NEWBY, or NEWBY-STONES, a tnshp. in the par. of Morland, West ward, co. Westmoreland, 5½ miles N.E. of Shap railway station, and 7 N.W. of Appleby. The village, which is large, is chiefly agricultural. Newby formerly belonged to the Vernons and Nevinsons of Newby Hall. There are a corn-mill and a freestone quarry. The soil varies very much, some parts consisting of a rich loam upon a subsoil of clay, and others of rocky limestone. At Towcett in this township were kilns for burning of lime, which was extensively worked, but since the formation of the railway this industry has been discontinued. The Wesleyan Methodists have a place of worship. The Earl of Lonsdale is lord of the manor. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1806.

NEWBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Clapham, W. div. of the wap. of Staincliffe, West Riding co. York, 7 miles N. of Settle, and 4 W. of the Bentham railway station. It is situated on the Keighley and Kendal turnpike road, and is wholly agricultural. A large portion of the land is in pasture. The soil is clay upon a subsoil of limestone. There is an endowed school for boys and girls, in which a Sunday-school is also held. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum. J. Williams and O. Farrer, Esqs., are joint lords of the manor and principal landowners.

NEWBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Stokesley, W. div. of Langbaurgh lib., North Riding co. York, 3 miles N. of Stokesley. The village, which is small, consists of a few straggling farmhouses. The free school which formerly existed here has been discontinued. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans.

NEWBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Scalby, wap. of Pickering Lythe, North Riding co. York, 2 miles N.W. of Scarborough. It is situated near the coast.

NEWBY, a hmlt. in the par. and lib. of Ripon, West Riding co. York, 3½ miles S.E. of Ripon, and 3 W. of Boroughbridge. It is situated on the N. side of the river Ure, which occasionally inundates the adjacent lands. The manor formerly belonged to the Blackets, and constitutes a township with Mulwith, which latter is now a farm. Newby Hall, the principal residence, was built by Sir Edward Blacket from a design by Sir Christopher Wren.

NEWBY, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Weeton, and par. of Harewood, West Riding co. York, 4 miles E. by N. of Otley. It is situated on the river Wharfe, near Weeton Hill.

NEWBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Topcliffe, wap. of Hallikeld, North Riding co. York, 6 miles N. by W. of Boroughbridge.

NEWBYTH, a vil. in the par. of King Edward, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 5½ miles from New Pitsligo, and 6 N.W. of New Deer. It is situated on an eminence on the road from Banff to Ellon, and was founded by James Urquhart, Esq., upon his estate of Byth, in 1764. It comprises two streets crossing each other at right angles. A chapel-of-ease was erected here in 1852. There are also a Free Church preaching station, an endowed school, and a public library. Fairs are held on the Thursday following the 11th May, Tuesday following the 26th May, and the Friday after the 21st November.

NEWBY-WISKE, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirby-Wiske, wap. of Gilling-East, North Riding co. York, 5 miles N.W. of Thirsk, and 4 S. of Northallerton. The village, which is of small extent, is situated at the five-arched bridge on the river Wiske, and near the North-Eastern railway, on which it has a station. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans, also a National school. Newby Hall is the principal residence.

NEWCASTLE, a hund. in co. Glamorgan, contains the pars. of Bettws, St. Bride's Minor, Coychurch, Coyty, Lower Kenfigg, Laleston, Llangonoyd, Margam, Newcastle, Newton-Nottage, Pyle, and Tythegston.

NEWCASTLE, a par. in the above hund., co. Glamorgan, 10 miles from Llantrisant, and adjoining Bridgend, its post town. It is situated on the river Ogmore, and contains the hmlts. of Upper and Lower Newcastle, Aberkenfigg, Angeltown, and Pen-y-vae. In the neighbourhood are the ruins of a castle. The living is a vic.* with the curs. of Bettws, Laleston, and Tythegston annexed, in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £360. The church is dedicated to St. Illtyd.

NEWCASTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Clun, co. Salop, 6 miles S.W. of Bishop's-Castle, and 3½ S.W. of Clun. Ludlow is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Clun, or Colun, which rises on the borders of Montgomeryshire and joins the Teme near Leintwardine. It is wholly agricultural, and is surrounded by hills. In the neighbourhood are traces of a British camp, and Caer Caradoc, where the Roman general, Ostorius, defeated Caractacus, also remains of Offa's Dyke, and the ruins of a castle which belonged to the Fitzalans, but was destroyed by Owain Glyndwr. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val £160.

NEWCASTLE, a hmlt. in the hund. of Lower Skenfreth, co. Monmouth, 4 miles N.W. of Monmouth. It has remains of an old fort.

NEWCASTLE, a tnshp. in the par., hund., and co. of Radnor, South Wales, 5 miles W. of Presteign, and 3 from New Radnor, within which borough it is included. It is situated under Radnor Forest mountains, which attain an elevation of above 2,000 feet. The river Somergill here flows over a precipice of 70 feet, forming the cascade called "Water-break-its-neck." It is joined with Evengobb to form a township.

NEWCASTLE, a bar. in the co. of Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is bounded by the bars. of Castleknock, Uppercross, and cos. Wicklow and Kildare. It contains the pars. of Aderrig, Kilbride, Kilmahuddrick, Kilmactalway, Lucan, Newcastle, Rathcoole, Saggart, and parts of Clondalkin, Esker, and Leixlip, with the towns of Lucan and Newcastle, comprising an area of about 22,876 acres.

NEWCASTLE, a bar. in the co. of Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is bounded by the bars. of Rathdown, Arklow, North Ballinacor, and the Irish Sea. It contains the pars. of Kilcoole, Killisky, Lower Newcastle, Upper Newcastle, Rathnew, and parts of Calary, Derrylossary, Drumkay, Glenealy, and Kilcommon, comprising an area of about 52,296 acres.

NEWCASTLE, a small seaport in the par. of Kilcoo, in the bar. of Iveagh, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 10 miles S.S.W. of Downpatrick, and 2 S.E. of Bryansford. It is situated on Dundrum Bay among the Mourne mountains. From its situation and its excellent accommodation for bathing, Newcastle has within the last half century sprung from an insignificant village to a thriving town. The castle, which gave name to the place, was erected in the time of Elizabeth, but was removed, and its site is now occupied by the principal inn. Fairs are held in July and August.

NEWCASTLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Ballyphilip, bar. of Ards, co. Down, Ireland, 3 miles E. by N. of Portaferry, and 8 N.E. of Downpatrick. It is situated on a small creek opposite South Rock, on which is a lighthouse.

NEWCASTLE, a par. in the bars. of Shanid and Glenquin, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, containing part of the post town of Newcastle, also the vil. of Churchtown. The par. is 3 miles long by 2 broad. The surface consists of a portion of the valley of the Deel river. The roads from Limerick to Tralee and from Tarbert to Mallow intersect the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. with another, £717. The church was erected by the late Lord Courtenay. There is a Roman Catholic chapel and several day schools. Courtenay and Springfield Castles are residences of the Earl of Devon and Lord Muskerry.

NEWCASTLE, a post and market town in the pars. of Newcastle and Monegay, in the bar. of Glenquin, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles E. of Shanagolden, and 114 S.W. by W. of Dublin. It is situated about 1 mile W. of the river Deel, on a small tributary to that river. It contains a church, Roman Catholic chapel, market-house, and barracks; also the union poorhouse, a fever hospital, and a dispensary. The Newcastle Poor-law Union lies wholly within the co. of Limerick. Fairs are held on 1st April, 3rd May, 12th July, 20th August, 1st October, and 16th December.

NEWCASTLE, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Iffa and Offa, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6½ miles S.W. of Clonmel. The par. is 4 miles long by 3½ broad. Some parts of the surface consist of very good land. The river Suir effects the drainage towards the N. The village is situated on the bank of the Suir, and contains a dispensary, which is in the Clogheen poor-law union. The living is a suspended vic. in the dioc. of Lismore. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Derrygrath. There are two or three day schools in the parish.

NEWCASTLE, a par. in the bars. of Decies-without-Drum and Middlethird, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles E. by N. of Kilmacthomas. Tramore is its post town. It is 4 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 2 miles. The surface consists of good soil, with a large proportion of bog. It is crossed by the road from Waterford to Cork. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. with Dunhill, £102. There is a day-school. Knockaderry is the chief residence.

NEWCASTLE, a vil. in the par. of Enniskeen, bar. of Morgallion, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Nobber. It is situated near Newcastle lough and mansion.

NEWCASTLE, a vil. in the par. of Ballymahon, bar. of Rathcline, 11 miles S. of Longford. It is situated on the river Inny.

NEWCASTLE, a vil. in the par. of Rahoon, bar. and co. of Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 1 mile N.W. of Galway. It is situated on the Corrib river, and has a large distillery. Several seats adorn the neighbourhood.

NEWCASTLE-IN-EMLYN, a town in the par. of Kenarth, hund. of Elvet, co. Carmarthen, 10 miles from Cardigan, and 16 from Carmarthen. The Carmarthen and Cardigan railway has a station at Llandyssil for this town. One portion of this town, called Adpar, is situated in Cardiganshire, while the greater part is in Carmarthenshire. It is supposed to have been of Roman origin, but took its present name from the castle built by Sir Rhys-ap-Thomas, who made it one of his principal seats. The castle during the civil war of Charles I. was garrisoned by the parliamentarians. The town, which contains about 1,000 inhabitants, is governed by the county magistrates, who hold their meetings once a fortnight. It is situated in the valley of the Teifi, and on the direct road from Cardigan to Lampeter. The river is crossed at a short distance above the town by the bridge of Kenarth, famous throughout Wales for its salmon leap, at which 100 fish have been taken in a single morning. The Teifi, after entering the valley from the N.E., flows in a straight line till it arrives nearly underneath the castle walls; it then takes a sudden turn, and instead of winding immediately round the foot of the castle hill, runs back again for a considerable distance nearly parallel with its former channel, it then sweeps in front of the castle, which it almost surrounds, as though by a natural moat. The arched gateway of the castle, about 14 feet high, is supported by two octagonal towers. Newcastle is the head of a Poor-law Union, and contains the union workhouse, which is capable of accommodating 100 inmates. Manorial courts are held in the town. The living is a perpet cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £71, in the patron. of the Vicar of Kenarth. The church is a small unpretending structure, and was formerly a chapel-of-ease to Cennart. There is also the district church of the Holy Trinity, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £150. The Calvinistic Methodists have a chapel. The Earl of Cawdor derives his second title of baron from this place. Friday is market day. Fairs are held on 23rd March, 10th May, 22nd June, 20th July, 20th August, 20th September, the second Friday after Michaelmas Day, and 22nd November, for cattle, horses, and sheep.

NEWCASTLE, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Kemess, co. Pembroke, 8 miles N. of Haverfordwest, its post town, and 10 from Newport. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Cleddy. In the neighbourhood is an intermittent spring called the Golden Well, also the ruins of two forts. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £54. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. Fairs are held on the 6th May and 10th July.

NEWCASTLE, LOWER, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Newcastle, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2½ miles S. of Kilcoole. It is a station on the Dublin, Wicklow, and Wexford line. The par. is 3 miles long by 2½ broad. The surface is principally flat and of small value. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church stands in the village. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Delgany. There are several day schools. Woodstock is the residence of Lord Tottenham. In the parish are ruins of a castle and of a church. The village stands on the road from Bray to Wicklow. Fairs are held on 1st April, 10th July, 1st September, and 6th December.

NEWCASTLE-LYONS, a par. in the bar. of Newcastle, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. Rathcoole is its post town. It is 4 miles long by 2 broad. The soil is mostly of first-rate quality. The road from Dublin to Limerick and the Grand canal pass through the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. £252, in the patron. of the archbishop. The village was nominally a borough, chartered in the time of James I., and sent two members to the Irish parliament before the Union. There is a dispensary within the Celbridge poor-law union. Within the parish are ruins of an ancient castle.

NEWCASTLE-UNDER-LYME, a par., market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the hund. of Pirehill, co. Stafford, 15 miles N. by W. of Stafford, 40 from Manchester, and 150 miles by road from London, or 147 by the North Staffordshire railway, on which it is a station. It is a very ancient town, having been a place of some note before the Norman conquest, but known by another name. Its present appellation of Newcastle was derived from a castle built here by Ranulph Earl of Chester, in place of the old castle at Chesterton. The suffix of under-Lyme is supposed to have been taken from a forest close by, so called from being on the "limes," or borders of Cheshire. Henry II. granted the first charter of incorporation to the town, which is situated on a small stream called the Lyme Brook, at a short distance from the source of the Trent. It has many and easy communications with the pottery districts and other important places, and until recently was looked upon as the capital of the pottery district, but Stoke-upon-Trent is now considered so. The High-street is spacious, but the streets generally are irregular, though well paved, and the houses for the most part are good. It is well supplied with water by the North Staffordshire and other water-works, and lighted with gas.—The population in 1851 was 10,569, occupying 2,153 inhabited houses, which in 1861 had increased to 12,938, with 2,659 inhabited houses. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the corn and flour trade, and in the manufacture of shoes and hats, but this last has recently declined. A considerable business is also done in cotton-spinning and silk-throwing, and in malting, brewing, and tanning, and in the potteries and watchmaking. There are also very large paper-mills, and a few nail and pipe makers. The principal buildings are, the townhall, a structure of brick and stone, with a clock tower; the theatre, a commodious building; the literary and scientific institute, erected in 1836, with a library containing 5,000 volumes; and a museum.—The borough has returned two members to parliament since the reign of Edward III. It is governed by a mayor, six aldermen, and 18 councillors, with the style of "mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses of Newcastle-under-Lyme."—The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £285, in the patron. of Simeon's Trustees. The church, which is dedicated to St. Giles, was almost wholly rebuilt in the beginning of the last century, though the lower, of red sandstone, is very ancient, and the western gateway is of the Norman period. The tower contains nine bells, and a clock with musical chimes. There is also the district church of St. George, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £230. The church of St. George was erected in 1828, at a cost of £8,000. Half of the sittings are free. There are also places of worship for Roman Catholics, Baptists, Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists. Besides the grammar school, which was founded in 1602, with an annual income of about £90, there are also National, infant, and British schools, which last were built by subscription in 1834. Almshouses for 20 poor women were founded in 1687 by Christopher, son of George Monk, the famous Duke of Albemarle. The Duchess of Sutherland has the right of nominating recipients for this charity.—Newcastle-under-Lyme Poor-law Union comprises nine parishes. The union workhouse is a large building in the Elizabethan style, built in 1840, at a cost of about £7,000. A court of quarter sessions is held at the townhall, also the county court monthly, and petty sessions are held weekly.—The Grand Trunk canal passes close to the town, and communicates with the Trent, Severn, Mersey, and Thames. It has a branch to Stoke, and there is a canal from the adjoining coal mines called the Newcastle Lower canal. The market-place is extensive, and the tolls realise over £700 per annum. A local board of health has lately been established, which has greatly benefited the town by enclosing about 5 acres of open space around it, and laying out and planting them as public promenades. Major-General Harrison was born here, as also Astley, "the handsome dragoon," and founder of Astley's Theatre; Bradshaw, the regicide, was recorder of this town, and the celebrated butcher, Witrings, who could lift 168 lbs. with his teeth, was also a native. It gives the title of duke to the Clinton family.—Market days are Mondays and Saturdays. Fairs are held on Shrove Tuesday, Easter and Whit Mondays, the Mondays before 15th July and 11th September, and first Mondays in November. Races take place once a year.

NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE, one of the most ancient and distinguished seaports in Britain, also a post and market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, and a co. of itself, though locally situated in the southern div. of Northumberland, of which it is the county town, 15 miles N. of Durham, 158 S.E. of Glasgow, and 275 N. of London. It has a central railway station in Neville-street for the joint use of the North-Eastern and Newcastle-upon-Tyne and Carlisle railways, also a station in the Manors for the North Shields section of the North-Eastern line of railway, and several goods stations in other parts of the town. Constant communication is likewise maintained with all the chief ports of Great Britain, and many places on the continent of Europe, America, and the British colonies, by means of powerful steam vessels and regular traders engaged in the shipping trade, which has more than quadrupled in the last half century. The port, which is formed by the Tyne, is capable of admitting seaborne vessels of 400 tons, and has North Shields and Blythnook as its subports. The town of Newcastle is of great antiquity, and occupies a commanding position on the northern bank of the river Tyne, about 9 miles distant from the sea at Tynemouth, where the river discharges itself into the German Ocean. Opposite to it is Gateshead, which may be considered a subport of Newcastle, situated on the southern bank of the Tyne, and in the adjoining county of Durham.—Newcastle appears to have derived its origin from Pons Ælii, the second station from the eastern extremity of the Roman wall built by the Emperor Hadrian in A.D. 120. In 1810, while digging the foundations of the county court-house, numerous Roman remains were met with, consisting of foundations of walls, two altars, a well, and a large quantity of pottery. By the Saxons it was called Monkeceastre, from the number and magnificence of the religious houses and monastic institutions it contained, and from the strength of its position became the capital of the Northumbrian kings, who had a palace at Pandon. As a fortified town it was a place of great strength, being surrounded by a massive stone wall 2 miles in circuit, 8 feet thick, and 12 high, with a deep fosse 66 feet broad, and lofty towers flanking the gates, several of which still remain, as also part of the wall and fosse. In 876 it was taken by the Danes under one of their fiercest chieftains, Halfden, who cruelly burnt the town with its churches and monasteries, putting to death many of the monks and nuns. Two years after the Norman conquest it was taken by Edgar Atheling, and Malcolm, King of Scotland, but was retaken by William the Conqueror, whose son, Robert Curthose, built the "New Castle" in 1080 on the site of the old citadel, from which castle the town derived its present name. In the rebellion of Mowbray, Earl of Northumberland, against William Rufus, this fortress was taken by the king, and in the reign of Stephen it was held for a short time by the Scots. In the succeeding reigns of Henry II. and John it was much improved, and subsequently figures frequently in Border history as the rendezvous of the English troops preparing for the invasion of the neighbouring kingdom of Scotland. Under several of the early Anglo-Norman kings it was used as a mint town. In the reign of Edward I. John Baliol did homage in the "New Castle" for his crown of Scotland, and in the same reign the town was rebuilt and walled round. In 1299 it was assaulted by Wallace, and was attacked, but without success, by David Bruce. In the reign of Charles I. it was surprised by the Scottish Covenanters under General Leslie, at which period its population must have been very considerable, as no fewer than 5,000 persons are said to have died here of the plague in 1636. During the civil war between the king and the parliament it changed hands several times, but was finally stormed by the Scots under the Earl of Leven, in October, 1644, while marching to join the parliamentarians in the S. In 1646 King Charles, having surrendered to the Scottish army, was brought by them from Newark and retained here till 1647, when he was transferred by the parliamentary commissioners to London. The town was visited by the plague in 1717, and corn riots took place here in 1740. In the Scottish rebellion of 1745 the royal troops, under General Wade, occupied the town previous to their advance into Scotland against the Pretender. It sustained considerable damage from the floods which inundated the banks of the Tyne in 1771 and 1815.—It is a borough by prescription, having been first chartered by Henry II., but the first mayor was not chosen till 1251. Under the Municipal Reform Act of 1835 the old corporation was dissolved, and the town divided into eight instead of twenty-four wards. It is governed by a mayor, who enjoys an allowance of £2,000, 14 aldermen, and 42 town councillors, with the style of "mayor and burgesses of the town and county of Newcastle-on-Tyne." The Recorder is appointed by the crown, but the sheriff, who is also returning officer, the town clerk, treasurer, and other officers, are chosen by the town council. In 1861 it contained 13,979 inhabited houses, with an acreage of 5,730, and a revenue of about £65,000. The population in 1851 was 87,784, which in 1861 had increased to 109,108. It has returned two members to parliament since the 27th of Edward III., and under the Reform Act includes, besides the old borough, the townships of Byker, Elswick, Heaton, Jesmond, and Westgate, the number of electors being about 6,000.—The town is well paved and lighted with gas, and abundantly supplied with pure water from the Whittle Dean water-works. The old part of the town skirts the river bank, along which stretches an extensive and convenient quay, 1,620 feet long. This part of the town is about 2 miles in length, and was until very recently solely composed of very narrow, crooked streets of old houses, locally called "chares," which wound in curves up the precipitous slopes of the cliffs on which the upper or modern town is built, at an elevation of 200 feet above the level of the river below. Within the last quarter of a century, however, it has undergone a complete change, and although still inhabited by the poorer classes of the population, many new streets have been opened, and the old ones widened, for which purpose all the gates of the old wall, with the greater part of the towers, as well as many curious old buildings, have been swept away. In the upper and more modern parts of the town are spacious streets and squares, as Clayton, Grainger, Gay, Hood, Market, Nelson, and Shakspeare streets, and Eldon and Charlotte squares, &c., with regular ranges of buildings of an order far superior to those of most provincial towns. The houses of the upper town being built of a variety of freestone, present a massive and substantial appearance, giving ample scope for architectural adornment; while in the lower town most of the houses are very ancient, and many of them in the antique gable-fronted style of the reign of Elizabeth. The principal extension of the town has been on the northern side, where the corporation have built a new market-house, and where many new streets of good shops have recently sprung up, connecting the town with the modern suburb of Brandling village in Jesmond township. To the W. of the town lies the new suburb of Rye Hill, in the townships of Westgate and Elswick; and to the E., near the river, are extensive warehouses, factories, and other works connected with the commerce and manufactures of Newcastle. At the top of Grey-street stands the statue of Earl Grey, surmounting a lofty Ionic column, erected in 1836 to commemorate the passing of the Reform Act.—Few provincial towns have a greater variety of public and ecclesiastical edifices. The Moot Hall, or county court-house, is a stone building, erected in 1810 from designs by Stokoe, at a cost of £52,000. It is situated on an eminence within the castle precincts, which belong to the county, and measures 144 feet by 72, with a portico of six Doric columns 28 feet high on the S. front, and a similar portico of four columns on the N. front. The assizes and sessions for the county of Northumberland are held in the grand hall, where most of the county business is transacted, and the ground floor is used as a prison for the temporary confinement of county prisoners preparatory to their removal to the county gaol. The Central Exchange in Grey-street, built by Granger, presents externally the appearance of a triangular pile of Grecian building, ornamented at each corner by a dome, and fronting respectively Grey-street, Grainger-street, and Market-street, from all of which it may be entered; but internally it is composed of two semi-circles about 150 feet by 100, lit by a glass dome, and divided by twelve

Ionic columns, which support the roof. The old exchange and guildhall, situated in Sandhill, is a spacious stone edifice with a steeple, originally erected in 1658 by Trollope, at a cost of £10,000, and restored in 1809. The guildhall, where the borough sessions and county court are held, occupies the upper story, and is a magnificent court-room 92 feet long by 30 wide, with a carved oak ceiling and walls elaborately ornamented. The court-room of the Merchants Adventurers, now the chamber of commerce, is adorned with an exquisitely carved mantelpiece and subjects from Scripture history. On the basement story are the exchange and news-rooms, and under the arcade of eight Doric columns which support the eastern front the fish market is held. In the interior of the building are a statue of Charles II., portraits of Charles II., James II., and George III., by Ramsey, and of lords Eldon, Stowell, and Collingwood, and in the mayor's room the "branks," formerly used for the punishment of scolds. The borough gaol in Carlisle-square is a building of modern erection, with a central tower, surrounded by a stone wall 25 feet high, and entered under a massive gateway. The Theatre Royal, situated in Grey-street, is an edifice of stone, with a portico entrance, and pediment supported by six lofty stone pillars. The barracks, which cover a space of 11 acres, are situated in the Ponteland road, and were built in 1806. The "New Castle," once so famous in history, is still an imposing pile, with walls in some places 15 feet thick, and a tower, or keep, 62 feet by 54, and 80 feet high, lately used as the county prison. It has been recently restored, and the Norman chapel, which measures 46 feet by 20, is now used as the Museum of the Newcastle Society of Antiquaries, rich in local archæological remains, and Roman and British coins. The moot-hall and outer walls of the castle are gone, but sufficient remains to show its once impregnable character. Other public buildings of note are, the corn exchange and music hall, in St. Nicholas-square; the Royal Arcade, 100 feet by 250, built by Granger; the custom-house near the quay; the Trinity House in Broad Chare; the new hall of the Literary and Philosophical Society in Westgate-street, erected in 1825, and containing a library of nearly 30,000 volumes; the literary, scientific, and mechanics' institutions, and a museum of natural history in Blackett-street; Neville Hall in Westgate street, belonging to the College of Medicine, founded in 1851; assembly rooms in Westgate street, with a ball room 95 feet long by 36 wide; two sets of public baths and washhouses; the Northern Counties' club house in Eldon-square; a branch of the Bank of England in Grey-street; the savings-bank in the arcade; besides numerous commercial banks, insurance offices, hotels, benevolent foundations, and markets, amongst which last the corn market is deserving of particular notice. The grandest structure of Newcastle, however, and perhaps in the N. of England, is the high-level bridge across the Tyne, connecting Gateshead with Newcastle, constructed by Sir Robert Stephenson at the cost of near £235,000. This vast work was undertaken with the double object of connecting the railways on the opposite sides of the Tyne, and at the same time forming a roadway that should avoid the dangerous approaches to the Tyne by way of Dean-street. It is 1,375 feet in length between the triumphal arches, the water way being 512 feet, and its width 32 feet, supported by six arches of open iron work, which rest on six massive stone piers 125 feet apart, four rising from the bed of the river, and one at each side. It is in reality a double bridge, consisting of two roadways, one 25 feet above the other. The lower roadway, which is 86 feet above high water, is for foot-passengers and carriages; and the upper bridge, which is 112 feet above the river, is a railway carrying three lines of rails, and supported on a level 4 feet above the crown of the arches by strong hollow pillars of cast-iron, resting on the arched ribs, and continued down to the roadway, which is attached to them, the whole being so bound together by strong malleable tension rods as to form one inflexible mass. The cast and wrought iron employed in the construction of the bridge is said to have weighed above 5,000 tons. Its enormous mass and great height were requisite to span the deep valleys and to carry the roadway at a sufficient elevation above high-water level as not to impede the free navigation of the river. A little lower down the river to the W. is the Tyne Bridge, 300 feet long, sustained by nine arches, and rebuilt in 1781 by Stokoe, at a cost of £30,000, in place of the half wooden one, which was covered with houses, and was swept away by the river in 1771. It is now falling rapidly into decay, and its entire removal would facilitate the navigation of the river and so benefit the commerce of the town, which owes its commercial prosperity chiefly to the almost inexhaustible mines of coal in the surrounding district. The export of this staple commodity commenced so early as the latter part of the 13th century, but received a check from the stringent measures of Edward I., which almost abolished the use of coal fires in London; but in the reign of Charles I. the use of coal was revived, and the coals and culm now exported from this port alone amount to above 3,000,000 tons yearly, valued at a million and a half sterling. The coals are brought down the river in broad vessels called "keels," and are here reshipped for exportation, the Tyne being thus far navigable by seaborne vessels, and under the care of the corporation of Newcastle as conservators. The river side is lined with warehouses, extensive quays, chemical works, potteries, and iron and lead smelting furnaces. The lofty chimneys of these works, varying from 150 to 300 feet high, form a striking feature of the town, and are seen from a great distance. Besides these there are many other branches of manufacture which, though on a less extensive scale, are still largely carried on, as oil mills, hardware and cutlery, coarse and fine earthenware, metallic works of all kinds, painters' colours, white and red lead, mill for grinding flints used in the manufacture of glass, copperas, alkali or soda, tar, lamp-black, fire bricks, canvas, cordage, refined salt, harness-making, chemical manures, retorts and crucibles, turpentine, corn and paper mills, malting establishments, hemp and wire rope making, extensive coach-building yards, machinery of all kinds, locomotive and marine engines, steam-engines, railway carriages, and agricultural implements of all kinds, besides yards for shipbuilding, both in wood and iron. The imports are chiefly wine, spirituous liquors, tobacco, dried fruits from the S. of Europe, corn, flour, timber, colonial produce, deals, bark, flax, hemp, seeds, tallow and hides from the Baltic. By a singular coincidence the first manufactory of window or crown glass in Great Britain was established at Newcastle-upon-Tyne, within a few miles of the great monasteries of Monkwearmouth and Jarrow-on-the-Tyne, where, as we learn from Bede, ordinary window glass was first used in Great Britain for architectural purposes. In the year 1616 Admiral Sir Robert Maunsell erected glass works at the Ouse burn, Newcastle, which were carried on without interruption till nearly the middle of the present century, when they were closed. When the British Association first held their meeting in this city, there were six large crown-glass manufactories in operation on the river Tyne, producing annually upwards of 7,000,000 feet of window glass. These manufactories had all ceased to exist in 1863, owing chiefly to the introduction of sheet-glass into this country, and the comparatively low price at which plate-glass can be now had, so that in the birthplace of the art in England there is now not a foot of crown or sheet window glass manufactured. But a transfer rather than an extinction of the trade has taken place, for the manufacture of sheet-glass has of late years been largely increased, and is carried on to a great extent, in the adjoining district of the river Wear, where the quantity produced by Messrs. James Hartley & Co. alone is very nearly equal to the entire produce of the six extinct crown-glass manufactories on the river Tyne.—Newcastle gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. of Northumberland and dioc. of Durham, and contains nine churches, besides numerous chapels

The livings are, St. Nicholas, a vic.,* val. £474, in the dioc. of Durham, and gift of the bishop; St. Andrew's, St. John the Baptist's, All Saints', St. Peter's, St. Ann's, all perpet. curs. in the dioc. of Durham, varying in val. from £300 to £150, in the presentation of the Vicar of Newcastle; also St. Paul's and the new church at Byker, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately; St. Thomas's, and St. Mary the Virgin's, in the corporation of Newcastle. St. Nicholas's church stands on an eminence facing the approach to the high-level bridge, and near where the Roman wall passed. The original structure was built in 1091 by Bishop Osmund, and given to Carlisle Priory, but was burnt in 1216. The present one is a cruciform structure, rebuilt in 1359. It is 245 feet long by 73 feet wide, with a pinnacled tower surmounted by a spired lantern on springers of the time of Henry VI., 194 feet high from the base of the tower, which contains an illuminated clock and a peal of eight bells. Attached to the church were formerly ten oratories, and it still contains a carved choir and stalls, an antique font, a canopied brass of R. Thornton, bearing date 1429, also a monument to Moises by Flaxman, with an epitaph by Lord Stowell, and several interesting old tombs of the Percys. The E. window represents Christ bearing the Cross, and the altar-piece is by Tintoretto; here also is an illuminated Bible more than 600 years old. On the S. side of, and adjoining the church of St. Nicholas, is the building presented to the parish by Sir Walter Blackett in 1736, containing the libraries of Cousins and Tomlinson, comprising many curious and valuable theological works. St. Andrew's church stands on the W. side of Newgate-street, in the north-western quarter of the town, and is said to be the oldest in Newcastle, having been built before 1219, but it has undergone repeated alterations and repairs. It has a large low square tower, and contains the tomb of Sir A. Athol, bearing date 1383, and several other old monuments, and an altar-piece by Giordiani. St. John the Baptist's church is a spacious cruciform structure of stone, standing on the N. side of Westgate-street. It is believed to have been built about 1287, and has an embattled tower crowned with four ornamented pinnacles, and containing a clock and six bells. The church, which had formerly three chantries attached, contains a stained-glass window, an ancient font, and many old monuments, also the tomb of John Cunningham, the poet, who lies buried in the churchyard. All Saints' church, at the bottom of Pilgrim-street, near the centre of the town, is a Grecian structure, rebuilt by Stephenson in 1789 at a cost of £27,000. It has a lofty tower surmounted by a steeple 202 feet high from the base of the tower, and is entered under a portico, supported by five columns of the Doric order. The interior is in form of an ellipse 86 by 72 feet, and the crypt is part of the old church built in 1286. The register commences in 1600, and contains the names of William Lord Stowell and the Lord Chancellor Eldon. St. Peter's church, in Oxford-street, is a Gothic edifice with a tower, erected in 1843 as a chapel-of-ease to St. Andrew's. St. Ann's church stands on the N. side of the New-road, near the Ouse burn, and is a stone structure, rebuilt in 1768 on the site of an ancient chapel of the same name. It has a square embattled tower surmounted by a light steeple. St. Paul's church, situated in High Elswick, and the new church at Byke, are stone edifices of recent erection. The church of St. Thomas-à-Becket is a stone edifice, erected in 1830. It stands in the Magdalene Meadows, near Barras Bridge, and has a lofty tower. The church of St. Mary the Virgin, erected in 1858, is a stone structure, with a tower surmounted by a steeple, and situated in the Elswick-villa road. The Roman Catholics have a church dedicated to St. Mary, which was erected in 1843. There are besides about 30 places of worship belonging to Dissenting congregations. including Wesleyan, Association, Primitive and New Connexion Methodists, Independents, Baptists, English, Scotch, United and Reformed Presbyterians, Scotch Kirk, Free Church, Unitarians, Glassites, Society of Friends, Swedenborgians, and Jews, providing accommodation for about 16,000 persons. There are many public schools, the principal one being the Royal Free Grammar school founded in 1525 by Thomas Horsley, Mayor of Newcastle, and made a royal foundation by Queen Elizabeth. It is held in the old hall of St. Mary's Hospital, built in the reign of James I., and has an income from endowment of about £500, besides a share in Bishop Crew's 12 exhibitions at Lincoln College, Oxford, lately abolished, and several exhibitions to Cambridge. The number of scholars is about 140. Hugh Moises, and Dawes, author of "Miscellanea Critica," were once head-masters, and many celebrated men have ranked among its pupils, including W. Elstob, Bishop Ridley, Mark Akenside, the poet, Chief Justice Chambers, Brand, the antiquary and town historian, Horsley, the antiquary, and Lords Eldon, Stowell, and Collingwood. There are also several other foundation schools, as the Trinity House school, founded in 1712, where mathematics and navigation are taught; the Royal Jubilee school, established in 1810; besides numerous National, British, infant, Roman Catholic, Denominational, ragged, and Sunday schools, situated in different parts of the borough, and partially endowed. The charitable foundations are numerous, including the hospital for the cure of contagious fever; the Infirmary, situated in Westgate; two dispensaries, one in Nelson-street, the other in the New-road; a lying-in-hospital in New Bridge-street; the Penitentiary in Diana-street; a deaf and dumb asylum, situated in Charlotte-square; the Victoria Asylum for the blind; the eye infirmary in Saville-row; the Westgate Hospital, founded in 1815 to commemorate the Peace; the Trinity House, originally founded at the close of the 15th century, for regulating pilotage, lighthouse dues, &c., and chartered by Henry VIII. for 26 brethren and sisters, with a chapel, offices, and school attached; the keelmen's hospital, or benefit society, founded in 1701 by the bargemen who carry the coal down the Tyne in "keels," or lighters, to be shipped; St. Mary Magdalene's Hospital, with an income from endowment of £1,200, but there is not now any residence for the brethren; the Holy Jesus, or Freemen's Hospital, founded in 1683, with an income of £600, for the reception of 13 poor men and 37 women, who receive £1 per month besides coals and clothing; the Hospital of St. Mary the Virgin, in connection with which new almshouses have recently been erected in the Elswick-villa road, besides numerous other benevolent and provident establishments. The annual produce of the local charities amounts to near £3,000. There are several extramural cemeteries, as Jesmond Cemetery, which encloses 11 acres; Westgate Cemetery contains about 3 acres, and Ballast Green about the same.—Six weekly and two daily newspapers are published in the town, viz. the Newcastle Courant and Chronicle on Friday, the Guardian, Newcastle Journal, Northern Weekly Standard, and North of England Advertiser on Saturday, the Northern Daily Express and the Daily Chronicle. There are in the town several learned societies, as the Newcastle Society of Antiquaries, the Surtees Society for publishing old MSS., a fine arts institution established in 1822, literary and law societies, also benefit societies, subscription and circulating libraries, and news-rooms supplied with all the London journals and papers. There are also a botanic and horticultural society, a farmers' club, and a natural history society, which last has a well-selected museum.—Many distinguished and eminent men have been born at Newcastle; amongst the number may be mentioned Duns Scotus, who was educated at the convent of Grey Friars in this city, where also Hugh of Newcastle and Friar Martin were monks; Nicholas of Durham, the opponent of John Wycliffe; William Elstob, the divine and antiquary, and his sister, Mrs. Elstob, the Saxon scholar; Akenside, the poet; Rev. H. Bourne, the local historian; Hutton, the mathematician; Sir Robert Chambers, chief justice in India; Admiral Lord Collingwood; the late Lord Chancellor Eldon; Thomas Bewick, the famous wood engraver; Bulmer, the printer; Scott, the engraver; Dean Holdsworth; G. Walker; and Grey, author of Memoria Technica. The principal antiquities include the old castle and town walls described above, the remains of the Emperor Hadrian's wall, the foundations of Roman buildings connected with the station Pons Ælii, a Roman well, &c.; the inn called the "Scotch Arms," in New Nungate, where the Scottish kings lodged; Anderson's house, built on the site of the Franciscan priory founded by Henry III., and in which Charles I. was detained prisoner; the monastery of the grey friars founded in the 13th century, where Duns Scotus was educated, and given by Henry VIII. to the Earl of Essex, but of this no traces now remain; also a Benedictine nunnery founded shortly after the Norman conquest; a Premonstratensian friary; the chapel of St. Lawrence, presented to the corporation by the Percys in 1549, besides other religious houses, all traces of which are now fast disappearing by reason of the improvements recently undertaken in the old town.—Newcastle is the seat of a Poor-law Union co-extensive with the borough, of a superintendent registry, and of new County Court and excise districts. Races take place annually in June on a course of 3,162 yards, called the Hotspur Round, situated on the Moor. Market days are Tuesday and Saturday for corn, but the cattle and hay markets only on Tuesday. The provision market in Grainger-street is open daily, as is also the fish market on the Sandhill. Fairs are held on the first Tuesday in each month for the sale of lean stock, on the 12th and nine following days of August, and on the 29th and nine following days of October for horses, cattle, and sheep, and on the 22nd November for pleasure; also statute fairs for hiring farm servants on the first Tuesday in May and November.

NEWCASTLETON, a vil. in the par. of Castleton, co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 22 miles S.W. of Jedburgh. It is situated on the river Liddel.

NEWCASTLE, UPPER, a par. in the bar. of Newcastle, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, containing the post town of Newtown-Mount-Kennedy. The par. is 4 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 3 miles. The surface is mountainous and boggy. The living is incorporated with that of Newcastle, Lower. Mountjohn is the principal residence.

NEWCESTON, a vil. in the bar. of Kinalmeaky, co. Cork, Ireland, 6 miles N.W. of Bandon. Fairs are occasionally held here.

NEWCHAPEL, or MULLOGHNONG, a par. in the bar. of East Iffa and Offa, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3½ miles N.W. of Clonmel, its post town. The par. is 4 miles long by 2½ miles broad. The soil is mostly good. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. £381, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits in 1819. There is a day school. Springmount, Barn House, and Knockeevan House, are the principal residences.

NEWCHAPEL. See LLANDRINIO, co. Montgomery.

NEWCHAPEL. See THURSFIELD, co. Stafford.

NEWCHURCH, a hund. in the co. of Kent, contains the par. of Ruckinge, with part of Bilsington, and includes St. Mary and Newchurch, in the lib. of Romney-Marsh.

NEWCHURCH, a par. in the lib. of Romney-Marsh, but locally in the hund. of Newchurch, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 5 miles N. of New Romney, its post town, and 4 S.E. of the Ham Street railway station. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The Royal Military canal passes within a mile and a half. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £632. The living is a rect.* and vic. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £450, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is a stone structure with an embattled tower containing five bells. The register dates from 1684. The parochial charities consist of Finche's annuity of £25 for six poor men. There is a National school.

NEWCHURCH, a par. in the hund. of East Medina, Isle of Wight, co. Hants, 6 miles S.E. of Newport, its post town, and the same distance S.W. of Ryde. The par., which is the most extensive in the isle, reaches from Ryde in the N. to Ventnor in the S. It is 9 miles by 1½ mile in extent, comprising the tnshps. of Ryde, Ventnor, Wroxall, Winston, and Princelett. The two first are important towns, much frequented in the season for sea-bathing. The village of Christchurch is situated on the small river Brading, and is chiefly agricultural. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £500, in the patron. of the Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol. The parish church, dedicated to All Saints, formerly belonged to Lyra Abbey. It is a small cruciform structure, situated on rising ground, and contains tombs of the Dillingtons. In addition to the parish church, there are the following district churches, viz. St. Thomas's (Ryde), Holy Trinity, St. Peter's (Haven-street), St. James's, and Ventnor, the livings of which are all perpet. curs. The churches are noticed under the several places where they are situated. The parochial charities produce about £16 per anuum, of which £9 goes to Bowles's school. [See RYDE and VENTNOR.]

NEWCHURCH, or LLANN-NEWYDD, a par. in the hund. of Elvet, co. Carmarthen, 3 miles N.W. of Carmarthen, its post town, and 13 from Newcastle. In the neighbourhood are traces of a Roman encampment, and of an ancient road. The par., which is of large extent, includes several small hmlts. The land is fertile and well cultivated. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £96. The church is a small structure. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a village school. The ancient Roman inscribed stone found here has been removed to Traws-Mawr.

NEWCHURCH, a par. in the hund. of Painscastle, co. Radnor, 7 miles S. of Radnor, and 7 from Kington, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Arrow. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £171, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

NEWCHURCH, a par. in the upper div. of Caldicott hund., co. Monmouth, 5 miles N.W. of Chepstow, its post town, and 12 from Monmouth. It is in two divs., E. and W., and includes the chplry. of Devandean. The village is considerable, but chiefly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £166. There is also a chapel-of-ease at Devandean. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum.

NEW-CHURCH. See LLANDULAS, co. Brecon.

NEWCHURCH, a tnshp. in the par. of Kinnersley, co. Hereford, 3 miles S.W. of Weobley.

NEWCHURCH. See WHITEGATE, co. Chester.

NEWCHURCH, a vil. in the bar. of Portnahinch, Queen's County, Ireland, 2 miles S.E. of Mountmellick.

NEWCHURCH, a vil. in the par. of Ardea, in the bar. of Loughinsholin, co. Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles S.E. of Mountmellick. It is situated on the river Bann.

NEWCHURCH, or NEWCHURCH KENYON, a chplry. and tnshp. in the par. of Winwick, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 3 miles S. of Leigh, 6 E. by S. of Newton-in-Makerfield, and 5 N. of Warrington. It is situated near the Sankey canal and the line of the North-Western railway. The inhabitants are partly engaged in the cotton-mills and in the manufacture of hardware. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £169. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Bury Lane annexed, in the dioc. of Chester, val. £180. The church is a modern edifice containing 365 free sittings.

NEWCHURCH-IN-PENDLE-FOREST, a chplry. and tnshp. in the par. of Whalley, higher div. of the hund. of Blackburn, co. Lancaster, 6 miles N. by W. of Burnley, and 4 S. by W. of Clitheroe. The village, which is considerable, is situated near the rivers Calder and Ribble, and about a mile from the Leeds and Liverpool canal. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the cotton and worsted mills, and in the weaving of mousselines de laine. The substratum abounds in coal, of which there are several pits in operation, and there are also quarries of sandstone and carboniferous limestone. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £150, in the patron. of Hulme's Trustees. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There are places of worship belonging to the Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and other sects. There are National and Lancasterian schools.

NEWCHURCH-IN-ROSSENDALE, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Whalley, higher div. of Blackburn hund., co. Lancaster, 20 miles N. of Manchester, its post town, 2½ miles S.W. of Bacup, and 3½ E. by S. of Haslingden. It is a station on the East Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. It is an improving place, situated on an eminence near the river Ribble, and on the old high road from Burnley to Manchester. The tnshp. is bounded at the nether extremity by the river Irwell, and includes the hmlt. of Booth-Fold, Clough-Fold, and Water-Foot. The village is very extensive, and the inhabitants are principally employed in the cotton and woollen mills. There are also extensive collieries and quarries of freestone and slate. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £500, in the patron. of the Vicar of Whalley. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has a square embattled tower containing a clock and six bells. It was rebuilt in 1826 on the site of an ancient chapel dedicated to the Holy Trinity. It contains a Caen stone pulpit, richly carved, which was added in 1854. In 1711 a grammar school was erected at the expense of Mr. John Kershaw, who bequeathed 60 acres of land and some house property for its support. There are National schools for both sexes, and Sunday-schools at Clough-Fold and Water-Foot. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Baptists, have each a place of worship. Height Side House, Springfield, Spring Hill, and Thistlemount are the principal residences. The Duke of Buccleuch is lord of the manor.

NEW-CONDUIT, a ward in the par. of St. Margaret, borough of King's Lynn, co. Norfolk.

NEW-COPPICE-INCLOSURE, an ext. par. place in the hund. of New Forest, co. Hants.

NEW-CROSS, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Paul, Deptford, co. Surrey, half a mile S.W. of Deptford. It has stations on the London and Brighton and South-Eastern railways. Here is situated the Royal Naval school for 200 sons of officers, built in 1835, and partially endowed by Dr. Bell. The schoolhouse is a brick structure surrounding a court, and built from designs of Sir Christopher Wren in the Elizabethan style of architecture.

NEW DALE, a hmlt. in the par. of Wellington, hund. of South Bradford, co. Salop, 2 miles from Wellington, and 10 E. of Shrewsbury. It is situated under the Wrekin, near the Shrewsbury canal and the line of the ancient Watling Street.

NEWDIGATE, a par. in the second div. of Copthorne hund., co. Surrey, 5¾ miles S. by E. of Dorking, its post town. The par., which is wholly agricultural, includes the hmlt. of Parkgate. It formerly belonged to the Albini, Fitzalan, and other distinguished families. The village is small, but neatly built. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £580. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £353, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a spired tower. The parochial charities chiefly consist of the endowment to Steer's school, with a small exhibition for four years to Trinity College, Cambridge. There is a National school.

NEWENDEN-LIBERTY, a par. partly in the hund. of Selbrittenden, and partly exempt from any hund., in the lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 5¼ miles S. by W. of Tenterden, and 5½ from Hawkhurst. The village, which is inconsiderable, is situated on the river Rother, and on the high road from Kent to Sussex. It is governed by a bailiff of its own, and was formerly a seaport town of large extent, containing 52 taverns. The river Rother is here crossed by a modern brick bridge of three arches, and is navigable for barges, by which coal, corn, and timber are conveyed from Rye. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £240. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £216, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a small ancient structure, containing one bell. The interior contains a very antique font. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There are ruins of Losenham Priory and Castle-Toll, built on the site of the Roman city, Anderida, or Caer Andred, which was destroyed by Ella in 491. There is a mineral spring in the neighbourhood. Roman coins, irons, and other relics of antiquity, have been found, including a merchant ship of great antiquity, supposed to be Roman, imbedded a considerable depth in the mud of the river. A fair for stock and pedlery is held on June 21st.

NEW ENGLAND, a hmlt. in the par. of Woburn, hund. of Manshead, co. Beds, 2 miles N.E. of Woburn, and 10 S.W. of Bedford.

NEW ENGLAND, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Hitchin, co. Herts, 1 mile S.E. of Hitchin.

NEWENT, a par., post, and market town in the hund. of Botloe, co. Gloucester, 8 miles N.W. of Gloucester, and 111 W. by N. of London. It is situated in Dean Forest, to the westward of the river Severn, and on the Hereford and Gloucester canal, which has a very commodious wharf here. The parish, which is large, is intersected by the turnpike road leading from Gloucester to Hereford, and by the road to Ledbury. It comprises the tythgs. of Boulsdon, Compton, Cugley, and Malswick, and is a polling and petty session town. A Benedictine priory was founded here by Roger Montgomery, as a cell to Cormeille, in Normandy, soon after the Norman conquest, and on the suppression of alien priories, it was given by Henry IV. to Fotheringay College. The town, which was formerly a borough, and a place of considerable importance, is said by Leland to have derived its name from a new inn, erected for the accommodation of travellers when the communication with Wales was first opened by this route. The site of the old inn is now called the Boothall. It has one long and principal street, containing several well-built houses and shops. There are manufactories of linen, nails, &c.; also numerous maltings and flour-mills. Newent is celebrated for its cyder and perry, the produce of the orchards with which the neighbourhood abounds. Petty sessions are held at the magistrates' office every alternate Monday, and the county court at the George Hotel, on the last Tuesday of every month, for the recovery of debts not exceeding £20. There are several mineral springs in this parish possessing similar properties to the Cheltenham waters. The chief one is but a short distance from the town. The Poor-law Union comprises 18 parishes and townships, 14 of which are in the county of Gloucester, and 2 each in the counties of Hereford and Worcester. The Ell rivulet flows through the northern part of the parish, turning several mills on its course to the Leadon. The soil is chiefly a light sand, and very productive. The greater part of the land is arable and pasture, with some extensive apple-orchards, and about 965 acres of woodland. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £1,541 15*s*. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £1,600. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is an ancient structure, the work of different periods, with a lofty spired tower containing six bells. The spire was erected in 1679, at which period the church was thoroughly restored, and partly rebuilt. The interior has several monuments of great antiquity, and the effigies of a knight in armour. The parochial charities produce about £49 per annum. There are almshouses for 12 poor persons, and a National school for both sexes. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. New-Court and Pidgeon House are the principal residences. Miss Foley is lady of the manor. Market day is Friday. Fairs are held on the Wednesdays before Easter and Whit Sundays, and on the 12th August; and statute fairs on the 19th September, and two following Fridays.

NEWFERRY, a hmlt. in the borough of Liverpool, co. Chester, 3 miles S. of Liverpool. It is situated on the river Mersey. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, and patron. of trustees. The church, which is modern, is dedicated to St. Peter.

NEWFERRY, a hmlt. in the par. of Ballyscullion, in the bar. of Loughinsholin, co. Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, near Bellaghy. It stands on the river Bann, not far from Lough Beg.

NEWFIELD, a tnshp. in the par. of Auckland St. Andrew, N.W. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, 3 miles N. of Bishop-Auckland. It is an increasing village. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the coal mines.

NEWFIELD, a demesne in the par. of Dundonald, co. Ayr, Scotland, 5 miles S.W. of Kilmarnock.

NEWFIELD-GREEN, a vil. in the tnshp. of Nether Hallam, West Riding co. York, 2 miles W. of Sheffield.

NEW FOREST, a hund. in the co. of Hants, contains New Forest, with the par. of Brockenhurst, and part of Boldre, comprising an area of 66,790 acres. The New Forest, from which the hundred takes its name, was in the Saxon times called Itene, and then stretched from Southampton Water to the Avon, and N. to Chardford, which fact entirely belies the monkish tale of William the Conqueror having knocked down churches and levelled villages to plant it. It forms part of the crown demesnes, and is tolerably well wooded, having 6,000 acres planted for navy timber, but a considerable tract is heath and bog. Hitherto this estate has cost the country more than it pays, but the prospect for the future is improved, as it is now intersected by the Southampton and Dorchester line of railway, and new roads are making. The oak timber is in general small, the best being in the S.E. and round Lyndhurst. It is divided into 19 bailiwicks and 15 walks, under the charge of a lord warden, lieutenant, high steward, and other officers, assisted by 2 rangers, 4 verderers, 12 regarders, and 24 foresters and under foresters. Until the middle of the last century, an old oak, at Canterton, in the parish of Minstead, near Stony Cross, marked the spot where William Rufus was accidentally shot by Tyrrel, whilst hunting in the forest on the 2nd of August, 1100. After the fall of the oak, a stone was set up by Lord de la Warre, but the inscriptions upon it having, in the course of time, become partially erased, it was enclosed in a strong iron frame by Sturges Bourne, Esq., the late ranger.

NEW-FOREST, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkby-Ravensworth, wap. of West Gilling, North Riding co. York, 10 miles W. by N. of Richmond.

NEWFOREST. There are several seats of this name in Ireland; one near Tipperary, another about 4 miles from Newtown Bellew, co. Galway, and a third near Kilbeggan, in Westmeath.

NEW FOUND POOL, an ext. par. place in the borough and co. of Leicester.

NEWGALL, a stream of co. Pembroke, falls into St. Bride's Bay, below St. Elvis.

NEW-GLANMIRE, a vil. in the par. of Cahirlag, in the bar. of Barrymore, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Cork. It is situated in the valley of the river Glanmire.

NEW GROUNDS, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Fordingbridge, co. Hants. It is situated on the border and partly within the limits of the New Forest, adjoining Godshill Wood and Ashley Lodge.

NEWHALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Stapenhill, hund. of Ripton, co. Derby, 3 miles S.E. of Burton-upon-Trent, its post town, and 6 N.W. of Ashby-de-la-Zouch. The tnshp. is in conjunction with that of Stanton. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the collieries, earthenware works, and brick-fields. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £162, in the patron. of trustees. The church, dedicated to St. John, is a modern brick structure, with a square pinnacled tower. The whole edifice was erected at an expense of £7,000. There are National and infant schools. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

NEWHALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Otley, Upper div. of the wap. of Claro, West Riding co. York, three-quarters of a mile N.W. of Otley. The township is in conjunction with Clifton, and consists chiefly of pasture land. The old hall was anciently the residence of Edward Fairfax, the poet, who flourished in the reigns of Elizabeth and James I. At Clifton is a school-house, licensed for the performance of Divine worship.

NEWHALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Acton, hund. of Nantwich, co. Chester, 5 miles S.W. of Nantwich. It is situated near the Birmingham canal. There are charities producing about £2 7*s.* 6*d.* per annum.

NEWHALL, an ancient seat in the Colchester div. of the hund. of Lexden, co. Essex, 3 miles N.E. of Chelmsford. It was built in the reign of Henry VII. by the Butler family, upon lands once belonging to Waltham Abbey, near the river Chelmer. In the reign of Henry VIII. it passed to the relatives of Anne Boleyn, who named it Beaulieu, and kept St. George's feast here with great magnificence in 1524. It was subsequently the seat of several illustrious persons, as Cromwell, Monk, the Cavendishes, and Lord Waltham; by the last of whom the greater part of the mansion was pulled down, excepting the great hall, a noble apartment, 96 feet by 50, and 40 feet high, bearing the arms of Henry VIII. and Elizabeth. The mansion has been partially rebuilt, and is now occupied as a convent, the great hall serving for the chapel.

NEWHALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Davenham, hund. of Northwich, co. Chester, 2½ miles from Davenham, and 3½ S.E. of Northwich. It is situated near the Grand Trunk canal.

NEWHALL, a seat in the par. of Pennycuick, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 12 miles S. by E. of Edinburgh. It is situated on the river North Esk, under the Pentland hills, and near the borders of Peebleshire. It formerly belonged to the Crichton and Pennycuick families, and is celebrated in story as the scene of Ramsay's "Gentle Shepherd." There are also numerous private residences of this name in all parts of England, and in several counties of Scotland.

NEWHALLHEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Bury, Higher div. of the hund. of Blackburn, co. Lancaster, 8 miles N. by W. of Manchester. It is situated in a hilly district, near the rivers Irwell and Roche.

NEWHALL PARK, a lib. in the par. of Thurlaston, hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 6 miles S.W. of Leicester.

NEWHALLS, a vil. in the par. of South Queensferry, co. Linlithgow, Scotland, half a mile E. of Queensferry, and 9 miles W. by N. of Edinburgh. It is situated on the road from Queensferry to Edinburgh, and has a small harbour and pier on the Frith of Forth.

NEWHAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Bambrough, co. Northumberland, 5 miles S.E. of Belford. The township is intersected by the York, Newcastle, and Berwick section of the North-Eastern railway, on which is a station. The village is small. There is a school for both sexes. The Duke of Northumberland is lord of the manor, and sole landowner. The soil is fertile, and the chief crops are barley, wheat, and potatoes.

NEWHAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Whalton, West div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 8 miles S.W. of Morpeth, and 11 N.W. of Newcastle-upon-Tyne. There is no village, only a few farmhouses.

NEWHAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Marton, North Riding co. York, 5 miles N. of Stokesley.

NEW-HAMPTON, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Wolphy, co. Hereford, near Hatfield.

NEWHAVEN, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of North Leith, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 1 mile W. of Leith. It is a station on the Edinburgh and Granton railway. It is situated on the Frith of Forth, and is a sub-port to Leith, to which place it was annexed, with its adjacent lands, in 1630. It has a stone pier, also a chain pier, the latter lying to the W. of the village. It was erected in the years 1821 and 1822, by Sir S. Brown, and consists of three spans of 290 feet each. The pierhead has a fixed light, 15 feet in height, and visible at 5 miles distance. The village of Newhaven, which is much resorted to as a sea-bathing place, was founded by James III., and called New Haven in contradistinction to the Old Haven of Leith. In 1508 Sir James Cowie resigned the chaplaincy to the king, who sold it to the city of Edinburgh, to which it still belongs, being within the jurisdiction of the city and burgh of Edinburgh. It gave title of viscount to the Cheynes of Cogengo. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the fisheries. Between Newhaven and Leith are the extensive barracks of the royal artillery; and to the westward is Trinity, so called from the land on which it stands being the property of the Trinity House. It contains commodious baths, resorted to by numerous visiters in the season; and many villas and dwellings have recently been erected. The living is in the presb. of Edinburgh and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale, and in the patron. of the trustees and seatholders. The church was rebuilt in 1838. There are also a Free church and several schools.

NEWHAVEN, or MEECHING, a par. and seaport town in the hund. of Holmstrow, rape of Lewes, co. Sussex, 6½ miles S. of Lewes, its post town, 8½ E. of Brighton, and 58 S. of London. It has a branch line from the London, Brighton, and South Coast railway, and is the port of departure for the Brighton Steam Packet Company's steamers, which ply twice a day in connection with the London, Brighton, and South Coast, and Paris, Rouen, and Dieppe trains, being the most direct route to Paris. It is situated on the Channel, near the mouth of the river Ouse, over which is a drawbridge constructed in 1784, leading towards Seaford, in lieu of the ferry. It is a bonding port, watering-place, and preventive station, and was formerly a market town. In 1848 Louis Philippe landed here in his flight from Paris. The town of Newhaven was formerly called Meeching, but took its present appellation in 1713 on the formation of the harbour, when also the river was made to enter the sea in a direct line. It is one of the best tidal harbours in the Channel between the Downs and the Isle of Wight, and the bay forms one of the finest roadsteads on the southern coast. In the early part of the 18th century it had a thriving commerce, which afterwards declined, chiefly owing to the decay of the old wooden piers that protected the harbour, but during the last forty years it has considerably improved, and has now a brisk passenger traffic to the Continent, and an extensive coasting trade, chiefly in coals, corn, timber, and flints for the Staffordshire potteries. There is also an extensive goods traffic in wines, spirits, silk, and French goods. The custom-house is situated at the railway quay, from whence the steam packets ply twice daily (Sunday excepted) to Dieppe. The number of passengers in 1861 reached 41,000. Steamers also ply to and from Jersey and St. Malo three times a week. The harbour of Newhaven is constructed of wooden piers 600 to 750 feet in length, and 106 feet apart, and has a depth of water inside the bar of from 2 to 22 feet, in accordance with the tide. There are two fixed lights, 17 and 28 feet in height, visible 7 and 8 miles respectively. The fortifications at the W. side consist of two batteries, one of 4 and the other of 6 guns, connected with those of Seaford Bay, which defend the low coast from Brighton to Eastbourne. The town, which is about half a mile distant from the sea, is small, containing in 1861 a population of 1,814. The streets are neat and clean, and many of the houses modern. It contains a large brewery, celebrated for its tipper ale, also two extensive ship-building yards, employing a large number of the inhabitants, and along the quay are commodious bonding warehouses. In the neighbourhood the cliffs which guard the coast are 200 feet high, and on Castle Hill is a circular fortification of great extent. The land is divided between arable, pasture, and meadow, and is in high cultivation. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £205, besides £89 paid to the impropriator. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £186. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a square embattled tower, crowned with a shingled spire. The church was thoroughly restored and enlarged in 1854. The churchyard contains a monument to the Brazen's crew, wrecked here in 1800. There is a National school for boys, and an endowed school for girls. The Independents have a place of worship. The Earl of Sheffield is lord of the manor. An annual fair is held on the 16th October for pedlery.

NEWHAVEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Parkham, co. Devon, 6 miles S.W. of Bideford.

NEW HEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Prestwick-cum-Oldham, co. Lancaster, near Rochdale. It is a station on the Oldham and Rochdale branch of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. It is situated between the rivers Irk and Medlock.

NEWHILLS, a par. in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland, 3 miles N.W. of Aberdeen. It extends about 6 miles in length from S.E. to N.W., with an extreme breadth of about 5 miles. It is bounded by the pars. of Dyce, Old Machar, Banchory-Devenick, Peterculter, Skem, and Kinnellar. The surface is chiefly of a hilly nature, except in the north-eastern district, where it is level, and very productive. It is situated on the river Don, and formed part of St. Machar till 1663. The parish is traversed by the roads from Aberdeen to Inverury and Strathdon, and in the N.E. by the Great North of Scotland railway, which has a station at Buxburn. In the vicinity are traces of Druidical circles, cairns, tumuli, &c. In the village are woollen, paper, snuff, and grain mills. The blue granite quarries employ a large number of the inhabitants. This par. is in the presb. and synod of Aberdeen. The minister has a stipend of £414. The parish church is a spacious structure, erected in 1830. There are a Free church, parochial school, and two other schools. The neighbourhood is studded with several residences, among which Springhill and Hazelhead are the principal. Fairs for cattle are held on the first Thursday in February, third Wednesday in May, fourth Thursday in August, Wednesday following the first Tuesday in September, and the fourth Wednesday in October.

NEWHOLM-CUM-DUNSLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Whitby, lib. of Whitby-Strand, North Riding co. York, 2 miles W. of Whitby. It is situated near the coast. The Wesleyans have a small place of worship.

NEWHOUSE, a vil. in the par. of St. Ninian, co. Stirling, Scotland. It adjoins the N. end of St. Ninian's village. There are also numerous private residences of this name in all parts of England.

NEWHOUSEMILL, a hmlt. in the par. of East Kilbride, Middle ward, co. Lanark, Scotland, 4 miles N.W. of Hamilton.

NEWHOUSES, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Hunderthwaite, par. of Romald-Kirk, North Riding co. York, 5 miles N.W. of Barnard Castle. It is situated near the river Tees.

NEWICK, a par. in the hund. of Barcombe, rape of Lewes, co. Sussex, 4½ miles W. of Uckfield, its railway station and post town, and 6 N. of Lewes. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on the road from Maresfield to Cuckfield, and near the river Ouse, which bounds the parish on the E. The surface is diversified with hill and dale. The land is partly in hop-grounds. The soil consists of strong clay, and ironstone and sandstone are found in abundance. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £390, and the glebe comprises 25 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £327. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure with a low square embattled tower containing three bells. The N. aisle was added in 1834. There is a National school for boys, also a school for girls, founded in 1771 by G. V. Vernon and his wife, who endowed it with a rent-charge of £50. The principal residences are Newick Park, formerly the seat of the Vernon family, and Beechlands. Mrs. Lane is lady of the manor.

NEWINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Ewelme, co. Oxford, 4½ miles N. of Wallingford, its post town, and 9 S.E. of Oxford. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the eastern bank of the river Thames, and is wholly agricultural. The par. comprises the lib. of Berrick Prior, and the tythgs. of Brookhampton and Holcomb. The land is divided between arable and pasture in nearly equal proportions, with about 30 acres of woodland. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1810. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Britwell-Priors an-nexed, in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £360, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is an ancient structure with a square spired tower containing four bells. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. Newington House is the principal residence. Sir George Pechell, Bart., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

NEWINGTON, a quoad sacra par, in the par. of St. Cuthbert's, Edinburgh, co. Edinburgh, Scotland. It is situated near Arthur's Seat, and is a suburb of the city of Edinburgh, lying to the extreme S. of the town.

NEWINGTON, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Lawrence, Isle of Thanet, and lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 2 miles from Ramsgate.

NEWINGTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Misson, co. Nottingham, 1 mile N.E. of Bawtry. It is situated on the river Idle.

NEWINGTON, a vil. in the tnshp. of North Ferriby and Swanland, par. of Kingston-on-Hull, East Riding co. York, 5 miles S.E. of South Clave. It is situated on the river Humber, opposite South Ferriby, and near the line of the Selby and Hull railway.

NEWINGTON-BAGPATH, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Berkeley, co. Gloucester, 5½ miles from the Charfield railway station, and 5 N.W. of Tetbury. The village, which is small, is situated under the Cotswold hills, and is chiefly agricultural. The soil consists of clay and stone brash, with a subsoil of oolite. Stone for building is quarried. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £291, and the glebe comprises 46 acres, valued at £60 per annum. The living is a rect. with the cur. of Owlpen annexed, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £319. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is an ancient stone structure with a square campanile tower containing one bell. The parochial charities consist of the interest of £50 bequeathed by Mr. John White, of Kingscote, and distributed to the poor in bread every Christmas. There is a mixed school, conducted on the National system, and entirely supported by the rector. The court-house, which is still in existence, has been converted into a farm. Colonel Kingscote is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

NEWINGTON BUTTS, or NEWINGTON ST. MARY, a par., and suburb of the metropolis, in the E. div. of the hund. of Brixton, co. Surrey. At the Elephant and Castle is a station of the London, Chatham, and Dover railway, by which line it is intersected. It is bounded on the W. by Kennington, and by the par. of Lambeth, within which parliamentary borough it is situated; on the E. by St. George's, Southwark; and on the N. by the borough of Southwark. The earliest mention of this place under its present name is in a record of Elizabeth's time. Its appellation "Butts" originated from the butts or marks for the practice of archery set up here by order of government in the 17th century, when this parish consisted of open fields. At the end of the last century above 300 acres of land in this parish were in fields and market gardens, but the whole is now built over. The streets, which are in general well paved and lighted, are irregularly arranged, but contain some good modern buildings. On the eastern side of Newington-causeway are situated the sessions house for the county of Surrey, and the county prison, commonly called Horsemonger-lane Gaol; and in the Surrey Gardens is a music hall, converted temporarily for the accommodation of St. Thomas's Hospital. At the intersection of the Kent and Surrey roads is the Elephant and Castle inn; and on the verge of the parish is Kennington Common, now enclosed and planted as a park. The great road from London to Brighton and the S. coast passes through this parish, which includes the populous district of Walworth. The principal manufactures are those of floor-cloth, cabinet goods, and an extensive vitriol manufactory. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of London, val. £900, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a brick edifice, with a low tower, built in 1721, but much enlarged in 1793. In addition to the parish church are the following district churches—viz. Holy Trinity, Southwark; St. Peter's, Walworth; St. John's, Walworth; and St. Paul's, Walworth; the livings of which are all perpet. curs., val. £300 each; also Beresford chapel, Walworth. Two of these churches were erected in the earlier part of the present century, under the authority of the parliamentary commissioners for building new churches. Trinity church, situated in Trinity-square, on the eastern side of Blackman-street, has a Corinthian portico and tower. Here also is situated the remarkable structure known as Spurgeon's Tabernacle. There are Independent, Wesleyan, and other dissenting places of worship; also National and other schools. See WALWORTH and LONDON.

NEWINGTON GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Islington, co. Middlesex, 3 miles N. by E. of St. Paul's, London. Henry VIII. is said to have resided here occasionally, and the lane leading to Ball's Pond is still called by his name. The hamlet consists of a square of well-built houses surrounding the green, one of which for many generations was the seat of the Halliday and Mildmay families. Drs. Aikin and Price were ministers of the chapel here, and Mrs. Barbauld and V. Knox residents.

NEWINGTON-JUXTA-SITTINGBOURNE, a par. in the hund. of Milton, lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 6½ miles E. by S. of Chatham, and 3 W. of Milton and Sittingbourne. It is a station on the London, Chatham, and Dover railway. The town, which was formerly a market town, in 1861 contained a population of 854. It is built on the site of the Roman station Durolevum, near the line of the ancient Watling Street, and is called in Domesday Survey Neweton, at which time it belonged to Queen Editha and the Lucys. It had subsequently a nunnery, which was converted by Henry II. into a college for secular canons, and finally became a cell to St. Augustine's Abbey, at Canterbury. At the Dissolution it was given to Lord Somers, and in the reign of Charles II. was alienated by the crown to Roger Jackson, of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, from whom it came to the Pembertons, Mills, and Edward Legh, of "the Limes," Lewisham, the present possessor. The manor is subject to the borough of Lucies, in this parish, the steward of which is chosen annually at the court paramount of Milton. The old manor house has recently been taken down to make room for a new street called Legh-street, leading direct to the railway station. About a mile to the W. of the town is the hmlt. of Breach. The land is very fertile, and a considerable extent is laid out in hop-grounds and orchards. The rectorial tithes were commuted in 1840 for £605 15*s.* 2*d., and the vicarial for £338. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £250, in the patron. of Eton College. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a partly modern structure, with a lofty embattled tower at the W. end. It has two chancels, and contains many interesting objects of antiquity, including a curious octagonal font, specimens of ancient stained glass, three brasses (the earliest bearing date 1498), and monuments of the Hasteds. The parochial charities produce £13 per annum, which is distributed in bread to the poor every Sunday, besides three quarters of wheat from the parsonage estate annually. The road leading to Key Hill, or Caii Collis, is still called Key-street, after Caius Julius Cæsar; and at a place called Crockfield, in this parish, are entrenchments, where much Roman pottery and urns have been found, showing it to have been a cemetery.

NEWINGTON-NEXT-HYTHE, a par. in the hund. of Folkestone, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 2½ miles N.E. of Hythe, its post town, and 3½ N.W. of Folkestone. The village, which is irregularly built, is situated in Romney-Marsh, on the Military canal, and near the line of the South-Eastern railway. It is watered by two clear streams. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. Hops are extensively grown. From an eminence near Beachborough House is an extensive prospect over the country, and across the Channel to the coast of France. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £490, and the vicarial for £235. The living is a vic. annexed to the rect.* of Cheriton, in the dioc. of Canterbury. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an embattled structure, with a lofty square tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains four brasses, the oldest, that of a woman, bearing date 1480, and another, of a priest, 1501. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is an infant school. Near the village are traces of entrenchments, where Roman coins, beads of agate, pebbles, glass, coral, and other remains have been found. There are now no remains of the ancient chapel of St. Nicholas, once famous for the resort of fishermen to present offerings at the shrine of their patron saint after escaping shipwreck.

NEWINGTON, NORTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Broughton, hund. of Bloxham, co. Oxford, 4 miles N. of South Newington, and 2½ W. by S. of Banbury.

NEWINGTON, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Wootton, co. Oxford, 6 miles S.W. of Banbury, its post town, and 7 from Chipping Norton. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Swere, and is wholly agricultural. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture. The soil is partly a fine sandy loam, and partly a strong clay. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1794. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £231, in the patron. of Exeter College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has an embattled tower crowned with pinnacles. It is situated on a hill. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The Earl of Shrewsbury is lord of the manor.

NEWINGTON, STOKE, a par., and extensive suburban district of the metropolis, in the Finsbury div. of the hund. of Ossulstone, co. Middlesex, 3 miles N. by E. of St. Paul's, and 3 N. of Shoreditch church. At Newington-road is a station on the North London railway. The village, which is of considerable antiquity, being mentioned in Domesday Survey, is no longer confined to its own par. of St. Mary, but extends into the adjoining pars. of West Hackney, Hornsey, and Islington. It stands on the main road from the metropolis to Cambridge, and is bounded on the S. side, adjoining London, by the Kingsland-road and Shacklewell-lane; on the E. by Hackney brook, which separates it from Upper Clapton; on the N. and N.W. by the inner line of Abney Park Cemetery, where it adjoins Stamford Hill, and the Seven-Sisters-road, including the far-famed Manor House tavern, in the Green Lanes, which bound it on the W., until it reaches Stoke Newington Green, when it follows the line of the Newington-road to Ball's Pond, and thence E. to the Kingsland-road. The original village consisted principally of one long street extending from Kingsland-road to Stamford Hill; but within the last quarter of a century it has been increased by new lines of houses and villas erected in Park-street, Albion-road, Church-street, and other parts. The streets are paved, and lighted with gas, and the inhabitants are supplied with water from the New River, which pursues a serpentine course through the parish, and has here a large reservoir, with a steam-engine for forcing the water to the tops of the houses. Near the church is a walk between trees, called Queen Elizabeth's walk; and on the N. side of Church-street is the brick gateway of the old manor house, with its pointed arch. Part of the land not built upon is laid out as extensive nursery gardens; but the trade of the place depends on the resident population, and its situation as a great thoroughfare.—The Abney Park Cemetery is situated to the N. of Church-street, and to the W. of the principal thoroughfare, in that part of the parish which adjoins Stamford Hill. It was, previously to being converted into a cemetery, the seat of Sir Thomas Abney, the friend of Dr. Watts, who wrote many of his sacred songs in an arbour, now fallen to decay, but the site of which is still railed off.—The par. comprises also Highbury New Park, and part of Stoke Newington Common, as well as the much frequented grounds of the Manor House tavern. It is returned in the census of 1861 as comprising 650 acres, and having a population of 6,607. It is included within the jurisdiction of the Central Criminal Court, and in the metropolitan N. postal district. Courts leet and baron for the manor are held annually. The manorial estate, which has belonged to the cathedral of St. Paul's since the Saxon times, is now administered by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, but still confers on the Rector of St. Mary's the title of prebendary or honorary canon of St. Paul's.—The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of London, val. £820, in the patron. of the bishop. The ancient parish church of St. Mary, standing on the N. side of Church-street, was rebuilt by William Patten in 1563, and considerably enlarged by Sir Charles Barry in the present century, who added a spire to the old tower. It was, however, found inadequate to meet the increased demand for church accommodation; and in 1858 a new and magnificent structure was erected on the S. side of Church-street, immediately facing the old building, in which divine service is still performed, though the new St. Mary's is now considered the parish church. There is also the district church of St. Matthias, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £265. There are places of worship for Independents, Wesleyans, Unitarians, and Society of Friends, the last being a modern building; also almshouses for ten widows, founded and endowed under the will of Michael Yoakley in 1835. There are National, denominational, and Sunday schools in connection with the several places of worship.—Many illustrious persons have resided here, as Robert Dudley, Earl of Leicester, and Edward Vere, Earl of Oxford, in the reign of Elizabeth; the republican general Fleetwood; Daniel Defoe, author of "Robinson Crusoe;" Adam Anderson, author of "History of Commerce;" Thomas Day, of "Sandford and Merton" and other popular productions; Howard, the philanthropist, who was born in the adjoining parish of Hackney, and died here in November, 1748; Dr. Watts, the divine and poet; Dr. Aikin, compiler of the General Biography; and his sister, Mrs. Barbauld.

NEW-INN, a vil. in the par. of Knockgraffon, bar. of Clanwilliam, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Cahir. It contains a church, Roman Catholic chapel, and barracks. Several seats adorn the neighbourhood. A fair is held on the 17th March.

NEW-INN, a hmlt. in the par. of Lava, bar. of Upper Loughtee, co. Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 5 miles N.W. of Virginia.

NEW-INN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Kilconnell, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland.

NEW INN, a hmlt. in the hund. of Greytree, co. Hereford, 4 miles W. of Ross. It is situated near the river Wye.

NEWLAND, a lib. in the par. of Hurst, hund. of Sonning, co. Berks, 4 miles W. of Wokingham.

NEW-LAND, in Canvey Island, Essex, 6 miles S.W. of Rayleigh.

NEWLAND, a vil. in the par. of Exhall, co. Warwick, 4 miles N. of Coventry.

NEWLAND, a vil. in the par. of Colton, co. Stafford, 2 miles N. of Abbotts Bromley.

NEWLAND, a tythg. in the par. of Batcombe, co. Dorset, 6 miles S.E. of Sherborne.

NEWLAND, a chplry. in the par. of Great Malvern, lower div. of Pershore hund., co. Worcester, 2 miles N.E. of Great Malvern, its post town, and 5 S. of Worcester. This place was formerly a grange to Malvern Priory. The land is partly in hop-grounds. The impropriation belongs to Lady Gresley. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £60, in the patron. of the Vicar of Great Malvern. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a small brick and timber structure. Earl Beauchamp is lord of the manor.

NEWLAND, a tnshp. in the par. of Drax, lower div. of the wap. of Barkstone-Ash, West Riding co. York, 4 miles N.E. of Snaith, its post town. The village, is small, situated on the river Aire, and entirely agricultural. Newland Park is the principal residence.

NEWLAND, a hmlt. in the par. of Cottingham, Hunsley-Beacon div. of the wap. of Harthill, East Riding co. York, 2 miles N.W. of Hull. It consists chiefly of small dairy farms. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £85. The church is a small modern edifice. A chapel-of-ease was erected here in 1833, at an expense of £1,650. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans, also a school with a small endowment.

NEWLAND, a par. in the hund. of St. Briavel's, co. Gloucester, 3 miles from Coleford, and 4 S.E. of Monmouth. The par., which is extensive, comprises the chplries. of Bream and Coleford, with the tythgs. of Clearwell, Lea-Bailey, and Newland, and the hmlts. of Upper and Lower Redbrook. It is bounded on the W. by the navigable river Wye, and the valleys are watered by numerous rapid rivulets. The surface is diversified, some of the hills attaining an elevation of 800 feet above the level of the sea. Coal and iron ore are obtained in the neighbouring forest of Dean, and conveyed by the Wye to Redbrook, where are iron-foundries and tin-plate manufactories. The substratum is limestone, which is extensively quarried for building purposes. At a place called Birchamp is a spring similar to St. Ann's well at Malvern. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £525. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Redbrook annexed, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £488, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a large structure with a western tower crowned with pinnacles, and ornamented with open-worked battlements. There are chapels-of-ease at Coleford, Bream, Clearwell, and Redbrook. The Baptists, Wesleyans, and Independents have places of worship. There are National schools, and a free school, founded by Edward Bell in 1651. The parochial charities produce about £250 per annum, including an annuity of £68, left by Mr. Jones for the foundation of a lecture-ship in the church, the school endowments, and two sets of almshouses founded by Edward Bell and Mr. Jones. There are remains of Meadow House, which was garrisoned by the royalists in the reign of Charles I., when the parliamentary troops occupied Gloucester.

NEWLAND-CUM-WOODHOUSE-MOOR, an ext. par. place in the lower div. of Agbrigg wap., West Riding co. York, 3 miles N.E. of Wakefield. Here was formerly a preceptory of the Knights Hospitallers, founded in the reign of King John. Its revenues were returned at the Dissolution at £202 3*s.* 8*d.* Courts leet and baron are annually held in the village, which now consists of a few farmhouses. The old chapel, which stood near the mansion-house, was taken down at the end of the last century.

NEWLANDRIG, a vil. in the par. of Borthwick, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 4 miles S.E. of Dalkeith. It is much decayed.

NEWLANDS, a par. in the co. Peebles, Scotland, 6 miles N.W. of Peebles. It comprises the post-office station of Noblehouse. It extends in length about 9 miles from S.W. to N.E., with an extreme breadth of 3¾ miles, and is bounded on the N. by the co. Edinburgh, and on other sides by the pars. of Eddlestone, Lyne, Stobo, Kirkurd, and Linton. The surface is hilly, and is richly wooded. Red sandstone and limestone are quarried to a considerable extent; there are also traces of marl, iron ore, and manganese. Several mineral springs exist. It is situated on the river Lyne, and is traversed by the road from Edinburgh to Dumfries through Moffat. Its north-eastern extremity adjoins the Leadburn station on the Edinburgh and Peebles railway. This par. is in the presb. of Peebles, and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale. The minister has a stipend of £262. The parish church was erected in 1838. The old church, which is now a ruin, formerly belonged to the monks of Dunfermline. There are also an United Presbyterian church and a parochial school, &c. Drochil Castle, which is still in good preservation, was built by Regent Morton.

NEWLANDS, a chplry. in the par. of Crosthwaite, ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 4 miles S.W. of Keswick, its post town. It is situated under Hindscar, near Derwentwater, and contains the hmlt. of Little Keswick, or Little Town, which is situated so close under the mountain that the solar rays are intercepted from it between November and February. The houses are few in number and much scattered. There are lead and copper mines. The latter were formerly extremely valuable, and from the great proportion of gold and silver they contained, were claimed as royal property in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, who instituted a suit at law against the Earl of Northumberland, on whose lordship they were discovered, which was decided in favour of the crown. The original mines were destroyed during the civil wars of Charles I., and the ruins of smelting-houses and other ancient works may still be traced on the banks of the river Bure. The mines having since been reopened, are now comparatively unproductive, but vast quantities of lead ore are obtained in the neighbourhood. There are also quarries of fine slate for roofing. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £90, in the patron. of the Vicar of Crosthwaite. The church was rebuilt in 1843. There is a small school adjoining the church. In the village is a place of worship for Wesleyans. A fair is held on the first Friday in September for sheep.

NEWLANDS, a tythg. in the par. of Wootten Glanville, co. Dorset, 8 miles N.E. of Cerne-Abbas.

NEWLANDS, a tythg. in the par. of St. Lawrence, Isle of Thanet, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, near Ramsgate.

NEWLANDS, a hmlt. in the par. of Ulverstone, hund. of Lonsdale North of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 16 miles N.W. of Lancaster. It is situated near the river Leven's mouth, on Morecambe Bay.

NEWLANDS, a tnshp. in the par. of Bywell St. Peter, E. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 11 miles S.E. of Hexham.

NEWLANDS, a hmlt. in the bar. of Scarawalsh, co. Wexford, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Newtownbarry. It is situated on the river Slaney.

NEWLAND-SIDE, a tnshp. in the par. of Stanhope, N.W. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, 1 mile S.W. of Stanhope. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the lead mines, and in the smelting-house at Bollihope.

NEW-LAUND-BOOTH, an ext. par. place in the higher div. of Blackburn hund., co. Lancaster.

NEWLAW, a hill in co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 5 miles S.E. of Kirkcudbright. It commands a magnificent view as far as the Isle of Man and the Mourne mountains.

NEWLAY, a hmlt. partly in the par. of Horsforth, upper div. of Skyrack wap., and partly in the chplry. of Bramley and par. of St. Peter's, Leeds, West Riding co. York, 5 miles W. by N. of Leeds. It is situated in the valley of the river Aire, here crossed by a cast-iron bridge constructed in 1819. There are woollen-mills and dye-houses, affording employment to most of the inhabitants.

NEWLAY, a hmlt. in the wap. of Morley, West Riding co. York, 3 miles N.E. of Bradford. It is a station on the North Midland railway. It is situated near the river Aire.

NEWLYN, a par. in the hund. of Pyder, co. Cornwall, 8 miles N. of Truro, and 8 N.W. of Grampound, its post town. The parish, which is large, lies between St. Enoder and Perranzabuloe, and is bounded on the N. by St. Columb. It includes, besides the vil. of its own name, part of the hmlt. of Mitchell, and the ancient manor of Cargol, which last at the time of the Domesday Survey belonged to the priory of Bodmin, and was afterwards possessed by the bishops of Exeter, who had a palace here. The surface is hilly, and in parts intersected with deep valleys. The land is nearly evenly distributed into three classes, according to its natural capabilities, viz. arable, pasture, and meadow, and the remainder downs, common, and waste. The soil is of various qualities, but produces good crops of wheat, barley, and turnips. The prevailing timber is oak and elm, of which there are some stately trees. There are several chalybeate springs in the parish. The substratum is rich in mineral wealth, and the lead mine called East Wheal Rose yields ore in which about 40 ounces of silver are found to the ton. The petty sessions for the W. div. of the hund. of Pyder are held in the village, which was once a market town, under a grant obtained for it by the Bishop of Exeter in 1312. It is compactly built in the most elevated part of the parish, and commands a wide prospect over the surrounding country. The population has of recent years considerably increased. The parish contains several old mansions, including Trerice, formerly the seat of Lord John Arundell, who was present with Queen Elizabeth at the review of the troops at Tilbury, and who so bravely defended Pendennis Castle at the advanced age of eighty. Only part of this once baronial edifice is still standing, and is much dilapidated. Tresilian is the seat of Richard Gully Bennett, Esq. The present lords of the manor and principal landed proprietors are, Sir Thomas Dyke Acland, Viscount Falmouth, the Bishop of Exeter, and Christopher H. T. Hawkins, Esq. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £755, and the vicarial for £470, with a glebe of 9 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £380, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Newlyn, is a spacious cruciform structure with a lofty square embattled tower crowned with pinnacles or minarets at each of the angles, and containing a peal of five bells. The church, which is of great antiquity, has undergone much repair, having been partly rebuilt at various periods, and was reroofed in 1846. It contains a marble monument bearing the bust of Lady Margaret Arundell. The Wesleyans and Bryanites have chapels. There is a parochial school for boys and girls, with a small endowment. On the Downs in the vicinity are several barrows.

NEWLYN, a vil. in the par. of St. Paul, W. div. of the hund. of Penwith, co. Cornwall, half a mile S.W. of Penzance. It is a fishing port, situated on Mount's Bay, in the English Channel. This place was of considerable importance previously to its being burnt by the Spaniards in 1595. The harbour is small but commodious, and is accessible to vessels of 100 tons. There are about 300 boats employed in the fisheries belonging to the port. The village consists of one principal thoroughfare nearly half a mile in length, with several alleys branching off in different directions. There is a large brewery. The Independents and Wesleyans have places of worship.

NEWMARKET, a market town and seat of a Poor-law Union, partly in the par. of All Saints, hund. of Cheveley, co. Cambridge, and partly in that of St. Mary, hund. of Lackford, co. Suffolk (the High-street dividing the two counties), 12 miles N.E. of Cambridge, and 61 N. by E. of London. It is a station on the Cambridge and Bury branch of the Great Eastern railway. The town, which is situated in a valley, has been celebrated for its races and racing establishments since the time of James I., when a house was built here for the especial use of the king and his retinue. This house, which did not escape the ravages of the Civil War, was rebuilt by Charles II., but has been twice subsequently almost wholly destroyed by fire, though a small portion of the original building is still standing. The stables in which the royal stud was formerly kept are close to this house, as is also the mansion belonging to the Jockey Club, which may be considered as the headquarters of that society. The Beacon racecourse is more than 4 miles long, and perhaps the finest in the world. It is on the western side of the town. The celebrated "Childers" went over it in 7½ minutes. The round course is more than 3½ miles. The training ground is on the S. side of the town, and cannot be matched in England. There are numerous training establishments in Newmarket, and, as may be supposed, a great part of the inhabitants are trainers, or connected with the racing stables. Seven times during the year there are races, which are invariably attended by rank and fashion. The town contains a literary institution, with reading-rooms, two banks, a free school, and National schools. The main street is upwards of three-quarters of a mile long, and most of the houses are well built, and many are betting houses. The town, though only partially paved, is well lighted with gas, and healthy. It has the advantage of being under a local board of health. Twice has the town been nearly destroyed by fire, once in 1623, and again early in the last century. The prosperity of Newmarket is mainly due to horse-racing, which has caused a great many first-class hotels and inns to be erected. Some malting and brewing is carried on, and there is a corn market. There are two parish churches—one, All Saints, the living of which is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £100, in the patron. of the Bishop of Norwich; the other, St. Mary's, the living of which is a rect.* also in the dioc. of Ely, val. £250. The church of St. Mary is an ancient Gothic structure built of stone, and was recently restored, when a piscina of the time of Henry III. was discovered. It contains the tomb of Trampton, the trainer to William III. and three successive sovereigns. The register commences from the time of Charles II. There are chapels for Wesleyans and Independents. It is the head of a Poor-law Union comprising 29 parishes, and the seat of a county court, which sits once a month. The Devil's Ditch on the downs is a very remarkable hollow more than 100 feet broad, and nearly 5 miles long, with a slope of upwards of 50 feet on the S.W. side. Near this spot some Roman coins and relics were found a century ago. There are remains of a palace of the Stuart period, and Nell Gwynn occupied a house in the town. The Duke of Bedford, Marquis of Exeter, Baron Rothschild, and other eminent patrons of the turf, have extensive training establishments here. Market day is Tuesday. Fairs are held on Whit-Tuesday for cattle, &c., and a pleasure fair on the 8th November.

NEWMARKET, a par. in the hund. of Prestatyn, co. Flint, 6 miles N.W. of Rhyl, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Prestatyn, and near Offa's Dyke. The parish contains the extensive tumulus locally called the "Gop," which is said by some to have been erected by the conquerors of the Ordovices, and by others to have been the burial-place of Queen Boadicea. Petty sessions are held in the village, which was once a market town. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £90, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a modern structure. In the churchyard is an ornamented cross of the 14th century. There is an endowed school. The Independents have a place of worship. Golden Grove is the principal residence.

NEWMARKET, a post and market town in the par. of Clonfert, bar. of Duhallow, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Kanturk, and 130 S.W. of Dublin. It stands on the river Allua, at the cross roads from Mallow to Listowel, and from Charleville to Killarney. The town, which consists of one long street, contains a church, Roman Catholic chapel, fever hospital, and a dispensary within the Kanturk poor-law union. The town belongs to the Aldworth family. Fairs are held on 21st April, 8th June, 16th July, 8th September, 10th October, and 21st November.

NEWMARKET, a hmlt. in the par. of Horsley, co. Gloucester, 3 miles S.W. of Minchinhampton.

NEWMARKET, a vil. in the par. of Aghaviller, bar. of Knocktopher, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, near Higginstown. A pillar tower stands near the village. Fairs are held on Easter-Monday.

NEWMARKET-ON-FERGUS, a post and market town in the par. of Tomfinlough, bar. of Lower Bunratty, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles E. of Fergus, and 105 S.W. by W. of Dublin. There is a station for Ballycar and Newmarket on the Limerick and Ennis line of railway. It is situated on the road from Ennis to Limerick. There is a police station and a dispensary, which last is within the Ennis poor-law union. Several seats adorn the neighbourhood. Fairs are held on Easter-Monday and 7th November.

NEWMILL, a vil. in the par. of Keith, co. Banff, Scotland, 1½ mile N. of Keith, and 8 S.E. of Fochabers.

It is situated on the left bank of the river Isla, and is divided into two parts, viz. Old and New. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture.

NEW-MILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Wath-upon-Dearn, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N. of Rotherham.

NEW-MILL, a vil. in the par. of Llangeinor, co. Glamorgan, 5 miles N. of Bridgend.

NEW-MILL, an ecclesiastical district in the tnshps. of Foolstone and Wooldale, par. of Kirk-Burton, upper div. of the wap. of Agbrigg, West Riding co. York, 5 miles S.E. of Huddersfield. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the road from Huddersfield to Sheffield. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Kirk-Burton. The church, which has a square embattled tower crowned with pinnacles, was erected in 1830, at an expense of £4,000, by the parliamentary commissioners. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. There are National and infant schools.

NEWMILLS, a tnshp. and vil. in the par. of Glossop, hund. of High Peak, co. Derby, 8 miles S.E. of Stockport, its post town, and 5 N.W. of Chapel-en-le-Frith. It is a station on the Buxton branch of the North-Western railway. It is situated in a manufacturing district at the confluence of the rivers Goyt and Kinder, the latter of which derives its source from the mountain of Kinder-Scout, and here separates the counties of Derby and Chester. The tnshp. formerly comprised seven hmlts., but was subdivided about a century ago, and now contains the hmlts. of Beard, Ollerset, Thornsett, and Whitle. There are large iron and brass foundries, cotton mills, and bleach and print works scattered through various parts of the township, which together give employment to a large portion of the inhabitants. The original branches of manufacture were those of paper and cloth, but these have been entirely suspended. The appellation of New Mills is more particularly applied to a cluster of houses and factories which rise in tiers one above another from the brink of the river to the summit of the crags, a height of several hundred feet, and also extend along the turnpike road as far as London Place. The land not built over is chiefly meadow and pasture, with a small proportion of arable and woodland. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Glossop. The church, dedicated to St. George, is a modern structure with a spired tower, the expense of which was partly defrayed by the parliamentary commissioners. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, Association Methodists, Independents, and Roman Catholics have each a place of worship.

NEWMILLS, a post-office vil. in the par. of Tullanisken, bar. of Dungannon, co. Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles N.N.E. of Dungannon.

NEWMILLS, a hmlt. in the par. of Ross, bar. of East Carberry, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. In the vicinity is a large cromlech.

NEWMILLS, a hmlt. in the par. of Fordyce, co. Banff, Scotland, 3 miles S.W. of Portsoy. It is situated near the coast, which is here very bold and rocky, with the exception of the bays of Portsoy and Sandend.

NEWMILLS, or TORRY, a vil. in the par. of Torryburn, co. Fife, Scotland, 5 miles W. of Dunfermline, and 21 from Edinburgh. It is situated on the Frith of Forth, and formerly had a pier, of which traces exist.

NEWMILNS, a vil. in the par. of Loudoun, co. Ayr, Scotland, 7 miles E. of Kilmarnock. It is the terminus of a short branch line from the Glasgow and South-Western railway. It is situated on the river Irvine, and was made a burgh of barony in 1490 by James IV. under the earls of Loudoun. It is governed by two bailies, a chancellor, treasurer, fiscal, and 15 common councillors. The town, which is ancient, is well built, and is now a very considerable manufacturing place. It contains a branch office of the Western Bank, a subscription library, gas works, &c. The inhabitants are to a great extent employed in hand-loom weaving. There are Established, Free, and United Presbyterian churches, all of which are of recent erection; also a parochial school and a Sabbath evening school. Near the centre of the town stand the ruins of an old castle, said to have been erected about the same time as that of Edinburgh. About 1½ mile from the town is Loudoun Castle, a castellated pile, surrounded by natural woods and artificial plantations; and within a short distance from the mansion is the ancient parish kirk of Loudoun. Fairs are held on the first Thursday in February, third Wednesday in May, fourth Thursday in August, first Wednesday in September, and fourth Wednesday in October.

NEWMINSTER-ABBEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Morpeth, W. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, half a mile W. of Morpeth. It is situated in a small valley on the river Wansbeck. It had formerly a Cistercian abbey, founded in 1198 by Ranulph de Merlay, which at the Dissolution had a revenue of £140 10*s.* 4*d.* Of this structure only a part of the northern gateway remains. The Morpeth foxhounds are kennelled here. There are corn and woollen mills.

NEW-MOAT, a par. in the hund. of Dungleddy, co. Pembroke, 10 miles from Haverfordwest, its post town, and the same distance from Newport. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Sefeynfey. The houses are much scattered, and near the village are the ruins of a house of Edward I.'s time, formerly the seat or the Scourfields. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £130. The church is an ancient structure.

NEWNES, a tnshp. in the par. of Ellesmere, co. Salop, near Ellesmere.

NEWNHAM, a par., post and market town, in the hund. of Westbury, co. Gloucester, 11 miles S.W. of Gloucester, and 114 W. by N. of London. It is a station on the South Wales railway. The town is situated on an eminence overlooking the river Severn, near the ferry where Henry II. received Strongbow after the conquest of Ireland. It is a polling-place and petty sessions town, and returned members to parliament in Edward I.'s time. It was chartered by King John, whose state sword is still kept here, and is now governed by two constables in lieu of a mayor, &c. There are a branch bank, savings-bank, and town hall, in which last the county courts are held monthly on a Wednesday. Petty sessions for the Forest of Dean are held at the "Bear" hotel fortnightly. The lord of the manor holds a court-leet annually. An extensive trade is done in bark, timber, coal, slate, and some coasting trade is carried on. There is a quay which is accessible for ships of 150 tons, and ship-building affords employment to some of the inhabitants. The river is here subject to a sudden rise called the "bore," or "eagre," which happens occasionally at the flow of the tide. Glass was made here in the reign of Charles I. In the neighbourhood are extensive iron and coal mines, the produce of which is conveyed by the Berkeley canal and the Bullo Pill railway, which here passes through a tunnel 1,060 yards long into the Forest of Dean. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £201 5*s.* The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £140. The church, which is situated on the cliff, is dedicated to St. Peter. It is an ancient stone structure, with a modern square embattled tower containing a clock and six bells. The interior of the church contains a font carved with the effigies of the twelve apostles. There are various charities. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. There is a National school. Here was formerly a Norman castle, built as one of the fortresses on the Welsh frontier, and garrisoned for Charles I. by Wyntoun, who gave it up to Colonel Massie. Newnham Park and Hill House are the principal residences. The manor is in the possession of the devisees and trust of John James, Esq. Market day is Friday. Cattle fairs are held on 11th June and 18th October.

NEWNHAM, a par. in the hund. of Basingstoke, co. Hants, 4½ miles N.E. of Basingstoke, its post town, and 2 from the Winchfield railway station. The village, which is of small extent, and is wholly agricultural, is situated on the line of the South-Western railway. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Maplederwell annexed, in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £400, in the patron. of Queen's College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has recently been restored. Lord Dorchester is lord of the manor. There is a National school, established in 1840.

NEWNHAM, a par. in the hund. of Cashio, or lib. of St. Alban's, co. Herts, 3 miles N. of Baldock, its railway station and post town, and 7 E. of Shefford. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Irvel, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £97. The church, dedicated to St. Vincent, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing one bell. There is a free school.

NEWNHAM, a par. in the hund. of Faversham, lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 7 miles S.E. of Sittingbourne, its post town, and 5 S.W. of Faversham railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. It is situated on the road from Maidstone to Faversham. A portion of the land is in hop-grounds. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £180. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient structure, containing a mural table to the Hulse family. There is a place of worship for the Independents. The Right Hon. S. R. Lushington is lord of the manor.

NEWNHAM, a par. in the hund. of Fawsley, co. Northampton, 2 miles S. of Daventry, its post town, and 3½ W. of the Weedon station on the London and North-Western railways. The village is situated on the river Nen, and on the high road from Northampton to Banbury. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture, and a few females in lace-making. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Badby, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church is dedicated to St. Michael, and has an embattled and spired tower containing a clock and six bells. The church has several stained windows. There is a Sunday-school for both sexes, endowed with an annuity of £4. T. R. Thornton, Esq., of Brockhall, is lord of the manor. Thomas Randolph, the dramatist, was born here in 1605.

NEWNHAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Pontesbury, co. Salop, 5 miles S.W. of Shrewsbury.

NEWNHAM. a tnshp. in the par. of Aston Cantlow, co. Warwick, 4 miles N.W. of Stratford-on-Avon. It is situated near the Birmingham canal.

NEWNHAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Lindridge, lower div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, co. Worcester, 4 miles N.E. of Tenbury. It is a station on the Tenbury and Bewdley branch of the Shrewsbury and Hereford railway. It is situated near the river Rea.

NEWNHAM-MURREN, a par. in the hund. of Langtree, co. Oxford, 1 mile S.E. of Wallingford, its post town, and 3½ miles from the Wallingford-road station on the Great Western railway. The village, which is small, is situated on the banks of the Thames, under the Chiltern hills. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Stoke, North, in the dioc. of Oxford, joint val. £568, in the patron. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to St. Mary, and has recently been restored. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum.

NEWNHAM-PADDOX, a hmlt. in the par. of Monks-Kirby, co. Warwick, 5 miles N.W. of Rugby. It is situated near Watling Street, where it crosses the Fosse Way. It is a meet for the Atherstone hounds.

NEWNHAM-REGIS, or KING'S NEWNHAM, a par. in the Rugby div. of the hund. of Knightlow, co. Warwick, 4 miles W. by N. of Rugby. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Avon and the Oxford canal, which last passes through the north-eastern angle of the parish. In the village is a once celebrated bath, supplied with water from a chalybeate spring. The living is a vic. annexed to the rect.* of Church Lawford, in the dioc. of Worcester. The church is an ancient edifice, dedicated to St. John the Baptist.

NEWNTON, LONG, a par. in the hund. of Malmesbury, co. Wilts, 1½ mile E. of Tetbury, in Gloucestershire, and 4 miles N.W. of Malmesbury. It was called by the Saxons Newantune, and had right of common granted by King Athelstane. The parish is bounded on the W. by a branch of the river Avon. The village, which is small, and wholly agricultural, is situated on the road from Gloucester to Portsmouth. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £365, with a glebe of 23 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £370. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a modern structure, except the tower, rebuilt at the expense of the landholders. The peal of bells has recently been increased to six. There is a village school, supported by subscription. The Right Hon. Thomas H. S. Sotheron Estcourt, M.P., is lord of the manor.

NEWNTON, NORTH, a par. and tnshp. in the hund. of Swanborough, co. Wilts, 8 miles S.E. of Devizes, and 4 S.W. of Pewsey. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Avon. The par. contains the tythgs. of Hilcott and Rainscombe, with Overton Heath. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £176. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient structure, with a square tower. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel.

NEW-PARK, a seat in the hund. of Potterne, co. Wilts, at Roundaway Hill, near Devizes. It was built by Wyatt, for the Suttons, and contains a valuable collection of pictures, by Gainsborough, and other ancient masters.

NEW-PARKS, an ext. par. place in the borough and co. Leicester, 1 mile N.W. of Leicester. There are also numerous seats of this name in various parts of Ireland.

NEW PASSAGE, the ferry from Devonport, co. Devon, to Tor Point. It is situated near the mouth of the river Tamar, by which a basin is formed, extending nearly 4 miles in length, by 1½ mile in breadth, called the Bay of Hamoaze.

NEW PASSAGE, the ferry over the Severn, 10 miles N. by W. of Bristol, co. Gloucester. It was at this point that Charles I. escaped from the Parliamentarians after his flight from Ragland Castle, and is now crossed by the line of the South Wales railway, which has a station here.

NEWPORT, a par., seaport, and market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the West Medina lib., Isle of Wight, div. of co. Hants, 5 miles S. of Cowes, 7 S.W. of Ryde, and 82 S.W. from London. It is situated on a gentle elevation, and is bounded on the E. by the chief branch of the river Medina, and on the W. by a small stream which joins the latter at the quay, when it becomes navigable to the Solent sea-channel at Cowes. Newport is a flourishing and rising town, and is a polling-place and the capital of the island. Its prosperity was greatly accelerated by the decay of the adjoining and more ancient town of Carisbrooke, which was formerly a market town, but was not so well situated for commerce as Newport. It was first chartered by Richard de Rivers, or Redvers, Earl of Devon, in the reign of Henry II., and the Countess Isabella de Fortibus, who called it the new borough of Medina, and invested the burgesses with all the market tolls, and other privileges. Henry VII. granted to the corporation the petty customs within all the ports and creeks of the island, which charter was confirmed by Edward VI. and Queen Elizabeth. The borough was first incorporated by James I., and received the grant of a further charter from Charles I. The town is now governed by a mayor, 6 aldermen, and 18 councillors, and is divided into two wards. The old town consists of five principal streets, which are crossed by three others at right angles, besides several rows of modern villas. The streets are well paved, and lighted with gas, and contain many shops, &c. There are two banks, a savings-bank, concert and assembly rooms, masonic hall, mechanics' institutes, gas-works, museum, and guildhall. This last is a Grecian structure of the Ionic order, erected in 1816, from designs by Nash, at an expense of £10,000. The upper part comprises the townhall, council chamber, and other offices; and the basement forms an excellent market-place. A brisk trade is done in iron, timber, and malt, and an extensive export trade in flour and wheat. Much local business is transacted in the sale of general provisions, for which there is a brisk demand from the neighbouring rural districts. The manufactories consist of lace-making, mats, brushes, and lute strings. The magistrates meet at the townhall every Saturday, and sessions for the island occur quarterly. The gaol, situated in Holyrood-street, has recently been converted into a police station. The municipal and parliamentary boundaries of the borough are coextensive, and comprised in 1861, 7,934 inhabitants; while the parish of Newport contained only 3,819. It first returned representatives to parliament in the 23rd year of Edward I., and then not again until the 27th of Elizabeth, from which period it has constantly sent two members, the mayor being the returning officer. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £175, in the gift of Queen's College, Oxford. The church, which was originally built in the reign of Henry II., was dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket, and was the burial-place of Elizabeth, Charles I.'s daughter, and of Sir Edward Horsey, Captain of the Isle of Wight, whose monument bears date 1582. The church has been entirely rebuilt within the last few years, his late Royal Highness the Prince Consort having laid the foundation stone on the 24th of August, 1854. The present structure is in the early English style of architecture, with a lofty tower containing a peal of eight bells. There are also two other churches, both of modern erection—viz., St. John's, at Node Hill, and St. Paul's, in Cross Lane. There are clerical and popular libraries, besides reading-rooms, and a museum of Natural History and local antiquities, open to the public on Saturdays. The parochial charities produce about £216 per annum. There are almshouses and several benevolent and provident clubs. The grammar school was founded in 1612; and here Charles I. negotiated with the parliamentary commissioners in 1648. The school-house has recently been enlarged and improved, at the expense of the Rev. A. Wallace, M.A., chaplain of the corporation. There are places of worship for the Independents, Wesleyans, Baptists, Roman Catholics, and Unitarians; also National, British, and infant schools. Newport is the birth-place of James, a divine and antiquary, who wrote the "Corruptions of Scripture." Near the town are the house of industry for the poor of the island, 300 feet by 27, built in 1770, Parkhurst barracks and infirmary, with accommodation for 3,000 soldiers, the house of correction, and Carisbrooke Castle. Newport is the head-quarters of the island militia. Market days are on Wednesday and Saturday for corn and provisions, and every alternate Wednesday for the sale of cattle. Fairs are held at Whitsuntide and Michaelmas; also a statute fair at the latter date for the hiring of servants, here called "bargain days."

NEWPORT, a seaport, market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, partly in the par. of St. Woollos, and partly in that of Christchurch, Upper div. of Wentlloogc hund., co. Monmouth, 3 miles from Caerleon, 12 from Cardiff, and 28 from Bristol, to which last steamers ply daily, taking from two to three hours, according to tide, which here sometimes rises to a height of 40 feet; and to Cork twice or thrice a month. It is the junction station of several railways, which here meet or pass through the town—viz. the South Wales, the Western Valleys, Eastern Valleys, and the Newport and Hereford lines; besides a fifth, connecting it with Bristol, now in course of formation. A canal runs to Pontypool, joining the Abergavenny and Brecon canal, while a second runs parallel with the Western Valleys railway as far as Crumlin. It is first described by Giraldus Cambrensis, who calls it Novus Burgus, or New Town, in contradistinction to the ancient city of Caerleon, out of whose declining greatness it arose. It was subsequently denominated by the Welsh, Castell Newydd, or Newcastle, from the fortress erected here by Robert Earl of Gloucester, natural son of Henry I., who, on obtaining the lordship of Monmouth in right of his wife Maud, daughter of Robert Fitzhamon, erected the three castles of Bristol, Cardiff, and Newport. In the year 1173, Henry II. having deprived Prince Jorwerth ap Owain of a great part of his possessions, the Welsh rose in arms, and taking advantage of his absence in France, attacked the castle, which was strongly garrisoned, but failing to take it, they carried fire and sword along the banks of the Severn and the Wye to the gates of Hereford and Gloucester. The castle and town subsequently came into the possession of Richard de Clare, Earl of Hereford, and descended to the Despencers. It continued in this family till the attainder of Edward third Duke of Buckingham, when the castle and lordship were seized by Henry VIII. It was restored to Hugh de Audley, and came by marriage to Ralph Earl of Stafford. It would appear from Leland that the town was at this time surrounded by walls, and that three of the gates were standing in his time. A large one of stone stood near the bridge and castle, another near the church, and a third in the centre of the High Street. The sites of those adjoining the bridge and church may still be traced, and the central one was only taken down about the year 1808, but of the walls no vestiges remain. Its charter of incorporation, which had been originally granted by Edward II., was confirmed by Queen Elizabeth; and another was obtained in the 21st of James I. The town is famous in modern times for the attack made on it by the Chartists, under the leadership of John Frost, a magistrate, during the night of the 4th November, 1839. On this occasion the mayor, Mr., now Sir Thomas, Phillips acted with remarkable courage and decision, but failing to persuade the misguided mob to relinquish their desperate designs, he read the Riot Act from the windows of the Westgate Hotel, and having received a wound in the arm while so employed, ordered the soldiers to fire, which effectually dispersed the rioters, who amounted to some 10,000, while the defenders were 28 soldiers, and a few special constables.—Newport is now a flourishing and rapidly increasing port on the right bank of the Usk, which is navigable for vessels of large size, and is crossed by a stone bridge, about 4 miles from its junction with the Severn. It enjoys a largely increasing traffic, owing to the enormous exportation of coal and iron from South Wales, its position being at the point where the busy and densely-populated valleys of the Usk, Afon, Ebbw, and Sirhowy rivers converge. A Harbour Act was passed some years since for the improvement of the port, and a spacious dock, covering 4½ acres, was opened in 1842, at an expense of £200,000. A still larger one, possessing an area of 7¾ acres, was opened in 1858, the original dock not being of sufficient extent for the rising commerce of the port. An Act was also obtained in 1865 for forming the Alexandra docks, which will be of much larger dimensions.—The town, in 1851, contained a population of 19,323, which in 1861 had increased to 23,249. It consists of several streets, well paved, and lighted with gas. It is somewhat irregularly built, but the numerous new buildings evince the rapid improvement of the town. The principal public buildings are the townhall, custom-house, barracks, mechanics' institute, commercial rooms, three branch banks, a savings bank, and the King's Head and Westgate hotels. Commercial-street commences near the bridge, and advances up a declivity called Stow-hill, the summit of which is crowned by the parish church of St. Woollos. There are several other streets containing good shops, but the chief bustle of trade is, however, to be found along the wharves. Within the last few years the well-built suburb of Maindee has grown up on the opposite side of the river. In the main street is a sitting statue of the late Sir C. Morgan, by J. Thomas. The inhabitants are supplied with water under an Act of Parliament, obtained in the 7th of George IV. The union workhouse has been rebuilt on a very extensive scale. There are six or seven ship-building yards in full work, several very large timber-yards in different parts of the town; also breweries, iron foundries, large anchor and chain cable manufactories; a shot manufactory, iron-factories and sail-lofts, which last are principally erected on the side of the canal. The quantity of pig-iron, castings, bar and bolt-iron, rolled iron for armour-plates, tin plates, wire, and coals, shipped from this port exceeds that of any other in the principality. The imports consist chiefly of provisions, and other articles of general consumption, and of very large quantities of timber from Canada and Nova Scotia.—The Act of 5 and 6 William IV., cap. 76, divided the borough into two wards, and made the municipal boundaries co-extensive with those for parliamentary purposes.. It returns one member to parliament, conjointly with Monmouth and Usk. The mayor of Monmouth is the returning officer at elections, but the mayor of Newport sits as his deputy in this town. The borough is governed under the Municipal Corporations' Act, by a mayor, 6 aldermen, and 18 councillors, with the style of "mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of the borough of Newport," and has a revenue of £1,070. The mayor and ex-mayor are justices of the peace, with several others. Petty sessions are held before the borough magistrates thrice a week, on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, and prisoners are committed for trial at the county sessions, or assizes.—A view of the town and St. Woollos church, backed up by the Blorenge and Turn Barlwm mountains, is commanded from the neighbourhood of the docks, which are situated in the district of Pillgwenlly, or Pill.—The town gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. of Monmouth, and dioc. of Llandaff. The living is a vic.* with the vic.* of Bettws and the cur. of St. Mark's annexed, in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £278, in the patron. of the bishop. The parochial church of St. Woollos, which occupies a situation on Stow Hill, is a venerable structure with a tower, said to have been built by Henry III. as a reward to the inhabitants for their successful resistance to Simon Montfort, Earl of Leicester. It was formerly ornamented with a statue, part of which is still preserved. The church was restored in 1855, and exhibits specimens of various styles of architecture. The principal feature in the building is the Norman chapel of St. Mary, which is connected with the nave by a Romanesque archway, adorned with curious Saxon carving, and with the Norman ornaments of billet and chevron; and having this peculiarity, that the inner order rests upon two capitals of rude foliage, supported by a pair of large detached columns. It contains several ancient monuments, one of an armed knight beneath a canopy, supported by three pillars, probably of the time of James I.; another of a mutilated knight in armour, and a female figure, apparently of the 14th century, besides others in a more mutilated condition. The churchyard commands a prospect of the surrounding country, including the town of Caerleon, and the tower of Christchurch, with the wide expanse of the Bristol Channel, the estuary of the Usk and the Severn lying below, and the lofty hills of Somerset and Gloucestershire in the distance. Besides the parish church, there is a commodious district church, dedicated to St. Paul, erected in 1837, in Commercial-street; and Holy Trinity church, in the neighbourhood of the docks, to which a district has been annexed, and an endowment provided by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. There are places of worship for Independents, Wesleyans, Baptists, and Society of Friends, and a Roman Catholic chapel, of considerable pretensions. The almshouses have an endowment of £25 per annum.—Newport is the head of a Poor-law Union, embracing 38 parishes. It is the seat of new County Court and superintendent registry districts.—The principal antiquities are the remains of the castle mentioned above, comprising the keep, gateway, hall, and murenger's house, part of which is now converted into a brewery; also the remains of a friary, consisting of a chapel and refectory. At Twyn Gwnlliw, not far from the town, is a Roman camp and barrow. The Duke of Beaufort is lord of the manor, and receives the tolls. Market days are Wednesday and Saturday. Fairs are held on Ascension Day, 30th April, 19th September, and 6th November.

NEWPORT, a par., post, and market town in South Bradford hund., co. Salop, 8 miles N.E. of Wellington, 11½ S.W. of Stafford, and 19 E. by N. of Shrewsbury. It is a station on the Shropshire Union railway. The town, which is situated on the Shrewsbury canal and the river Strine, near the Roman road, Watling-street, is a polling and petty sessions town. It formerly belonged to the Audleys, and Lords Newport, and gives the title of viscount to Earl Bradford. It obtained its first charter under Henry I., and had various privileges granted by succeeding sovereigns until the time of Edward VI. The streets are well paved and lighted with gas, and contain many good shops. There are two commercial banks, a savings-bank, gas-works, a mechanics' institute, and ancient market cross, and townhall. In this last building petty sessions are held fortnightly for the Newport division of the hundred, and the county court sits monthly. The poor-law guardians meet once a fortnight at the board-room, in the union poor-house, erected in 1855. The Poor-law Union of Newport comprises 16 parishes or townships, 10 of which are in the county of Salop, and 6 in that of Stafford. The corporation consists of a high steward, deputy steward, two bailiffs, and 28 burgesses. The principal industries are agricultural implements and machinery works; also turning. In the vicinity are collieries, iron-mines, and limestone quarries, giving occupation to many of the inhabitants of the town. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £275, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure, formerly belonging to Shrewsbury Abbey. It was alienated by permission of Henry VI., to Thomas Draper, by whom it was made collegiate in 1441. The church, which has a square tower, was repaired in 1838, at a cost of £2,000. The parochial charities produce about £1,760 per annum. There are two sets of almshouses; those known as the town almshouses for four poor females, were originally founded in 1446 by William Glover, and rebuilt in 1836 by voluntary contributions; the other almshouses were founded by William Adams in 1656. There is a free grammar school, with four exhibitions to the universities; also National, English, and infant schools. Under the provisions of an Act of Parliament, passed in the 4th year of George III., a trust was formed for enclosing 112 acres of waste land, the proceeds to be appropriated to the keeping of the streets, repairs of the market hall and market cross, &c.; also a bridge-trust, formed in 1750, for like purposes. The Independents, Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Roman Catholics, have each a place of worship. At a short distance from the church are Lilleshall Abbey ruins. Tom Brown, a witty but licentious poet of the 17th century, was a native of this town. Market days are Saturday for the sale of corn and provisions, and every alternate Tuesday for live stock. Fairs are held on the first Tuesday in February, the Saturday prior to Palm Sunday, 28th May, 27th July, 25th September, and 10th December, principally for live stock.

NEWPORT, formerly a representative borough in the par. of St. Stephen, N. div. of the hund. of East, co. Cornwall, 214 miles W. by S. of London. It is situated opposite Launceston, on a branch of the river Tamar, and appears anciently to have been joined with that borough under the name of Dunheved. It separately returned two members to parliament since the reign of Edward VI., but was disfranchised by the Reform Act, and incorporated with Launceston.

NEWPORT, a hmlt. in the par. of Bishop's Tawton, hund. of South Molton, co. Devon, half a mile S. by E. of Barnstaple, of which it may be considered a populous suburb. The village, which has a post-office, is situated on rising ground, commanding views of Barnstaple Bay and the river Taw. It contains a brewery, foundry, and spinning-mill, and is surrounded by many family seats and modern villas. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £90. in the patron. of the Vicar of Bishop's Tawton. The church was erected in 1828, at the cost of £1,300. Half the sittings are free.

NEWPORT, a par. in the hund. of Uttlesford, co. Essex, 9 miles N. of Bishop-Stortford, its post town, and 3 S. of Saffron-Walden. It is a station on the Cambridge section of the Great Eastern railway. This place, which is of ancient date, is situated on the river Cam, and on the direct road from London to Cambridge. The par. includes the hmlt. of Birchanger, and belonged to Earl Harold prior to his coronation as king. The village derived its name from an extensive pool at the S. end of the street called Newport-Pond. It was formerly a market town, and had a castle, and ancient market cross, which have entirely disappeared; but there are still traces of a hospital, founded by Richard de Newport in the reign of King John, and subsequently converted into a private mansion. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is clay and gravel on a substratum of chalk. At the northern extremity of the village is a spacious bridewell. It gives name to a deanery with Sampford, in the archdeac. of Colchester and dioc. of Rochester. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £143. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, has a lofty western tower, crowned with embattled turrets, and containing five bells. It was enlarged and restored a few years back. The register dates from 1562. The parochial charities produce about £343 per annum, of which £290 goes to Franklard's free grammar school. There are National and Independent schools The Independents and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. Shortgrove is the principal residence. W. C. Smith, Esq., J.P., is lord of the manor. Fairs are held on the Thursday in Easter week, and on the 17th November.

NEWPORT, a vil. in the par. of Forgan, co. Fife, Scotland, 8 miles N.E. of Cupar, and 2¾ W. of Tayport. It is a bathing-place on Newport harbour, and commands a view of the Frith of Tay at the ferry to Dundee. There are two fixed lights, between 10 and 16 feet in height, visible for 7 miles. There are some residences in the vicinity. In the village are a Free church, Independent chapel, and a school.

NEWPORT, a hmlt. in the tythg. of Wrantage and par. of North Curry, co. Somerset, 5 miles E. by S. of Taunton, and 6 W. of Langport. It is situated near the Chard canal, and was formerly a borough, but is now a very insignificant place containing only three or four houses.

NEWPORT, or TREFDRAETH, a par., seaport, and market town, in the hund. of Kemess, co. Pembroke, 10 miles from Cardigan, of which it is a subport. The harbour of Newport at the mouth of the river Nevern, is small, and has a bar of sand at its entrance extending for near a mile, which renders it accessible only at high water. It is said to have been founded by the followers of Martin de Tours, first lord of Cemaes, who, having conquered this territory from the Welsh, erected it into a lordship-marcher, and whose son William built the castle of Newport, which he made the head of his barony, and invested it with many privileges. The town, which is situated in a valley, surrounded by wood, was formerly much more extensive than at present, consisting of several streets, intersecting each other at right angles. The period of its greatest prosperity was the beginning of the 16th century, when the woollen manufacture was extensively carried on, but owing to the great mortality occasioned by a plague, it rapidly decayed, and even its market was discontinued. It is now an irregularly built village, neither lighted nor paved, but interspersed with trees. It is a corporated town by prescription, but is not included in any of the schedules of the Municipal Corporation Act. The greater part of its trade has been diverted to the neighbouring town of Fishguard; but some business is still done in the export of corn, butter, and slates, in exchange for timber, limestone, coal, and culm, which are imported. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £216. The church, which is said to be of the 13th century, has been modernised, and is very plain. The Calvinistic Methodists have a chapel. The old castle, with a tower of the 13th century, was, until recently, a ruin, overlooking the bay and town, but is now incorporated with a modern dwelling-house, built by T. D. Lloyd, Esq., the lord of the manor. Friday is market day. Fairs are held on the 27th June and 16th October, chiefly for horses, cattle, and sheep.

NEWPORT, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Berkeley, co. Gloucester, 16 miles from Gloucester. In the days of stage coaches it was the half-way house between Gloucester and Bristol, and contained several good inns. It is now an inconsiderable place. There is a place of worship for Independents.

NEWPORT, a tnshp. in the par. of Eastrington, wap. of Howdenshire, East Riding co. York, 2 miles N.E. of the Staddlethorpe station on the Hull and Selby railway, and 8 E. of Howden. The village, which is large, is situated on the Market Weighton canal, and near the river Humber. It is chiefly agricultural. At the commencement of the present century this was an uncultivated morass, called Walling Fen, but is now reclaimed. Part of the land is extremely valuable on account of a bed of clay of very superior quality being discovered, which is dug to the depth of 30 feet from the surface. There are extensive brick and tile kilns. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have places of worship. There is a school for both sexes. A corn market is held on Thursday evenings. It is united with Walling Fen to form a township.

NEWPORT, a hmlt. in the par. of Middlesborough, lib. of West Langbaurgh, North Riding co. York, 2 miles from Middlesborough, and 5 N.E. of Stockton. It is a station on the Stockton and Darlington section of the North-Eastern railway. It is situated near the mouth of the river Tees, in a district abounding in collieries, iron-foundries, and potteries.

NEWPORT, a hund. in the co. of Bucks, contains the market towns of Newport-Pagnell and Fenny Stratford, and the pars. of Astwood-Bury, Bletchley, Bradwell Abbey, Bradwell, Cold-Brayfield, Bow-Brickhill, Great and Little Brickhill, Broughton, Calverton, Castle-Thorpe, Chichley, Clifton-Reynes, North Crawley, Emberton, Gayhurst, Hanslope, Hardmead, Haversham, Lathbury, Lavendon, Great and Little Lindford, Loughton, Milton-Keynes, Moulsoe, Newton-Blossomville, Newton-Longville, Newport-Pagnell, Olney, Ravenstone, Sherrington, Simpson, Stanton-Bury, Stoke-Goldington, Stoke-Hammond, Stony-Stratford, Tyrringham, Walton, Wavendon, Weston-underwood, Willen, Great and Little Woolstone, Wolverton, Woughton-on-the-Green, and part of Shenley, comprising an area of 75,770 acres.

NEWPORT DIVISION, in the hund. of South Bradford, co. Salop, contains the pars. of Bolas-Magna, Chetwynd, Egmond, Kinnersley, Lilleshall, Longford, Newport, Preston-on-the-Wild-Moors, and part of Sheriff-Hales, comprising an area of 28,830 acres.

NEWPORT-PAGNELL, a par., post and market town in Newport hund., co. Bucks, 4 miles from the Wolverton station on the London and Birmingham railway, 15 N.E. of Buckingham, and 50 N.W. of London. It is situated on a branch of the Grand Trunk canal, and at the confluence of the rivers Ouse and Ouzle. The latter river is here crossed by a cast-iron bridge at the entrance to the town by the London road, and the former by a stone one on the road from Northampton. The distinguishing suffix to its name is derived from the family of Paganell, to whom the manor came from William Fitz-Ausculph, a powerful baron who held it in the reign of William Rufus. It subsequently descended to the Someries, Kirkhams, &c. Here was formerly a castle of great strength, which at the commencement of the civil war was garrisoned by the royalists, and was taken for the parliament by the earl of Essex in 1643. In 1645 the town was garrisoned by Sir Samuel Luke, supposed to have been the "Hudibras" of Butler. It is a petty session and polling town for the county, and a place of considerable importance, containing a population in 1861 of 3,676. The streets, which are well paved and lighted with gas, contain many good houses and shops. There are two banks, a savings-bank, reading-rooms, circulating library, gas-works, and police station. Petty sessions for the three hundreds of Newport are held at the "Anchor" hotel in High-street, and a manorial court occurs once in two years at which constables are appointed. The manufacture of bone lace was formerly carried on to a considerable extent, the market for its sale being on Wednesday, but it is now inconsiderable. A large quantity of coals is imported from Staffordshire by means of a branch of the Grand Junction canal, and some persons are employed as wool sorters, and in a paper-mill. The assizes for the county were occasionally held here from the reign of Henry III. to that of Henry VI. The tithes were commuted for land under Enclosure Acts in 1806 and 1807. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £250, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient and spacious structure, standing upon an eminence, with a square pinnacled tower containing a peal of eight bells. The church was repaired some years past at a cost of £6,000. It contains a monument with an epitaph by Cowper to T. Hamilton. The charities produce about £641 per annum, of which £126 is the produce of the estate. There is an hospital founded by John de Somerie in 1280, which was afterwards refounded by Anne of Denmark, queen of James I., for six poor persons of either sex; also Rivis's almshouses, founded in 1763 for seven poor persons, and the Independents' almshouses for four poor persons. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Baptists have places of worship. There are two charity schools, one of which is endowed for 20 girls, from a bequest by Dr. Lewis Atterbury, brother of the Bishop of Rochester; also National, infant, and British schools. The last were established in 1811, and improved and enlarged in 1845 at an expense of £879. The poor-law union of Newport-Pagnell comprises 45 parishes and townships. It is also the seat of new County Court and superintendent registry districts. Tickford Abbey, at a short distance from the town, is an old mansion built on the site of a Cluniac cell founded by the Paganells, and has lately been thoroughly restored and improved. The monastery and lands, valued at £126 17*s.*, were given by Henry VIII. to Cardinal Wolsey. Humphrey, a divine, was born in this parish, as was also Dr. F. Atterbury, the celebrated Bishop of Rochester, who was born at Middleton Hall. Market days are Wednesday and Saturday. Fairs are held on the 22nd February, 21st March, 22nd April, 22nd June, 29th August, 22nd October, and 22nd December. Races take place in August.

NEWPORT-PRATT, a post-office and market vil. in the par. and bar. of Burrishoole, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 10 miles W.N.W. of Castlebar, and 176 from Dublin. It is situated on the Newport river and the road from Castlebar to Achill and Belmullet. It is much resorted to in the summer for the country around, and for the excellence of its bathing.. It contains the parish church, a Roman Catholic chapel, courthouse, police station, dispensary, and a good hotel. The quays are commodious and extensive. Newport House is the seat of Sir R. O'Donnell, Bart., the proprietor of the place. The Newport Poor-law Union contains 10 electoral divs. in co. Mayo. Grana Uile's castle, Rochfleet, and Carrickaneady are objects of interest in the vicinity. Thursday is market day. Fairs are held on the 8th June, 1st August, 11th November, and 20th December.

NEWPORT-TIP, a small post and market town in the par. of Kilvolane, bar. of Owney and Arra, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 27 miles N.W. of Cashel, and 109 from Dublin. It is situated on the river Milkerne, and on the road from Killaloe to Abington, near the Keeper Mountains. It contains a church, Roman Catholic chapel, bridewell, barracks, and a dispensary, which last is within the Nenagh poor-law union. Castlewaller is the seat of the Wallers, who are the proprietors of the town. The Earl of Roden takes title of baron from this place. Fairs are held on 27th April, 29th May, 21st July, and 23rd October.

NEW QUAY, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Columb-Minor, hund. of Pyder, co. Cornwall, 7 miles W. by S. of St. Columb. It is situated in Towan Bay, on the shore of the Bristol Channel, and has a small harbour and pier. It is chiefly frequented by fishermen, and is a coastguard station. In the vicinity are several stone quarries, and a lead mine was opened some years ago. The Baptists and Wesleyans have places of worship. The beach is a firm smooth sand, and the cliffs on this part of the coast are lofty and precipitous.

NEW QUAY, a vil. in the par. of Llanllwchaiarn, co. Cardigan, 5 miles S.W. of Aberaeron. It is situated under New Head, and is a coastguard station. It has a good harbour, which is a sub-port to Cardigan. The resident inhabitants are chiefly fishermen, but it is frequented in summer as a watering-place.

NEWQUAY, a fishing vil. in the bar. of Burren, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, near Burren. It is situated on Galway Bay, and has a small harbour.

NEWRATH BRIDGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Rathnew, bar. of Newcastle, co. Wicklow, Ireland, 2½ miles from Wicklow. It is a station on the Dublin, Wicklow, and Wexford railway. It is situated at the bridge over the river Vartry, near the Devil's Glen.

NEW RIVER, an artificial cut for supplying London with water, formed by Sir Hugh Myddelton in the reign of James I., at the cost of about half a million sterling. It commences at Amwell in Hertfordshire, and flowing S., receives a further supply of water from the Lea at Broxbourne, and then passing through Cheshunt and Enfield, is received into extensive reservoirs at Hornsey and Stoke Newington, where it is allowed to filter previously to being distributed by iron pipes throughout the metropolis. The amount of water supplied is somewhat under 20,000,000 gallons daily, and the original £500 shares are now worth about £19,000. Its course, which was formerly 36 miles, has been recently shortened in order to increase the fall and supply, and the great reservoir at Clerkenwell, known as the New River Head, filled up and built upon.

NEWRY, a bar. in the cos. Down and Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It contains a part of the par. of Newry, and the exempt jurisdiction of Newry and Mourne, comprising Annalong, Kilkeel, Newry, Kilcoo, and Kilmegan. The lordship is presided over by the Earl of Kilmorey, under whom are the principal vicar-general, registrar, and seneschal.

NEWRY, a par., post and market town, and parliamentary borough in the bar. of Newry and Upper Orior, co. Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. The town is a seaport of importance and a parliamentary borough, 18 miles S.E. of Armagh, and 63 from Dublin. It is situated on the Newry Navigation, which commences at Fathom and goes on to Enniskillen and Belturbet. It has stations on the Newry and Enniskillen railway and on the Warrenpoint and Rosstrevor line. It consists of two detached districts lying along the Newry river, or canal. The surface is mountainous and boggy, but the soil for the most part good. The highest summit among the Newry mountains is 1,385 feet above sea-level. The prevailing rocks are granite and porphyry. The living is a vic. in the exempt jurisdiction of Newry and Mourne, val. £400. The church was built in 1811 by W. Needham, Esq., Sir Trevor Corry, Earl Kilmorey, and General Needham. There is likewise a chapel-of-ease, which was formerly the parish church, also several Presbyterian, Wesleyan Methodist, and Roman Catholic places of worship, and numerous schools, including the model school. Among the numerous residences in the parish are Mount Kearney, Ellenvale, Ashgrove, Loughorné House, Glenvale, Temple Hill, Greenwood Park, Ashton, Fathom Park, and Derrymore House. The two portions of the town are connected by several bridges. The modern part of Newry, called the Low Ground, consists of a collection of houses and streets, and the whole place has been much improved of late years. Among the public buildings are the Roman Catholic chapel of Dromore, the townhall, market-house, court house, bridewells, three commercial banks, a savings-bank, custom-house, barracks, assembly rooms, dispensary and fever hospital. At the N. end of the town stands a monument to Trevor Corry. The trade of Newry is very important, as it ranks among the first seaports of Ulster, and has as its sub-ports Warrenspoint, Ardglass, Killileigh, Killough, Newcastle, and Quail. The principal exports are grain, provision, eggs and cattle, and the imports fruit and timber. It contains several corn and flour mills, distilleries, breweries, and tanneries, also gas and water works. The Newry Examiner and the Commercial Telegraph are published in the town, which enjoyed many privileges. Among those retained is the jurisdiction of Newry and Mourne, which invests the lord of the manor with absolute episcopal power over that district. This peculiar custom arose in the foundation of an abbey in 1175 by Maurice M'Loughlin, King of Ireland. In 1543 Henry VIII. turned the abbey into a collegiate church, which was suppressed by Edward VI. and given to Sir Nicholas Bagnal, who converted it into a residence. In 1689 the Duke of Berwick, when retreating before Schomberg, set fire to the town and made much havoc. Charters of incorporation were obtained in the time of James I. and James II. The corporation consisted of a provost, free burgesses, and commonalty, but is now governed by a corps of 21 commissioners. It sent two members to the Irish parliament before the Union, and now returns one representative to the imperial parliament. Quarter and petty sessions are held in the town. The Earl Kilmorey takes the title of viscount from hence. Newry gives name to a presbytery containing Annalong, Castlebellingham, Clark's-Bridge, Cremore, Donoughmore, Drumbanagher, Dundalk, Kilkeel, Kingsmills, Markethill, Mountmorris, Mourne, Newry, Newtown, Hamilton, Pointz Pass, Ryans, Tullyallen, and Warrenspoint. The Newry Poor-law Union contains 22 electoral divisions in the counties Armagh and Down. Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday are market days. Fairs are held on 3rd April and 29th October.

NEWSAM-GREEN, a vil. in the tnshp. of Temple-Newsam, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S.E. of Leeds.

NEWSEAT, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Fergus, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 1½ mile from Inverugie. It is a station on the Formartine and Buchan section of the Great North of Scotland railway. It is situated near the river Ugie.

NEWSHAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Kirkham, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 5 miles N.W. of Preston.

NEWSHAM. See NEWSOM, co. Durham.

NEWSHAM, an ext. par. place, in the E. div. of the wap. of Yarborough, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 8 miles N. of Caistor, and 9 N.W. of Great Grimsby. Here was formerly a Gilbertine priory, founded by Peter de Gousel in the reign of Henry II., which Bishop Tanner says was the earliest of the Præmonstratensian order established in England. Its site was given to Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk, at the Dissolution.

NEWSHAM, a tnshp. partly in the par. of Kirkby-Ravensworth and partly in Barningham, wap. of West Gilling, North Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of Kirkby-Hill, and 7 N.W. of Richmond. The village, which is inconsiderable, is wholly agricultural. A large portion of the land is in wood and moor.

NEWSHAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Earsdon, E. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 1¾ mile S.W. of Blyth. At Newsham Junction is a station on the Blyth and Tyne railway. It is situated near the shore of the German Ocean, and formerly belonged to the Delavels, Cramlingtons, and others, but is now the property of Sir M. Ridley, Bart. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the collieries. There are extensive brick and tile kilns.

NEWSHAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirby-Wiske, wap. of Birdforth, North Riding co. York, 3½ miles N.W. of Thirsk. It is situated on the river Swale, near the North-Eastern railway. It is united with Breckenbrough to form a tnshp. The village is small and wholly agricultural. Dr. George Hicks, the antiquary and Saxon scholar, was born at a farm called Moorhouse in 1640.

NEWSHOLME, or NEWSHAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Wressell, Holme Beacon div. of Harthill wap., East Riding co. York, 2 miles N.W. of Howden. It is joined with Brind to form a township.

NEWSHOLME, or NEWSOME, a tnshp. in the par. of Gisburn, W. div. of Staincliff wap., West Riding co. York, 8 miles S. by E. of Settle. It is situated on the river Ribble.

NEWSHOLME, a hmlt. in the par. of Keighley, wap. of East Staincliffe, West Riding co. York, 2 miles from Keighley, and 34 W. by S. of York. It is situated in a valley under Blackstone Edge.

NEWSOM, or NEWSHAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Eaglescliffe, S.W. div. of Stockton ward, co. Durham, 3½ miles W. of Eaglescliffe, and 6 S.W. of Stockton. It is situated opposite Yarm, at the iron bridge over the river Tees. It formerly had a chapel dedicated to St. James.

NEWSOME, a hmlt. in the par. of Almondbury, West Riding co. York, 1 mile S.E. of Huddersfield.

NEWSTEAD, a vil. in the par. of Melrose, co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 1 mile E. of the town of Melrose. It is situated on the river Tweed. In the neighbourhood is a camp of Roman origin.

NEWSTEAD, a tnshp. in the par. of Bambrough, N. div. of Bambrough ward, co. Northumberland, 5½ miles S.E. of Belford. The soil is clay. The Duke of Northumberland is lord of the manor.

NEWSTEAD, a hmlt. in the par. of East Witton, wap. of West Hang, North Riding co. York, 4 miles N.W. of Masham, and 3 S.E. of Middleham. It is situated on the river Ure.

NEWSTEAD, or NEWSTEAD-ON-ANCHOLME, an ext. par. place in the S. div. of the wap. of Yarborough, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 1 mile S. of Glanford Brigg. There was formerly a Gilbertine priory, founded by Henry II. and given to the canons of Sempringham. Its revenue at the Dissolution amounted to £55 1*s.* 8*d.*

NEWSTEAD PRIORY, an ext. par. lib. in the N. div. of the wap. of Broxtow, co. Nottingham, 1 mile N. of the Linby railway station, and 6 S. of Mansfield. It is a station on the Nottingham and Mansfield section of the Midland railway, but the trains only stop on Saturdays. A priory was founded here by Henry II. for black canons about 1170. At the Dissolution its revenues were returned at £219 18*s.* 8*d.* The site was granted by Henry VIII. to Sir John Byron, in whose family the estate continued until it was sold by the late Lord Byron. In 1818 it was transferred from J. Clayton, Esq., to Colonel Wildman for the sum of £95,000, that being £45,000 less than the former gentleman gave in 1815 when Lord Byron sold it. The estate comprises about 3,226 acres, including a wooded park, with several lakes, covering nearly 67 acres and forming the sources of the river Leen. The remains of the priory form part of the present mansion, and include the abbey church, part of which is in good preservation, the great hall, Edward III.'s room, sounding gallery, and chapel, which last is now used as a bath room. The abbey was thoroughly restored in 1830. The park is now divided into farms, except in the immediate vicinity of the mansion. There are brick and lime kilns.

NEWTHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Sherburn, upper div. of Barkstone-Ash wap., West Riding co. York, 3 miles S.E. of Aberford, and 6 N. of Pontefract. The village, which is small and entirely agricultural, is situated on the Leeds and Selby railway, on which are the Micklefield and Milford Junction stations. Lord Ashtown is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

NEWTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Greasley, co. Nottingham, 7 miles N.W. of Nottingham. It is situated near the river Erewash and Nottingham canal. In the vicinity are some traces of Beauvale Priory.

NEWTIMBER, a par. in the hund. of Poynings, rape of Lewes, co. Sussex, 4 miles S.W. of Hassocks Gate railway station, and 7 N.W. of Brighton. Hurstpierpoint is its post town. The parish, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The village is situated on the road from London to Brighton, viâ Hickstead. Newtimber Place, formerly the seat of the Osbornes, is an ancient mansion of brick surrounded by a moat. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £315. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £300. The church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, had an embattled tower added to it in 1839, chiefly at the expense of the Gordon family. The windows of the church are of stained glass. William Gordon, Esq., is lord of the manor.

NEWTON, a par. in the hund. of Thriplow, co. Cambridge, 6½ miles S. of Cambridge, its post town, and 1½ mile from the Harston railway station. The parish, which is inconsiderable and wholly agricultural, is situated on the Barkway high road between Cambridge and London. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Act of Enclosure in 1798. The impropriation belongs to the Dean and Chapter of Ely. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Hauxton, in the dioc. of Ely. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, has a tower containing three bells. The church was restored in 1851, and has an ancient octagonal font. There is an endowed school. The Dean and Chapter of Ely are lords of the manor.

NEWTON, a par. in the hund. of Wisbeach, Isle of Ely, co. Cambridge, 4 miles N. of Wisbeach, its nearest railway station and post town, aud 41 from Cambridge. The village, which is small, is situated near the river Nen, and is wholly agricultural. A portion of the land is fenny. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £667. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £1,135, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient structure with a tower. The interior of the church contains an ancient font and numerous monuments of great antiquity. A college or chantry in honour of St. Mary was founded here in the reign of Henry IV. by Sir J. Colville, Knt., consisting of a warden, four chaplains, and ten poor brethren, whose lands at the Dissolution were annexed to the rectory of Newton. The charities consist of a share with Leverington. There is a free school. E. Jackson, Esq., is lord of the manor.

NEWTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Middlewich, hund. of Northwich, co. Chester, 1 mile from Middlewich, its post town, and 4 miles from Sandbach. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the Grand Trunk canal, on the banks of which are extensive salt works. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. There are brick and tile kilns. There is a grammar school. Newton Lodge is the principal residence.

NEWTON, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Prestbury, hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 5 miles N.W. of Macclesfield. It is situated on the river Bollin.

NEWTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Gosforth, co. Cumberland, 5 miles N.W. of Ravenglass.

NEWTON, a tythg. in the par. of Sturminster-Newton-Castle, co. Dorset, 1 mile S.W. of Sturminster. It is situated near the river Stour.

NEWTON, a hmlt. in the hund. of Corfe Castle, co. Dorset, 4 miles S.E. of Corfe Castle.

NEWTON, a vil. in the par. of Oystermouth, co. Glamorgan, 5 miles S.W. of Swansea. It is a decayed bathing place, and a sub-port to Swansea. The Via Julia passed in the vicinity.

NEWTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Clodock, hund. of Ewyas-Lacy, co. Hereford, 4 miles W. of Abbey Dore, its post town, and 5 W. of Pontrilas railway station. The township, which is situated on the left bank of the river Escley, is wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £80, in the patron. of the Vicar of Clodock. The church, dedicated to St. John, is a modern structure with a belfry.

NEWTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Croft, hund. of Wolphy, co. Hereford, 3½ miles N.W. of Leominster, and half a mile from the Ford station on the Shrewsbury and Hereford railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on an eminence near the river Lugg, and to the W. of the turnpike road leading from Leominster to Hereford. The views from the village are varied and extensive. The land is partly in hop-grounds. The soil is of a rich nature, with a subsoil of gravel and limestone.

NEWTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Bromyard, hund. of Broxash, co. Hereford, 2 miles S.W. of Bromyard, and 14 N.E. of Hereford.

NEWTON, a hmlt. in the hund. of Wolphy, co. Hereford, 3 miles S. of Leominster, and 10 N. of Hereford. It is situated in the fertile valley of the river Lugg, near the Leominster canal.

NEWTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Leintwardine, hund. of Wigmore, co. Hereford, 5 miles N.E. of Presteign. It is joined with Litton and Walford to form a township.

NEWTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Poulton-le-Fylde, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 2 miles S.W. of Poulton. It is situated near the coast, and is in conjunction with Hardhorn.

NEWTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Kirkby Lonsdale, ward of Lonsdale, co. Westmoreland, 3 miles S.W. of Kirkby Lonsdale, and 11 S.E. of Kendal. It is situated near the Lancashire border.

NEWTON, a tnshp. and ecclesiastical district in the par. of Manchester, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 2 miles N.E. of Manchester, within which borough it is included. The village, which is very considerable, forms a populous suburb of Manchester. The manufactures of cotton and silk, and the printing of calico are extensively carried on. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £155, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to All Saints, was rebuilt on the site of an ancient chapel at an expense of £8,000. There are places of worship for Wesleyans, Unitarians, Society of Friends, and other Dissenting communions; also National and other schools. See MANCHESTER.

NEWTON, a par. in the wap. of Aveland, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 2 miles N.W. of Folkingham, its post town, and 10 N. of the Corby railway station. The village, which is of small extent and wholly agricultural, is situated on the river Trent. There is a mineral spring in the neighbourhood. The land is nearly all arable and pasture, and in good cultivation. Stone for building is quarried. The high grounds command extensive views. The parish was enclosed in 1767, when 227 acres of glebe were allotted in lieu of tithes. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £308. The church, dedicated to St. Botolph, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing three bells. The church has been recently repaired. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a school for both sexes maintained by subscription. Sir Glynne Earle Welby, Bart., is lord of the manor.

NEWTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bywell St. Peter, E. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 3 miles N. of Stocksfield, and 7 N.E. of Hexham. It is a small agricultural place.

NEWTON, a hmlt. in the pars. of Shelford and Bingham, S. div. of Bingham wap., co. Nottingham, 2 miles N.W. of Bingham.

NEWTON, a vil. in the par. of Manorbier, co. Pembroke, 5 miles W. of Pembroke.

NEWTON, a vil. in the par. of Llanstadwell, co. Pembroke, 2 miles S.E. of Milford. It is situated on the coast of Milford Haven.

NEWTON, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Mary, co. Salop, 3 miles N.W. of Shrewsbury.

NEWTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Middle, co. Salop, 6 miles N. of Shrewsbury.

NEWTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Westbury, co. Salop, 8 miles S.W. of Shrewsbury.

NEWTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Stottesden, co. Salop, 6 miles N. of Cleobury Mortimer.

NEWTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Worfield, co. Salop, 2 miles N.E. of Bridgnorth.

NEWTON, a lib. in the par. of Blithfield, S. div. of the hund. of Pirehill, co. Stafford, 1½ mile N.W. of Blithfield, and 3 miles N.W. of Abbot's Bromley.

NEWTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Burneston, wap. of Hallikeld, North Riding co. York, 3 miles S.E. of Bedale. It is joined with Exelby and Leeming.

NEWTON, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Pickering, wap. of Pickering Lythe, North Riding co. York, 4½ miles N. by E. of Pickering, and a quarter of a mile W.

of Levisham. It is situated on the Whitby railway, near Newton Dale. The inhabitants are principally employed in agriculture. The soil is of a sandy nature, with limestone intermixed. The subsoil is of limestone rock and greystone. The charities consist of an annuity of £3 for the support of aged widows. There is a chapel-of-ease, also a parochial school for both sexes, with a small endowment bequeathed by Richard Poad in 1726. The Sunday-schools are held at the chapel-of-ease. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. The Rev. R. Hill is lord of the manor.

NEWTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Ledsham, ward of Upper Barkstone-Ash, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N. of Pontefract.

NEWTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Slaidburn, W. div. of the wap. of Staincliff, West Riding co. York, 7 miles N. of Clitheroe, and 15 S.W. of Settle. It is situated on the river Hodder. There is a National school for both sexes, in which Divine service is performed on Sundays.

NEWTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Wakefield, West Riding co. York, 2 miles from Wakefield.

NEWTON. See NEWTON-MOOR, co. Chester.

NEWTON, a par. in the N.E. district of co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 5 miles S.E. of Edinburgh. It comprises the vils. of Millerhill, Easter-Millerhill, Wester-Millerhill, Adamsrow, Claybarns, Edmonstone, New Engine, Old Engine, Sheriffhall Engine, Pentecox, Redrow, and Squaretown. It extends about 2½ miles in length from S.E. to N.W., and is upwards of 1½ mile in extreme breadth. The surface is in general flat, and a large portion is under cultivation. The collieries, which are very productive, have been worked for 250 years, but some of them have been recently abandoned, and a decrease in the population has followed. A circular camp exists at Kaim-Hill. The village is situated on the river North Esk, and near the Dalkeith railway. The parish is traversed by the roads from Edinburgh, Leith, and Musselburgh, to Dalkeith. This par. is in the presb. of Dalkeith, and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale. The minister has a stipend of £290. The parish church was erected in 1742, and was reseated in 1819. There are parochial and other schools.

NEWTON, a vil. in the par. of Glammis, co. Forfar, Scotland, 8 miles N. of Dundee. It is sometimes designated Newton-of-Glammis.

NEWTON, a vil. in the par. of Wiston, co. Lanark, Scotland, 9 miles S.W. of Lanark. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the limestone works. It is situated near the confluence of the rivers Roberton and Garf with the Tweed.

NEWTON, a vil. in the par. of Panbride, co. Forfar, Scotland, 5 miles S.W. of Arbroath. It is situated on the coast, near the Dundee railway. It is sometimes designated Newton-of-Panbride. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the bleach-works and in the fisheries.

NEWTON, a vil. in the island of Great Cumbrae, co. Bute, Scotland, 2 miles W. of Fairlie, in Ayrshire. It forms a portion of the small bathing town of Millport, at the mouth of the Frith of Clyde.

NEWTON, a vil. in the par. of Kirkpatrick-Fleming, co. Dumfries, 7 miles W. by N. of Longtown. It is of recent origin.

NEWTON, a vil. in the par. of Melrose, co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 1 mile N.W. of Lessudden, and 3½ miles S.E. of Melrose. It is situated at the foot of the Eildon hills, near the bank of the Tweed, and on the road from Galashiels to Jedburgh.

NEWTON, a quondam vil. in the par. of Nenthorn, co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 4 miles N.W. of Kelso. It is situated near the river Eden and Lurgie Loch.

NEWTON, or NITTON, a vil. in the par. of Mearns, co. Renfrew, Scotland, 4 miles E. of Neilston, and 3½ N.W. of Eaglesham. It is a burgh of barony, and is an improving manufacturing village.

NEWTON, a vil. in the par. of Urquhart, co. Nairn, locally in Ross, Scotland. It is situated near Dingwall, 3 miles N.E. of Dingwall. It is situated near the river Conan, on the eastern shore of the Firth of Cromarty.

NEWTON, a vil. in the par. of Pencaitland, co. Haddington, Scotland, 4 miles S.E. of Tranent. It is situated near the river Tyne. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the collieries, and in the quarries of limestone and freestone. The surface is thickly wooded, and the soil in general wet and clayey, and but indifferently cultivated.

NEWTON, a vil. in the par. of Abercorn, co. Linlithgow, Scotland, 6 miles E. of Linlithgow.

NEWTON, a suburb of the burgh of Kirkcaldy, co. Fife, Scotland, 15 miles S. by W. of Cupar. It chiefly comprises one street, the formation of which was begun in 1790. It is situated in Kirkcaldy Bay, on the farther side of the Frith of Forth, of which it commands a good view.

NEWTON, a vil. in the par. of Falkland, co. Fife, Scotland, 2 miles from Falkland, and 24 N. of Edinburgh.

NEWTON, a suburb of the burgh of Cupar, par. of Cupar, and Howe of Fife, co. Fife, Scotland, 32 miles from Edinburgh. It is situated in a healthy spot near the rivers Eden and Ladyburn.

NEWTON, a vil. in the par. of Bedrule, co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 4 miles W. of Jedburgh. It is situated on the E. side of the river Rule, and formerly belonged to the Ker family. In the vicinity is the lofty mountain Dunian.

NEWTON, or NEWTON ABBOT, a market town comprising the twin towns of Newton Abbot and Newton Bushell, the former in the par. of Wolborough, and hund. of Haytor, and the latter in the par. of Highweek, and hund. of Teignbridge, co. Devon, 5 miles W. by N. of Teignmouth, and 16 S. by W. of Exeter. It is a station on the South Devon railway. It is connected with the seaport of Teignmouth by the river Teign, which is here joined by the Lemon, a small river separating Newton Abbot from Newton Bushell, the former being on the right, and the latter on the left bank of the stream. In the neighbourhood are several high and steep hills, and from All Saints churchyard, about a mile from the town, a view is commanded of the valley of the Teign, with the sea at Teignmouth in the distance bounding the horizon.—The town, which consists of several irregularly-arranged streets, has been much improved within the last few years. The principal streets are paved and lighted with gas, and the town is well supplied with water, but the drainage is still imperfect. The principal buildings are, the townhall, or courthouse, a commodious modern structure; the market-house, erected in 1826; the union workhouse, built at the cost of £13,000, and situated in East-street; two commercial banks; the Globe Hotel, with entrance portico, containing spacious ball and assembly rooms. This last building is situated in Courtenay-street, and was built by the Earl of Devon, at a cost of £6,000. At the top of Wolborough-street, near the ancient tower of the chapel, is a stone pedestal with an inscription commemorative of the reading of the declaration of William Prince of Orange, afterwards William III., on his first landing at Torbay. There are several hotels and inns, a large tannery, iron-foundries, breweries, malting establishments, and flour-mills. Along the river bank are several convenient wharves, principally used for the loading and unloading of corn, coal, culm, timber, slate, and potters' and pipe clay, of which last above 6,000 tons are annually exported to the Staffordshire and other potteries. The Newfoundland trade, which was formerly carried on with so much success, has entirely ceased, but an active business is done in cattle, corn, and agricultural produce, this being one of the largest markets in the county.—The town is governed by the county magistrates, the portreeves, and other officers, who are chosen annually at the courts leet and baron for the separate manors of Newton Abbot and Newton Bushell, exercising only a nominal jurisdiction. Petty sessions are held on the last Tuesday of each month at the townhall, where also county courts sit monthly. The poor's guardians meet every Wednesday. The Newton Poor-law Union comprises 46 parishes. It is also the seat of a superintendent registry.—A short canal of 2½ miles has been cut from the river

Teign to join the tram railroad, which conveys the produce of the Haytor granite quarries from the Dartmoor. About half a mile to the E. of the town is Ford House, an old Elizabethan mansion, where Charles I. slept on two several occasions, and where William Prince of Orange, was entertained on his first landing. It was formerly the seat of the Reynell family, but is now the property of the Duke of Devonshire, who has leased it to H. Cartwright, Esq. Another old seat is Bradley House, about the same distance to the W. of the town.—There are two chapels-of-ease situated in the town; the one in Wolborough-street is within the parish of the same name, and that of St. Mary, in Newton Bushell, is in the parish of Highweek. Many of the inhabitants, however, attend Divine service at either of the parish churches, that of Wolborough being an ancient structure with a tower, situated near three-quarters of a mile to the S. of the town; while Highweek parish church is a little above the same distance to the N.W. There are places of worship for Wesleyans, Reformed Wesleyans, Baptists, and Independents. The local charities include Lady Reynell's almshouses for aged widows, with an income from endowment of £80. There are a free school and a National school.—Near Hacknield Ford, on the old Roman road Icknield Street, is a treble-ditched camp called Milberdown. The Teignbridge races take place near the town in July. Market days are Wednesday and Saturday, most business being done on the former day. Fairs are held on the last Wednesday in February for cattle, on the first Wednesday after the 24th June, Wednesday after the 11th September, and Wednesday after the 6th November, for horses, cattle, cheese, and general merchandise.

NEWTON ARCHDEACON, a tnshp. in the par. of Darlington, S.E. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, 3 miles N.W. of Darlington. It derives the suffix to its name from the fact of the estate being held by lease from the Archdeacon of Durham.

NEWTON-ARGYLE, a vil. in the par. of Southend, co. Argyle, Scotland, 8 miles S. by W. of Campbell-Town. It is situated near the extremity of the peninsula of Cantyre.

NEWTON-ARLOSH, a hmlt. in the par. of Holme-Cultram, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 6½ miles N.W. of Wigton. It had formerly a market under the abbots of Holme-Cultram, who, upon the destruction of Skinburness by an irruption of the sea, obtained leave to hold here their market and fair, now disused. The ruins of an ancient church dedicated to St. John the Baptist, and so constructed as to serve the purpose of a fortress, may be seen in the cemetery, which is still used by the parishioners.

NEWTON-BANK, a tnshp. in the par. of Gargrave, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N.W. of Skipton. It is situated near the Leeds canal.

NEWTON-BEWLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Billingham, N.E. div. of Stockton ward, co. Durham, 5 miles N.E. of Stockton. It was formerly a seat of the Prior of Durham, who had his court-house here.

NEWTON-BLOSSOMVILLE, a par. in the hund. of Newport, co. Bucks, 6½ miles from Newport Pagnell, its post town, and 2½ E. of Olney. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated in a valley on the river Ouse. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1810, and the glebe comprises 156 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £250. The church is a small structure dedicated to St. Nicholas. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum, besides poor's cottages. A school was erected in 1822.

NEWTON-BROMSHOLD, a par. in the hund. of Higham-Ferrers, co. Northampton, 3 miles S.E. of Higham-Ferrers, its post town, and 8 from Wellingborough. The parish, which is inconsiderable, is wholly agricultural. It is situated on the confines of the county of Bedford, and was anciently called Bromswold. The tithes have been commuted under an Enclosure Act for 170 acres of glebe and a money payment. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £180, in the patron. of All Souls' College, Oxford. The church is a small ancient structure dedicated to St. Peter.

NEWTON-BURGOLAND, a hmlt. in the par. of Sweepstone, hund. of West Goscote, co. Leicester, 4 miles N.W. of Market-Bosworth, and 1 mile S. of Sweepstone. It is united with the hmlt. of Newton-Nethercote. The Independents and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship at Newton-Burgoland. Earl Howe is lord of this manor, and Miss A. W. Leslie lady of the manor of Newton-Nethercote.

NEWTON-BUSHELL, a decayed market town in the par. of Highweek, hund. of Teignbridge, co. Devon, 5 miles W. by N. of Teignmouth, 6 N. of Torquay, and 16 S. by W. of Exeter. It was given by Henry III. to Robert Bushell, from whom it takes the suffix to its name. It is still governed by its separate officers, appointed annually, although in all other respects it may be considered as part of the twin town of Newton-Abbott.

NEWTON-BY-CASTLEACRE, a par. in the hund. of South Greenhoe, co. Norfolk, 4 miles N. by E. of Swaffham, its railway station and post town. The village, which is inconsiderable, is situated on the river Nar, and is wholly agricultural. The soil consists of a light loam upon a gravel subsoil. The land is chiefly arable, with about 60 acres of pasture and 40 common. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £210 5s. 9d., and the vicarial for £97. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £103, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure with a low square tower rising from the centre. The register dates from 1800. A. Fountaine, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

NEWTON-BY-CHESTER, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Oswald, lower div. of the hund. of Broxton, co. Chester, 1½ mile N.E. of Chester. It partly contains the hmlt. of Flookersbrook. There are extensive nursery-grounds in this township, and a tan-yard.

NEWTON-BY-DARESBURY, a tnshp. in the par. of Runcorn, hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 5 miles N.E. of Frodsham, and the same distance S. of Warrington. It is situated near the Chester, Manchester, and Birmingham railways.

NEWTON-BY-FRODSHAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Frodsham, second div. of the hund. of Eddisbury, co. Chester, 2 miles S. of Frodsham. It is situated on an eminence commanding a view of the river Weaver. The Society of Friends have a meeting-house in the village.

NEWTON-BY-TATTENHALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Tattenhall, lower div. of Broxton hund., co. Chester, 5 miles S.W. of Tarporley. It is situated near the Chester and Crew railway and Nantwich canal.

NEWTON-BY-THE-SEA, a tnshp. in the par. of Embleton, S. div. of Bambrough ward, co. Northumberland, 8½ miles N.E. of Alnwick. The village is small, and the inhabitants chiefly engaged in the fisheries.

NEWTON-BY-TOFT, a par. in the N. div. of the wap. of Walshcroft, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4 miles S.W. of Market-Rasen, its railway station and post town. The parish, which is inconsiderable, is wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £172 12*s.*, and the glebe comprises 21 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £60. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a stone structure, and was rebuilt in 1860. The charities produce about £15 per annum, being the endowment of Holdsworth's school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Percival Spearman Wilkinson, Esq., is lord of the manor.

NEWTON-CAP, a tnshp. in the par. of Auckland St. Andrew, N.W. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, half a mile N.W. of Bishop-Auckland. It is situated at the bridge on the river Wear.

NEWTON-COLD, a chplry. in the par. of Lowesby, hund. of East Goscote, co. Leicester, 8 miles N.E. of Leicester. It is a meet for the Belvoir hounds.

NEWTON-CUM-LARTON, a tnshp. in the par. of West Kirby, lower div. of the hund. of Wirrall, co. Chester, 7 miles W. of Birkenhead. It is situated near the mouth of the river Dee.

NEWTON-DIXTON, a par. in the lower div. of Skenfreth hund., co. Monmouth. See DIXTON-NEWTON.

NEWTON, EAST, a tnshp. in the par. of Stonegrave, wap. of Ryedale, North Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of Hovingham station, and 4 S. by E. of Helmsley. Sir George Wombwell, Bart., is lord of the manor. It is joined with Laysthorpe to form a township.

NEWTON, EAST, a tnshp. in the par. of Aldbrough, middle div. of the wap. of Holderness, East Riding co. York, 1 mile E. of Aldborough, and 12 miles N.E. of Hull. It is situated on the coast of the German Ocean. A hospital was founded here in 1179 by William Earl of Albemarle. Its revenue at the Dissolution was returned at £40.

NEWTON-EDROM, a vil. in the par. of Edrom, co. Berwick, Scotland, 3 miles N.E. of Dunse. It is situated near the foot of the Lammer-Muir hills.

NEWTON-FERRERS, a par. in the hund. of Ermington, co. Devon, 2 miles S. by W. of Yealmpton, and 7½ S.E. of Plymouth, its post town. The village is situated on rising ground at the extremity of a creek formed by the estuary of the river Yealm, and within 2 miles of the sea-coast. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture, and in the fisheries on the coast. There are quarries of limestone, sandstone, and schistose slate. The river Yealm is here navigable for vessels of 80 tons. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £429, and the glebe comprises 110 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £456. The church, dedicated to the Holy Cross, is a structure with a square embattled tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains monuments to the Potter and Yonge families, also a three-stone sedilia, and a piscina with a double arch of very early date. There are almshouses supported by subscription, also a National school. Puslinch House, Porr House, and Sorr Villa are the principal residences. H. Roe and John Holberton, Esqs., are joint lords of the manor. Some years since a cavern was discovered in the limestone rock, containing the bones and other remains of the elephant, hyæna, cave bear, and other extinct animals.

NEWTON-FLOTMAN, a par. in the hund. of Humbleyard, co. Norfolk, 3½ miles N. of Long-Stratton, its post town, and 1 mile N.E. of Florden railway station. The village, which is of small extent, and chiefly agricultural, is situated on the road from London to Norwich. The adjunct to its name is derived from the ancient flote or ferry over the river Tans, which is now crossed by a bridge of brick. About two-thirds of the lands are arable, and the remainder pasture and woodland. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £362 7*s*. The living is a rect.* annexed to that of Swainsthorpe, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Mary the Virgin, has a square embattled tower containing one bell. It contains several monuments to the Blundeville family, and an arched monument with a representation of Noah's Ark. There is a village school, chiefly supported by the rector.

NEWTON-GRANGE, a vil. in the par. of Newbottle, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 2 miles S.E. of Dalkeith. It is of recent formation, and is situated near the river South Esk. It is the largest village in the parish. There are boys', girls, and infant schools, erected at the expense of the Marquis of Lothian. A large portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the collieries, which are rapidly increasing in productiveness.

NEWTON-GRANGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Ashborne, hund. of Wirksworth, co. Derby, 4 miles N.W. of Ashborne, its post town.

NEWTON-HALL, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Bywell St. Peter, E. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 8 miles N.E. of Hexham, and 3 N. of Stocksfield railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road from Corbridge to Newcastle. The chapel-of-ease, dedicated to St. James, has a tower containing one bell. There is a school for both sexes. Newton Hall is the principal residence. W. F. Blackett, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

NEWTON-HALL, a hmlt. in the par. of Wintringham, wap. of Buckrose, East Riding co. York, 6 miles E. by N. of New Malton.

NEWTON-HARCOURT, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Wistow, hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, 6¾ miles S.E. of Leicester, its post town, and 3 from the Countesthorpe railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Union canal and the river Soar. The dairy farms, with which this neighbourhood is studded, are celebrated for the production of cheese. The land is chiefly in pasture. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Wistow, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church, dedicated to St. Luke, is a small ancient structure with a low tower containing one bell. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum, realised from the poor's land, which is annually distributed in bread and clothing. The Leicester and Hitchin railway passes through this township. Sir H. Halford, Bart., M.P., is lord of the manor.

NEWTON HEATH, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Newton, and par. of Manchester, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 3 miles N.E. of Manchester. It is a station on the eastern section of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway.

NEWTON-IN-CLEVELAND, a par. in the W. div. of Langbaurgh lib., North Riding co. York, 4½ miles N.E. of Stokesley, its post town, and 1½ mile from the Pinchlingthorpe railway station. The village, which is inconsiderable, is situated on the road to Guisborough, and near the source of the river Tees. The celebrated Roseberry Topping in this parish is a pyramidal mountain, rising 1,488 feet above sea-level. Its base is composed of an immense stratum of alum rock, and from the summit a view is commanded over the vale of the Tees, and a considerable part of the county of Durham. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. About half of the land is arable, a fourth pasture, and the remainder woodland and moorland common. There are quarries of blue whinstone, chiefly used for the repair of the roads. The appropriation belongs to the Archbishop of York. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £45. The church is a small ancient edifice. There is a parochial school, built in 1838.

NEWTON-IN-MACKERFIELD, a parochial chplry. and tnshp. in the par. of Winwick, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 5½ miles from Warrington, 47 S. by E. of Lancaster, and 192 N. by W. of London. It is a station on the Liverpool and Manchester section of the London and North-Western railway, which here forms a junction with the Grand Junction, Wigan, and Bolton lines. In the Saxon times the manor belonged to Edward the Confessor, and after the Conquest was given to the Langtons. In the civil war of Charles I. a party of Highlanders were defeated here in 1648 by Cromwell's troops, and hanged in an adjoining field still called Gallows Cross. The township, which is extensive, is situated on the turnpike road between Warrington and Wigan, and near the Sankey viaduct of the Liverpool and Manchester railway. It was formerly a market town and the head of a barony, and returned two members to parliament from the first year of Elizabeth until disfranchised by the Reform Act. It is now an election and polling town for the southern division of the county. The petty sessions are held monthly at the Legh Arms. Meetings are also held by the Newton Improvement Commissioners every three months. Courts leet and baron are held twice yearly, under William John Legh, Esq., who is lord of the manor. The town consists principally of one broad street. There are an ancient timbered court-house, market cross, assembly rooms, savings-bank, mechanics' institute, race-stand, and good hotel adjoining the Liverpool and Manchester railway station; also an extensive foundry, zinc and glass works, a printing-office, and sugar refinery. The London and North-Western Railway Company have extensive premises for making trucks, railway carriages, &c., giving employment to a large number of hands. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £240. The church, dedicated to Emmanuel, is a newly erected stone edifice, with a spired tower containing one bell. There is also the district church of St. Peter, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £114. It is a stone structure, and has recently been rebuilt. The burial-ground has recently been increased in extent, and enclosed with a stone wall. The parochial charities produce about £77 per annum. There is a free grammar school, held in the old court-house, the master of which has a salary of £60, arising from certain enclosures of Leyland Common, and the rental of a messuage called Dean school; also National and Sunday schools. The Independents have a place of worship. The union poorhouse is situated in this township. The late Right. Hon. W. Huskisson was killed here in 1830 by a steam-carriage at the opening of the Park-side station, and a tablet to his memory has been erected near the spot. At a little distance from the town is a venerable moated timber house; and at Castle Hill, which lies about half a mile northward, are the remains of an ancient barrow, near 75 feet in diameter and 30 feet high, overgrown with venerable oaks. In 1822, whilst sinking a coal-pit, a whetstone encased in wood is said to have been found about 90 feet below the surface. The market has long been discontinued, but the cross is still standing. Fairs are held on the 17th May and 12th August, chiefly for cattle and horses. Races take place in June, on a triangular course of 1½ mile.

NEWTON-IN-THE-THISTLES, or NEWTON REGIS, a par. in the Tamworth div. of the hund. of Hemlingford, co. Warwick, 5½ miles N.E. of Tamworth, its post town, and the same distance from the Polesworth railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The tithes were commuted for land and a corn-rent under an Enclosure Act in 1795, and the glebe comprises 33½ acres, valued at £57. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £300. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a lofty spired tower. There is a National school for both sexes.

NEWTON-IN-THE-WILLOWS, a par. in the hund. of Corby, co. Northampton, 1 mile from Geddington, and 3½ miles N. by E. of Kettering, its post town. The village is wholly agricultural, and of small extent. The parish is traversed by the roads from Stamford and Uppingham to Kettering. Limestone is quarried. This place anciently belonged to Pipewell Abbey, and formed part of the parish of Geddington. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £40. The church, dedicated to St. Faith, is a very ancient edifice, with a spired tower of more recent date. The Duke of Buccleuch is lord of the manor.

NEWTON-JUXTA-MALPAS, a tnshp. in the par. of Malpas, higher div. of Broxton hund., co. Chester, 1½ mile S.W. of Malpas. It belongs wholly to T. S. Drake, Esq., who is lord of the manor. There are only two or three farmhouses.

NEWTON, KING'S, a hmlt. in the par. of Melbourne, hund. of Repton, co. Derby. See KING'S NEWTON.

NEWTON, KIRK. See KIRK NEWTON, co. Northumberland.

NEWTON-KYME, a par. in the upper div. of the wap. of Barkstone-Ash, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.W. of Tadcaster, its post town, and the same distance E. of Boston-Spa. It is a station on the York and Harrogate section of the North-Eastern railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the S. bank of the river Wharfe. There is some fine meadow land, but the larger proportion is arable. The soil is of a sandy and loamy nature, on a subsoil of gravel and limestone. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. Roman coins and other relics of antiquity have been found in the neighbourhood. Limestone is quarried. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £385. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient stone structure, with an ivy-mantled tower containing three bells. The church has two memorial windows, also an old register chest bearing date 1633. The parochial charities produce about £47 per annum, of which £22 goes to Fairfax's school for the free education of six boys. A Sunday-school is held within the same building. Newton Hall has for a considerable period been the seat of the Fairfax family, and within its grounds are the ruins of the old seat of the barons de Kyme. Thomas Fairfax, Esq., is lord of the manor.

NEWTON-LE-WILLOWS, a tnshp. in the par. of Patrick-Brompton, wap. of East Hang, North Riding co. York, 4 miles N.W. of Bedale. It is a station on the Northallerton and Leyburn branch of the North-Eastern railway. The village is small, but neatly built. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans.

NEWTON-LE-WOLD, or NEWTON-UPON-THE-WOLDS, a par. in the hund. of Bradley-Haverstoe, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 9 miles S. by W. of Great Grimsby, its post town, and 4 W. of the Thoresby station of the East Lincolnshire railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated in a valley on the old turnpike road from Grimsby to Louth. The soil is of various qualities, and the population wholly agricultural. The subsoil is chalk. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £476, in the patron. of the Bishop of Lichfield. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is situated on rising ground, but greatly needs repairs. It contains a richly sculptured font. There is a National school, also a place of worship for Primitive Methodists. The Earl of Yarborough is lord of the manor.

NEWTON, LONG, a par. in the S. div. of Stockton ward, co. Durham, 6 miles N.E. of Darlington, its post town, and 4 S.W. of Stockton-on-Tees. The village, which is small and chiefly agricultural, is situated on the road from Stockton to Darlington. The soil is of various quality. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £612, and the glebe comprises 10 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £604, in the patron. of the Bishop of Chester. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a stone structure, rebuilt in 1856, the expense of which was defrayed by the Marchioness of Londonderry. It has a stained E. window, and several monuments to the Vane family; also a marble monument in the chancel, by Signor Monti, to the late Marquis of Londonderry, who was interred in the family vault on the 16th March, 1854. The register dates from 1564. The parochial charities produce about £1 2*s.* 6*d.* per annum. The Marchioness of Londonderry is lady of the manor.

NEWTON, LONG, a hmlt. in the par. of Wigton, ward and co. Cumberland, 5 miles S.W. of Carlisle. It is situated near a branch of the river Wampool.

NEWTON, LONG, a vil. in the par. of Yester, co. Haddington, Scotland, 6 miles S. by E. of Haddington. It is situated at the foot of the Lammermuir hills, near Gifford water.

NEWTON-LONGVILLE, a par. in the hund. of Newport, co. Bucks, 2 miles S.W. of Fenny Stratford, and 10 from Buckingham. Bletchley is its post town. The village, which is small and irregularly built, is situated near the Grand Junction canal. There was formerly a Cluniac cell to Longueville Abbey, in Normandy, founded in the reign of Henry I. Upon the suppression of alien priories it was given, in 1415, to New College, Oxford. The land is chiefly arable. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £320, in the patron. of New College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Faith, is an ancient edifice, with a tower containing six bells. The interior of the church contains two piscinas and several ancient monuments. The church was built by William of Wykeham in 1415. The learned Grocyn, Erasmus's tutor, and one of the revivers of classical literature in the 16th century, was once rector of this parish.

NEWTON-MOOR, a populous tnshp. in the par. of Mottram-in-Longden-Dale, hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 7½ miles S.E. of Manchester, its post town, 2½ S. of Ashton-under-Lyne, and 6 N.E. of Stockport. It is a station on the Manchester and Sheffield railway. The village, which is situated in the midst of a thriving manufacturing district, is of large extent. A branch of the Peak Forest canal passes through the township. The manor formerly belonged to the Davenports, through which family it came by marriage to Thomas de Newton in 1302. It subsequently became the property of Sir Charles Duckinfield, who purchased it from the last of the Newtons. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in cotton-weaving, printing of calico, and in the manufacture of hats. There are iron-works for smelting the ore, also collieries and stone quarries. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Mottram. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a new stone structure, containing a marble monument to James and John Ashton, Esqs.; also one to the Rev. W. Johnson, M.A., formerly Vicar of Mottram. There is a National school for both sexes, at which a Church Sunday-school is also held. There are places of worship for the Wesleyans, New Connexion Methodists, and Roman Catholics. At Harrison Fold, in this township, is a stone house, in which lived the famous John Collier, or "Tim Bobbin," who was apprenticed as a weaver, and subsequently became schoolmaster and author at Milnrow, in Lancashire. The ancient building Newton Hall has been converted into cottages. Newton Lodge is the principal residence.

NEWTONMORE, or NEWTON OF BENCHAR, a vil. in the par. of Kingussie, co. Inverness, Scotland, 3 miles from Kingussie. It is a station on the Inverness and Perth railway. It is situated on the river Spey, near a Roman camp, and was founded by M'Pherson of Belleville. Fairs are held on the second Wednesday in March, and on the Tuesdays in April and May after Beauly.

NEWTON-MORRELL, a tnshp. in the par. of Barton, wap. of East Gilling, North Riding co. York, 6½ miles S.W. of Darlington.

NEWTON-MULGRAVE, a tnshp. in the par. of Lythe, E. div. of Langbaurgh lib., North Riding co. York, 9 miles W. by N. of Whitby.

NEWTON-NEAR-SUDBURY, a par. in the hund. of Babergh, co. Suffolk, 3 miles E. of Sudbury. The village is chiefly agricultural. The surface is undulating, and the lower grounds are watered by a small stream. The soil is chiefly a rich loam on a substratum of gravel. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, in the patron. of St. Peter's College, Cambridge. The church is an ancient edifice, dedicated to All Saints. There is a National school.

NEWTON-NETHERCOTE, a hmlt. in the par. of Sweepstone, co. Leicester, 4 miles W. by N. of Market Bosworth, and one mile S. of Sweepstone. It is united with the hmlt. of Newton-Burgoland. Miss A. M. Leslie is lady of the manor.

NEWTON, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Narberth, co. Pembroke, 3 miles S.W. of Narberth, its post town, and 10 from Pembroke. The village consists of a few farmhouses and cottages. Ironstone exists, but is not worked. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £50. The church is a small ancient structure.

NEWTON, NORTH, a chplry. in the par. and hund. of North Petherton, co. Somerset, 3 miles S. of Bridgewater, and 1½ mile from North Petherton. It is situated near the river Parrett and the Taunton canal. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £70. The church is a small ancient structure. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum.

NEWTON-NOTTAGE, a par. in the hund of Newcastle, co. Glamorgan, 5 miles S.W. of Bridgend, its post town. It is a decayed bathing village, situated on the Bristol Channel, and contains Nottage and Porthcawl harbour, where the Llynvi railway terminates. On Newton Downs are traces of a Roman road. The high grounds behind the village command extensive views over the channel. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £375. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to St. John the Baptist. In the interior is a stone pulpit, and in the churchyard is an inscribed stone, near which is a spring, which only flows at the ebb of the tide. The parsonage at Nottage is of great antiquity, and was restored by the late Rev. H. Knight. In this house Queen Anne Boleyn was once a guest.

NEWTON-OF-BENCHAIR. See NEWTONMORE, co. Inverness.

NEWTON-OF-BELLTRIES, a vil. in the par. of Lochwinnoch, co. Renfrew, Scotland, 2 miles E. of Lochwinnoch.

NEWTON, OLD, a par. in the hund. of Stow, co. Suffolk, 2 miles N.E. of Stowmarket, its post town, and 1 mile E. of the Haughley Junction railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the small river Gipping, which has been made navigable from Stowmarket to Ipswich. At Dagworth, Margaret Pole, the unfortunate Countess of Salisbury, who was beheaded by Henry VIII., resided. The soil is rich, and hops are grown. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £230. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a square embattled tower, crowned with pinnacles. The register dates from 1587. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a parochial school adjoining the vicarage-house. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship. G. Tomlin, Esq., is lord of the manor.

NEWTON-ON-THE-MOOR, a tnshp. in the par. of Shilbottle, E. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 3 miles S.W. of Shilbottle, and 5 S.W. of Alnwick. The village is of small extent. The chief portion of the inhabitants are employed in agriculture and in the limestone quarries, with which this township abounds. There are also a colliery and brick and tile works. A chapel was erected in 1852 for the New Connexion Methodists. There is a mixed school with a small endowment. Newton Hall is the principal residence. In the neighbourhood are vestiges of an ancient fortification.

NEWTON-OUT, a tnshp. in the par. of Easington, S. div. of the wap. of Holderness, East Riding co. York, 2½ miles N. of Easington, and 4 E. of Patrington. The village, which is inconsiderable, is situated on the coast, and consists of a few straggling farms and cottages. In the neighbourhood are the ruins of a chapel.

NEWTON-PARK, a tnshp. in the par. of Mitford, W. div. of Morpeth ward, co. Northumberland, 1½ mile N.W. of Mitford, and 3 miles W. by N. of Morpeth.

NEWTON-PARK, a seat in the par. of Callington, hund. of Middle East, co. Cornwall, 3 miles S.W. of Callington, and 12 S. of Launceston. It anciently belonged to the Coryton family, and now to the Collinses of Truthan.

NEWTON-POPPLEFORD, a tythg. and chplry. in the par. of Aylesbear, hund. of East Budleigh, co. Devon, 5 miles S.W. of Ottery St. Mary, its post town, and 4 N.W. of Sidmouth. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Otter, near Woodbury-Camp, which stands on the brow of a hill, and is deeply entrenched. The above river is crossed by a three-arched stone bridge. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £45, in the patron. of the Vicar of Aylesbear. The church, dedicated to St. Luke, was originally built by Edward III., in 1330, as a chantry.

NEWTON-POTTER, a tnshp. in the par. of Leeds, West Riding co. York, 2 miles from Leeds. It comprises the hmlts. of Gipton and Harehills. The adjunct to its name is supposed to have been derived from extensive potteries here during the time of the Romans. The manor was successively held by the Mauleverers, Scots, and Hardwicks, of whose ancient mansion there are still some remains. The surface is boldly undulating and richly wooded, and the neighbourhood abounds with ancient seats and villa residences. The village, which is very considerable, and known as the New Town, is situated on a gentle acclivity near the road to Harrogate.

NEWTON-PURCELL, a par. in the hund. of Ploughley, co. Oxford, 6 miles N.E. of Bicester, its post town, and 4½ S.W. of Buckingham. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The chief portion of the land is in pasture. The living is a rect.,* with the cur. of Shelswell annexed, in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £150. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient edifice, with a turret containing a clock and two bells. John Harrison Slater Harrison, Esq., is lord of the manor.

NEWTON-RALSTON, a vil. in the par. of Neilston, co. Renfrew, Scotland, 2 miles N.E. of Neilston. It is situated in the valley of the Levern, betwixt Neilston and Barrhead.

NEWTON-REGIS. See NEWTON-IN-THE-THISTLES, co. Warwick.

NEWTON-REGNY, or NEWTON RAINEY, a par. in the ward of Leath, co. Cumberland, 2½ miles W. of Penrith, its nearest railway station and post town. The village, which is of small extent, and wholly agricultural, is situated on the Petteril stream. The par. includes the tnshp. of Catterlin and the hmlt. of Sewborwen. The land is almost wholly arable. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £96, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is of great antiquity, and has a chantry and two bells. The charities consist of Betton's annuity of £5. There is a school adjoining the church. The Earl of Lonsdale is lord of the manor.

NEWTON ST. CYRES, a par. in the hund. of Crediton, co. Devon, 4 miles N. of Exeter, its post town, and 3 S.E. of Crediton. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on the river Creedy, and on the turnpike road from Exeter to Barnstaple. Lead, ironstone, basalt, and manganese are found in the neighbourhood. The soil consists of clay and sand, with a subsoil of schistose slate. The par. includes the hmlts. of Ford, Norton, and Smallbrooke. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £351. The church, dedicated to St. Cyres, is an ancient stone structure with a tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains monuments to the Northcote and Quicke families. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is a school for both sexes. The poet Downham was born in this parish. John Quicke, Esq., is lord of the manor.

NEWTON ST. FAITH, a hmlt. in the par. of Horsham St. Faith, hund. of Taverham, co. Norfolk, 5 miles N. of Norwich. The hamlet is situated on the road from Norwich to Aylsham. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans.

NEWTON ST. LOE, a par. in the hund. of Wellow, co. Somerset, 3½ miles W. of Bath, and 2 E. of the Tiverton railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the Bristol railway, and the bridge over the river Avon. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £400, and the glebe comprises 36 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £426. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a stone structure, with a tower containing six bells. The windows of the church are of stained glass. It contains tablets of the Langton family; and in the churchyard is a marble monument to Captain Edward Gore Langton. The church was restored and enlarged in 1857. The parochial charities produce about £143 per annum, of which £72 goes to Jones's school. There are also a boys' Sunday-school, supported by the rector, and a girls' school, supported by voluntary contributions. Newton Park is the principal residence. William Gore Langton, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

NEWTON ST. PETROCK, a par. in the hund. of Shebbear, co. Devon, 8 miles S.W. of Great Torrington, its post town, and 11 from Bideford. It is a small agricultural village, situated on the river Torridge. The soil is of a clayey nature, with a subsoil of clay. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £151. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £220. The church, dedicated to St. Petrock, is a stone structure, with a tower containing three bells. L. W. Buck, Esq., is lord of the manor. There is a place of worship for Baptists.

NEWTONSHAW, or NEWTON-OF-SANCHIE, a vil. in the par. and co. Clackmannan, Scotland, 1½ mile N. of Alloa, and 5 miles N.W. of Kincardine. It is situated on the river Devon. The inhabitants are principally engaged in the Devon iron-works.

NEWTON-SOLNEY, a par. in the hund. of Repton, co. Derby, 2 miles N.E. of Burton-on-Trent, its post town and railway station, and 9 S.W. of Derby. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the E. bank of the river Trent, near its confluence with the river Dove, which here divides this county from Staffordshire. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. There are some brick-kilns. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £20. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a spiral tower. Newton Park is the principal residence. Sir Henry Every, Bart., is lord of the manor. On a commanding eminence is a large castellated building called "Hoskin's Folly."

NEWTON, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Branch and Dole, co. Wilts, 2 miles N. of Wilton, its post town and railway station, and 5 N.W. of Salisbury. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Wiley, and is wholly agricultural. The par. comprises the tythgs. of Stotford, Ugford, and three others. The road from Bath to Salisbury passes through the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £221. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing four bells. The whole edifice is in a ruinous condition. The register dates from 1695. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. There are a National school, and a place of worship for the Dissenters.

NEWTON-STACEY, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Barton-Stacey, co. Hants, 4 miles S.E. of Andover, and 6 S. by W. of Whitchurch. It is situated on the river Anton.

NEWTON-STEWART, a vil. in the par. of Penninghame, co. Wigtown, Scotland, 7 miles N. of Wigtown, and 125 from Edinburgh. It is a station on the Portpatrick railway. The village is situated on the river Cree, which is here crossed by a bridge of five arches, connecting the larger portion of the town with the smaller part on the other side of the river. North Stewart was founded by the Stewarts of Galloway, and created a burgh of barony under William Douglas, Esq., in 1778, who converted its name into Newton-Douglas. This gentleman expended a considerable sum of money in the improvement of the town, and in the erecting of an extensive cotton-mill, &c., but after a few years it rapidly declined, and reassumed its former name. There are at present several woollen establishments, two tanneries, and an extensive brewery. The town consists of one long street, with the townhouse standing in the centre. At the latter end of the last century the houses were thatched, and but one story high, but the majority of them now consist of two stories, with slated roofs. The government of the town is vested in the hands of the county justices, who meet once a month. The places of worship are, Penninghame church, a Free church, an United Presbyterian church, a Reformed Presbyterian church, and a Roman Catholic chapel. There are parochial and other schools, also numerous charitable institutions. The town contains three branch banks, a subscription library, and a public reading-room. Friday is market day. A cattle market is held on the second Friday in every month, also a lamb fair on the Wednesday in August before Minnighive.

NEWTON-TONEY, a par. in the hund. of Amesbury, co. Wilts, 9 miles N.E. of Salisbury, its post town, and 4 S.E. of Amesbury. The village, which principally consists of one long street, is situated on a stream flowing into the river Avon, near the eastern border of Salisbury Plain. The Andover and Salisbury branch line of the South-Western railway passes through the parish. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £433, and the glebe comprises 42 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £441, in the patron. of Queen's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a modern structure. The register dates from 1568. There is a National school, erected in 1857. Sir A. Malet is lord of the manor, and resides at Wilbury House, which is the principal residence.

NEWTON-TRACEY, a par. in the hund. of Fremington, co. Devon, 4½ miles S. of Barnstaple, its railway station and post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the old road leading from Torrington to Barnstaple. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £67. The church is a stone structure dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket.

NEWTON-UNDERWOOD, a tnshp. in the par. of Mitford, W. div. of Morpeth ward, co. Northumberland, 1½ mile W. of Mitford, and 3 miles W. of Morpeth. There are ruins of an ancient tower.

NEWTON-UPON-AYR, a par. and burgh of regality in the district of Kyle, co. Ayr, Scotland. It is a station on the Glasgow railway. It extends in length about 1½ mile from S. to N., with an extreme breadth of 1 mile. The par. is bounded on the W. by the Frith of Clyde, and on other sides by the pars. of Prestwick, St. Quivox, and the royal burgh of Ayr, of which it is a suburb. All the ancient privileges of the burgh were renewed by James VI. on the 24th September, 1595. Previous to the year 1759 it was comprehended in the parish of Monktown, in which year the community of Newton purchased from Sir William Maxwell, then patron, the right of electing their own minister, and with the consent of the heritors of Monktown. It is situated on the northern bank of the river Ayr, over which there is a stone bridge connecting it with the royal burgh of Ayr. The soil is a loose sand of an inferior quality, but has been considerably improved by the intermixture of blue shale from the coal mines. The whole of the parish is open and unsheltered, but the air is pure and healthy. The coast, with the exception of a small portion towards the northern end, is in general flat. The burgh of Newton derives its chief importance from its situation at the entrance of the harbour, which is unfortunately obstructed by a bar at the mouth of the river Ayr, only admitting vessels under 140 tons. In 1789 two reflecting lights were erected on the N.E. side of the harbour. The principal trade carried on is the exportation of coal, and ship-building has of late been on the increase. The town, which stands at a little distance above the place where the vessels anchor, has of late years been considerably improved, and many new villas have sprung into existence. The government of the burgh is vested in the hands of 2 bailies, a treasurer, and 6 common councillors, who are elected every two years by the freemen. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in ship-building, rope and sail making, weaving, muslin embroidery, and in the hardware manufactory. The more important and general business is transacted in the adjoining burgh of Ayr. The fisheries are prosecuted with success. This par. is in the presb. of Ayr, and synod of Glasgow and Ayr, and in the patron. of 13 delegates. The minister has a stipend of £228. The parish church was erected in 1777, and was restored and enlarged in 1832. Besides the parish church, there are a Free church and a parochial school. Near the boundary of the parish, but chiefly in the neighbouring parish of Dundonald, is a charitable institution called King's Case, and which, according to tradition, was founded by King Robert Bruce for eight poor men afflicted with the leprosy; but as no diseases of that description now appear, persons labouring under other diseases which are esteemed incurable are admitted to the charity. The presentation formerly belonged to the Wallaces of Craigie, but was purchased at the beginning of the present century by the town of Ayr.

NEWTON-UPON-DERWENT, a tnshp. in the par. of Wilberfoss, Wilton-Beacon div. of Harthill wap., East Riding co. York, 5 miles from Pocklington. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Derwent, and is wholly agricultural. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyan Methodists.

NEWTON-UPON-OUSE, a par. and tnshp. in the wap. of Bulmer, North Riding co. York, 9 miles N.W. of York, its post town, and 3 from the Shipton railway station. It is situated on the river Ouse, and comprises the tnshps. of Newton, Benningborough, and Linton. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The soil is various, with a subsoil of clay and sand. There are extensive brick kilns. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. £300. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a modern edifice with a lofty spired tower containing three bells. The interior of the church is elaborately fitted up. There are several brasses and effigies of great interest. A S.E. chancel window has recently been inserted at the expense of the Hon. Lady Dawnay. The church, with the exception of the tower, was rebuilt at the expense of the Hon. Lydia Frances Catherine Dawnay. The parochial charities produce about £18 9s. per annum. There is a Church of England school, held in a red brick building, educating above 100 children, and supported by the Hon. Payan and Miss Dawnay. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans. An agricultural show is held annually.

NEWTON-UPON-TRENT, a par. in the wap. of Well, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 5 miles W. of Saxelby railway station, 10 S. of Gainsborough, and 10 W. by N. of Lincoln. Newark is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated at the four-arched iron bridge on the river Trent, and is chiefly agricultural. There are several wharves on the river. This parish is also connected with Dunham by a bridge across the Trent. The tithes were commuted under an Enclosure Act in 1765. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £222. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a lofty tower, and has undergone thorough and extensive alterations. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a parochial school, and a place of worship for the Wesleyans.

NEWTON-UNTHANK, a hmlt. in the par. of Ratby, hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 7 miles W. of Leicester. It is situated on a branch of the river Soar, and on the N. side of the Leicester and Swannington railway. The Earl of Stamford and Warrington is lord of the manor.

NEWTON-VALENCE, a par. in the upper half of the hund. of Selborne, co. Hants, 4 miles S. of Alton, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The par. contains the hmlt. of Noah-Hill. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £512. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket, or, according to others, to St. Mary, has an embattled tower containing three bells. There is an infant school, chiefly supported by the vicar. Manor House and Pelham House are the principal residences. Captain C. E. Chawner is lord of the manor.

NEWTON-WAMPHRAY, or GILGAL, a hmlt. in the par. of Wamphray, co. Dumfries, Scotland, 10 miles S. by E. of Moffat. It is situated near the river Annan.

NEWTON-WATER, a par. in the hund. of Normancross, co. Hunts, 6 miles S.W. of Peterborough, and 5 N. by W. of Stilton. It is situated on Billing-Brook, and the river Nene skirts the parish. The village is inconsiderable, and wholly agricultural. There are quarries of building-stone. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £231. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £270. The church, dedicated to St. Remigius, is a small plain structure. There is a village school. Roman coins and fragments of tesselated pavement have been found.

NEWTON-WELSH, a par. in the hund. of Lower Wormelow, co. Hereford, 3 miles N.W. of Monmouth. It is situated near the river Monnow. The village is small and chiefly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £47. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

NEWTON, WEST, a tnshp. in the par. of Bromfield, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 3½ miles N.E. of Allonby, and 8 N.E. of Maryport. Wigton is its post town. The village is chiefly agricultural. In the township red freestone is quarried. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £138, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Matthew, is a stone edifice with two stained windows. The church was erected in 1856 by John Todd, Esq., of Manchester. The schools and parsonage are near the church, both of which were erected in 1858 by the same gentleman. There is a tower which formed part of an old castle in the neighbourhood. Charles Joliffe, Esq., is lord of the manor.

NEWTON, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Freebridge-Lynn, co. Norfolk, 7 miles N. by E. of Lynn. The village is situated on an acclivity. There is a considerable brewery. About a third of the surface is arable, a like proportion in meadow and pasture, and the remainder sheep-walks and rabbit warrens. The soil is sandy, upon a subsoil of chalk, carrstone, and gravel. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £160. About 280 acres of common were inclosed in 1806. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £178. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient structure with an embattled tower, containing one bell, and was formerly of larger dimensions than at present.

NEWTON, WEST, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirk Newton, W. div. of Glendale ward, co. Northumberland, 6 miles N.W. of Wooler. It is situated on the river Glen, and it contains Canna-Mill. The Earl of Tankerville is lord of the manor.

NEWTON, WEST, a tnshp. in the par. of Aldbrough, middle div. of the wap. of Holderness, East Riding co. York, 4½ miles W. of Aldbrough, 8 N.E. of Hedon, and 9½ N.E. of Hull. The village, which is inconsiderable, and entirely agricultural, is situated on the coast. Here was a hospital, founded prior to 1179 by William Earl of Albemarle.

NEWTON WITH BIGGIN, a tnshp. in the par. of Clifton-upon-Dunsmoor, Rugby div. of the hund. of Knightlow, co. Warwick, 1½ mile N. of Clifton-upon-Dunsmoor, and 3 miles N.E. of Rugby. It is situated near the river Avon and the viaduct of the London and North-Western railway. Edward Cave, the first editor of the Gentleman's Magazine, was born here in 1691.

NEWTON WITH DEANLANE, a district in the par. of Handley, co. Dorset, 6 miles N.W. of Cranborne.

NEWTON WITH EDGBOLD, a tnshp. in the par. of Meole-Brace, co. Salop, 6 miles N. of Shrewsbury.

NEWTON WITH LARTON, a tnshp. in the par. of West Kirby, lower div. of the hund. of Wirrall, co. Chester, 8 miles N.W. of Great Neston.

NEWTON WITH NORTHWAY, a tythg. in the par. of Ashchurch, lower div. of the hund. of Tewkesbury, co. Gloucester, 2 miles E. of Tewkesbury.

NEWTON WITH OTELEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Ellesmere, co. Salop, 2 miles E. of Ellesmere.

NEWTON-WITH-SCALES, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkham, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 1 mile S.E. of Kirkham, and 7 miles W. of Preston. It is a small straggling village, situated near the Fylde-road, from Kirkham to Preston. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. This tnshp. is in conjunction with Clifton-with-Salwivick. The inhabitants frequent the small chapel of Lund. There is a blue-coat school, founded in 1707 by John Hornby, for the maintenance, clothing, and education of boys of this township, the annual income of which now amounts to about £700.

NEWTON WITH STOKE, a tnshp. in the par. of Stokesay, co. Salop, 6 miles N.W. of Ludlow.

NEWTON-WOLD, a par. in the wap. of Dickering, East Riding co. York, 8 miles N.W. of Bridlington, and 11 N.E. of Great Driffield. It was anciently a chplry. within the par. of Hunmanby. The surface is diversified by hill and dale, and the soil fertile, though gravelly. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1772. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £118. The church is an ancient structure, but was thoroughly repaired in 1839. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans. The National school house was built in 1832, and endowed with £20 per annum by Abraham Rhodes. In the neighbourhood is a clear and copious spring, called the "Gipsey Spring."

NEWTON WOLD. See NEWTON-LE-WOLD, co. Lincoln.

NEWTON-WOLVES, a par. in the hund. of Upper Ragland, co. Monmouth, 6 miles N.W. of Chepstow. The village is small and chiefly agricultural. The soil is fertile and well cultivated. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £190.

NEWTON-WOOD, a par. in the hund. of Willybrook, co. Northampton, 4 miles N. of Oundle, and 5 S.W. of Wansford, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Nen, and on the road from King's Cleft to Oundle. The houses are in general built of stone, which gives the place a substantial appearance. The soil is rich and fertile, on a substratum of oolite rock, which is quarried for building purposes. Part of the land is in market gardens, for the supply of the Leicester markets with vegetables. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £80, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There is a place of worship for Wesleyan Methodists.

NEWTOWN, a hund. in the co. of Montgomery, containing the pars. of Aberhafesp, Bettws, Llandyssil, Llanllugan, Llanllwchaiarn, Llanmerewig, Llanwyddelan, Manafon, Newtown, Tregynon, and part of Berriew.

NEWTOWN, or TRE' NEWYDD, a par., market town and newly-created borough, in the above hund., co. Montgomery, 9½ miles from Welshpool, 7 from Montgomery, and 29½ from Oswestry, by the Cambrian railway, on which it is a station. It is situated in a fertile vale on the banks of the river Severn, by which it is nearly surrounded, and which is here crossed by a bridge of three arches. The direct road from Welshpool to Aberystwith passes through the town, and the Montgomery canal is within a short distance. It was formerly called Llanfair Ynghedrevain, or St. Mary's, in the cantref of Cydewain, and was then only a small village. It is now a modern manufacturing town, consisting of several streets, and containing about 6,000 inhabitants. The houses are mostly timber, framed with lath and plaster facings, like the buildings of Llanidloes. It has been considerably extended during late years, and contains upwards of fifty factories, chiefly for fine flannels, but its prosperity is not considered proportionate to its advantages of position, owing chiefly, as is said, to the popular objections to machinery in lieu of hand-weaving in this part of Wales. It contains a new flannel hall, erected at a cost of £4,000, in 1832, when the market was removed from Welshpool, also a post-office, and a plain brick townhall, but has no corporation. The National Provincial bank of England, and the North and South Wales bank, have branch offices in the town. Machinery of every description is made, and there are foundries, potteries, malt-kilns, tanneries, wharfs, and lime-kilns. Petty sessions for the hundred, and the winter assizes, are held at Newtown, which has been made a contributory borough with Montgomery, in the return of a member to parliament. The Newtown and Llanidloes Poor-law Union comprises seventeen parishes. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £406, in the patron. of the bishop. The old church, situated nearly in the centre of the town, is a venerable structure, dedicated to St. Idloes. It consists of a nave and chancel, with an aisle of equal breadth on the south side, divided from the main body by a wooden arcade of eight bays, but is now fast falling to decay. Pugh says, the walls in his time were covered with small cards in lackered frames, containing portions of Scripture, and from the roof were suspended several old knights' mantles upon poles. It formerly possessed an altar-piece of the Last Supper, painted and presented by the poet Dyer; also a remarkable rood-screen, enriched with carving, gold, and colour. The antique font and screen are of most curious workmanship, said to have been brought from the Abbey of Cwmhîr, in Radnorshire, and have been recently removed to the new church, which was built in 1847. There are places of worship for the Independents, Baptists, and Wesleyan Methodists, also National and other schools. The charities produce about £25 per annum. A little distance from the town is Newtown Hall, formerly the seat of the Pryses, surrounded by a park. Sir John Pryse, the last of this family, married three wives. The first two embalmed and placed them in his chamber, one on either side of his bed. The third, however, admitting no rivalship either by the living or dead, refused to supply their vacated places till their remains were interred. Sir John also survived his third wife, whom he so affectionately regarded, that, on her decease, he engaged a woman named Bridget Bostock to restore her to life, but she exerted her mysterious powers without any desirable effect. Market days are Tuesday and Saturday. Fairs are held on the first Tuesdays in February and May, the last Tuesdays in March and August, 24th June, 24th October, and 16th December.

NEWTOWN, a par. in the lower half of Evingar hund., co. Hants, 2 miles S. by E. of Newbury, its nearest railway station and post town. The village, which is situated on the river Emborne, is chiefly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £100 13*s*. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Burghclere, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church, dedicated to SS. Mary and John the Baptist, has been recently enlarged. There is a Church school, endowed by Lady Lucy Berkeley, with an annuity of £10. The Baptists have a place of worship. Newtown House is the principal residence. The Earl of Carnarvon is lord of the manor.

NEWTOWN, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Fareham, co. Hants, 3 miles W. of Fareham, and 15 S. of Winchester. It is situated on Southampton Water, at the head of Portsmouth harbour.

NEWTOWN, or NEWTON, a chplry. in the par. of Calbourne, lib. of West Medina, Isle of Wight, co. Hants, 5 miles W. of Newport, its post town, and the same distance E. of Yarmouth. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on Newton-Creek, which is navigable for vessels of 500 tons. It is a coastguard station, and was formerly a borough of importance, returning two members to parliament from the reign of Elizabeth, till disfranchised by the Reform Act. Newtown was anciently called Francheville, and is so named by Bishop Aymer of Winchester, in his Charter of Incorporation, which was confirmed by Edward II. It was burned by the Danes in 1001, and again in Richard II.'s reign by the French; hence the origin of its present name. There are some salterns. The old townhall, which stands on an eminence overlooking one of the creeks of Newton harbour, is now converted into a school-room, in which a Sunday-school is held. The chapel, dedicated to the Holy Ghost, is of recent construction. At the E. end is a stained window.

NEWTOWN, a hmlt. in the par. of Soberton, co. Hants, 3 miles E. of Bishop's Waltham.

NEWTOWN, a chplry. in the par. of Wem, hund. of North Bradford, co. Salop, 3 miles N.W. of Wem, Shrewsbury is its post town. The chplry., which is wholly agricultural, comprises the tnshps. of Newtown and Northwood. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £80, in the patron. of the inhabitants. The church, dedicated to King Charles the Martyr in 1663, and rebuilt in 1836, has a wooden turret containing one bell. A National school was built in 1854, and is supported by voluntary contributions.

NEWTOWN, a tnshp. in the par. of Baschurch, co. Salop, 7 miles N.W. of Shrewsbury.

NEWTOWN, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Moor, par. of Hawarden, co. Flint, 1 mile from Hawarden, and 6 miles W. of Chester. It is situated near the river Dee.

NEWTOWN, a tnshp. in the par. of Irthington, ward of Eskdale, co. Cumberland, 2 miles N.W. of Brampton, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Irthing, and is wholly agricultural.

NEWTOWN, a hmlt. in the par. of Dunton, co. Bedford, 2 miles E. of Biggleswade.

NEWTOWN, a tythg. in the par. of Hungerford, hund. of Kentbury Eagle, co. Berks, 3 miles N.E. of Hungerford.

NEWTOWN, a tnshp. in the par. of Dilwyn, co. Hereford, 1 mile W. of Weobly. It is joined with Hurst to form a township.

NEWTOWN, a tnshp. in the par. of Leominster, co. Hereford, 1 mile S.W. of Leominster.

NEWTOWN, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Worsley, par. of Eccles, co. Lancaster, 6 miles N.W. of Manchester. It is situated near the Wigan canal and the line of the Liverpool railway.

NEWTOWN, a tnshp. in the par. of Chillingham, E. div. of Glendale ward, co. Northumberland, 4½ miles S.E. of Wooler. Near the village is Hurlstone-cross, 12 feet in height. The soil is of a clayey nature, with a subsoil of rock and limestone.

NEWTOWN, a tnshp. in the par. of Rothbury, W. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 1 mile S.W. of Rothbury. The soil is a light loam, with a rocky subsoil. The Duke of Northumberland is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

NEWTOWN, a hmlt. in the par. of Durnford, co. Wilts, 3 miles N. of Salisbury.

NEWTOWN, a tythg. in the par. of Enford, co. Wilts, 6 miles N. of Amesbury.

NEWTOWN, a tythg. in the par. of Shalbourn, co. Wilts, 4 miles S.W. of Hungerford.

NEWTOWN, a hmlt. in the pars. of Hilton and Stainton, North Riding co. York, 2 miles E. of Yarm.

NEWTOWN, a vil. in the tnshp. of North Owram, par. of Halifax, and wap. of Morley, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.E. of Halifax. It is situated near the river Calder and Rochdale canal.

NEWTOWN, an ext. par. place in the city of Chichester, co. Sussex.

NEWTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Pencaitland, co. Haddington, Scotland, 5 miles S.W. of Haddington.

NEWTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Abbotshall, district of Kirkcaldy, co. Fife, Scotland, adjoining Abbotshall, of which it is a suburb. It is situated on the Frith of Forth, and is chiefly inhabited by fishermen and artisans engaged in the manufactures of linen and flannel.

NEW-TOWN, a vil. in the par. of Aberdour, co. Fife, Scotland, 4 miles W. of Burntisland. It is situated on the Frith of Forth, under the Cullelo hills.

NEWTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Borrowstoness, co. Linlithgow, Scotland, 2 miles N.W. of Linlithgow.

NEWTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Bedrule, co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 3 miles W. of Jedburgh. It is situated near the river Teviot, and the line of the North British railway, on which it has a station.

NEWTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Melrose, co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 2 miles S.E. of Melrose. It is situated near the river Tweed.

NEWTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Fintry, co. Stirling, Scotland, near Fintry, and 12 miles S.W. of Stirling. It is situated under the Campsie Fells at the sources of the Enrick and Carron rivers.

NEWTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Lower Kells, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N. of Kells, its post town. It is 1½ mile long, and about the same in breadth. The soil is mostly good. The road from Navan to Bailieborough traverses the interior, as also does a tributary to the river Blackwater. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with three others, £359, in the patron. of the crown and bishop. The church is old. There is a Roman Catholic chapel and a day school. Newtown House is the chief seat.

NEWTOWN, a par. in the bars. of Fartullagh and Moycashel, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles E. of Kilbeggan. Tyrrellspass is its post town. It is 5 miles long, by 3½ broad. The surface is boggy and hilly. It is bounded on the W. by the river Brosna. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with another, £303, in the patron. of the bishop and the crown. The church was the gift of the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Castletown Kindelan. There are three daily schools. Newforest is the principal seat. There are ruins of an old seat (Newtownloe) of the Low family standing beside an ancient fort.

NEWTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Rosmire, in the bar. of Decies-without-Drum, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles N.E. of Kilmacthomas.

NEWTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Tusmagh, in the bar. of Garrycastle, King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Banagher. There is a police station.

NEWTOWN, a hmlt. in the par. of Kilmore Erris, in the bar. of Erris, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 8 miles S.W. of Belmullet.

NEWTOWN, a hmlt. in the bar. and co. of Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, near Strokestown.

NEWTOWN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Athlone, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Roscommon.

NEWTOWN, a post-office vil. in the bar. of Uppercross, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Rathfarnham.

NEWTOWN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Loughrea, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles N.N.E. of Gort.

NEWTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Abbeyknockmoy, in the bar. of Tiaquin, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles S.W. of Newtown Bellew.

NEWTOWN-ANDERSON, a vil. in the par. of Carbury, co. Sligo, Ireland, 1 mile E. of Sligo.

NEWTOWN-ARDS, a par., post and market town, in the bars. of Ards and Lower Castlereagh, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. The par. is 7 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 3½. The soil is fertile, with a proportion of bog. The interior is traversed by the roads from Belfast to Grey-Abbey and to Donaghadee. The living is an impropriate cur. in the dioc. of Down, val. £120. The church was a gift from the late Board of First Fruits in 1817. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, six Presbyterian places of worship, and a Methodist meeting-house; also four Sunday and several day schools in the parish. Whiskey Hall and Millcross Lodge are the principal residences. The town is situated at the head of Lough Strangford, on the road from Bangor to Downpatrick, 19 miles N. of Downpatrick, and 109 from Dublin. It is a station on the Belfast and County Down railway. The town consists of a large square, where stands the townhall, from which area diverge the several principal streets. The Marquis of Londonderry has done much towards the improvement of the place. It is well lighted and paved, and enjoys various advantages. The principal public buildings are the courthouse, market house, dispensary, police station, the union poorhouse, a commercial bank, brewery, &c. The shaft of a stone cross stands in the great square. The principal manufactures are muslin, weaving, and embroidery. Petty sessions are held at intervals. Newtown Ards was founded in 1244 by Walter de Burgh. After its forfeiture by the O'Nials it came to the Hamilton and Montgomery families, from whom it passed to the Marquis of Londonderry, the present proprietor. It was chartered by James I., and was formerly a borough returning two members to the Irish parliament before the Union. The North Down Militia have their headquarters here. The Newtown Ards Poor-law Union includes 16 electoral divisions in county Down. This locality has long been celebrated for the number of religious houses, traces of some of which are still discernable. Saturday is market day. Fairs are held on 23rd January, 14th May, and 23rd September.

NEWTOWN-BARRY, ST. MARY'S, a par., post and market town, in the bar. of Scarawalsh. co. Wexford. prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 24 miles N.N.W. of Wexford, and 61 from Dublin. The par. is 6 miles long, and its extreme breadth is 3. The surface is hilly and well wooded, consisting of part of the valley of the river Slaney. The roads from Dublin to New-Ross and to Wexford pass through the parish. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. £304, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is near a century old, but has been recently enlarged. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Clonegall. Woodfield, the seat of Lord Farnham, Ryland Villa, and Millview Cottage are the principal seats. The town lies near the foot of the Blackstairs mountains and Mount Kennedy, at the point where the Clody river joins the Slaney. It was founded by the Barry family in 1577, and came from them to the Maxwells, and was occupied by the rebels in 1798. It contains a police station, barracks, schools, dispensary, and fever hospital, which last is in the Enniscorthy poor-law union. Petty sessions are held at intervals. Saturday is market day. Fairs are held on 4th January, 29th April, 17th and 18th June, 20th August, 14th September, 4th and 30th November.

NEWTOWN BELLEW, a post-office vil. in the par. of Moylough, bar. of Tiaquin, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles N. of Castle Blakeney. It is situated on the road from Tuam to Ballinasloe. It contains the parish church of Moylough, and a Roman Catholic chapel. There is a police station in the village, and petty sessions are held at intervals. Summerville and Mount Bellew are the chief seats. In the vicinity are ruins of a castle and of a Roman Catholic chapel.

NEWTOWNBREDA, a post-office vil. in the par. of Knockbreda, bar. of Upper Castlereagh, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, 3 miles S.E. of Belfast. It is situated on the road from Belfast to Saintfield, and near the Giant's Ring. Here stands the parish church and a police station. Petty sessions are held in the village. Among several seats is that of Belvoir Park, the residence of Sir R. Bateson.

NEWTOWN BROWN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Gallen, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Swineford. It is situated on the road to Balla.

NEWTOWN-BUTLER, a post and market vil. in the par. of Galloon, bar. of Coole, co. Fermanagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 15 miles S.E. of Enniskillen, 7 from Dundalk, and 83 from Dublin. It is situated on the road from thence to Cavan, and on the line of the Irish North-Western railway, on which it is a station. It contains the parish church of Galloon, a Roman Catholic chapel, Methodist meeting-house, schools, bridewell, barracks, police station, and a dispensary, which last is within the Clones poor-law union. Quarter and petty sessions are held in the village. A pretty brisk trade is carried on in consequence of its nearness to the Ulster canal. This place gives title of baron to the earls of Lanesborough. Friday is market day. Fairs are held once a month, and on the 12th May.

NEWTOWN-BUTLER, a vil. in the bar. of Dunkellin, co. Galway, Ireland, 3 miles from Oranmore.

NEWTOWN-CLONBUN, a par. in the bar. of Upper Navan, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 1 mile E.N.E. of Trim, its post town. It is 2 miles long, and 4 furlongs broad. The parish is bounded on the S. by the river Boyne, and is crossed by the road from Trim to Navan. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Trim, £559, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a hedge school. Newtown Park and Newtown Cottage are the chief residences. Towards the southern extremity of the parish stand the ruins of Newtown Abbey, founded in 1206 by Simon Rochford. Among the ruins are several monuments, one of which is to the memory of Sir Lucius Dillon.

NEWTOWN-CROMMELIN, a par. in the bar. of Kilconway, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 8 miles N. of Ballemena. Clough is its post town. It is 3 miles long by 2½ broad. The surface is mountainous and boggy. The road from Cushendall to Kilrea and Portglenone passes through the parish. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Connor, val. £93, in the patron. of the Rector of Dunaghy. The church was a gift from the late Board of First Fruits in 1831. There are two Sunday and three day schools; also a police station. Fairs are held once a month.

NEWTOWN-CUNNINGHAM, a post-office vil. in the par. of All Saints, bar. of Raphoe, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles W. of Londonderry. It is situated on the road from Letterkenny, and near the head of the bay of Lough Swilly. Here is a police station and the parish church of All Saints. Petty sessions are held once a month. A fair is held on the 29th October.

NEWTOWNDALY, a hmlt. in the bar. of Leitrim, co. Galway Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Loughrea.

NEWTOWN FORBES, a post-office vil. in the par. of Clongesh, bar. and co. of Longford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.N.W. of Longford, and 77 from Dublin. It is a station on the Sligo branch of the Midland Great Western railway. It is situated on the road from Dublin to Sligo. Here are police and militia barracks, also the parish church of Clongesh, a Roman Catholic chapel, and a Methodist meeting-house. Petty sessions are held in the village.

NEWTOWN FORTESCUE, a vil. in the par. of Grangegeeth, bar. of Upper Slane, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N. of Slane. It is situated on the road to Ardee. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and a school.

NEWTOWN-GERARD, a hmlt. in the bar. of Killian, co. Galway, 6 miles N. of Castle Blakeney.

NEWTOWN-GIRLEY, a vil. in the bar. of Upper Kells, co. Meath, Ireland, 3 miles N. of Athboy.

NEWTOWN-GORE, a post-office vil. in the par. and bar. of Carrigallen, co. Leitrim, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Carrigallen. Here are the ruins of Moy Abbey. Woodford is the chief demesne in the neighbourhood.

NEWTOWN-HAMILTON, a par., post and market town in the bar. of Upper Fews, co. Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. The par. is 5 miles long by 4 broad. The surface is very hilly. The County Water flows on the W.; the Newtown Hamilton river intersects the interior, and two loughs border the S. The road from Dublin to Armagh crosses the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. £451 in the patron. of the primate. The church was built by the late Board of First Fruits in 1775. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Creggan. There is a Presbyterian meeting-house in the parish; also several day schools. The town is situated among the Fews Mountains, near the County Water, 12 miles S.S.E. of Armagh, and 66 from Dublin on the Armagh road. It was founded by the Hamilton family in 1770. It contains a Roman Catholic and three other chapels, market and court houses, barracks, a bridewell, schools, and a dispensary, which last is in the Castleblaney poor-law union. There is a police station, and petty sessions are held in the town. In the vicinity are ruins of Blackbank Castle. Saturday is market day. Fairs are held once a month.

NEWTOWN-LENNAN, a par. in the bars. of Slieveardagh and East Iffa and Offa, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles N. of Carrick on Suir, its post town. It is 4½ miles long by 2 broad. The parish is bounded on one side by the river Lennan. The surface is hilly but fertile. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. with Clonegane, £562, in the patron. of the crown. There is a Roman Catholic chapel; also two day schools. Cregg House and Knockroe House are the chief seats. Slate and lime are worked.

NEWTOWNLIMAVADY, a post and market town in the par. of Drumachose, bar. of Keenaght, co. Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 16 miles E.N.E. of Londonderry, and 142 from Dublin. It is a station on the Belfast and Northern counties railway. It is situated in the sheltered valley of the river Roe, near Lough Foyle, and consists of four principal and several subordinate thoroughfares. It contains two market places, a good hotel, sessions house, two branch banks, a savings-bank, barracks, reading-rooms, police station, a union poorhouse, dispensary, and a distillery. The parish church stands in the town. There are also a Roman Catholic chapel, a Presbyterian, and two other meeting-houses. A bridge of six arches crosses the river. General sessions are held twice a year, petty sessions once a fortnight. The site of the town is near that of a castle of the ancient O'Cahans, called Limavaddy, or "dog's leap." The town was sometime held by Sir T. Philips, who forfeited it in 1608. It was attacked by Con O'Nial in 1641, and twice destroyed by fire between that period and 1688. It was chartered in the time of James I., and returned two members to the Irish parliament until the Union, when it was disfranchised. Monday, Tuesday, and Friday are market days. Fairs are held on the second Monday in February, 28th March, 13th June, 12th July, and 29th October.

NEWTOWN-LINFORD, a par. in the hund. of West Goscote, co. Leicester, 5½ miles N.W. of Leicester, its post town. The village, which is small, is chiefly agricultural. There are granite quarries at the N. end of the parish. This place is situated in a valley at the southern corner of Charnwood Forest, and is watered by the Anstey Brook, a good trout stream, falling into the Soar. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the extensive woods by which the parish is surrounded. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £100. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a small ancient structure, with a tower containing four bells. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. There is a Sunday-school, also an infant school. Roecliffe Hall is the principal residence. The Earl of Stamford is lord of the manor, and owner of Bradgate Park, which is well stocked with deer. The mansion, which once stood in the park, was the seat of the Greys, ancestors of the present earl, and is famous in history as the birth-place of the unfortunate Lady Jane Grey, who was educated here under the tuition of Aylmer, afterwards Bishop of London. In the summer of 1696 William III. was entertained at this mansion, on which occasion, oral tradition asserts, it was then intentionally fired by the then Countess of Stamford, and has not since been inhabited.

NEWTOWN-LOW, a vil. in the par. of Newtown, bar. of Moycashel, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles E. of Kilbeggan. Here is a church and school.

NEWTOWN-MOUNT-KENNEDY, a small post and market town in the par. of Upper Newcastle, bar. of Newcastle, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 8 miles N. of Wicklow, and 21 from Dublin. It is a station on the Dublin, Wicklow, and Wexford line. It is situated on the Dublin and Wexford road, near the sea-side on the river Leabeg. The surrounding neighbourhood has many gentlemen's seats. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, the parish church of Newcastle, national and charity schools, a fever hospital, and a dispensary, which last is within the Rathdrum poor-law union. It was formerly a market town founded by Alderman Kennedy in the time of Charles II. The rebels sustained a defeat here in 1789. The town owes much to the Cunninghams for recent improvements. Here is a police station, and petty sessions are held in the court-house. Fairs are held on the 2nd February, 5th April, 29th June, 15th of August, 29th October, and 21st December.

NEWTOWN-PLATTEN, a vil. in the bar. of Lower Duleek, co. Meath, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Drogheda.

NEWTOWN-REGAN, a hmlt. in the par. of Kiltartan, co. Galway, Ireland, 1 mile S.W. of Gort.

NEWTOWNSANDES, a vil. in the bar. of Iraghticonnor, co. Kerry, Ireland, 6 miles N.E. of Listowel.

NEWTOWN-SAVILLE, a chplry. in the par. of Clogher, co. Tyrone, Ireland, 4 miles E. of Fintora.

NEWTOWN-STEWART, a post and market town in the par. of Ardstraw, bar. of Strabane, co. Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 8 miles N. of Omagh, and 119 from Dublin. It is a station on the Irish North-Western railway. It is situated on the river Mourne, and on the road from Dublin to Londonderry. Bessy Bell and Mary Grey are two hills in the vicinity. It was formerly called Lislas, and was a place of some consequence. It was held by Sir J. Clapham by grant of James I., but was afterwards forfeited and given to Sir William Stewart, from whom the town takes its name. It was taken in 1641 by Phelim O'Nial, and was fired by James II. on his way to Londonderry, but was afterwards restored by the Stewarts. The business of the place is declining. It contains the parish church, a Roman Catholic and four Protestant chapels, a dispensary within the Strabane poor-law union, and a police station. Petty sessions are held at intervals. Barons Court is the seat of the Marquis of Abercorn, and Newtown-Stewart Castle that of Major Crawford. Tuesday and Saturday are market days. Fairs are held once a month.

NEW-TROWS, a vil. in the par. of Lesmahago, co. Lanark, Scotland, 8 miles S.W. of Lanark. It is situated near the river Clyde.

NEWTYLE, a par. in the co. of Forfar, Scotland. It comprises a vil. of the same name, also the vil. of Newbigging, and numerous hmlts. It extends about 2½ miles in length, with an extreme breadth of 2 miles, and is bounded on the N.W. by the co. Perth, and on other sides by the pars. of Nevay, Glammis, Auchterhouse, Lundie, and Kettins. It includes a portion of the Sidlaw hills, from the spurs of which the lands decline towards the rich flat plain of Strathmore. The greatest altitude is obtained on the N.E. boundary by Kilpirnie's Hill, which rises 1,151 feet above sea-level. The summit of this hill is crowned by a tower, built by the Lord Privy Seal as an observatory. The soil is a rich loam, composed of black earth and clay, alternating with sand, and in some places gravel. It is generally fertile and well cultivated. Whinstone and good marl abound, and sandstone is quarried to a considerable extent. The air is dry and healthy, except in a few marshy places towards the N. Coals and peat are the general fuel. The vil. of Newtyle is about 11 miles N.W. of Dundee, 5 N.E. of Cupar, and 3 S.E. of Meigle. It has a station on the Cupar-Angus railway, at its junction with the Scottish Midland railway. It is situated under the Sidlaws, near Newtyle Clachan Pass, and is traversed by the turnpike road from Dundee to Newtyle and Meigle, and by the Dundee and Newtyle railway. The village was an insignificant place previous to 1832, but since that period has made rapid strides. Its streets and houses are well built. Many of the inhabitants are weavers, and a good general business is done, but the village owes its prosperity chiefly to the opening of the railway. Near the village are the ruins of Hatton Castle, erected by Lord Oliphant in 1575, and contiguous to these ruins were until recently traces of the more ancient castle of Balcraig. This par. is in the presb. of Meigle, and synod of Angus and Mearns. The minister has a stipend of £163. The parish church was erected in 1769, and was restored and enlarged in the years 1824 and 1835. There are an United Presbyterian church, a Free Church preaching station, also a parochial school, and other schools. At Auchtertyre are traces of Montrose's camp, and about a quarter of a mile to the S. were discovered the ruins of a Pictish house of large dimensions, probably used as a safe repository for stores in time of war.

NEW VILLAGE, an ext. par. place in the Hunsley-Beacon div. of Harthill wap., East Riding co. York, 2 miles S.W. of North Cave.

NEYLAND, a hmlt. in the par. of Ashwellthorpe, hund. of Depwade, co. Norfolk, 4 miles S.E. of Wymondham. It was anciently a separate parish, but the church was long since demolished, and the living consolidated with that of Ashwellthorpe.

NEYLAND. See NAYLAND, co. Suffolk.

NEYLAND, a vil. in the par. of Llanstadwell, co. Pembroke, 3 miles N.W. of Pembroke. See MILFORD HAVEN.

NIBLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Westerleigh, co. Gloucester, 2 miles W. of Chipping Sodbury. It is situated near the Bristol and Gloucester railway.

NIBLEY, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Upper Berkeley, co. Gloucester, 2 miles N.W. of Wotton-under-Edge, its post town, 3 N.E. of Charfield, and the same distance S.W. of Dursley. The village is of considerable antiquity, and was formerly famed for the manufacture of woollen cloth, but this industry has considerably declined. The soil is loamy, on a subsoil of blue clay. Stone is quarried for building purposes. The right to the manor was litigated between the families of Lord Berkeley and Lord Lisle for nearly 200 years, during which William, Lord Berkeley, and Thomas, Lord Lisle, had recourse to arms to decide their right; and on 20th May, 1470, both parties met on Nibley Green with their respective followers, amounting to about 1,000 men, of whom 150 fell in the combat, and amongst them Lord Lisle, who was shot in the mouth with an arrow, which decided the contest. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £160, in the patron. of Corpus Christi College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, is an ancient stone structure. The interior was restored in 1850, and a new stone font presented. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a boys' endowed school, also a mixed school, supported by subscriptions. The Wesleyans and the Independents have each a place of worship. Earl Fitzhardinge is lord of the manor.

NIBTHWAITE, a tnshp. in the par. of Coulton, hund. of Lonsdale North of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 8 miles N. of Ulverstone. Situated at the foot of Conistone Water, it commands a view of the lake and fells.

NICHOLAS-AT-WADE, a par. in the Isle of Thanet, hund. of Ringslow and lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 6 miles W. by S. of Margate. The parish is considerable, but sparsely inhabited. The vicarial tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £25, with a glebe of 9 acres, and those belonging to the Archbishop of Canterbury for a rent-charge of £1,026, with a glebe of 12 acres. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £161, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure with a square tower at the W. end. The nave is separated from the S. aisle by three Saxon arches. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Paramore's school has an income from endowment of £16. The charities comprise a bequest of £80 to be given to eight poor and honest labourers.

NICHOLAS-CASTLE HOLD, ST., a par. in the lib. of West Medina, Isle of Wight, co. Hants, adjacent to the town of Newport, within which borough it is partly included. The parish is of small extent. The living is a discharged vic. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £25, in the patron. of the Governor of Carisbrook Castle, to which it was attached. See NEWPORT.

NICHOLAS, ST., a par. in the hund. of Dewisland, co. Pembroke, 4 miles S.W. of Fishguard, its post town, and 12 from St. David's. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the coast. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Granston, in the dioc. of St. David's. There is a place of worship for the Independents. The tithes were commuted in 1839. There are traces of a cromlech in the neighbourhood.

NICHOLAS, ST. See MONCKTON, co. Pembroke.

NICHOLAS, ST., a par. in the hund. of Wonford, co. Devon, 5 miles E. of Newton-Bushell. It is situated on the river Teign, opposite Teignmouth, its post town, and with which it communicates by a bridge. It comprises the vil. of Shaldon, and the greater part of the hmlt. of Ringmore. The living is a discharged vic. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £125. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. There are National and other schools.

NICHOLAS, ST., a par. in the hund. of Dinas-Powis, co. Glamorgan, 6 miles S.W. of Cardiff, its post town, and the same distance from Cowbridge. The village is of small extent, and wholly agricultural. It has near Dyffryn House the largest cromlech in the kingdom, the upper stone measuring 24 feet by 17, forming the roof of a chamber about 14 feet in length, 15 in width, and 6 in height; and near it is a smaller one, and a third near Cotterell; also other traces of Druidical remains, proving this neighbourhood to have been one of the holy places of the Druids, as also shown by the name Duffryn Golych, or "Valley of Worship." Petty sessions are held here. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £245. The church is a small ancient edifice dedicated to St. Nicholas.

NICHOLAS, ST., a chplry. in the par. of Stanford-le-Hope, hund. of Barstable, co. Essex, 9 miles S.E. of Brentwood. It is situated near Hope Reach, on the Thames.

NICHOLAS, ST., an islet in Plymouth Sound, co. Devon.

NICHOLAS, ST., a sandbank opposite the Scroby, in the old channel to Yarmouth Roads, sometimes called the Gat.

NICHOLAS, ST., a par. in the bar. of Ballaghkeen, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles N.N.E. of Wexford, its post town. It is 2 miles long by 1½ mile broad. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with Ardcolm, £509, in the patron. of the bishop.

NICHOLAS, ST., a par. in the city of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. See CORK.

NICHOLAS, ST., a par. in the city of Galway, co. Connaught, Ireland. See GALWAY.

NICHOLAS, ST., a par. in the city of Limerick, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland. See LIMERICK.

NICHOLASTON, a par. in the hund. of Swansea, co. Glamorgan, 2 miles from Penrice, its post town, and 9 S.W. of Swansea. It is situated on Oxwich Bay, near Cefn Bryn, and contains the hmlt. of Manselfield. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David, with Oxwich annexed, val. £224. The church is a small ancient edifice.

NICHOL-FOREST, a chplry. in the par. of Kirk-Andrews-upon-Esk, ward of Eskdale, co. Cumberland, 10 miles N. by E. of Longtown, its post town. It is situated on the rivers Liddel and Kershop, which here form several cascades, and near the borders of Scotland. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. From the bed of the Liddel rises a medicinal spring strongly impregnated with alum, called Hert-feel Spa. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £132, in the patron. of the Rector of Kirk-Andrews upon Esk. The church is situated at Kingfield, and was rebuilt in 1812. The poet Armstrong was born here.

NICKLEBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Lythe, E. div. of the lib. of Langbaurgh, North Riding co. York, 6 miles W. by N. of Whitby. The village is considerable. There is a place of worship for the Independents.

NICOLSON, an ancient par. in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland, now joined to Temple.

NIDD, a par. in the lib. of Ripon, West Riding co. York, 1¼ mile N.E. of Ripley, its post town. The Nidd Bridge station of the Leeds, Harrogate, and Thirsk line of railway is in this parish. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Nidd, which takes its rise under Great Whernside, whence it flows through Nidderdale, and past Pateley-Bridge, Ripley, and Knaresborough to the river Ouse at Nun-Monckton. The village derives its name from the forementioned river, and is wholly agricultural. Lead and strontian are found in the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £91, in the patron. of the Duchy of Lancaster. The church is a small ancient stone structure with a tower containing one bell. The church is in a bad state of repair. In the churchyard is a monument to the Rawson family. Nidd-Hall is the principal residence.

NIDDRY, a vil. in the par. of Kirkliston, co. Linlithgow, Scotland, 3 miles N.E. of Uphall. It is situated on the Union canal and Ecclesmachan Burn, near the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway.

NIDDRY, or NIDDRIE, a vil. in the par. of Libberton, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 3 miles S.E. of Edinburgh, and 1¾ mile S. of Portobello. It has a station on the North British railway. The village occupies a gentle eminence. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the collieries. The colliers' habitations form a lengthy row of red-tiled cottages. In the vicinity are traces of an ancient chapel founded in 1389.

NIDON, or KNIGHTON, an ext. par. place in the hund. of South Petherton, co. Somerset, 3 miles N.W. of South Petherton.

NIDPATH, a castle in the co. of Peebles, Scotland, 1 mile W. of Peebles. It is situated on a rock overlooking the river Tweed, and was once a formidable fortress having walls 11 feet in thickness, but was taken and dismantled by Cromwell.

NIER, a river of the co. of Waterford, Ireland. It rises in the Commeragh mountains, and joins the Suir.

NIGER, a river of the co. of Norfolk, rises near Englefield, and falls into the German Ocean below Cley.

NIGG, a par. in the district of Easter-Ross, co. Ross, Scotland. It comprises the vils. of Shandwick, Balnabruack, and Balnapellin. It extends in length about 6 miles from S.W. to N.E., with a varying breadth of from 2 to 3. The larger portion of the parish forms a peninsula betwixt the Moray Frith and the upper portion of the Cromarty Frith, the remainder being bounded by the parishes of Logie-Easter and Fearn. The surface is chiefly of a hilly nature, the principal hill, called "Nigg," giving name to the parish. This ridge, which overhangs the Moray Frith, extends in length about 5 miles, and attains an altitude of 500 feet. It was formerly artificially wooded with Scotch pines, but these have been entirely cleared, so that it now presents a dreary aspect. Its sides are bold and rocky, and it is chiefly frequented by goats, eagles, and water-fowls. The surface gradually declines towards the Cromarty Frith, and the skirts of this slope become wider towards the N. and W., till they eventually merge in a large tract of level land, which is flanked by the sands of Nigg. The soil of the arable land, which lies chiefly to the W. of Nigg Hill, consists of a fine black loam upon a subsoil of red sandstone. The chief rocks are conglomerate, granitic gneiss, greenish clay, and sandstone. The village of Nigg is about 3 miles N. of Cromarty. It is situated in a corner of the parish, at the ferry over Cromarty Frith, and near the line of the Inverness and Perth and Inverness and Aberdeen Junction railway, on which it is a station. It formerly had a fort at Dunskeath, built by William the Lion, in 1179. The parish is traversed by the road from the ferry to Tain. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the fisheries. The sands abound in mussels and shell-fish, which are very productive. This par. is in the presb. of Tain, and synod of Ross, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £234. The parish church was erected in 1626, but since that period has been frequently restored. There are a Free church and an United Presbyterian church. There are parochial and other schools. Bayfield House is the principal residence. Near Shandwick House is a large obelisk with hieroglyphic figures upon it, supposed to commemorate the death of three sons of a Danish king who perished by shipwreck upon the coast. Another similar obelisk formerly stood in the churchyard, but was blown down by a storm of wind in 1725. On the farm of Ankerville, more than a mile from the sea, and nearly 200 feet above its level, is a stratum of oyster-shells of considerable extent, and above 6 inches in depth; they lie about 3 feet below the surface, imbedded in sand, similar to that by the sea-shore.

NIGG, a par. in the co. of Kincardine, Scotland. It extends about 5 miles in length from N.E. to S.W., with an extreme breadth of 3. This par., which is situated at the N.E. extremity of the shire, comprises the vils. of Cove, Torry, Burnbank, and Charlston. The surface is of a hilly nature, that chain of mountains called the Grampians terminating at the German Ocean here. It is crossed by a ridge, 200 feet above sea-level, but which is arable for some distance from its base. On the summit of the ridge are two extensive cairns, which serve as landmarks. The surface is chiefly of a moory and mossy character. There are several granite quarries, which are worked to a great extent, above 4,000 tons being annually exported. The coast is rocky and bold, the cliffs rising along the E. shore from 60 to 80 feet. The N.E. point, called the Girdle Ness, is a remarkable promontory forming the S. side of the estuary of the Dee. There is a small bay, called the Bay of Nigg, at the head of which stands the parish church. The village of Nigg is about 1 mile S. of Aberdeen. It is situated on a peninsula, formed by the river Dee and Nigg Bay, under Girdleness Point. It formerly belonged to Arbroath Abbey, which had a cell at Abbot's Walls. In the villages of Cove and Torry the fisheries are prosecuted with success. There are both a ferry and a bridge over the river Dee at this point. This par. is in the presb. and synod of Aberdeen, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £160. The parish church, erected in 1829, is a structure of granite, with a quadrangular tower. There are a parochial school, and three others. There is a holy well, called Downy Well, in the Bay of Nigg, much frequented by visitors from Aberdeen in the month of May. At Abbot's Walls have been found some silver medals struck in 1559, on the marriage of Queen Mary.

NIGHTINGIRLE, a vil. in the par. of Trevetham, co. Monmouth, 1 mile from Pontypool. It is situated near the river Afon and the Brecon canal.

NIGHTON, ST., a chplry. in the par. of St. Winnow, hund. of West, co. Cornwall, 2 miles N.E. of Lostwithiel. The chapel-of-ease is dedicated to St. Necton.

NILTEEN GRANGE, a par. in the bar. of Upper Antrim, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles E. of Antrim. It lies along the Six-mile Water. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Connor, val. with Donegore, £295, in the patron. of the bishop. There are a Sunday and three day schools.

NINEBANKS, a chplry. in the par. of Allendale, S. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 3 miles S.W. of Allendale, and 10 from Haydon Bridge. The chapelry is of large extent, and is intersected by a branch of the river Tyne. It was anciently the property of the Earls of Auckland, who had a castle here, the tower of which is still remaining. There are several lead mines, once very productive, and quarries of building stone. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £125, in the patron. of the Incumbent of Allendale. The church was rebuilt in 1813, when the cemetery was enlarged. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. There is a National school.

NINEBARROW, one of the chalk downs in the Isle of Purbeck, co. Dorset, 3 miles E. of Corfe Castle.

NINE-ELMS, a hmlt. in the par. of South Lambeth, adjoining Vauxhall, 3 miles S.S.W. of St. Paul's. It is a large goods station on the South-Western railway out of London, and a steamboat pier on the S. bank of the Thames near Vauxhall Bridge.

NINEHEAD. See NYNEHEAD, co. Somerset.

NINE-MILE-BURN, a vil. in the par. of Pennycuick, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 3 miles S.W. of Pennycuick. It is situated on the new road from Edinburgh to Dumfries.

NINE-MILE-HOUSE, a vil. in the bar. of Slievardagh, co. Tipperary, Ireland, 9 miles E. of Fethard. It is situated under the Slievenaman Mountains.

NINFIELD, a hund. in the co. of Sussex, contains the pars. of Catsfield, Hooe, and Ninfield, comprising an area of 7,420 acres.

NINFIELD, or NINEFIELD, a par. in the above hund., rape of Hastings, co. Sussex, 5 miles W. by S. of Battle, its nearest railway station, and post town, and 7 N.E. of Hailsham. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on an eminence near the road leading from Lewes to Battle and Hastings, and E. of the river Ashbourne. The land is chiefly arable, but there is a considerable proportion of common and woodland, and 60 acres of hop grounds. The highest spot in the parish is Standard-hill, on which the famous battle of Hastings was fought. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £426. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £244, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a low square tower containing one bell. There is a National school. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a place of worship.

NINGWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of Shaltfleet, Isle of Wight, co. Hants, 5 miles W. of Newport.

NINIAN'S, ST., a seat in the par. of Wooler, ward of East Glendale, co. Northumberland, 43 miles N. by W. of Newcastle. It is situated under the Cheviot Hills, and is the property of Sir H. St. Paul, Bart.

NINIAN'S, ST., or RONAN'S, an islet in Scalloway Bay, forming one of the South Shetland Isles, coast of Scotland, 3 miles N.W. of Dunrossness.

NINIAN'S, ST., a par. in the co. of Stirling, Scotland. It is an extensive parish, originally called Eccles, occupying part of the valleys of the Forth and Clyde in the central district of Stirlingshire. Its greatest length from E. to W. is 13 miles, and its greatest breadth 8. It is bounded on the E. by the par. of Airth, on the W. by Fintry and Gargunnock, on the S. by Denny, Dunipace, Kilsyth, and Larbert, and, on the N., by the par. of Stirling and the banks of the Forth. It contains a suburb of the burgh of Stirling, the quoad sacra pars. and vils. of Bannockburn and Plean, the post town of St. Ninian's, and the vils. of Auchinbowie, Bellfield, Cambusbarron, Charteris-Hall, Greenyards, Newhouse, Torbrex, and Whins of Milton. The surface of the parish, like that of the adjacent districts, is divided into the carse, dryfield, and muir lands. The carse, which comprises all the low lands in the E. by the "links of Forth," was, until a recent period, a flat morassy wilderness, being only a few feet above the level of the sea, but is now one expanse of rich luxuriance, producing abundant crops. The dryfield district adjoins the carse, rising abruptly towards the S. and W. It is chiefly undulating, and is enclosed and well cultivated. The muirland comprises the remainder of the parish, extending from the dryfield to the western boundary, and consists chiefly of hilly moorland, with some excellent pasture in the southern part.—The principal summits are Dundaff, Craigannet, and Earl's Hill, which form the eastern extremity of the Lennox range, and attain an elevation of about 1000 feet above the sea level. There are also a minor range of basaltic columnar hills branching off as spurs towards the Stirling heights, and connecting the Lennox and Ochil hills. It is thought that the Royal Forest of Dundaff once covered the high lands, as they are still called by the inhabitants the "Lands of Dundaff." The parish is watered by the rivers Forth and Bannock, besides the Touch, Earl's-Burn, Carron-Water, and numerous other trout streams, falling into the Forth and Clyde. On the southern border is the moorland lake of Loch Coulter, about 2 miles in circumference, abounding with perch, peel, and eels. This lake is remarkable for its volcanic properties, the surface of the water having suddenly fallen 12 feet at the Lisbon earthquake in 1755, and, ten years afterwards, when the shock of an earthquake was felt in this part of the country, a stone, weighing nearly a ton, was thrown out some yards on its bank. Two cascades, called Auchentillen's-sprout and Gilmour's-linn, occur in this parish, the former on the Carron-water, and the latter on Touch-burn.—The soil, as well as the surface of the carse, dryfield, and muirland districts, differ vastly in character. In the first the alluvial soil is 20 feet deep, resting on a layer of moss, sand, or shale, with sandstone and carboniferous rocks beneath. The dryfield rests entirely on rocks of the carboniferous formation, comprising a coalfield of great value, which has been extensively worked at Bannockburn, Auchinbowie, Greenyards, and Plean, producing about 60,000 tons of coal a-year. The prevailing rocks in the muirland district are columnar trap, with underlying strata of sandstone, clay-slate, mountain limestone, and shale, which occasionally crop out. Sandstone is extensively quarried at Blackcraig, Catscraig, and Craigbeg, and, in other parts of the parish, freestone, ironstone, and limestone are found.—The parish is traversed by the Scottish Central railway, which has a station at Bannockburn, and by the Forth and Clyde railway, also by the roads from Stirling to Airth, Falkirk, Glasgow, and Balfron. The village of St. Ninian's is comprised within the parliamentary boundaries of Stirling, and is almost connected with that borough by the straggling villages of Newhouse and Bellfield, which skirt the great south road from Stirling. Many of the houses are old and curiously carved, some of considerable antiquity, but others with the tools of the tradesmen, to whom they originally belonged. Extensive manufactures of curtains, carpets, and woollens, have long been carried on in several parts of the parish, particularly at Bannockburn, St. Ninian's, and Cambusbarron. There are likewise several tanneries, nail-making establishments, brick and tile works, malting-houses, a brewery, and distilleries, though this last industry is not so extensively carried on as formerly.

There are two small shipping wharves in the parish, one at Fallin, chiefly used for lime and coal, and the other at Throsk, from which bricks and tiles are exported.—The par. of St. Ninian's is in the presb. of Stirling and synod of Perth and Stirling, and in the patron. of the heads of families. The minister's stipend is £345 3*s.*, and glebe valued at £30. The parish church was built in 1760. There are besides two chapels-of-ease, respectively at Bannockburn and at Plean, also two Free churches and two United Presbyterian churches, at St. Ninian's and at Bannockburn. There are eighteen non-parochial schools, some partially endowed, and several public libraries. The ancient church, called Kirk-a-muir, situated about 6 miles to the S.W. of the present parish church, has long been in ruins, having been blown up by the Highlanders in 1746. It has now disappeared entirely, except the burial ground, which is still in use. There were besides anciently three other places of worship in the parish, now extinct, viz. St. Mary's chapel at Skeok, a chapel at St. Ninian's well, whence the present name of the parish is derived, and a chapel at Cambusbarron.—The most notable event connected with this parish was the celebrated battle of Bannockburn, memorials of which exist at Randolph Field, where are the Standing Stones, and near the village of St. Ninian's, the Bore Stone, in which Bruce planted his standard; also at the Bloody Fold, and at Ingram's Crook. There were also fought within this parish two other battles of great note, viz. that of Stirling, in 1297, at Torwor, and that of Sauchieburn, on the 11th June, 1488, at Little Canglour, near Beaton's Mill, where James III. was murdered the same day. It was also the headquarters of the Pretender in 1745 and 1746. The principal antiquities are the Roman road from Camelon to Brechin, on the line of which are five small camps or stations, the castle of Sir John the Græme (who fell at Falkirk) at Muirland, the house of Sauchie, now in ruins, Bruce's castle at Carnock, a square tower at Plean mill, now used as a quarry, several cairns or tumuli, and numerous remains of rude fortifications, breastworks, camps, and artificial hills. The dukes of Montrose, who trace kindred with Sir John Graham, the companion of Sir William Wallace, take their second title of Viscount Dundaff from the lands of Dundaff. Several persons of celebrity have been born in this parish, as Dr. Henry the historian, Miss Hamilton, the authoress of the "Cottagers of Glenburnie," and Mr. Harvey, the painter. Two annual cattle fairs are held, one at Newmarket, the other at Broxbrae, in the neighbourhood of Bannockburn.

NISBET, a vil. in the par. of Pencaitland, co. Haddington, Scotland, 2 miles N.W. of East Salton, and 4½ S.W. of Haddington. It is situated on the left bank of the river Tyne.

NISBET, EAST AND WEST, vils. in the par. of Crailing, co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 3 miles N.E. of Jedburgh. Here is a station on the Jedburgh branch of the North British railway. Nisbet is situated on the river Teviot, and was formerly a parish.

NITH, a river in the cos. of Ayr and Dumfries, Scotland. It was known to the ancients as the Nidus flumen, and has a course of about 50 miles, abounding in trout and salmon. It rises in the hills near Dalmellington in Ayrshire, and, flowing through Nithsdale, which formerly gave title of earl to the Maxwells, enters Dumfriesshire, and falls into the Solway Frith, about 3 miles S. of Dumfries, below which it is navigable for large craft.

NITON, or NEIGHTON, a par. in the lib. of East Medina, Isle of Wight, co. Hants, 8½ miles S. of Newport, its post town, and 5 W. of Ventnor. The village, which is of small extent, is situated at the southern extremity of the Isle of Wight, under St. Catherine's Down, and near Blackgang Chine. In this parish is situated St. Catherine's lighthouse, 101 feet in height, completed in 1840. There are three principal roads, that on the N. leading to Newport and the centre of the island, and the others E. and W. There is a mineral spring in the neighbourhood. Charles II., after enduring a severe storm, landed at Puckaster in this parish on the 1st July, 1675. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £368, and the glebe comprises 22 acres. The living is a rect.* with the vic. of Godshill and the perpet. cur. of Whitwell annexed, in the dioc. of Winchester, joint val. £600, in the patron. of Queen's College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient freestone structure, with a short spired tower containing two bells. Close to the churchyard are the ruins of an ancient cross, which was once raised upon steps, and had a basin on the top, supposed to have been used as a baptismal font. The Baptists have a place of worship. There is a school, with an endowment of £270.

NITSHILL, or NITHSHILL, a vil. in the par. of Abbey of Paisley, co. Renfrew, Scotland, 3 miles S.E. of Paisley. It has a station on the Glasgow and Neilston railway. It is situated in the valley of the Levern. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the collieries and copperas works, the latter established in 1807. In the collieries fifty lives were lost through fire-damp in 1851.

NIXONS, a tnshp. in the par. of Bewcastle, ward of Eskdale, co. Cumberland, 12 miles N.E. of Longtown. It is situated on the river White-Line, and is intersected by several good trout streams.

NOAH-HILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Newton Valence, co. Hants, 3 miles S. of Alton.

NOAK HILL, a chplry. in the par. of Romford, lib. of Havering-atte-Bower, co. Essex, 2 miles from Romford, and 12 E. by N. of London. It is situated near the high road from London to Norwich, on a small stream called the Rom. The living is a cur. annexed to that of Romford.

NOB, a sandbank in mid-channel, near the Thames' mouth, 9 miles N. of Herne Bay. On the S. side is Nob Channel.

NOBBER, a par. and post-office vil. in the bars. of Lower Kells and Morgallion, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 19 miles N. of Trim, and 44 from Dublin. The par. is 4 miles long by 3½ broad. The surface is of a boggy and marshy nature. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £125, in the patron. of the crown. The church, which stands in the village, was built by the parish in 1771. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Cruicetown. There are two day schools. Whitewood is the seat of Viscount Gormanston. The village is situated on the Dublin and Clones road and the river Dee. It was formerly a market town and borough, and contains the ruins of a priory in the churchyard, which has tombs of the Cruise family. Remains of a Danish fort are also visible. Carolan, the blind minstrel, was a native of this village. A fair is held on the 26th April.

NOBOLD, a tnshp. in the par. of Meole-Brace, co. Salop, 2 miles S. of Shrewsbury.

NOBOTTLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Brington, co. Northampton, 5 miles W. by N. of Northampton. See also NEWBOTTLE.

NOBOTTLE-GROVE, a hund. in the co. of Northampton. It is mentioned in Domesday Survey as Nevebote and Nivebottle. It contains the pars. of Althorpe, Chapel-Brampton, Church-Brampton, Brington, Brokhall, Bugbrook, Dallington, Duston, Floore, East Haddon, Harleston, Harpole, Nether and Upper Heyford, Holdenby, Kislingbury, Upton, Whilton, and part of Ravensthorpe, comprising an area of 34,160 acres.

NOBUTT, or NOBOT, UPPER AND LOWER, hmlts. in the par. of Leigh, co. Stafford, 4 miles N.W. of Uttoxeter.

NOCKHOLT. See KNOCKHOLT, co. Kent.

NOCTON, a par. in the second div. of the wap. of Langoe, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 7 miles S.E. of Lincoln, and 5 S. of Bardney railway station. The village, which is small, is situated near Nocton-Delph, and on a small stream between Lincoln Heath and Cardyke navigation. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. There are about two-thirds of the land arable, and the remainder pasture and woodland. The soil is a rich clay, producing good grain crops. Here was anciently a priory for Black Canons, founded in the reign of Stephen by Robert d'Arci, and given at the Dissolution to the Brandon and Strange families. The tithes were commuted for land under an Act of Enclosure in 1776. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £560, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum. There is a school for children of both sexes entirely supported by Earl de Grey and Ripon, who is lord of the manor. Nocton Hall is built on the site of the old one, by Sir W. Ellys, and is at present the seat of Earl de Grey. Near the hall is a stately chestnut-tree. The grounds are extensive, and embellished with timber of fine growth.

NOCTORUM, a tnshp. in the par. of Woodchurch, lower div. of the hund. of Wirrall, co. Chester, 3 miles W. of the Birkenhead railway station, and 7 N. of Great Neston.

NODDFA, or NODDVA, a tnshp. in the par. of Darowen, hund. of Machynlleth, co. Montgomery, 6 miles N.E. of Machynlleth. This parish church is situated in this township.

NODE, a rivulet giving name to Nodesdale, co. Ayr, Scotland. It falls into the Frith of Clyde at Largs.

NOE, a feeder of the river Derwent, co. Derby. It rises in the Peak, near Kinder Scout, and joins the Derwent at Mytham Bridge.

NOGGINSTOWN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Leitrim, co. Galway, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Loughrea.

NOHAVAL, a par. in the bar. of Trughanacmy, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles W. of Castleisland. Tralee is its post town. It is 2 miles in length and the same in breadth. It lies in a valley at the foot of Slievemish. It is hilly and pastoral. The road from Castleisland to Tralee passes through the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. with Ballymacelligot, £371. Nohaval House is the principal seat in the neighbourhood.

NOHAVAL. See NOUGHAVAL, cos. Clare and Westmeath.

NOHAVAL, a par. in the bar. of Kinalea, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles E. of Kinsale, its post town. It is 3 miles long by 1½ mile broad. The surface is well cultivated. The parish is crossed by the road from Kinsale to Roberts Cove. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Cork, val. £87, in the patron. of the Archdeacon of Cork. The church is about a century old. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Tracton. There are a Sunday and two or three day schools. Nohaval House and Nohaval Lodge are the principal residences. Near the coast stands the ruins of a signal-tower on Barry Head. Slate is quarried in the vicinity.

NOHAVAL-DALY, a par. partly in the bar. of Duhallow, co. Cork, and partly in the bar. of Magunihy, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles W.N.W. of Millstreet, its post town. The surface consists of part of the Blackwater valley. There is a good deal of bog and mountain. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. with Drishane, £360, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Drishane. There are two hedge schools.

NOKE, a hmlt. in the par. of Pembridge, hund. of Stretford, co. Hereford, 15 miles N.W. of Hereford. It is situated near the small river Arrow.

NOKE, a par. in the hund. of Ploughley, co. Oxford, 5 miles N.E. of Oxford, its post town, and 9 S.W. of Bicester. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Ray, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £90. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is an ancient structure, with a small tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains a brass of J. Bradshaw and her two husbands, bearing date 1598. The charities consist of a bequest by Mrs. Bradshaw, now producing £3 6*s.* 8*d.* per annum, of which £3 is distributed among ten poor persons who have not received parochial relief, and the odd 6*s.* 8*d.* is retained by the trustees. The old Manor House is now occupied as a farm.

NOLTON, a par. in the hund. of Roose, co. Pembroke, 5 miles N.W. of Haverfordwest, its post town, and 9 from Milford. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on St. Bride's Bay, near Nolton Haven. It contains the village of Druwson, or Druidstown, at which place is an enclosure, called "Druidston Chapel." A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the stone-quarries. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £154. The church is dedicated to St. Madoc. The parochial charities produce about £38 per annum, which goes to the support of Grant's school.

NOLTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Coyty, hund. of Newcastle, co. Glamorgan, 1 mile N.E. of Bridgend. It is situated on the river Ogmore. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, annexed to the rect. of Coyty.

NO-MANS-HEATH, an ext. par. place in the Tamworth div. of the hund. of Hemlingford, co. Warwick, 2 miles S.W. of Appleby Magna. It is situated at the point where the counties of Warwick, Derby, Leicester, and Stafford touch.

NO-MANS-LAND, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Downton, co. Wilts, 10 miles S.E. of Salisbury.

NO-MANS-LAND, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester.

NO-MANS-LAND, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Cashio, co. Herts, 3 miles N.E. of St. Alban's. It it situated near the river Colne, and is a meet for Mr. Brand's hounds.

NONELY, a tnshp. in the par. of Loppington, co. Salop, 2 miles W. by S. of Wem.

NONINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Wingham, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 6 miles S.W. of Sandwich, 9 S.E. of Canterbury, and 4 S. by E. of Wingham, its post town. The village is wholly agricultural. The land is partly in hop grounds and the soil is of a chalky nature. The London, Chatham, and Dover railway passes through the parish. The appropriate tithes belonging to the archbishop have been commuted for a rent-charge of £600, and the incumbent for £250, besides £170 belonging to a lay impropriator. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £176, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a tower. The interior of the church contains tombs of the Hammonds of St. Alban's. The charities are of small amount. There is a National school for both sexes. St. Alban's Court, so called from having been anciently a cell to the abbey of St. Alban's, contains a valuable collection of paintings.

NONSUCH PARK, a seat in the first div. of the hund. of Copthorpe, co. Surrey, 2 miles N.E. of Epsom. It is built on the site of a palace erected by Henry VIII., and pulled down by Lady Castlemaine, to whom it was presented, with the title of baroness, by Charles II.

NOOK, THE, a tnshp. in the par. of Bellingham, N.W. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, half a mile E. of Bellingham. The township, which consists of a few farmhouses, is situated on the W. bank of the river Reed, and near the North Tyne, which bounds it on the S. The Duke of Northumberland is lord of the manor.

NOOK, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Preston Patrick and par. of Burton-in-Kendal, co. Westmoreland, 4 miles N.E. of Milnthorpe. It is situated near the river Beetha, on the Lancaster canal.

NOOK, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Underbarrow and par. of Kendal, co. Westmoreland, 3 miles W. of Kendal. It is situated on a branch of the river Kent.

NORAN, a feeder of the South Esk, rises in the par. of Tannadice, co. Forfar, Scotland.

NORBITON, a hmlt. in the par. of Kingston-on-Thames, co. Surrey, adjoining Kingston, and 12 miles S.W. of London. It is situated at the junction of the river Hogsmill with the Thames. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £100, in the patron. of the Vicar of Kingston. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The principal residence is Norbiton Lodge, formerly the seat of the Taveners.

NORBRECK, a tnshp. in the par. of Bispham, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 3 miles N.W. of Poulton-le-Fylde. It is joined with Bispham to form a township.

NORBROOK, a hmlt. in the Warwick div., Kington hund., co. Warwick, 3 miles S.W. of Warwick.

NORBURY, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Stockport, hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 3½ miles S.E. of Stockport, its post town, and 9 E. of Macclesfield. The village, which is modern, is situated on a branch of the river Mersey, and on the Stockport, Disley, and Whaleybridge railway. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the silk and cotton weaving, and a considerable number in the collieries. The soil is of a loamy nature, on a subsoil of gravel and clay. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £80. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas, is a new stone structure, erected in 1835, with a low tower containing six bells. It has a painted E. window. There is a National school for children of both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. T. Lee, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

NORBURY, a par. in the Bishop's Castle div. of the hund. of Purslow, co. Salop, 4 miles N.E. of Bishop's Castle, its post town. The village, which is inconsiderable, is wholly agricultural. The par. comprises the tnshps. of Norbury, Asterton, Whitcott, and Hardwick. The surface is generally hilly, and the low lands are watered by numerous small brooks. The soil is light and poor, and in some parts marshy. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of North Lydbury, in the dioc. of Hereford. The church is dedicated to All Saints. There is a chapel-of-ease on the road to Bishop's Castle. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship.

NORBURY, a par. in the W. div. of Cuttlestone hund., co. Stafford, 4 miles N.E. of Newport, its post town, and 3 N.W. of Gnosall railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Grand Junction canal, and is wholly agricultural. The par. comprises the hmlts. of Oulton, Weston-Jones, and Loynton. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £483. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient stone structure, with a square tower of brick. The chancel contains numerous effigies of ancient date. The church was restored in 1827. The parochial charities produce about £50 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes.

NORBURY, a tnshp. in the par. of Marbury, hund. of Nantwich, co. Chester, 1 mile N. of Marbury, and 4 miles E. of Malpas. It is situated near the Ellesmere canal. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agricultural pursuits. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. There is a school, principally supported by the rector and the Marquis of Cholmondeley, who is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

NORBURY PARK, a seat in the par. of Leatherhead, second div. of Copthorne hund., co. Surrey, 1 mile S. of Leatherhead, and 12 miles E. by N. of Guildford. It formerly belonged to the Locke family, who rebuilt the house on the top of Boxhill, near the fourteen-arched bridge on the river Mole. The panels of the wainscoting are painted with views from the Cumberland lakes by Barrett, and the park abounds in walnut trees.

NORBURY WITH ROSTON, a par. in the hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 5 miles S.W. of Ashborne, its post town, and 2¾ from Rocester. It is a station on the North Staffordshire railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Dove, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Snelston annexed, in the dioc. of Lichfield. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains several large windows filled with ancient stained glass, also monuments of the Fitzherberts, and a brass, bearing date 1538, of the Fitzherbert family. The church was restored in 1841. The parochial charities produce about £37 per annum, of which £17 goes to the free school, founded in 1678 by Thomas Williams. Thomas Fitzherbert, Esq., of Swinnerton, Staffordshire, is lord of the manor.

NORCOTT, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Helen, hund. of Hormer, co. Berks, 1 mile N. of Abingdon.

NORCROFT, a hmlt. in the par. of Crawthorne, West Riding co. York, 4 miles W. by N. of Barnsley.

NORDLEY-REGIS, a tnshp. in the par. of Alveley, hund. of Stottesden, co. Salop, 5 miles S.E. of Bridgnorth.

NORE, a river in the co. of Tipperary, Ireland. It rises near Roscrea, in the low country between the Slieve Bloom and Devil's Bit mountains, and after a course of nearly 70 miles in a S.E. direction, joins the river Barrow above New Ross, co. Kilkenny.

NORE, THE, an anchorage in 7 to 10 fathom water at the Thames' mouth, 3 miles N.E. of Sheerness, and 47 from London-bridge. It is marked by a floating light 33 feet high, put up in 1734 at the extremity of the Nore Sands, in N. lat. 51° 29′ and E. long. 0° 48′, from which point outward-bound vessels reckon their departure. The tide here rises to the height of 15 feet, and is nearly two hours sooner than at London-bridge.

NORFOLK, a maritime co. of England, on the E. coast, is bounded on the S. by Suffolk, from which it is separated by the rivers Waveney and Little Ouse, on the W. by Cambridgeshire, from which it is divided by the Nene, on the N.W. by Lincolnshire and the Wash, and on all other sides by the North Sea. Its greatest length from Yarmouth to the neighbourhood of Wisbeach is 67 miles, and its greatest breadth 43, giving it somewhat of an oval form, its ends lying E. and W. Its area is about 2,114 square miles, or, more exactly, 1,354,367 statute acres, making it the fourth of English counties, being only exceeded in extent by Yorkshire, Lincolnshire, and Devonshire. In its earliest times it appears to have been inhabited by an Iberian or Euskardian race, who have left evidence of their occupation in the names of the rivers, while the names of the towns and villages are almost wholly Saxon, with the exception of some places on the E. coast, where a Danish element prevails, the population of that part of the country being largely mixed with the latter race. Although the country was for many centuries successively occupied by the British, Belgic, and Roman peoples, few traces of these races can be found in the nomenclature. At the earliest period of authentic history the country was inhabited by the Iceni, a powerful tribe of the Belgæ, who vigorously opposed the Romans in their conquest of the island; and in the reign of the Emperor Nero, their queen, Boadicea, took and burnt the Roman colony of Augusta, now London, and the municipal town of Verulam, or St. Alban's, in the destruction of which above 70,000 Romans and their allies are said to have perished. After the subjugation of the country by the Romans, it was included in the province of Flavica Cæsariensis, which comprehended all the E. side and centre of the island. The principal Roman towns or stations in this country appear to have been Venta Icenorum, now Caistor St. Edmond's, about 3 miles S. of Norwich, and the capital of the Iceni; Garianonum, supposed to be Burgh Castle, and Branodunum, the modern Brancaster, both mentioned in the "Notitia Imperii;" Ad Taum, now Tasburgh, mentioned in the "Peutinger Table;" and Garryenus, at the mouth of the Yare, where Yarmouth now stands, mentioned by Ptolemy. Besides these places within the limits of the present shire, Roman ways led from Venta Icenorum, the principal Roman post on the E. side of the island, to Sitomagus, now Dunwich, in Suffolk; to Durobrivæ, now Water Newton, in Hunts; to Camboricum, now Cambridge; also a branch road to Castle Acre, on Peddar's Way, which traversed the heaths to Swaffham; while another road is supposed to have passed through Weeting to Walsingham, in later times known as the Pilgrim's Road, or "Milky Way." The Icknield Street crossed the Little Ouse above Thetford, and ran in the direction of Venta. After the departure of the Romans, Norfolk was one of the first parts of the country invaded by the Saxons and Angles, who landed here under Cerdic in 495, and in 527 the whole county was reduced, and formed part of the kingdom of East Anglia, being named Norfolk, or "north folk," by the new settlers, in contradistinction to Suffolk, or the "south folk." In 866 the Danes, who had possessed themselves of the territories on the continent, left vacant by the migration of the Angles to Britain, made their first appearance on the eastern coast of Norfolk, and were welcomed by the Angles, who made common cause with them against the Saxons of the S. and W.; but when some four years afterwards, viz. 870, they again landed in greater numbers, they were opposed by Edmund, the East Anglian king, who being defeated and slain, the dominion of the Danes in these parts became permanent. By the treaty concluded between Alfred the Great and the Danish Prince Guthrun in 883, this county was included in the Danelagh, and only subject to the supremacy of the Anglo-Saxon kings. In 974 it was ravaged by new swarms of Danish pirates, and in 1002 Sweyn, King of Denmark, brought his fleet up the river to Norwich, which he plundered and burnt; he was, however, successfully opposed by Ulfkyttle, the earldorman of East Anglia, and compelled to quit the country after the battle at Thetford. Upon the submission of the whole kingdom to Canute, Thurkill was appointed the Danish governor of the whole of East Anglia; and in the reign of Edward the Confessor it was governed by Harold, the son of Godwin, who afterwards aspired to the crown. He being slain at the battle of Hastings, Norfolk, with the rest of East Anglia, submitted to William the Conqueror, who bestowed the earldom on Ralph de Guader, or Waher, but he having rebelled, was besieged in Norwich Castle, and his estates given to Roger Bigod, another of the Norman warriors who had joined the fortunes of William. This family continued in possession of these vast demesnes for above a century, notwithstanding the unsuccessful support they gave to Prince Robert, the elder brother, against William Rufus, and to the young princes in their rebellion against Henry II., on both which occasions the county suffered severely, as it did subsequently in the baronial wars of John's reign, being first overrun by the king, who lost his baggage in the Wash whilst crossing from Lynn into Lincolnshire, and afterwards by the forces of Louis the Dauphin. In this reign Roger Bigod filled the office of lord high steward, and was one of the twenty-five celebrated barons appointed to enforce the observance of Magna Charta. His son Hugh was made Lord Chief Justice of England, and his grandson Roger became Earl Marshal of England, in right of his mother, Maud, the sister and coheir of Anselm, Earl of Pembroke and Earl Marshal. His nephew, who succeeded him in the earldom, having no issue, surrendered this earldom and the marshal's rod into the king's hands, which were regranted to him, but on his death the title became extinct. After the lapse of a considerable period the title was revived, and the earldom was conferred on Thomas Plantagenet, fifth son of Edward I. During the vacancy of the earldom in 1381, the men of Norfolk, under the command of John le Litester, or the Dyer, rose in rebellion, and joined the commons under Wat Tyler, but were defeated by Henry le Spencer, Bishop of Norwich, at North Walsham. A few years afterwards the earldom, with the title of Duke of Norfolk, was conferred on the powerful family of Mowbray, who held it till the latter part of the 15th century, when it passed by marriage to the Howards, John, the first of this line, being cousin and ultimately coheir of John Mowbray, the fourth duke, in whose family it has ever since remained. The Duke of Norfolk still exercises a peculiar and permanent jurisdiction over his large demesnes in this county, and appoints two coroners for his liberties.—In its physical features the county of Norfolk is peculiarly uninviting, appearing as one vast level plain, the undulations of the surface not being sufficient to relieve the eye, while the coast for the most part is low, and often skirted by sandbanks. Although there are no hills, the land rises considerably towards the N. and N.W., where the chalk downs extend from near St. Edmund's Point to Castle Acre, and appear again at Downham. From this point the ground gradually subsides towards the E., where the chalk dips down, and is overlaid by diluvial beds of gravel, sand, and clay, interspersed with layers of fossil shells several feet in thickness, called "crag-pit shells," and occasionally intermixed with fragments of chalk. In the neighbourhood of Norwich, which is well wooded, alluvial clay and brick earth occur, interspersed with thick beds of gravel overlying the chalk; and in the western portion of the diluvial districts the clay or marl is intermixed with boulders of green sandstone, abounding in a peculiar class of fossils. In the western part of the county the surface is extremely low, forming part of the great Fen district, which stretches through Lincolnshire and Cambridge, and much of it has only recently been reclaimed from the sea, especially in that part of the county which lies W. of Lynn, where the works of the Norfolk Estuary Improvement Company are at present in progress. Here some of the sea-walls or embankments are of very early origin, and one called the Roman Bank is now quite inland, successive embankments having added outside it some of the most fertile tracts in the county. While, however, land is yearly being reclaimed from the bed of the ocean on the side of the Wash, where the coast is low and marshy, the sea is gradually undermining the cliffs on the E., and entire parishes lie engulphed under the bed of the German Ocean, which were at no distant period dry land. Both geology and history support the conclusion that vast changes have taken place in the configuration of the Norfolk coast, the relative distribution of sea and land continually shifting. There are local traditions of the sea having once reached Norwich on the Wensum, which was then accessible to the Danish fleet, and Bungay Castle on the Waveney. The valley of the Bure, too, appears to have been an arm of the sea in the Roman time, as shown by the position of Burgh Castle, a Roman fort commanding the navigation of the stream, and near which anchors and other marine implements are occasionally dug up. The spot on which Yarmouth stands is known to have been under water in the 11th century, and the whole of the low flats N. of Yarmouth, now interspersed with "broads" or tidal lakes, were then parts of an estuary which is supposed to have been left dry a little previous to the Norman conquest. The coast, as at present defined, is about 90 miles in length from the estuary of the Nene, in Cross-Keys Wash, to the mouth of the Yare. The coast on the Norfolk side of the Wash is skirted by extensive mud-banks, which are dry at low water, but between these shallows are channels of deep water affording safe access to the estuaries of the Nen and Ouse, on the former of which is the great shipping port of Wisbeach, just within the Cambridge border, and on the latter the seaport town of Lynn Regis, about 10 miles from the sea. The tide ascends the Ouse as high up as Denver, near Downham, where it is arrested by sluices. This river is subject to a great swell or overflowing at the equinoxes, especially at the spring tides of the autumn equinox. From this point, following the coast towards the E., there are no considerable ports nearer than the mouth of the Yare, on the Suffolk border; but several landing and shipping places, as Hunstanton, where there is a lighthouse on the cliff, which attains an elevation of 80 feet; Thornham, near St. Edmund's Point, where a submarine forest can be seen at low water, proving how much the sea has here gained upon the land; Burnham and Wells harbours, in Brancaster Bay, the approach to which is rendered dangerous by the Burnham and other sandbanks which here line the coast, in great part composed of masses of ponderous chalk flints, washed out of the cliffs by the continual action of the waves beating on their shore, with the Docking and Dudgeon reefs farther out; then come the Cley and Blakeney harbours, with the Sherringham and Pollard shoals off them; and farther E. the watering-place of Cromer, marked by a lighthouse, and sheltered by Foulness Point, where large portions of the chalk cliff have fallen, and been washed away by the sea. On this part of the coast the crag cliffs in some places rise from 50 to 60 feet high; and near Happisburgh, or Hasbro', they have been found to contain bones of elephants and other extinct mammals. Inside the Hasbro' and Leman sands, which are marked by a lightship, is the Mould Channel, with a lighthouse on the cliffs, and beyond it the small port of Eccles, where the cliffs end, and a low, sandy, and shingly coast succeeds, rising into sand hills at Waxham; and at Winterton, a small fishing village about 8 miles N. by W. of Yarmouth, is a lofty eminence, crowned by a lighthouse, about 70 feet above sea-level. Beyond this point lie the Newarp and other sands, outside Yarmouth Roads, which channel affords a secure anchorage in from 10 to 13 fathoms water, and is the usual rendezvous of the North Sea fleet in time of war. The entrance to the Yare, which is marked by a lighthouse, has recently been much improved under an Act of Parliament passed in 1827 for making the Yare and Wensum navigable for vessels drawing 10 feet of water, and for making a cut from the Yare to the Waveney, and from the Waveney, at Lowestoft, through Lake Lothing to the sea, thus restoring the ancient entrance, which had been closed since the 17th century, when a bar of sand and shingle was allowed to accumulate at the mouth of it, so that Norwich is once more a port for sea-borne vessels. The tide or sea-lock of this navigation admits vessels 84 feet long and 21 feet in the beam. With the exception of this navigation and the dykes in the fens, there are no canal works of importance, but most of the principal rivers are navigable for long distances, the surface of the country being level. The Greater Ouse and the Nen are navigable throughout the whole of their course within this county and for some distance beyond. The former of these rivers enters the county from Ely, in Cambridgeshire, and flowing in a northerly direction for 22 miles to the Wash, is joined by the Little Ouse, the Wissey, or Stoke, and the Nar. The first of these tributary streams has its head waters in the adjoining county of Suffolk, and, receiving the waters of the Thet, at Thetford, becomes navigable, and traces the boundary of the county for about 20 miles, till it joins the Great Ouse, in the marshes near Southrey; the Wissey is formed by the junction of two streams at Buckenham Tofts, and pursues a westerly course past Stoke Ferry, when it becomes navigable to the Great Ouse, at Denver Sluice; while the Nar, or Setch, as it is sometimes called, rises at Litcham, and flowing W. by Castle Acre, where it becomes navigable, joins the Ouse above Lynn. Besides these, there are in the W. the Wilney and Nene, which trace the boundary between this county and Cambridgeshire, falling into the Wash by a broad channel which forms the port of Wisbeach. The rivers which do not belong to the former system are the Wensum, whose source is at Wickend, near Fakenham, whence it flows in a south-easterly direction in a winding channel of 45 miles to the city of Norwich, a little below which it is joined by the Yare, also coming from the W., and having its source at Shipdham, between Watton and East Dereham. The stream formed by their united waters then continues a south-easterly course of about 20 miles, when making a bend to the N.E. it passes through Reedham Marsh and expands into a large sheet of water, called Breydon Water, 4 miles long, and in some parts a mile broad, at the southern extremity of which it receives the waters of the Waveney, and at the north-eastern those of the Bure, finally discharging the combined flood, by a wide passage of about 3 miles long, into the German Ocean: its whole length from the source of the Winsum, the real head of the stream, being 74 miles. The Waveney, though joining the Yare near its mouth, may be considered a distinct river, having its source at Lopham, on the borders of Suffolk, and pursuing a north-easterly course of near 50 miles, in which it passes the towns of Bungay, where it becomes navigable for river craft, and Beccles, to which sea-borne vessels can come up. The Bure, also a tributary of the Yare, rises in the extreme north of the county at Melton Constable, and by a circuitous course of near 50 miles, generally in a south-easterly direction, drains the low-lying country bordering on the E. coast, which everywhere abounds with considerable pools of water, locally designated broads or meers, some of which are of considerable extent, as Filby, Hickling, and Rollesby Broads. The Bure is navigable for above 40 miles from its mouth to Aylsham. These rivers receive several tributary streams, the principal being the Taes, which joins the Yare below Norwich; and the Thurn and Ant, which flows into the Bure. This last stream is navigable to Wayford Bridge, from which point a canal has been cut to North Walsham. The rainshed of the county is from N.W. to S.E., the central portion being watered by spreading streams which have their source in the higher grounds of the N. and W., and flow to the sea at Yarmouth, where, in very ancient times, was a vast estuary, now filled up. The rivers which do not belong to this system are in the W., where the land slopes towards the Wash, forming the valleys of the Ouse and Nar.—Few parts of England exhibit more remarkable physical changes, within the historic period, than this county; and few, if any, excel it in the evidences of human skill and industry. Not more than a century ago it was more than one-half barren heath, fitted only for rabbit-warrens and fens, yielding nothing but snipe-shooting and the ague, where now is to be seen some of the best husbandry in England. Before noticing, however, the process by which this transformation was effected, it will be necessary to make some few observations on the soil and climate. Any classification of the soils of Norfolk for the purpose of conveying an idea of the character of the land throughout, can only give an approximation to the truth, as in the same farm, and often in adjoining fields, the greatest difference prevails. In this country the marked features, which elsewhere are stamped upon the surface of the earth by the geological formations beneath it, are not to be distinguished, and a clear conception of its character can only be acquired by a study of the characteristics of each locality. The light sandy lands, however, may be described as prevailing in the northern and western districts. They differ considerably in quality, being sometimes, as in the neighbourhood of Thetford, blowing sand; and in other places possessed of more natural fertility. They rest generally upon a substratum of chalk, which crops out at different points, and in the vicinity of the Wash is supplanted by a strip of green sandstone and oolite. The central and eastern parts of the county generally consist of loamy soils, varying in quality, being here and there stiff and difficult to manage; but more frequently light and incumbent on a marly clay, which overlies the chalk; and in the valley of the Bure rests on beds of fossil shells. In this district principally, and especially towards the S.E., are found those extensive marshes to which we have already alluded as traversed by the Yare, Bure, and Waveney, in their course to the German Ocean.—The climate, as may be imagined, on the E. coast, is dry throughout the year, and, therefore, healthy; but cold and biting winds prevail during the winter and early in spring. About two-thirds of the surface is arable, one-tenth meadow and pasture, and the remainder still unreclaimed, being either heath or fen. The indigenous productions of Norfolk are neither numerous nor specially valuable; and the native breeds, both of cattle and sheep, have now been almost universally superseded, the former by Devons, and the latter by South Downs and Leicesters, which have proved much more profitable than the roaming black-faced and black-legged sheep of this county. The native pig, too, will stand no comparison with the Berkshire or the improved Essex; and even in the excellence of its wheat, Norfolk is excelled by other counties. Yet notwithstanding these natural disadvantages of soil, climate, and productions, the celebrity of Norfolk as an agricultural district is deservedly great. That celebrity consists in having introduced and developed a great variety of improvements in the cultivation of the soil, and especially in having contributed so largely to the adoption of that system of green-crop husbandry, originally introduced by the late Earl of Leicester, then

Mr. Coke, in the latter part of the last century, and the benefits of which become every year more manifest. The principles of the Norfolk agriculture, generally, consist in the improvement of the mechanical texture of the light soils by laying considerable portions of the marly clay, found a little below the surface, on the poorer soil which was at the surface; the production, by rich manure, of a few inches of thoroughly good earth; the application of an excellent system of tile-draining, where the sub-soil is impervious to water, and a careful garden cultivation, almost resembling that of Holland and Belgium; but with this distinction, that special care is paid to the due rotation of crops. To provide sufficient manure for the corn crops, half the land is devoted to raise food for cattle; and various artificial manures are employed—as the fish stickleback, ground bones, guano, rape dust, and phosphate of lime, procured from stones found in the crag, which is considered as good as bones for manure. Great care is also observed in the folding of the sheep, which are driven to the pastures and heaths in the day, and folded on the cultivated lands during the night, so as to add to their fertility; and Mr. Coke's principle of carrying a large stock upon the farm has not been lost sight of. Thus has been developed that system which collects so many lean cattle from Galloway, Wales, and other parts of the kingdom, annually, in the eastern counties to be fattened and disposed of in the metropolitan markets between the months of January and June. The great grazing lands are chiefly in the S.W., on marshes of the Bedford Level. There are also a few dairy farms; but nothing like so numerous as in former times. The best wooded parts of the county are in the N. and N.E., where also the choicest examples of cultivation are to be met with. Estates are of all sizes; but farms in general large, and the farm buildings of a superior kind. The leases, since Mr. Coke's time, range from 7 to 21 years, thus allowing sufficient time for the tenant farmer to reap the advantage of his capital sunk in the improvement of the land, much of which, at the commencement of the present century, was scarcely worth 5s. per acre. To understand how much enterprise, skill, and capital must, at some time or other, have been expended in the improvement of the soil, it is only requisite to compare such estates as still remain in their primitive wildness with the richly-cultivated lands adjoining. Open fields, divided by neatly-trimmed hedges, and tilled with garden-like precision and cleanliness, occasionally are seen, contrasting strikingly with the careless husbandry of a former age, when each year produced its crops of weeds, as well as corn.—The produce of Norfolk consists of chalk, for building, lime, cement-stone, bricks, marl, dug from the valley of the Bure; sand for glass-making, found between Snettisham and Castle Rising; peat, dug from the fen districts of the W.; coarse pottery, pipes, and all sorts of grain and agricultural produce, particularly barley, which is of excellent quality, and yields four quarters per acre; wheat, oats, rye, beans, clover, and other grasses, besides carrots, potatoes, chicory, mustard, flax, saffron, hemp, and green crops; but these last are generally consumed on the farm. Besides large quantities of "Cambridge butter," turkeys, geese, rabbits, fowls, pheasants, and other game, are sent to the metropolitan markets. The buzzard, hooded-crow, and short-eared owl, are sometimes seen; and mackerel, herrings, cod, and other fish, are taken on the coast, affording occupation to many of the inhabitants who dwell in the villages scattered along the inhospitable eastern coast. The principal manufactures carried on are silk, bombazine, worsted, woollen fabrics, and cottons. The exports of most of these articles are very large, and are constantly augmenting.—The population of the county in 1851 was 442,714, and in 1861, 434,798, showing a decrease in the decennial period of 7,916. The county returns 12 members to Parliament—viz. two for the E. division, of which Norwich is the election town; two members for the western division, of which Swaffham is the election town; and two members each for the city of Norwich and the boroughs of Lynn, Thetford, and Yarmouth. Besides Norwich, which is the county town and seat of a diocese, there are 22 market towns, Attleborough, Aylsham, Buckenham, Cley, Diss, Downham, East Dereham, Fakenham, Foulsham, Harleston, Harling East, Holt, Loddon, Lynn, North Walsham, Reepham, Stoke-Ferry, Swaffham, Thetford, Watton, Wymondham, or Wyndham, and Yarmouth; besides about 800 villages and hamlets. The county is in the Norfolk circuit, assizes and quarter sessions being held at Norwich, where is also the county gaol and lunatic asylum, and is within the home military district. It is governed by a lord-lieutenant and vice-admiral, and about 112 deputy-lieutenants, assisted by 400 magistrates. The office of Vice-Admiral of Norfolk, which in the Roman times was exercised by a "Comes littoris Saxonici," is now generally held by the lord-lieutenant of the county, under a commission from the Lords of the Admiralty, by which he is invested with a power to hold a special court of admirals, with judges, marshals, and other officers, an appeal lying to the High Court of Admiralty. For political purposes Norfolk is divided into 33 hundreds in two divisions, comprising 743 parishes, of which Norwich numbers 39, besides parts of three other parishes, and 7 extra parochial liberties. It is also divided into 14 new county-court districts, 21 poor-law unions, and 20 superintendent registry districts. For ecclesiastical purposes it constitutes the two archdeaconries of Norwich and Norfolk in the diocese of Norwich and province of Canterbury. It is traversed both laterally and longitudinally by the Eastern Union, East Anglian and Norfolk sections of the Great Eastern Railway: the main line from London passing through Colchester, in Essex, to Ipswich, whence it proceeds by Stowmarket and Diss to Norwich, throwing off short branch lines westward to Hadleigh and to Bury St. Edmund's; from Norwich it forks to the E. and W., the former, following the valley of the Yare, runs to Great Yarmouth, with a short branch to Lowestoft, in Suffolk; while the western section, passing through Wymondham and Attleborough, communicates with Ely, Cambridge, and Huntingdon, thus connecting Norfolk with Birmingham and the midland districts; while a third section runs northward from Wymondham to East Dereham, where it again forks one branch, going north through Fakenham to Wells; and the other N.E., through Swaffham to Lynn Regis, and so to Wisbeach and Downham Market. The surface being level, this county is well supplied with roads, including two main lines from London, which in the days of stage coaches were the highways between Norwich and the metropolis: the one, passing through Ipswich, enters the county at Scole-on-the-Waveney; and the other through Ware, at Thetford-on-the-Little-Ouse, converging just before their entry into Norwich on the S.W. suburb of the city. One road to Yarmouth from London branches off from the Norwich and Ipswich road at Scole, and follows the valley of the Waveney; but the main coach road from London to Yarmouth does not enter the county until it reaches Yarmouth, where it crosses the estuary of the Yare from the Suffolk side. The other principal roads diverging from Norwich are, to the E., through Acle to Caistor and Yarmouth; to the N.E., through Stratton to North Walsham; to the N., through Aylsham to Cromer; to the N.W., through Fakenham to Wells; or through East Dereham and Swaffham to Downham and Lynn Regis; to the S.W., through New Buckenham to Diss; and to the S.E., through Bungay to Halesworth, Saxmundham, and Aldborough. The county is adorned by numerous seats of the nobility and gentry, and gives title of premier duke, and earl, to the Howard family, hereditary earls marshal of England, who had anciently their seat at Norwich, and still hold large possessions here. Other seats are Sandringham Hall, recently purchased by the Prince of Wales; Houghton Park, of the Marquis of Cholmondeley; Raynham Hall, of the Marquis Townshend; Quiddenham Hall, of the Earl of Albemarle; Holkham Hall, of the Earl of Leicester; Wolterton Hall, of the Earl of Orford; Blickling Park, of the Marquis of Lothian; Costessey Hall, of Lord

Stafford; Gunton House, of Lord Suffield; Honingham Hall, of Lord Bayning; Horshead Hall, of the Dowager Lady Suffield; Kimberley Hall, of Lord Wodehouse; Melton Hall, of Lord Hastings; Merton Hall, of Lord Walsingham; Ormesby House, of the Dowager Lady Lacon; Beeston Hall, of Sir J. H. Preston, Bart.; Buckenham Hall, of the Hon. Francis Baring; Cranmer Hall, of Sir Willoughby Jones, Bart.; Gissing Hall, of the Rev. Sir W. R. Kemp, Bart.; Hargham Hall, of Sir T. B. Beevor, Bart.; Hillington Hall, of Sir W. H. Ffolkes, Bart.; Ketteringham Hall, of Sir J. P. Boileau, Bart.; Mount Amelia, of Capt. Davy; Necton Hall, of Colonel Mason; Rackheath Hall, of Sir Henry Stracey, Bart.; Raveningham Hall, of Sir E. Bacon; Sall Hall, of the Rev. Sir E. R. Jodrell, Bart.; Shadwell Court, of Sir R. J. Buxton, Bart.; Stow Hall, of Sir T. Hare, Bart.; Stratton Hall, of Lieut.-Col. H. Fitzroy; Twyford Hall, of Colonel Packe; West Harling Hall, of Sir G. Nugent, Bart.—Besides traces of Roman roads, stations, and camps, mentioned at the commencement of this article, the county possesses other antiquities; as the Roman tower at Caistor St. Edmund's, the ancient Venta, about 3 miles S. from Norwich, and near the junction of the rivers Taes and Yare, a considerable portion of which is still standing, comprising front of the wall, still 30 feet high, and composed of alternate layers of Roman bricks and of flint, bound together by a strong cement. The parish church of Caistor, which stands within the area, is partly built of Roman bricks. There are also the Saxon camp at Bloodgate, near South Creake; Foss and Grime's graves, near Weeting; Norman castles at Norwich, Castle Acre, Castle Rising and Caistor; monastic and ecclesiastical edifices of the middle ages—as the abbeys or priories of Thetford, Walsingham, Beeston, Flitcham, Bingham, Broomholm, Wymondham, Castle Acre, Langley, St. Augustine's Abbey at North Creak; St. Bennet's, at Hulme, founded by Canute in 1020; and a Premonstratensian abbey at West Dereham. Also ancient houses—as Winwal House, at Wareham, near Stoke Ferry, which is probably the most ancient domestic edifice in England, being supported by Norman buttresses, and decorated with ornaments of the Plantagenet period. The whole building, consisting of 2 stories, is only 33 feet long by 27 feet deep, and 16 feet high; another ancient manor-house is Oxburgh Hall, near Stoke Ferry, erected in 1481 by Sir Edmund Bedingfield, and surrounded by a moat 52 feet broad, and 10 feet deep, over which is a bridge; East Basham House, near Fakenham, built in the reign of Henry VII., and now a farmhouse, is an interesting building, as is also another farmhouse at Fincham, near Downham Market, which is an early specimen of the revived Grecian architecture. Many eminent persons have been born in this county, as Sir John Fastolf, who took John II., King of France, prisoner; the antiquary and lawyer Spelman; Archbishop Parker, Sir Thomas Gresham, the eminent lawyer, Sir Edward Coke, Bishop Pearson, Admiral Sir Cloudesley Shovell, Sir R. Walpole, and Lord Nelson, at Burnham Thorpe.

NORHAM, a par. and vil. in the hund. of Norhamshire, co. Northumberland, until recently a detached portion of the county of Durham, 8 miles S.W. of Berwick-upon-Tweed, its post town, and three-quarters of a mile from the Norham station on the North-Eastern line of railway. The village, which is extensive, is situated on the river Tweed, at the new Waterford chain bridge, which was erected in 1820, at an expense of not more than £5,000. The river is also crossed about half a mile W. of the village by a strong wooden bridge, erected in 1840, connecting this parish with Ladykirk, in Berwickshire. In ancient times it was a market town, and place of considerable importance under the bishops of Northumbria, having been given to Aidan, the first bishop, by the Saxon King of Northumbria, on his conversion to Christianity. His successors, until the time of Bishop Barnes, who alienated his rights to the crown, continued to exercise a special jurisdiction throughout the district, having their sheriff, coroner, justices, and other civil officers, with a court of exchequer, gallows, &c. Being situated on the Borders between England and Scotland, at the ford of the river Tweed, it became in the Norman times the scene of frequent rupture and bloodshed, and was the general rendezvous of the nobility of both kingdoms for settling affairs of the Border.—The par. of Norham, which is of large extent, contains Norham Mains, Cornhill, Hedon, Twisel, and eight other tnshps., and the famous pass of the river Tweed, called by the Saxons Ubbanford, where the remains of St. Cuthbert rested. On the E. of the village, and on the summit of a rocky eminence impending over the bed of the river, are the ruins of the Border Castle, built in 1121 by Bishop Flambard, which having been enlarged and strengthened by succeeding prelates, was, when well garrisoned, deemed almost impregnable. It was, however, destroyed in 1139 by King David I., but was afterwards rebuilt by Bishop Pudsey, who added the present great tower to the castle, and conferred extensive privileges by charter on the inhabitants of the town, that they might be the more ready to aid in its defence. It was unsuccessfully besieged by King John in his war with the barons, but was twice taken by the Scots in the reigns of Edward II. and Edward III., and was surprised a short time prior to the battle of Flodden Field. It was taken by the Parliamentarians, and was finally destroyed by Cromwell. The keep, or main tower, with its vaults and prisons entire, is the principal part, and is constructed of a soft red freestone. The village consists of one long wide street, containing some modern houses of stone construction, intermixed with others of great antiquity. On the green, which is situated in the midst of the village, is a stone cross.—A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the collieries and fisheries. The land is in a fine state of cultivation. The soil is of a loamy nature, with a subsoil of gravel upon stone and coal, of which latter several mines are in operation.—The vicarial tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £460, and the glebe comprises 24 acres, valued at £60 per annum. Norham gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. of Lindisfarne and dioc. of Durham. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Duddo annexed, in the dioc. of Durham, val. £529, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Cuthbert, is of great antiquity, having been rebuilt about 1180 on the site of a more ancient one erected prior to 840. It had three chantries in honour of St. Cuthbert, the Virgin Mary, and St. Nicholas, and possessed the privilege of sanctuary for thirty-seven days. The tower and main aisles were rebuilt in 1837, and the S. and N. transepts were restored in 1846-52. The interior contains many monuments and effigies of great antiquity; also the grave of Ceolwulph, a lineal descendant of Ida, the first Saxon king of Northumberland and of Gospatrick, Earl of Northumberland. The E. window, of Edward III.'s time, is in five compartments, besides several other memorial windows. In the churchyard are some ancient ruins of a monastery, including a stone cross, 10 feet in height. There is a free school for both sexes, founded in 1762, and endowed with an annuity of £60; also a National school, in which a Sunday-school is held. The Free Kirk of Scotland, the Independents, and the United Presbyterians, have each a place of worship.—There are some Druidical remains, including a barrow, surrounded by stone steps; also vestiges of a Roman camp, near which two urns were found, containing human bones. The learned Dr. Carleton, who wrote Bishop Gilpin's life, was born in this parish in 1559. Sir W. T. Stanley Massey Stanley is lord of the manor. Fairs are held on the second Thursday in May, and on the third Thursday in October.

NORHAM-MAINS, a tnshp. in the par. of Norham, hund. of Norhamshire, co. Northumberland, formerly in Durham, 2 miles from Norham, the same distance from Horncliffe, and 6½ S. by W. of Berwick. The township consists of a few farmhouses. Morris Hall is the principal residence.

NORLAND, a tnshp. in the chplry. of Sowerby Bridge, and par. of Halifax, wap. of Morley, West Riding co.

York, 2½ miles S.W. of Halifax, and 10 E. of Todmorden. The village is inconsiderable, but there are numerous small hamlets and detached houses scattered over the southern slope of Calder Vale, near the Manchester and Leeds railway, which passes through the N. part of the township. The substratum is principally millstone grit, which is extensively quarried near North Dean. The Lad-stone on Norland Moor is in this neighbourhood. Within a short distance of the village are Fielding's chemical works. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the woollen trade. There is a place of worship for the New Connexion Methodists. The Earl of Scarborough is lord of the manor. Edward Warnhouse bequeathed in 1686 some land and cottages, now producing £20 per annum, for the poor.

NORLEY, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Frodsham, second div. of the hund. of Eddisbury, co. Chester, 5 miles S.E. of Frodsham, its post town, and 3 N.W. of Acton railway station. The village, which is irregularly built, is wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester. The church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, built in 1832, has a pinnacled tower, containing a clock and one bell. There is a National school for children of both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. The Association and Wesleyan Methodists have each a place of worship, with Sunday-schools in connection. Norley Bank and Norley Hall are the principal residences. The trustees of the late J. H. S. Barry, Esq., are lords of the manor.

NORMANBY, a par. in the wap. of Ryedale, North Riding co. York, 5 miles from Kirby-Moorside, its post town, 5 W. by S. of Pickering, and 6 from Amotherby railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Severn, and on the high road from Kirby-Moorside to Malton. The par. includes the tnshp. of Thornton-Riseborough. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is of a clayey nature on a subsoil of clay. About two-thirds of the land are arable, and the remainder meadow and pasture, except 15 acres of woodland. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £509. The church is an ancient Norman structure, with a low tower, partly rebuilt in 1718. There is a parochial school for children of both sexes, with a small endowment. The Wesleyans have a place of worship, at which a Sunday-school is also held. In the neighbourhood is a mineral spa, the water of which contains carbonic acid and a small proportion of neutral salt. S. Walker, Esq., is lord of the manor. It gives title of marquis to the Phipps family.

NORMANBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Fylingdales, North Riding co. York, 4 miles S.E. of Whitby.

NORMANBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Ormsby, eastern div. of Langbaurgh lib., North Riding co. York, 2 miles from the Ormsby station on the Stockton and Darlington line of railway, and 5 N.W. of Guisborough. It is an increasing village. The chief portion of the inhabitants are employed in the iron-stone quarries, and in the brick and tile works. There is a National school for children of both sexes. Normanby Hall, the principal residence, is situated in a spacious park, watered by a rivulet which rises at Eston-Nab. The tithes were commuted in 1839.

NORMANBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Burton-upon-Stather, northern div. of the wap. of Manley, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 9 miles N.W. of Glanford-Brigg. The principal seat is Normanby Hall, the residence of Sir R. Sheffield, Bart.

NORMANBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Stow, wap. of Well, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 9 miles N.W. of Lincoln, 7½ S.E. of Gainsborough, and 3 from the Marten railway station.

NORMANBY-BY-SPITTAL, a par. in the eastern div. of the wap. of Aslacoe, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 7 miles W. of Market-Rasen, its post town, and 3½ S.E. of Spittal. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The par. is bounded on the E. by the river Ancholme. Limestone is quarried. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1789. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £88, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum, which goes to Mrs. Dunn's school. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyan Methodists. The Dean and Chapter of Lincoln Cathedral are lords of the manor.

NORMANBY-ON-THE-WOLDS, a par. in the northern div. of the wap. of Walshcroft, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4 miles N. by E. of Market-Rasen, its post town, and 3 N.E. of the Usselby railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. Stone is quarried for building purposes. There are remains of a sculptured cross. The living is a discharged rect. annexed to that of Claxby, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to St. Peter, and appears to have been formerly larger than at present. It contains some carved oak seats. The Earl of Yarborough is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

NORMANCROSS, a hund. in the N. div. of co. Hunts, contains the pars. of Alwalton, Caldecote, Chesterton, Conington, Denton, Elton, Fletton, Folksworth, Glatton, Haddon, Morborn, Orton Cherry and Long, Sawtrey All Saints, Sawtrey St. Andrew, Sawtrey St. Judith, Standground, Stibbington, Stilton, Washingley, Water Newton, Woodstone, Woodwalton, Yaxley, and part of Lutton, comprising about 52,000 acres.

NORMANDY, a tythg in the par. of Ash, first div. of Woking hund., co. Surrey, 4 miles N.W. of Guildford.

NORMAN LAW, a hill in the co. of Fife, Scotland, 4 miles N.W. of Cupar. It attains an altitude of 850 feet, and commands a view of the Frith of Tay.

NORMANTON, a par. in the hund. of Repton, co. Derby, 2 miles S. of Derby, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the Birmingham railway, and is chiefly agricultural. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in framework knitting. The Derby canal crosses the N.E. part of the parish, and the Birmingham and Derby Junction railway intersects it. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of St. Peter, Derby, in the dioc. of Lichfield. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is partly Norman, but much decayed. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a school for children of both sexes. The Independents and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship.

NORMANTON, a par. in the wap. of Loveden, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 7½ miles N.E. of Grantham, its post town, and 5 from the Hougham station, on the Great Northern railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Witham, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £104. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has a curious tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains a font of great antiquity. The vestry has been newly erected, and the chancel and N. aisle thoroughly restored. The register dates from 1560. The parochial charities produce about £5 6s. per annum. Earl Brownlow is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

NORMANTON, a par. in the hund. of Martinsley, co. Rutland, 5½ miles E. of Oakham, its post town, and 3½ N.W. of the Ketton railway station. The parish, which is inconsiderable, is bounded on the N.W. by the river Gwash. It formerly constituted a part of the adjoining parish of Hambleton, and belonged to the Normanvilles, Basings, and Mackworths. A scarce variety of the herb gentian is found in the neighbourhood. There is a mineral spring of chalybeate properties. The soil is partly clay and partly a light red sand. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £156. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice recently much improved, and the greater part rebuilt. Normanton House, the principal residence, is situated on an eminence in an extensive and well-wooded park abounding in deer.

NORMANTON, a par. in the lower div. of Agbrigg wap., West Riding co. York, 5 miles N.E. of Wakefield, its post town, and 186 from London. It is a station on the North Midland railway, which here forms a conjunction with the Leeds, Manchester, and York railway. The par., which is large, is situated on the W. side of the Calder river, and comprises the ext.-par. places of Altofts and Snydale, and the hmlt. of Woodhouse. The village—which, since the completion of the several railway lines, has become a place of considerable importance—contains a good hotel, and an extensive iron foundry employing a large number of hands. There are traces of the moat which formerly surrounded Normanton, and at Altofts is a steep embankment carrying the railway over the Calder by a viaduct. Near the village is a barrow called Haw Hill. The soil is rich, and well adapted for the growth of wheat; the subsoil is gravel, bind, and coal. The impropriate tithes belong to the Master and Fellows of Trinity College, Cambridge. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £142, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient stone structure with a square tower rebuilt in 1717, and containing three bells. In the interior the church contains a painted E. window, an ancient register chest, several ancient brasses, and numerous monuments. The roof, clerestory, and two walls of the chancel are of recent construction. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. A Sunday-school is held at the church. There is a grammar school, founded about 1592 by John Freeston, in which ten of the pupils are educated free of expense, the master receiving an annuity of £20. About 1 mile W. of the village is Newland Hall, once occupied by the knights of St. John of Jerusalem. S. L. Fox, Esq., is lord of the manor.

NORMANTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Bottesford, hund. of Framland, co. Leicester, 14 miles N.E. of Melton-Mowbray, and 8 N.W. of Grantham. It was formerly a chapelry, but the chapel-of-ease has long been demolished.

NORMANTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Southwell, lib. of Southwell and Scrooby, co. Nottingham, half a mile N.E. of Southwell. It is situated on the river Greet, and has the ruins of a chapel, now used as a barn.

NORMANTON-LE-HEATH, a chplry. in the par. of Nailstone, hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 3 miles S.E. of Ashby-de-la-Zouch, its post town, and 16 N.W. of Leicester. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. This place is a meet for the Atherstone hounds. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £210. The church is an ancient structure restored in 1853, with a spired tower containing two bells. It has some stained windows and an ancient carved screen. The charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

NORMANTON-ON-THE-WOLDS, a tnshp. in the par. of Plumtree, N. div. of Rushcliffe wap., co. Nottingham, 6¼ miles S.E. of Nottingham, and 13 N.W. of Melton-Mowbray. The village is small, and chiefly agricultural. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The land is chiefly arable.

NORMANTON, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Scarsdale, co. Derby, 2½ miles E. of Alfreton, its post town, and 2 N.W. of the Pinxton railway station. The village, which is large, is situated on an eminence, and is chiefly agricultural. It formerly belonged to the Willoughbys and Revels, which latter family resided here from the time of the Conquest. The surface is elevated and the scenery diversified. The substratum abounds in coal, of which some mines have been opened. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £285. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £375. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a large ancient structure with a square embattled tower crowned with pinnacles. The parochial charities produce about £5 10s. per annum, which is distributed in flannel to the poor. There is a National school for children of both sexes. The Primitive and Wesleyan Methodists have each a place of worship. Carnfield Hall, the old seat of the Revel family, is the principal residence. Thomas Radford, Esq., is lord of the manor.

NORMANTON, TEMPLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Chesterfield, hund. of Scarsdale, co. Derby, 2½ miles S.E. of Chesterfield, its post town, and 3 N.E. of the Clay Cross railway station. The village, which is inconsiderable, is situated on the road from Chesterfield to Mansfield, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £55. The church is an ancient structure, now in a ruinous condition. There is a small endowment for the education of children. R. Arkwright, Esq., is lord of the manor.

NORMANTON-TURVILLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Thurlaston, hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 6 miles N.E. of Hinckley.

NORMANTON-UPON-SOAR, a par. in the S. div. of Rushcliffe wap., co. Nottingham, 2 miles N.W. of Loughborough, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Midland Counties railway, and is chiefly agricultural. The river Soar joins the Trent at the northern, and the Leicester navigation at the southern extremity of the village. In the neighbourhood are several market-gardens, also brick and lime kilns. The soil is very fertile, on a substratum of limestone, which is extensively quarried for building and for burning into lime. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1776, and the glebe comprises 243 acres, valued at £400 per annum. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church, dedicated to St. John, is an ancient cruciform structure with a lofty spired tower containing five bells. The N. transept is entirely and the S. partly a ruin. The parochial charities produce about £6 6s. 8d., which is distributed in various forms every five years. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. John Nicholas Buckley, Esq., is lord of the manor.

NORMANTON-UPON-TRENT, a par. in the N. div. of Thurgarton wap., co. Nottingham, 3 miles from Carlton-on-Trent, its post town, and 4 S.E. of Tuxford. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on an eminence near the river Trent, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is chiefly alluvial and rich clay. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in the reign of George III., and subsequently 56½ acres were allotted to the vicar in lieu of tithes. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £154. The church, dedicated to St. Matthew, is a small structure with a tower, containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £67 15s. per annum, besides almshouses for six poor widows. There is a free school. The Wesleyan Methodists have a place of worship. John Evelyn Denison, Esq., M.P., is lord of the manor.

NORMICOTT, a lib. in the par. of Stone, S. div. of the hund. of Pirehill, co. Stafford, 1 mile S.E. of Lane-End, and adjoining Longton, its post town, on the S.E. Here are the waterworks belonging to the Duke of Sutherland, the source of which is one of the clearest streams in the kingdom. Earthenware and china are manufactured in the district. It forms a constablewick in the Hilderstone quarter of the par., and includes Meir-Lane, Meir-Furnace, Meir-Heath, and many scattered houses. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £80. The church, dedicated to the Four Evangelists, is a stone edifice with a turret containing one bell. It was erected at the expense of the Duke of Sutherland in 1847. There is a National school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school. The Wesleyans and New Connexion Methodists have each a place of worship. The Duke of Sunderland is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

NORNCOTT, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Heath, and par. of Stoke St. Milborough, co. Salop, 6 miles N. by E. of Ludlow.

NORNEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Blyth, wap. of Bassetlaw, co. Notts, half a mile N. of Blyth, and 30 miles from Nottingham.

NORRIESTON, a quoad sacra par. in the pars. of Kilmadock and Kincardine, co. Perth, Scotland, 2 miles N. of the Forth, and 6 S.E. of Callendar. It comprehends the detached portion of the par. of Kincardine, with the improving vil. of Morrieston and the vil. of Thornhill. The village is situated on an eminence adjoining the road from Stirling to Aberfoil. This par. is in the presb. of Dunblane and in the patron. of the heads of families and male communicants. The minister has a stipend of £95. The church is an ancient edifice, formerly a chapel-of-ease to Kincardine. There is also a Free church.

NORRIS CASTLE, a seat in the Isle of Wight, co. Hants, near Cowes. It was built by Wyatt, and commands an extensive view of the Solent.

NORTH, two pars. of this name in the Orkney Islands, coast of Scotland. See LADYKIRK, WESTRAY ISLAND, and ST. PETER'S, SOUTH RONALDSHAY.

NORTHALL, a hmlt. in the par. of Eddlesborough, hund. of Cottesloe, co. Bucks, 3 miles N. by E. of Ivinghoe. The hamlet, which is considerable, is situated in the border of Northall Common.

NORTHALLERTON, a par., post and market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the wap. of Allertonshire, North Riding co. York, 3½ miles from Old Herington, 8 from Bedale, and 221 from London. It is a station on the North-Eastern railway. It is situated in a valley to the E. of the old Roman road, Ermine Street, and is crossed from E. to W. by the small stream Sun Beek, a feeder of the river Wiske, which bounds the parish on the W. It includes the tnshps. of Brompton, Deighton, High-Worsall, Romanby, and Northallerton, besides the ext. par. lib. of Lazenby. This place was a Roman station and subsequently a Saxon borough, and is mentioned as Alreton and Alvertune in Domesday Book, the prefix having been added to distinguish it from Allerton Maulevérer. It was given by William Rufus to the bishops of Durham, whose castle, in 1318, was burnt by Robert Bruce. The celebrated battle of the Standard was fought at Cowton Moor, in this parish, in 1138, between the English and the Scotch, under their king, David, commanded by Ralph, Bishop of the Orkney Islands, Walter l'Espec, and W. d'Albemarle, in which the latter suffered a total defeat, with the loss of 11,000 men. The spot on which the Standard was erected is still called Standard Hill, and the holes into which the dead were thrown, Scots' Pits. In 1318 the town was surprised and burnt by the Scots. In 1745 the English army, under the command of the Duke of Cumberland, encamped on the Castle hills previously to their marching against the Pretender.—The town, which is a borough by prescription, is governed by the bishop's bailiff, who is returning officer. It returned two members to parliament, once in the reign of Edward I., but not again till 1640, and since the passing of the Reform Bill it has returned but one. The new borough includes the tnshps. of Northallerton and Romanby, and the chplry. of Brompton. The town principally consists of one long and wide street, which is well paved and lighted with gas. It includes the butchers' shambles, a market-cross, toll-booth, and several good shops. The petty sessions are held every Wednesday at the sessions house, in which the general quarter sessions for the North Riding and the county court are also held. To the W. of the sessions house is the registrar's office for the North Riding, where the Bishop of Durham, as high bailiff of the whole liberty and lord of the manor of Northallerton, was wont to hold his courts. There are three commercial banks, a savings-bank, and a mechanics' institution. The chief trade of the town is in agricultural produce, but brick-making, malting, and tanning are also carried on to a large extent. In the vicinity of the town are vestiges of the fortified palace of the bishops of Durham; also ruins of Bishop Hatfield's priory for White Canons or Carmelites, founded in 1354, and dedicated to St. Mary; traces of an Austin friary, founded about 1341, by William de Alverton or Allerton, and the site of St. James's Hospital, about a mile from the town, the revenue of which at the Dissolution was returned at £58 10*s.* 10*d.* It has long given name to a district called Allertonshire, now constituting the wapentake and liberty, and is the head of a Poor-law Union comprising 44 parishes and places. The population district contained 12,174 inhabitants in 1861, but the parish only 4,980. It is the seat of superintendent registry and new County Court districts, which nearly coincide with the Poor-law Union. It is also a polling place for the election of knights of the shire for the North Riding. It gave title of viscount to George I. before his accession to the English throne. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1772, except for the manors of Allerton and Flaxby, Clareton, and Coneystrop. The glebe attached to the living comprises about 200 acres. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Deighton annexed, in the dioc. of York, val. £697, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Durham. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient cruciform stone structure in the Norman and later English styles of architecture, with a square tower rising from the centre, crowned with pinnacles at the angles, and containing a clock and six bells. In addition to the parish church there are two district churches at Brompton and High Worsall, the livings of which are perpet. curs., val. £120 and £80 respectively, and a chapel-of-ease at Deighton. The parochial charities produce about £165 per annum, including the bequest of the Rev. John Kettlewell, which now realises £60, appropriated to the support of the National schools, and to various other purposes. There is also a hospital, or Maison de Dieu, for 13 poor persons of either sex, founded by Richard de Moore in 1476. The free grammar school is of royal foundation, and has a small endowment. At this school, Mr. Rymer, editor of the "Fœdera," Rev. J. Kettlewell, a divine, Archbishop Palliser, Dr. George Hickes, Dean of Worcester, and author of the "Thesaurus Septentrionalium Linguarum," Dr. Thomas Burnet, master of the Charter House, London, and Dr. Radcliffe, were pupils. There are besides National and Sunday schools. The Wesleyans, Independents, and Baptists have each a place of worship. The tolls of this parish belong to the Bishop of Ripon. Vestiges of a military road leading from Derventio, now Alby, through this town, to Catterick, may still be traced. Races take place annually. Market day is Wednesday. Fairs are held on the 7th and 14th February, 5th and 6th May, and 3rd and 4th October, for the sale of horses, cattle, and sheep, and for cheese on the second Wednesday in October.

NORTHAM, a par. in the hund. of Shebbear, co. Devon, 1½ mile N.W. of Bideford, its post town, and 1 from the Instow railway station. The par., which is large, is bounded on the W. by the Bristol Channel, and on the E. by the navigable river Torridge. It includes the small seaport of Appledore and the hmlt. of Northam Ridge, which is situated on Northam Burrows, an extensive ridge of pebbles 3 miles in extent. At Kenwith Castle, in this parish, are traces of an entrenched camp in which the Danes were defeated by the Saxons, and their standard captured. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is of a sandy and loamy nature, on a substratum of stone, which is quarried. The appropriate tithes, belonging to the Dean and Chapter of Windsor, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £525. The glebe comprises 60 acres, valued at £130 per annum. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £125, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Windsor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a stone structure, restored in 1853, with a tower containing six bells. The parochial charities produce about £60 per annum, besides almshouses for four aged single females. There are National and infant schools. The Independents, Baptists, Wesleyans, and Plymouth Brethren have each a place of worship. The principal residences are Halls-annery House, Orchard Hill, Port Hill, and Rawleigh House. The manor is held under lease by T. B. Chanter, Esq., from the Cleveland family. Annual sports of various kinds are held on Whit Monday.

NORTHAM, a hmlt. in the borough of Southampton, co. Hants. It is built on the site of the ancient Clausentum, near the river Itchin, and opposite Bittern Grove.

NORTHAMPTON, a market town, parliamentary and municipal borough, and the county town of the co. of Northampton, 66 miles N.W. from London by road, and 68 by the Peterborough section of the London and North-Western railway. It is situated on a slope rising from the northern bank of the river Nen, and on a branch canal connecting the Nen with the Grand Junction canal. It is a very ancient town, but when originally built has never been determined. It was called by the Saxons Hampton and Northafendon, and is mentioned in Domesday as Northanetone. The Danes had possession of it in the reign of Edward the Elder, and burnt it in 1010, when they depopulated the surrounding country. Northampton was again destroyed by fire some fifty years later, under Earl Morcar. It was given by William the Conqueror to Simon de St. Liz, who was created first Earl of Northampton, and who built the castle and walled in the town. It soon became the most important town in the county, from its central position, and the security of its fortifications; and in it several councils and parliaments were subsequently held. Henry I. met his brother here, and celebrated Easter with great splendour, in 1122. Soon after he held a council, in which the barons swore fealty to his daughter Maud, whom he appointed his successor. From the reign of Richard I. to that of Henry III. it was a mint town. King John frequently visited Northampton, and removed hither his exchequer from London in 1209, but a few years afterwards was compelled to give up the town to the barons as a surety for the faithful observance of Magna Charta. In the reign of Henry III. the barons succeeded in gaining possession of the town, but it was soon after recovered by the king's forces. It was here also that the King of Scotland did homage to Henry III., who kept Christmas at Northampton several times during his reign. The last parliament which was held at Northampton was in the reign of Richard II., in 1380, when the poll tax was imposed which provoked the rebellion under Wat Tyler. The Lancastrians were defeated here in 1460 by the Earl of March, afterwards Edward IV., and the "king-maker Warwick," in a great battle at Hardington Fields, soon after the commencement of the contest between the Red and White Roses, in which Henry VI. was taken prisoner, his queen and the Prince of Wales escaping with difficulty. In 1637 the plague raged here with great violence. During the civil war of the reign of Charles I., Northampton was taken by Lord Brooke, and garrisoned for the parliament. In 1675 the town was laid in ashes by a dreadful fire which consumed upwards of 600 houses, besides the parish church of All Saints, property to the value of above £150,000 being destroyed. An Act of Parliament was passed to rebuild the town, and £25,000 subscribed, exclusive of the gift of the king, who contributed a thousand tons of timber towards that object. In the early part of the 18th century a considerable amount of damage was done to the town by a flood. Before the fire the greater part of the houses were built of wood and thatch, but are now chiefly of a reddish-coloured freestone, obtained in the vicinity. The town consists of four principal streets meeting in a large open market-place, and of a number of minor streets of very irregular formation. The principal streets are well paved and lighted with gas, and the town supplied with water by works situated on the Billing-road.—Northampton returns two members to parliament. It was first chartered by Henry II., and is a borough by prescription. Under the Municipal Reform Act it is divided into three wards, and is governed by a mayor, who is returning officer, 6 aldermen, and 18 councillors, with the style of "mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of Northampton." The municipal and parliamentary boundaries are co-extensive. The population in 1851 was 62,658, with 4,886 inhabited houses, which in 1861 had increased to 32,813, with 6,150 inhabited houses. The revenue of the corporation is about £7,000. The chief articles of manufacture are boots and shoes, which employ nearly 3,000 hands, and are exported all over the globe. There is also a steady trade in the currying of leather. Stockings and lace were formerly made to a large extent, but since the introduction of machinery these branches of industry have ceased to exist. There are also several malting establishments, brass and iron foundries, flour-mills, coach-works, and a paper-mill. Trade is very much facilitated by the navigation of the river Nen, the communication with the Grand Junction canal, and the opening of the several lines of railway.—The public buildings are numerous, and some of them of considerable interest and importance. The townhall is a modern building, and has portraits of Sir T. White, founder of St. John's College, Oxford, and the Right Hon. Spencer Percival. The new corn exchange includes a hall 140 feet by 65 feet, and was erected in 1851. The corn exchange buildings, which are in the Italian style, cost upwards of £10,000, and are now occupied by the mechanics' institution, which boasts of a library of 12,000 volumes, and has nearly 800 members. The county hall is a Grecian building, the ceiling of which is magnificently decorated; and there are portraits of King William III. and Queen Mary, Queen Anne, George I., and George II. The county gaol was erected at a cost of £25,000, by James Mylne, on the model principle, and is capable of holding 150 prisoners. There is also the borough gaol, which was completed in 1846, and cost about £18,000, including the price of the 24 acres of land. Besides these there are a theatre, union poor-house, temperance hall, several commercial banks, savings-bank, baths, and gas and water works. The barracks, erected in 1796, are situated at the northern extremity of the town. The infirmary is a stone building, erected in 1793 by subscription; it cost £25,000, and has accommodation for 127 in-door patients. The lunatic asylum was opened in 1838, and is capable of holding 250 patients. The Royal Victoria self-supporting dispensary was founded in 1844, when the Queen passed through the town.—The ecclesiastical edifices include seven churches, viz., All Saints, rebuilt in 1680 after designs by Sir Christopher Wren. It is a large structure, having a central cupola, and Ionic portico of twelve lofty pillars, which contrast strangely with the ancient embattled tower which escaped when the original building was burnt down in the great fire of 1675. Above the portico are a cornice and entablature, in the centre of which is a statue of Charles II. In the interior was a marble statue by Chantrey to the memory of Spencer Percival, who was for a long period member for the borough, but this has recently been removed into the townhall. There is also a carved oak pulpit, and an altar-piece of Moses and Aaron by Sir Godfrey Kneller. The original church is said to have contained glass as old as 1252. St. Giles's church, near the E. end of the town, is partly of Norman architecture, and partly early English. It is in the shape of a cross, and was first built in the early part of the 12th century; but so many alterations have since been made in it, that most of the traces of the old building have disappeared. The embattled tower, containing a peal of eight bells, is supposed to have been erected about 1615, and is a fine specimen of the building of the period. St. Peter's, near the W. end of the town, and close to where the ancient castle originally stood, is said to have been built about the same time, and is an exceedingly good specimen of the enriched Norman style of architecture. It has recently been restored by Mr. Gilbert Scott. Some portions of the interior are most elaborately carved, and there are several very interesting ancient as well as modern monuments. St. Sepulchre's was built in the early part of the 12th century by the Knights Templars, on the model of the church of the Holy Sepulchre at Jerusalem, and is one of the only four round churches remaining in the kingdom. It is supported on eight Norman columns, with plain pointed arches of a later style of architecture, surmounted by a central cupola; and adjoining it is a tower with six bells and a spire. It contains old brasses, and many curious inscriptions. The other churches are St. Katherine's, St. Andrew's, and St. Edmund's, all three district churches, erected within the last thirty years. There are, besides the above, twenty other places of worship, of which the Baptists have five chapels, the Wesleyan Methodists three, the Independents two, the Calvinists, Primitive Methodists, Unitarians, and Society of Friends, each one, and the Roman Catholics have a collegiate chapel, built in 1845 from Mr. Pugin's designs. The bishop's residence is close by. Among the dissenting chapels the only one that deserves particular notice is that of the Independents, on Castle Hill, as having been for twenty years the scene of the labours of the celebrated Dr. Doddridge, a mural tablet to whose memory has been inserted in the wall. In Abingdon-street is a modern nunnery, dedicated to St. Felix.—The schools and charitable institutions are numerous. Among the former may be mentioned Chipsey's free grammar school, founded about 1543, Dryden's orange-coat school for boys, Becket and Serjeant's blue-coat school for girls, and the corporation or blue-coat school. Bickerstaff's almshouses, founded in 1695, are among the principal charities, with the hospitals of St. Thomas and St. John. The former of these was founded in the middle of the 15th century for eighteen aged persons, and was removed to its present site about 25 years ago; while the latter, originally founded by William St. Clere, is intended for the relief of infirm persons, and has a chapel and spacious hall. There are remains of several ancient religious houses, including those of the Black and Grey Friars, founded about the middle of the 13th century, and the hospital of the Blessed Virgin, founded in 1450. The cemetery contains about 10 acres. There are three bridges in Northampton, one of three arches. But few vestiges are left of the castle, including only the round tower, an arch, and part of the walls. There are also remaining the ditch and S. postern of the town wall, which was dismantled in 1662. Roman coins, pottery, and other relics have been discovered at different times. It publishes the Northampton Herald and Northampton Mercury newspapers, and gives title of marquis to the Compton family. In the immediate vicinity is the Victoria promenade, about 1 mile long, with an avenue of lime-trees. Outside the town are several interesting objects, the chief, perhaps, being Queen Eleanor's cross, where are four figures so arranged that five may be counted at a short distance off, and many bets have been lost and won as to the number of the queens on this monument. Northampton has been the native place of many celebrated men. An ancestor of Washington was twice mayor of the town. Market days are Wednesday and Saturday, for corn, cattle, sheep, and pigs. Fairs are held on the second Tuesday in January, 20th February, third Monday in March, 5th April, 4th May, 19th June, 1st July for wool, 5th and 26th August, 19th September for cheese, first Thursday in November, 28th November, and 19th December. The Pytchley Hunt races are held in March every year. The racecourse is at a short distance N. of the town, and comprises about 120 acres, with a race-stand.

NORTHAMPTONSHIRE, a midland co. of England, bounded on the N. by the river Welland, which separates it from the cos. of Lincoln and Rutland, on the S. by Buckinghamshire and Oxfordshire, on the E. by Bedford, Cambridge, and Huntingdon shires, and on the W. by Warwickshire. It is long and irregular in form, its greatest length being upwards of 70 miles, whilst its greatest breadth is nearly 26 miles, with an average breadth of about 17 miles. It has an area of over 1,000 square miles, or 630,358 acres, of which nearly 600,000 are arable and pasture. The population in 1851 was 212,380, and in 1861 227,704. It was anciently the seat of the Coritani, and in the Roman division of Britain was included in the province of Flavia Cæsariensis. From Borough Hill, near Daventry, Watling Street may be traced for many miles, and close to Weedon it now forms part of the present high road. There are also the remains of several Roman stations, and traces of forts of that period,—that on Borough Hill is perhaps one of the largest in England. On the road to Banbury, near Chipping Warden, a vast quantity of pottery and Roman coins have been discovered at various times. In 1823 the foundations of the Prætorium were discovered here, with tesselated pavements and other remarkable antiquarian curiosities. Either Castor or Chesterton is supposed to be the Roman Durobrivæ, or the Durnomagus of Richard of Cirencester. Northamptonshire was part of Mercia under the Saxons, but after the invasion of the Danes was divided between them and the West Saxons. In Domesday Survey, at which time it included part of Rutlandshire, it is called Northamtunescire. William the Conqueror made grants of large portions of the county to Simon de St. Liz and others of his nobles. William is supposed to have built Rockingham Castle, and St. Liz the castles of Fotheringay and Northampton.—The surface of the county may be said to be undulating and well wooded. The hills and dales are all under cultivation, and interspersed with streams and rivulets. There are several chains of hills—the highest, Arbury Hill, near Daventry, attaining an altitude of 800 feet above the sea-level. Another range of hills, commencing near Great Oxendon, passes Cold Ashby, Welford, Barby, and so on to Daventry; a third begins at Wakerley, and runs towards Braybrook; and a fourth, a little to the E. of Woodford, runs due S., and forms the watershed of the Cherwell, a feeder of the Thames. There are also other smaller ranges, but the hills are in general of no great elevation. The north-eastern extremity of the county, near Peterborough, belongs to the Great Fen district. The chief rivers are the Nen and the Welland, both of which run into the North Sea. The Nen, formed by the confluence of two streams, becomes navigable at Northampton, whence it flows through Wellingborough, Higham Ferrers, Thrapston, and Oundle, till, at Peterborough, it ceases to be navigable. Its length in this county is about 60 miles. The Welland rises 6 miles from Market Harborough, and forms part of the northern boundary of the county: its length is about 50 miles. The Warwickshire Avon rises at Naseby, and the Bedfordshire Ouse near Brackley, but neither are navigable in this county. The Cherwell rises at Charwellton; the Tow close to Sulgrave, whence it runs a little below Stony Stratford, where it joins the Ouse. The surface is well drained.—The Oxford clay is the chief substratum on the E., and lias on oolite in the W. and S.W. divisions. Beds of forest marble are quarried at Colleyweston for roofing slates. Good building stone is quarried at Barnack, Brackley, and Kingsthorpe. Other stone, some of which takes an excellent polish, and is serviceable for architectural purposes, is found in different parts of the county. A valuable bed of ironstone, which yields some 40 per cent. of iron, is worked at a cheap rate, and appears inexhaustible. It was discovered in constructing the railway from Peterborough to Towcester. There is also great abundance of limestone, and good clay for making bricks and tiles. The famous Kilsby tunnel, on the London and North-Western railway, is between West Haddon and Barby; this railway crosses the county between Wolverton and Rugby. From Blisworth a junction runs through Northampton to Peterborough, where it meets the Great Northern and other lines. There are also the Rugby and Stamford branch, on the N.W., near Market Harborough, and the Midland, which connects Peterborough with Leicester. These and other lines of railway give access to every part of the county. The principal roads are the Great North road, which crosses the county to Stamford, in Lincolnshire; a branch road from it at Norman Cross, in Huntingdonshire, to Peterborough; the road through Higham Ferrers, Kettering, and Rockingham, and that through Newport Pagnell, Northampton, and Market Harborough. There are two canals in the county:—the Grand Junction canal, which runs some 25 miles N.W., passing between Daventry and Northampton, and then joins the Oxford canal, whence by the river Nen it runs into the sea at Wisbeach—this canal has also branches to Northampton and Stony Stratford; and the Grand Union canal, which unites with the Grand Junction canal near Daventry, and runs N. until it joins the Leicester canal at Foxton,—the Grand Union canal has likewise a branch to Market Harborough.—The climate of Northamptonshire is generally considered mild and healthy, and the soil, from being very generally well cultivated, is productive, yielding especially corn and grass of a superior quality. It has not the disadvantage of the more western counties, which are subject to very heavy and continued rains. The pastures are rich, and numbers of cattle are fattened for the London market in the large grazing farms. Many of the Northamptonshire farmers are large breeders of cattle, and rearing of sheep is not neglected, the most common breed being the improved Leicester. The chief manufactures are shoes, which are made at Northampton, and whips and lace at Daventry. There is likewise a good business done at Towcester in wool-stapling, and in pottery at Potterspury. It is calculated that about 14 per cent. of the inhabitants maintain themselves by trade and manufacture, and about 13 per cent. by agriculture. There are numerous corn-mills, breweries, and malting-houses, and some iron foundries for agricultural implements. The well-known factory of the London and North-Western railway is at Wolverton. The great military depôt, formerly belonging to the East India Company, is at Weedon.—The county is in two divisions, a northern and southern, which contain 20 hundreds instead of 30, as at the time of the Domesday Survey. The northern division comprises Corby, Hamfordshoe, Higham Ferrers, Huxloe, Polebrook, Rothwell, Willybrook, Navisford, Orlingbury, and Peterborough liberty; and the southern division Chippenham, Clely, Fawsley, Green's Norton and King's Sutton, Nobottle Grove, Spelhoe, Towcester, Wymersley, and Guilsborough. There are nearly 300 parishes in the shire, besides parts of several others and extra-parochial places. The market towns are Northampton, Peterborough, Wellingborough, Brackley, Oundle, Towcester, Daventry, Thrapston, and Kettering, all seats of a poor-law union and places where county courts are held. This county is included in the Midland circuit and military district. It is governed by a lord lieutenant, custos rotulorum, a high sheriff, 42 deputy-lieutenants, and about 440 magistrates. In the ecclesiastical divisions it constitutes an archdeac. in the dioc. of Peterborough and prov. of Canterbury. It returns eight members to parliament—two each for the northern and southern divisions of the shire, and two each for Northampton and Peterborough. Brackley and High Ferrers were disfranchised at the passing of the Reform Bill. The charities are upwards of £20,000, of which about £5,000 are for the purposes of schools and education.—There are many specimens of ancient ecclesiastical architecture in the county. Brixworth church, on the road to Market Harborough, is perhaps one of the most remarkable. It is apparently of about the period of the 11th century, but has undergone many alterations at later periods. Brigstock church, between Oundle and Rothwell, is of Anglo-Saxon origin. Those of Castor and Earl's Barton are of the Norman period; the latter has, however, a remarkable tower said to be of Anglo-Saxon date, and so has Barnack church, near Stamford. There are many other churches of ancient date in the county, which will be found described under the respective parishes to which they belong. The cathedral at Peterborough has considerable portions of Norman architecture. There are several monastic ruins, the chief being St. James's Abbey, at Duston, near Northampton, which was founded by William Peverel, a natural son of William the Conqueror; and Pipewell, a Cistercian abbey, Great Oakley, near Rockingham: of these only the foundations and traces of the walls remain. There are likewise portions of the chapel of Catesby, a Benedictine nunnery near Daventry, and of the Cluniac priory at Daventry, besides the church of the priory of Augustinian canons at Canons Ashby, and vestiges of Sewardsley Cistercian priory near Towcester. The cross at Geddington, near Kettering, erected by Edward I., and another at Northampton, are objects of great interest. There are also a few castellated ruins, the most noteworthy being Fotheringay Castle, which was founded soon after the Conquest, and in which Richard III. was born, and Mary Queen of Scots was executed. This castle was razed to the ground by James I. soon after his accession to the English throne. Barnewell Castle is likewise a fine old ruin. The principal gateway still remains. Henry VI. was defeated by the Yorkists in this county in 1459; and here it was that the battle of Edge Hill in 1642, and again the battle of Naseby in 1645, were fought, the latter deciding the fate of King Charles I. There are several seats in Northamptonshire, among which are Drayton House, near Thrapston, of the period of Henry VI.; Fawsley House, not far from Daventry; Burghley House, near Stamford, built originally by the great Lord Burghley; and Kirby Hall, built by Lord-Keeper Hatton. The dukes of Buccleuch, Cleveland, and Grafton, have seats at Boughton, Sudborough, and Wakefield; the Marquis of Northampton at Castle Ashby; the earls of Westmoreland, Spencer, Cardigan, Pomfret, Carysfort, Winchelsea, Fitzwilliam, and Euston, at Apethorpe, Althorpe, Deene Park, Easton Neston, Elton, Kirby, Milton, and Salcey Forest. Many other of the nobility and gentry have likewise seats in this county.

NORTHAW, or NORTHALL, a par. in the hund. of Cashio, or lib. of St. Albans, co. Herts, 5 miles N.E. of Barnet, its post town, and 3 N.E. of Potter's Bar station on the Great Northern railway. The village is situated on an eminence and is wholly agricultural. There is a mineral spring in the neighbourhood, the water of which is saline, and was formerly much resorted to. The living is a don. cur.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £150. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket, was rebuilt in 1810; it is a cruciform structure, with a square embattled tower containing one bell. The chancel has a painted window. The register dates from 1564. The parochial charities produce about £134 per annum, of which £95 is King James I.'s gift, and goes to the support of the schools. There is a National school for children of both sexes. The trustees of the late Rev. J. A. Trenchard are lords of the manor.

NORTHBAR, a vil. in the par. of Beith, co. Ayr, Scotland, 9 miles N. of Irvine, and 2 S.E. of Beith. It is situated on the road from Beith to Kilmarnock.

NORTHBECK, a hmlt. in the par. of Scredington, co. Lincoln, 3 miles S.E. of Sleaford.

NORTHBOROUGH, or NORTHBURGH, a par. in the lib. of Peterborough, co. Northampton, 2 miles S. of Market Deeping, its post town, and 7 N.W. of Peterborough. The river Welland, which passes at Deeping-St. James, within a mile of the village, is navigable for barges as far as Stamford. The parish, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. It was formerly written Northburh by the Saxons, and part of it borders on the Fenny district. The soil is fertile, consisting chiefly of clay intermixed with sand and gravel. The tithes have been commuted for land, and the glebe consists of 20 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £100, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing two bells. The interior of the church contains tombs of the Claypoles, and other memorials. In it once resided Elizabeth, the favourite daughter of Oliver Cromwell, who married John Claypole, subsequently created a baronet in 1657, and master of the horse and a lord of the bedchamber to the Protector. The parochial charities produce about £25 per annum, realised from lands. The venerable seat of the Claypoles, in the decorated style of domestic architecture, has been converted into a farm-house.

NORTHBOURNE, a par. in the hund. of Cornilo, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 3 miles W. of Deal, its post town, and 4 S. of Sandwich. It is situated at the source of a small rivulet which flows on to Sandwich, and from which the parish derives its name. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The land is almost wholly arable, and hops are grown extensively. The impropriation belongs to the Archbishop of Canterbury. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £168, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Augustine, is a cruciform structure of flint with a square tower. The interior has a monument to the Sandys family, which is decorated with numerous shields. There is a National school for both sexes. In 618 the manor of Northbourne was given by Eadbald, King of Kent, to St. Augustine's monastery at Canterbury, after which it came to the crown, and eventually became the property of Sir W. C. James, Bart., of Betshanger. Northbourne Court is the principal residence. On the Downs, near Little Betshanger, are the remains of a camp formed in the reign of Elizabeth to oppose the landing of the Spaniards.

NORTHCHAPEL, a par. in the hund. of Rotherbridge, rape of Arundel, co. Sussex, 5 miles N. by W. of Petworth, and 6 N.E. of Midhurst. It was anciently included in the parish of Petworth, but was constituted a separate parish by Act of Parliament in 1718. The village, which is small and chiefly agricultural, is situated near the borders of Surrey, on the main road from London to Petworth. During the French war government works were established at Fisher Street, in this parish, for making charcoal for gunpowder, but were subsequently sold. There are also chemical works for making pyroligneous acid, and a tan-yard. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £400. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £300. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure, enlarged in 1833 by the addition of a N. transept, at which time the tower was also rebuilt, chiefly at the expense of the late Earl of Egremont. The charities produce about £60 per annum, chiefly the endowment of the Sunday-school and almshouses, which were built at the expense of the Earl of Egremont in 1835.

NORTHCHURCH, a par. in the hund. of Dacorum, co. Herts, 3 miles S.E. of Tring, and 2 from the railway station on the North-Western line, which has a tunnel here 1,080 feet in length. The village is sometimes called St. Mary's Berkhampstead. It is situated on the high road from Berkhampstead to Tring, near the Grand Junction canal. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. Berkhampstead common is situated on the N., and is upwards of 3 miles in extent. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £794. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient cruciform structure, with a low embattled tower containing five bells. There are various charities. The Baptists have a place of worship.

NORTH CLAY, a div. of the wap. of Bassetlaw, co. Notts, contains the pars. of Applesthorpe, or Apesthorpe, Beckingham Bole, West Burton, Clareborough, Clayworth, Everton, Gringley-on-the-Hill, Hayton, North Leverton, South Leverton, Littleborough, Misterton, East Retford, Saundby, Sturton, Walkeringham, Wheatley, and South Wheatley, comprising about 45,570 acres.

NORTH CRAWLEY. See CRAWLEY, NORTH, co. Bucks, and the like for other places with this prefix not in the following order, which will be found under their proper names.

NORTHCOTT, a hmlt. in the par. of Boyton, hund. of Black Torrington, co. Devon, 7 miles S. of Holsworthy, and 5 N.E. of Launceston.

NORTHCOTT, or NORTHCOURT, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Helen, hund. of Hormer, co. Berks, 1 mile N. of Abingdon.

NORTHEN, or NORTHENDEN, a par. in the hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 7 miles S. of Manchester, its post town, and 5 W. of Stockport. The village, which is rather straggling, is situated on the river Mersey, and is entirely agricultural. The par. comprises the tnshp. of North-Etchells. The land is in a high state of cultivation. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £406, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Wilfrid, is an ancient structure of sandstone, with a low square embattled tower containing six bells. The interior of the church contains tablets to the Tattons of Withenshaw. The parochial charities produce about £42 per annum, £23 of which goes to Sharson's school. There is a National school for children of both sexes, with a small endowment, also an infant school in which a Sunday-school is held. Withenshaw Hall, the old seat of the Tatton family, is an ancient mansion, formerly garrisoned for the king and taken by the parliamentary troops in 1644. T. William Tatton, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Wakes are held in the third week in October.

NORTH-END, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Hinckford, co. Essex.

NORTHEND, a hmlt. in the par. of Crayford, hund. of Lessness, and lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 1½ mile N. of Crayford, and half a mile from Erith.

NORTH-END, a hmlt. in the borough of Deal, co. Kent, near Deal.

NORTH-END, a hmlt. in the par. of South Stoneham, co. Hants, 5 miles N. of Southampton.

NORTH-END, a district in the par. of Fulham, Kensington div. of the hund. of Ossulstone, co. Middlesex, 1 mile E. of Hammersmith, and 6 miles S.W. of St. Paul's, London. It is situated at the bridge over the Thames opposite Putney, and was the residence of Foote, the tragedian; Bartolozzi, the engraver; Tonson, the bookseller; and Richardson, the author of "Clarissa Harlowe."

NORTH-END, a hmlt. in the par. of Hampstead, co. Middlesex, 5 miles N.W. of St. Paul's, London. It is situated in a healthy spot on the further side of the heath, about 400 feet above the level of the sea.

NORTH-END, a hmlt. in the par. of Burton-Dassett, co. Warwick, 4 miles E. by S. of Kington.

NORTH-END, a tythg. in the par. of South Damerham, co. Wilts, 9 miles S. of Salisbury.

NORTHEY ISLAND, a district in the hund. of Dengie, co. Essex, 2 miles E. by S. of Maldon, and 10 E. of Chelmsford. It is situated near the junction of the rivers Blackwater and Chelmer, and is a meet for the East Essex hounds.

NORTHFIELD, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Halfshire, co. Worcester, 6 miles S.W. of Birmingham, its post town, and 2 W. of the King's Norton station on the Gloucester railway. It is situated on the small river Rea, and on the road from Birmingham to Worcester. The par. contains the hmlts. of Selly, Hay, Shendley, and Bartley. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in nail making. There are chemical works and freestone quarries. The surface is flat towards the E., but hilly in the W. The soil is a fertile loam, producing good crops of wheat and beans. The tithes of this parish have been commuted for a rent-charge of £805, and the glebe comprises 44 acres, valued at £80 per year. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Bartley Green, in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £1,170. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a memorial window, inserted in 1838 by the widow and daughters of the late John Johnstone, M.D. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum, of which £13 go to the National school for both sexes. There are two places of worship for the Wesleyans. The Birmingham and Worcester and the Netherton canals, as also the Birmingham and Gloucester railway, pass through the parish. About 2 miles N.W. are the ruins of Weoley Castle, which anciently belonged to the families of Botetourt, Berkeley, and Jervois.

NORTHFLEET, a par. in the hund. of Toltingtrough, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 2 miles W. of Gravesend, its post town, and 20 E. of London by road, or 22 by railway. It is a station on the North Kent railway, and a steamboat leaves Rosherville pier in connection with the Tilbury line. This place was probably a Roman station, and is mentioned in Domesday Survey. It is situated on the Thames, near Northfleet Creek, and formerly belonged to the archbishops of Canterbury. The par. includes the hmlt. of Lower Perry Street and the vil. of Rosherville, recently formed into a district par., with the gardens of Rosherville, which are frequented by a large number of visitors during the summer season. The neighbourhood abounds with chalk and lime pits, of which there are very extensive works. Stone Bridge, which was very ancient, has been rebuilt in a line with the London road. The surface near the river bank in the north-western part of the parish lies low, and was frequently overflowed at high tides, but is now protected by high floodgates. Further inland it rises into gentle hills. There is a large yard for ship-building, and a dock excavated in the solid chalk, also large works for the manufacture of Parker's Roman cement. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £683, and the vicarial for £600. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £400, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to St. Botolph, has been restored in the present century. It is an ancient structure, partly overgrown with ivy, and said to be the largest parish church in the county. It contains several good decorated windows, ancient oak stalls, piscinas, a screen, and several brasses, one of which is to Peter de Lacy, a priest, who was buried in leather, bearing date 1375, and another monument of more modern date, of alabaster, to the memory of E. Browne, physician to Charles II. In the churchyard is an obelisk with a representation of Huggins College in alto-relievo, on the E. and W. sides. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. There are National schools both here and at Rosherville, also British schools with a small endowment. A college for decayed gentry has been erected near Stone Bridge; the building consists of 40 residences, including a chapel with a slender spire. Each pensioner receives £1 per week in addition to his lodging. This institution is under the superintendence of John Huggins, Esq., of Sittingbourne, by whom it was built. At Grays Reach is a pier of new formation near 1¼ mile in length. It is situated at the bend of the river where the East India Company's ships used to anchor. Fairs are held on the 24th March, and on Easter and Whit Tuesdays.

NORTH-FORTY-FOOT-BANK, or FEN CORNER, an ext. par. place in the wap. of Kirton, parts of Holland, co. Lincoln, 9 miles W. by N. of Boston.

NORTH-HAMLET, an ext. par. place in the upper div. of Dudstone hund., co. Gloucester.

NORTH-HILL, a par. in the N. div. of the hund. of East, co. Cornwall, 6½ miles S. by W. of Launceston, and 9 W. of Callington. The par., which is of large extent, contains, beside the vil. of its own name, the hmlts. of Bath Pool, Coad's Green, Congdon Shop, Illand, and Trebartha. It is bounded on the N. by the river Inny, and intersected by the Lynher, or Lynhoe, a branch of the Hamoaze. The soil is light, upon a subsoil of granite and slate. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats, green crops, and grass. The substratum abounds in good building stone, especially in the southern portion, where granite predominates, and is extensively wrought at the Kilmar quarries. Vast quantities of this stone have recently been sent to London by the Cheesering Company for building the new Westminster Bridge. Manganese is found, and in the S. some stream tin works have been opened. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £538, and the glebe comprises 50 acres, valued at £60. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £411. The church, dedicated to St. Torney, is an ancient structure of granite, with a lofty embattled tower crowned with pinnacles and containing a peal of six bells. The porch has a groined ceiling of granite, and in the interior of the church are two monuments, one to the Vincents of Battens, and the other to the Spoure family, once the owners of Trebartha Hall. At Trebartha and Landreyne were formerly chapels of ease. There are places of worship for Wesleyans and Bryanites, also National and Sunday schools. The principal residence is Trebartha Hall, situated in a small park, watered by a tributary stream of the Lynher, which forms in its course a series of cascades. Arthur's Hall is an opening in the rock 60 feet long by 35 feet broad, and on a neighbouring tor are several rock basins called "Arthur's troughs."

NORTH HILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Little Malvern, lower div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, co. Worcester, 6 miles N.W. of Upton-on-Severn, and 2 S. of Great Malvern. It is situated amongst the Malvern hills, which here rise to the height of about 1,200 feet. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £100, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Westminster. The church is dedicated to St. James.

NORTH-HOLME, or WAINFLEET ST. THOMAS, a par. in the Marsh div. of the wap. of Candleshoe, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, half a mile N. of Wainfleet, and 8 miles E. by S. of Spilsby. It is situated on the river Steeping, near Boston Deeps, and may be considered a suburb of Wainfleet. The surface is marshy, and the population decreasing, owing to the decay of the trade of Wainfleet, once a flourishing subport to Boston. About a mile from the village are the Wainfleet Sands, which are from 1 to 3 miles wide, and are dry at low water. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £44, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church has long been in ruins, but the cemetery is still used.

NORTHIAM, or NORDIHAM, a par. in the hund. of Staple, rape of Hastings, co. Sussex, 7¾ miles N.W. of Rye, and 7 E. of Robertsbridge. The par., which is chiefly agricultural, is bounded on the N. by the river Rother, which divides it from the county of Kent. A great portion of the land is laid out in hop-grounds. The surface is undulating and well wooded. The village is situated on the road from London to Rye. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £786. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small structure, with a square embattled tower surmounted by a lofty spire. Adjoining it is the mausoleum of the ancient family of the Frewens, on the N.W. side. The father of Archbishop Frewen formerly held the living. There are a free school for 15 pupils, the master of which is privileged to take a limited number of boarders, and a school for children of both sexes on the National system. The Wesleyans and Unitarians have each a place of worship. In 1822 a barge, supposed to have belonged to Hastings the Dane, who sailed up the river in 893, was discovered in a field beneath the sand and mud. It was of strong construction, and measured 65 feet by 14 feet, with a forecastle, remains of a cabin, and whole deck. It contained a board for marking the days, and many other relics. Brickwall House is the principal residence.

NORTHILL. See NORTH-HILL, co. Cornwall.

NORTHILL, a par. in the hund. of Wixamtree, co. Bedford, 3 miles N.W. of Biggleswade, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the road from Biggleswade to Bedford, and near the river Ivel. It is chiefly agricultural, but straw-plaiting and lace-making are carried on to a small extent. The par. comprises the hmlts of Upper and Lower Caldicott, Brook End, Hatch, Budna, Thorncote, and Ickwell. The soil is gravel, and the greater part of the land arable, with a small proportion of pasture. The tithes were commuted for land and corn rents under two separate Acts of Enclosure towards the close of the last century. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £395, in the patron. of the Grocers' Company, London. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a square tower containing five bells, and was made collegiate in the reign of Henry IV., but dissolved by Edward VI. It has a stained-glass E. window, and some old stalls. The parochial charities produce about £55 per annum, with a share in H. Smith's charity. There is a National school for both sexes. John Harvey, Esq., of Ickwell Bury, is lord of the manor, and impropriator of part of the rectorial tithes.

NORTHINGTON, a par. in the lower half of the hund. of Mitcheldever, co. Hants, 3¾ miles N.W. of New Alresford, its post town, and 6 S.E. of the Andover railway station. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The soil is fertile and the scenery diversified. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Swarraton, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. John, was rebuilt by Lord Ashburton in 1830, at an expense of £1,500. It has a tower containing three bells. Grange Park, formerly the seat of the earls of Northington, which title is now extinct, is a mansion built by Inigo Jones. It is now the property of Lord Ashburton, who is the lord of the manor.

NORTH ISLES, a district of the Orkney Islands, coast of Scotland, comprising the islands and pars. of Burness, Cross, Eday, Lady, North Ronaldshay, Rousay, Sanda, Shapinshay, Stronsay, and Westray. It gives name to a presbytery in the synod of Orkney.

NORTH KIRK, or PIERWALL, a vil. in the par. of Lady-Kirk, Orkney Islands, coast of Scotland. It is situated on the N. side of Westray Island.

NORTHKIRK, an ancient par. in the Shetland Isles, coast of Scotland, now joined to Yell.

NORTHLEACH, a par., post and small market town, in the hund. of Bradley, co. Gloucester, 13 miles S.E. of Cheltenham, 10 N.E. of Cirencester, and 84 from London. It is situated in a vale near the source of the river Leach, from which it derives its name, under the Cotswold hills. It is a polling and petty sessions town, consisting principally of one long, irregularly-built street. The par. includes the hmlt. of Eastington, at which place is an ancient camp, with a double vallum, called Norbury, and supposed to be of Roman origin. It was given by Etheldred to Gloucester Abbey, but was resumed by Henry VIII., and given to the Daltons. About the beginning of the 16th century it did an extensive clothing trade, but owing chiefly to the deficiency of water supply, it gradually declined, and the trade has long been discontinued. It is governed by a bailiff, burgesses, &c. Petty sessions are held twice a month at the house of correction for the county, which is situated at a short distance from the town. New county courts are held at the King's Head Inn monthly. A court-leet is held yearly, at which the bailiff, two constables, two tythingmen, and two cardinals are appointed. The board of guardians meet at the workhouse every Wednesday. There is an ancient market-house supported by pillars, with remains of a cross. A few of the inhabitants are engaged in frame-work knitting, but the chief business is in agricultural produce. The land is chiefly arable. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment, under an Act of Enclosure in 1782. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £270, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient structure, with an embattled tower containing six bells. The interior of the church contains an ancient font and numerous brasses of clothiers, bearing date from 1400. The charities produce about £746 per annum. The almshouses are for six aged men and the same number of women. There are a free grammar and National schools. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a chapel. Here is a meet for the Cheltenham staghounds. Jevon Harper, Esq., is lord of the manor. The ancient British road, called the Lower Salt-Way, leading from Droitwich towards the E., was here crossed by the Roman Fosseway, which describes the north-western boundary of the parish. Market day is Wednesday. Fairs are held on the Wednesday prior to the 4th of May, and on the first Wednesday in September, for cattle and sheep, and two statute fairs in October.

NORTHLEW, or NORTHLEIGH, a par. in the hund. of Black-Torrington, co. Devon, 3½ miles S.E. of Honiton, and 4 N.W. of Colyton. The village, which is small and straggling, is situated on a branch of the river Torridge, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is various, with a subsoil of red marl. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £342, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is a stone edifice, with a tower containing four bells. The interior of the church contains a font, also a carved screen, which has been newly erected. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. Mrs. Proby, of Seaton, is lady of the manor.

NORTHMAVINE, or NORTHMAVING, a par. in the Mainland, Shetland Islands, coast of Scotland. It comprises the northern part of Mainland, which is indented with many voes or inlets, affording safe harbours for the fishing-boats, and is surrounded on all sides with small islands, holms, and rocks, as Eagleshay, Lamba, Dorholm, Maiden Skerry, Hamnavoe, Burravoe, &c., but only one of these—Lamba—is inhabited. It is a peninsula united to the parish of Delting by a narrow isthmus about 100 yards broad at high water, called Mavis-grind, but so low that at high spring-tides it is entirely surrounded by water. It extends in length about 16 miles from S. to N., with an extreme breadth of about 8 miles. The surface is of a hilly nature, the highest altitude being at Rona's Hill, which is 1,470 feet above sea level. This hill has on its summit an ancient building crowned with a pyramidal tower of small stones, which serves as an excellent landmark, being the first Scottish land sighted by ships approaching from the N.W. The surface is chiefly rock, moss, and pasture, with but a small portion of land devoted to agricultural purposes. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the fisheries. All the fish caught in the parish are shipped for exportation at Hillswick Harbour, in St. Magnus Bay, where there is safe and excellent anchorage. At the village of Hillswick, which is the only commercial place in the parish, are good warehouses and salt and fish cellars, also a commodious beach for drying fish. This par. is in the presb. of Olnafirth and synod of Shetland. The minister has a stipend of £158. The parish church, situated in the village of Hillswick, was erected in 1733, and restored in the years 1764 and 1825. There was formerly another church at Ottabery, on the E. side of the parish, but this has been in ruins since 1761. There are parochial and other schools. The Wesleyans have a chapel at North Rae, and the Independents one at Sulerne. Three fairs for cattle and horses are held annually. The ward-hills or watch-houses along the coast are supposed to have been originally built to give notice of approaching danger, but were subsequently used to call the people together when shoals of small whales appeared, for which purpose they are still employed in the Tawe Islands. Fetheland is a small peninsula at the northernmost point of the parish, enclosed by a stone fence, off which are the three lofty rocks called Ramna-Stacks.

NORTHMOOR, WITH MOORTON AND NEWBRIDGE, a par. in the hund. of Chadlington, co. Oxford, 7 miles S.E. of Witney, its post town, and 6½ S.W. of Oxford. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Isis, and is wholly agricultural. Not quite a third of the land is arable, the remainder pasture and meadow. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £504. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £120, in the patron. of St. John's College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Dennis, is an ancient cruciform structure, with a square tower containing six bells. The interior of the church has effigies of a crusader. The parochial charities produce about £40 per annum. The Archbishop of York is lord of the manor.

NORTHMOOR, a vil. in the par. of North Petherton, co. Somerset, 2 miles S. of Bridgwater. It is situated near the river Parret and Taunton canal. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £100, in the patron. of the Vicar of North Petherton.

NORTHMUIR, a vil. in the par. of Kirriemuir, co. Forfar, Scotland, 5 miles N.W. of Forfar.

NORTHOLT, or NORTHALT, a par. in the hund. of Elthorne, co. Middlesex, 4 miles from the Hanwell station, 4 E. of Uxbridge, and 2½ S. by W. of Harrow, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Paddington canal, between the Harrow and Uxbridge roads, about equi-distant from the Birmingham railway at Harrow, and the Great Western railway at Southall. It is wholly agricultural, but bricks are extensively made. It is mentioned in Domesday as Northala, and was formerly held by the Mandevilles, through whom it came to the Botelers, and so to Earl Jersey, of Osterley. The land is chiefly meadow, with a small proportion of arable. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £668, and the glebe comprises 44 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of London, val. £682, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small ancient structure. The interior has a brass of Rowdell, bearing date 1452, and tombs of Bishop Lisle, of St. Asaph, a former vicar, and Dr. Demainbray, the philosopher. The register dates from 1560. There is a National school. Bricks are made in this parish in large quantities, being used in the construction of the London sewers. Northolt was the scene of numerous contests in the wars of the Roses, as well as in the Civil War. Traces of a Roman road occur in the north-western part of the parish.

NORTHOP, or NORTH-HOPE, a par. and post town in the hund. of Coleshill, co. Flint, 4 miles N.W. of Hawarden. It contains the following tnshps., viz., Caerfallwch, Golftyn, Kelsterton, Wepre, Leadbrook Major and Minor, Northop, and Soughton. It is situated near the Dee and Wat's Dyke. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the collieries, tile works, and potteries. There are also some very valuable lead mines belonging to the Grosvenor family. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £500, in the patron. of the bishop. The church has a lofty tower. The interior has numerous effigies, among which is one to Edwyn, a Welsh prince, bearing date 1073. There is also a district church at Connah's-Quay, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £301. The parochial charities produce about £90 per annum. There is a free grammar school, endowed with an annuity of £35 by the Rev. G. Smith in 1606; also a National school, with an endowment of £40 per annum. The Methodists have two places of worship. Highfield Hall and Soughton Hall are the principal residences.

NORTHORPE, a par. in the wap. of Corringham, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 2 miles S.W. of Kirton, its post town, and 8 N.E. of Gainsborough. It is a station on the Manchester and Lincolnshire railway. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The river Ean flows through the parish, and falls into the river Trent. The soil is chiefly clay, and the lowlands are subject occasionally to inundation from the river Ean. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £418. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £80, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a neat structure, dedicated to St. John the Baptist. There is a National school. Thomas Fox, Esq., is lord of the manor.

NORTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Thurlby, wap. of Ness, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 2 miles S. of Bourne.

NORTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Donington, co. Lincoln, half a mile N.W. of Donington.

NORTHOVER, a par. in the hund. of Tintinhull, co. Somerset. It is a small village adjoining Ilchester, its post town. It is situated on the river Ivel or Yeo, near the ancient Fosseway. The village is built along the road to Exeter, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is of a loamy nature, with a subsoil of gravel. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £120. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £106. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing four bells. The register dates from 1700. John Langfield Burnard, Esq., J.P., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

NORTHREW, an ancient par. in the Shetland Isles, coast of Scotland, now joined to Northmavine.

NORTHSCEUGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Cumwhitton, ward of Eskdale, co. Cumberland, 3½ miles from Cumwhitton, 8 S. of Brampton, and 6 N. by W. of Kirk-Oswald. It is joined with Moorthwaite to form a township.

NORTHSTOW, a hund. in the co. of Cambridge, containing the pars. of Girton, Impington, Landbeach, Lolworth, Long, Stanton All Saints and St. Michael, Madingley, Milton, Rampton, Waterbeach, and part of Oakington, comprising an area of 19,990 acres.

NORTH-STREET, a hmlt. in the district of Audenshaw, par. of Ashton-under-Lyne, co. Lancaster, 3 miles S.W. of Ashton. It is situated near the canal and the line of the Sheffield railway.

NORTHUMBERLAND is a maritime county at the extreme N. of England. It is bounded on the E. by the North Sea, on the W. it is separated from Scotland by the river Tweed and the Cheviot hills, and on the S. it adjoins Cumberland and Durham, being separated from the latter by the rivers Tyne and Derwent. Its greatest length is 62 miles, and its greatest breadth 50. It measures about 205 miles in circuit, of which 50 are on the coast, and the measure is 1,952 square miles, or 1,249,299 statute acres. It is comprised between 55° 45′ and 54° 43′ N. lat., and 2° 35′ and 1° 20′ W. long. Several small shires, as Berwick-on-Tweed, Newcastle, Islandshire, Sandberghshire, Bedlingtonshire, and Norhamshire, which were formerly independent, now form part of the county. The coast from Berwick to Lindisfarne or Holy Island belongs to the county of Durham. At the earliest period of which we have any information, Northumberland and the adjacent parts of Scotland were inhabited by the Ottadeni or Meatæ, and the Gadeni. Agricola was the first of the Roman generals who advanced so far north, and in the year 80 he protected the territory he had acquired by a line of 18 forts stretching across the country from the Solway Frith to the mouth of the Tyne, and passing Haddon-on-the-Wall and St. Oswald's. These forts were erected as a defence against the incursions of the northern Britons, and were found so effective that they were subsequently strengthened by Hadrian and Severus, who built the wall, and formed the conquered country into a Roman province called Valentia. Besides the paved way which ran from turret to turret, immediately within the wall, another road proceeded in a direct line between the different stations. Two Roman roads, the Maiden Way and Watling Street, or Leeming Lane, traversed the county; the former passed from Alstone to Caervoran, on the wall, between the Irthing and the Tiffold, and the latter entered the county at Elchester, Corbridge, and passed over the Cheviot hills into Scotland to a spot about 4 miles N.E. of Jedburgh. A branch of the same road ran from Beuckley, about a mile N. of the wall, to Alnwick. The first Saxon settlement was effected in 547, by Idas, who built a castle at Bamborough, and founded the kingdom of Northanbymbra, which was subsequently subdivided into Bryneich (Bernicia) and Deifyr (Deira). The Danes commenced their incursions in 844, when they slew Redwulf, the king of Northumbria, and in 867 the sons of Regnar Lodbrog occupied the greater part of the county. During the reign of King Alfred, Northumbria was included in the Danelagh, but in the subsequent wars with that nation Athelstane gave them a decisive defeat at Brunanburgh. At the time of the Norman conquest the N. of England had been so ravaged by the Scots and Danes, that the four northern counties were not included in the survey of the Domesday Book. Until the close of the 16th century the inhabitants of the border counties both of England and Scotland were perpetually engaged in cattle-lifting and in the skirmishes ensuing from this practice. Both countries possessed officers known as the Lord Wardens, and the wardens of the E., W., and middle branches, whose duty was in time of peace to do what they could to preserve peace, and to exact and demand compensation for all injuries, while in time of war they organised marauding expeditions into the hostile country. Upon the union of the two crowns by the accession of James VI. of Scotland to the English throne these offices were abolished. Numerous battles have been fought in Northumberland, including the two famous battles before Alnwick, in 1093 and 1174, in the former of which Malcolm Canmore, the king of Scotland, was killed, and in the latter William the Lion was taken prisoner; also the battles of Otterburn (1387), Homildon (1402), and Pepperdean (1436), between the earls of Northumberland and Douglas; the capture of Alnwick (1462), and Bamborough (1464), by Margaret of Anjou; her subsequent defeats at Hedgley Moor and Hexham; and the battle of Flodden Field or Branxton, where the Earl of Surrey defeated and slew James IV., in 1513. During the civil wars of the seventeenth century, the county principally took the part of the king, and Newcastle was taken in 1644 by the Scotch army, on behalf of the Parliament. In the rebellion of 1715 Hexham was occupied for the Pretender by the Earl of Derwentwater and the other noblemen of the county, but they retired into Scotland on the approach of the king's troops under Carpenter.—The surface of Northumberland gradually rises from the coast towards the Cheviot hills on the Scotch border, and becomes more and more barren as the elevation above the sea-level increases. The hills in the centre of the county are mostly clothed with green turf, but those on the borders are covered with moss and heather. The highest point in the range is 2,658 feet high, and lies a few miles S.W. of Wooler. Near this point the Hedgehope and Standrop range branch out into the centre of the county; and further S., the vales of the Coquet, Reed, and North Tyne, are formed by the spurs of the Cheviot, of which the most conspicuous heights are the Girdle fells, which separate the basins of the Reed and Tyne, and terminate in Hareslaw Moor. S. of the Tyne are the Allendale hills, which abound in lead mines. The coast is low and flat, and opposite Lindisfarne and the Fern Islands large tracts of sand, called "Flats," are laid bare at low tide. These are found at intervals along the entire coast. The principal harbours are Berwick, Warkworth, Holy Island, and Seaton Road. There are lighthouses on Coquet Isle, at Warkworth, the Fern Islands, and at Berwick.—The chief rivers in Northumberland are, the Tweed, which forms the N.W. boundary of the county, and is joined near Twisel by the Till, which flows northwards with the united waters of the Glen, the Caldgate, and the Breamish, which rise in the Cheviot hills. The Aln, which rises near Alnham, passes Whittingham and Alnwick, and forms Alnworth Harbour, after a course of about 20 miles. The Coquet, a very celebrated trout river, rises in the Cheviots, near Watling Street, and crosses the county, passing Alwinton and Rothbury, and falls into the sea at Warkworth, where a system of docks is in course of construction; the Alwine and numerous other small streams join it on its course. The Wansbeck, 24 miles in length, passes Morpeth and enters the sea near Seaton; the chief tributary is the Font, which rises in the South Forest. The Blyth runs nearly parallel with Wansbeck. The Tyne forms the southern boundary from Tynemouth to near Ovingham, and is navigable for large vessels as far as Newcastle. It is formed by the union of the North and South Tynes, which join at Warden, near Hexham. The former rises on the Keelder Moors, and flows S.E. past Falstone, Bellingham, and Wark, while the latter rises near Alstone Moor, and flows first in a northerly direction, altering its course at Haltwhistle to easterly. The respective lengths of the rivers are about 38 and 33 miles, and the main stream is about 30 miles in length. Numerous rivers and burns flow into both branches of the Tyne from the hills on either side, but the only river of any size is the Reed, which rises on Carter Fell and falls into the North Tyne near Bellingham. The Derwent forms for some distance the southern boundary of the county, and falls into the Tyne a little above Newcastle. The above rivers, and, in fact, nearly every stream in the county, abound in trout, and there are salmon fisheries in the Tweed, the Coquet, and the Aln, and formerly in the Tyne, but the navigation in that river now keeps away the salmon. The climate is considerably colder than that of the southern districts of England, but in different parts of the county the temperature varies considerably, the low lands on the E. side being warmer than the moor land on the Scotch border, although the former is also subject to cold E. winds.—Of the geological features of the county, the most noted is the carboniferous formation, of which Newcastle is the centre. The coal measures run northwards from the Tyne as far as the river Aln, and are bounded on the W. by a line drawn through Alnmouth, Felton, Morpeth, Whalton, and Bywell. The coal is mixed with sandstone, clayslate, and limestone, and is in some places 1,600 feet thick. The principal pits are at Earsdon, Wallsend, Heddon, and Hartley. The first pit was worked at Newcastle in 1240. Between the above-mentioned line, and a similar one from Rothbury to Hexham and Alstone Moor, lies a belt of millstone grit, and W. of this, carboniferous limestone, with occasional seams of coal. The remainder of the county is chiefly composed of several varieties of sandstone, except the Cheviots, which are formed in great measure of porphyry, and the cliffs consist of trap near Bamborough and Dunstanborough, and of magnesian limestone further S. There is also a tract of red sandstone along the Tweed, which yields gypsum. Flags and grindstones are quarried at Byker, and limestone for manure at Bamborough. Iron is found in connection with the coal, and lead and zinc at Allendale, Alstone, Fallowfield, Coalcleugh, and Shildon. There are mineral springs at Thurston, Lady's Well, near Halystone, and at Eglingham. The soil of the eastern part of the county is a clayey or gravelly loam; in the centre and S.E. the loam rests on a clay subsoil. Towards the Scotch border there are about 450,000 acres of peat and moor land, divided into small freeholds called "marches," and employed as pasture for sheep, of which there are two breeds on the hills, the Cheviot, a hornless breed, and the ordinary mountain sheep. In the lower lands, the Leicester, Southdown, and other varieties are found. Turnips are very largely grown, also large crops of wheat, oats, barley, beans, and potatoes. The short-horned Durham cattle are very extensively bred, and large quantities of Scotch cattle are imported to fatten. The Clydesdale breed of cart-horses has long been famous. The manufactories in Northumberland are chiefly dependent on the abundant supply of coal, and are scattered in various parts of the county, but more especially along the Tyne, where there are glass, iron, lead, and chemical works, also paper manufactories at Houghton, gloves at Hexham, potteries, brickfields, &c.—For administrative purposes Northumberland is divided into six wards—Bamborough, Glendale, Coquetdale, and Morpeth, which form the northern division of the county, and Castle and Tynedale wards forming the southern division. These contain 90 parishes and part of one more, with six extra-parochial places, and about 600 towns and villages, of which twelve are market towns, viz., Newcastle, Morpeth, Alnwick, Belford, Bellingham, Berwick, Haltwhistle, Hexham, Rothbury, Tynemouth, Allendale, North Shields, and Wooler. Each division of the county returns two members to the House of Commons. The election towns are respectively Alnwick and Hexham, and the polling places, Elsdon, Morpeth, Berwick, and Wooler, for the N., and Newcastle, Bellingham, Haltwhistle, Allendale, and North Shields, for the S. Newcastle and Berwick also return two members each, and Morpeth and Tynemouth (with North Shields) one each. Newcastle is the county and assize town, and sessions are held there as well as at Alnwick, Morpeth, and Hexham. The first ten of the above-named towns, with Glendale and Castle wards, are the seats of the poor-law unions into which the county is divided. The first nine and last two have new county courts. Northumberland has a population of 343,025, according to the census of 1861, of which the northern division contained 93,041, and the southern 249,984, showing an increase of 39,457 since the former census of 1851, when the population was 303,568. The county is governed by a lord lieutenant, about 32 deputy lieutenants, a high sheriff, and a body of magistrates about 200 in number. It is in the northern circuit and the north-eastern military district. For ecclesiastical purposes it contributes two archdeaconries (Lindisfarne and Northumberland) in the diocese of Durham and the province of York. Lindisfarne is subdivided into the rural deaneries of Alnwick, Bamborough, Morpeth, Norham, and Rothbury. Northumberland contains the deaneries of Bellingham, Corbridge, Hexham, and Newcastle. The benefices in the county number about 135.—Northumberland formed an earldom in the Saxon times, and was held by various persons during the reigns of the early Norman kings. In 1148, Henry, Prince of Scotland, was Earl of Northumberland, and he was succeeded by his son and heir Malcolm. In 1377 the title was bestowed on Henry Percy, and it has been held by members of that family for many generations, with the exception of John Nevill, Lord Montagu (1464), John Dudley, Earl of Warwick (1551), and George FitzRoy, son of Charles II. The present dukedom dates from 1766. The principal seats in the county are Alnwick Castle, of the Duke of Northumberland, and one of the grandest historical mansions in the kingdom, restored in 1858 by the late duke to its pristine magnitude as a border castle; Ford Castle, of the Marquis of Waterford; Howick Hall, of Earl Grey; Chillingham, of the Earl of Tankerville; Gallowhill and Bolam House, of Lord Decies; Eslington Park, of Lord Ravensworth; Kielder Castle, of the Duke of Northumberland; Belsay Hall, of Monck, Bart.; Capheaton Hall, of Swinburne, Bart.; Ewart Park, at Doddington, of St. Paul, Bart.; Matfen Hall, of E. Blackett, Bart.; Wallington Hall, of Trevelyan, Bart.; Riding House, of Lord Charles Beauclerk; Beaufront, of Cuthbert, Esq.; Belford, of Rev. J. D. Clarke; Biddlestone, of Walter Selby, Esq.; Blenkinson, of Col. J. B. Coulson; Bywell Hall, of W. Blackett Beaumont, Esq., M.P.; Callaley Castle, of E. J. Clavering, Esq.; Chesters House, of J. Clayton, Esq.; Chipchase Castle, of Ralph W. Grey, Esq., M.P.; Craster Tower, of T. W. Craster, Esq.; Dissington Hall, of E. Collingwood, Esq.; Gosforth House, of W. Smith, Esq.; Harbottle Castle, of P. F. Clenhell, Esq.; Little Harley Tower, of T. Anderson, Esq.; Heddon, of G. Burdon, Esq.; Hesleyside, of W. H. Charlton, Esq.; Kirkley Hall, of E. C. Ogle, M.A.; Lilburn Tower, of E. J. Collingwood, Esq.; Milburn Hall, of N. Bates, Esq.; Minster Acres, of H. C. Silvertop, Esq.; Mitford Castle, of Mrs. Osbaldeston; Morwick Hall, of W. Linskill, Esq.; Nunwick Hall, of Hunter Allgood, Esq.; Pallinsburn House, of Watson Askew, Esq.; Roddam, of W. Roddam, Esq.; Shawdon, of W. J. Pawson, Esq.; Swinburne Castle, of J. B. Coulson, Esq.; Westwodd Hall, of Rev. L. S. Orde; besides numerous other seats of landed gentry. The county is hunted by Lord Elcho's and the Tindale packs of hounds.—The principal lines of railway are the Newcastle and Berwick, a branch of the Great Northern which connects these two towns, running parallel to the coast, and passing through Morpeth and Belford, with branches to Newsham and Alnwick; the Berwick and Kelso line runs along the southern bank of the Tweed, leaving Northumberland near Carham; the Newcastle and Carlisle follows the course of the Tyne from Tynemouth to Haltwhistle, where a branch line from Alstone Moor joins it, and another line leaves it at Hexham, and runs along the North Tyne into Scotland, passing Bellingham, from which town there is a line recently constructed to Morpeth, and thence to Bedlington and Tynemouth, with two branches to North Seaton and Blyth; there is also a line from North Shields, joining the above at the Hartley Colliery. Another line is in contemplation, passing through the centre of the county near Rothbury and Wooler to join the Berwick and Kelso and Morpeth and Bellingham lines. The Edinburgh road passes through Newcastle to Morpeth, and so through Alnwick and Belford to Berwick, 62 miles. Another road to Edinburgh runs from Newcastle through Loughasley, Edlingham, and Wooler to Berwick, with branches to Branxton and Kelso, 63 miles. A third road traverses the vale of the Reed, and another road passes by Ponteland, Kirkharle, and Elsdon, to Kelso, 54 miles. The road up the valley of the Tyne passes Heddon, Bywell, Borbridge, Hexon, and Haydon Bridge, to Haltwhistle, 35 miles. The road down the Tyne valley passes Wallsend and Shields to Tynemouth, 8 miles.—The Roman remains in this county are among the most interesting in the island, including those of the great wall, mentioned at the commencement of this article, and the forts by which it was defended, eighteen in number, but of these the sites of eleven only are within the county. There are remains of stations at Cousins House, or Wallsend (Segedunum), Newcastle (Pons Ælii), Benwell Hill (Condercum), Halton Chesters (Vindobala), Rutchester (Hunnum), Walwick Chesters (Ciluruum), Carrowburgh (Procolita), Housesteads (Borcovicum), Little Chesters (Vindolana), Great Chesters (Æsica), Caervoran (Magna), Ebchester (Vindomora), Corbridge (Corstopitum), Risingham (Habitancum), Rochester (Bremenium), and Chew Green (Ad Fines). Of these remains the most perfect is that at Little Chesters, which covered a space of about 15 acres. There are traces of Roman camps at Whalton, Whitley Castle, near Kirkhaugh, Haltwhistle, Rosedon Edge, Kirknewton, Thirlwall Castle, Bolam, Bamborough, Belford, Rothbury, Callaley, Glanton Pike, Bewick Hill, Hardan, Cornhill, and other places. There are also Druidical remains at Ilderton and Humbledon, and a British ruin on Yevering Bell Mountain, near Wooler, which last deserves a more particular mention. It consists of a large cairn surrounded by a stone wall 8 feet thick on the summit of the mountain, while around and lower down the mountain are the remains of buildings of a circular form, and of a grove of oak trees. In the same neighbourhood, on Homildon Hill, is a stone pillar to commemorate the battle fought there in 1402. The ruins of border castles are very numerous. Of these Norham and Wark on the banks of the Tweed are the most interesting. On the Till are Heton, Dudhowe, and Ford, the latter being still used as a residence. Prudhoe Castle, a seat of the Percys, stands on a hill on the S. bank of the Tyne, near Ovingham. The keep and gate tower are still standing, but the remainder, including the chapel, is in ruins. In the same part of the county are Langley Castle, near Hexham, and Featherstone, Thirlwall, Bellister, and Blenkinsop, near Haltwhistle. Along the coast are Bamborough, a structure of the highest antiquity, Dunstanborough, and Warkworth castles. Near Morpeth are Mitford, Bothal, Harnham, and Helsay castles. Others are Bellingham, Elsdon near Bellingham, Witton near Rothbury, now used as a parsonage, Staward le Peel, on the Allen, Willimoteswick, Simonsburn, Fowberry, Kielder, Cockley, Ayden, Halton, Welton, Harbottle, Hepple, Edlingham, Lilbourne, and Horton. Most of the large towns, as Newcastle, Alnwick, Berwick, Morpeth, and Tynemouth, possessed castles, of which there are some remains, and of which a description will be found in the articles on those towns. The religious houses of which there are remains are the following:—Blanchland Premonstratensian Abbey on the Derwent was founded in 1175; one of the towers is still used for the celebration of Divine service. There were also abbeys at Alnwick, Hulne, and Newminster, and priories at Brinckburn, near Rothbury, Tynemouth, and on Holy Island. On the banks of the Coquet at Warkworth there is a hermitage, consisting of two rooms and a chapel, cut out of the rock. The churches at Hexham, Elsdon, Bolam, Heddon, Ponteland, and Seaton Delaval are deserving of notice from their age.

NORTHUMBERLAND-HEATH, a hmlt. in the par. of Erith, hund. of Lessness, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 1½ mile S.W. of Erith, and 4 miles E. of Woolwich.

NORTHWAY AND NEWTON, a tythg. in the par. of Aschurch, lower div. of the hund. of Tewkesbury, co. Gloucester, 2 miles N.E. of Tewkesbury.

NORTHWICH, a hund. in the co. of Chester, contains the towns of Congleton and Northwich, and the pars. of Brereton-cum-Smithwick, Church-Lawton, Davenham, Swettenham, Warmingham, and parts of Astbury, Great Budworth, Middlewick, and Sandbach, comprising an area of 69,460 acres.

NORTHWICH, a tnshp. and ancient market town in the chplry. of Wilton and par. of Great Budworth, hund. of Northwich, co. Chester, 11 miles S.E. of Warrington, and 2 N. by E. of Hartford station, on the Grand Junction line of the London and North-Western railway. It is the terminus of a short branch line from the Cheshire Midland railway. It is situated at the confluence of the rivers Dune and Weaver, the latter of which is navigable for vessels of 100 tons as far as the town bridge, and for vessels of 80 tons as far as Winsford, 6 miles up the river. It is also within a short distance of the Trent and Mersey canal, which circumstance adds greatly to the commercial prosperity of the town. The salt springs, which give name to the town, wich in Saxon signifying a "salt work," are said to have been known to the Romans and the ancient Britons, who called it the "Black-Salt-Town," but the rich substratum of rock salt, on which the town stands, was not discovered till 1670. There are two beds of rock salt, an upper and a lower, both of which lie horizontally, and are covered by thick beds of gypsum. The lower bed is about 300 feet from the surface, and is that now principally worked. The chief mines are in the tnshps. of Wilton, Wincham, and Marston, at which last place is the celebrated mine, comprising an area of 30 acres at the depth of 350 feet. The roof of the mine is supported by immense pillars of salt 30 feet in diameter and 16 feet high. It was in this mine that the late emperor of Russia was entertained, and, subsequently, eighty members of the British Association. On this last occasion the mine was lighted up by upwards of 1,000 coloured lamps, causing the crystalline masses of salt to sparkle as if the place were built with diamonds. The rock salt is generally coloured according to the surrounding strata, grey, yellow, brown, or red, and requires to be purified by being dissolved in water, and then evaporated, before it is fit for market. The salt springs, which were the first to be utilised, are usually met with at an average depth of 130 feet, and the brine is evaporated in immense iron pans, varying from 50 to 100 feet long, and heated by furnaces which play under each of the pans, whilst the flues of these furnaces terminate in lofty chimneys, which gives the town a dingy appearance. There are in all above 300 iron evaporating pans, each 600 to 1,000 square feet, 12 to 16 inches deep, and making above 30 tons per week. The average quantity of white and rock salt exported annually from this locality is 300,000 tons, and as much more from Winsford, which is 6 miles up the river. The white salt is chiefly exported to America and the East Indies, and the rock salt to Belgium, Prussia, and Russia. Shipbuilding, rope and sail making, brickmaking, iron and brass founding, and brewing, are the principal sources of employment. Some of the inhabitants are also engaged in building flat boats of a peculiar construction for conveying salt to Liverpool, and other places along the coast, and some business is done in the corn and malt trades.—The town, which comprises only 4 statute acres, has a population under 2,000, but, with the suburban tnshps. of Castle Northwich, Leftwich, and Wilton, about 8,000. It consists of several narrow and irregularly-built streets, and is intersected by the high road from London to Liverpool. Many of the houses are old, and bolted together to prevent them from falling, the ground in many places having subsided from 10 to 12 feet, owing to the enormous excavations continually going on, which, in time, will reduce the whole surface below the level of the river Weaver. It contains the new townhall, in which the county courts, public meetings, concerts, &c., are held; a market house, erected in 1843, and situated between Market-street and the Apple-market; and gas-works, situated on Crumb-hill. The corn is chiefly sold from sample in a large room at the "Crown and Anchor." There are in the town two branch banks, a savings-bank, customs, and excise offices, the station-house in Cross-street, a small brick building with three cells, and the union poorhouse, which last is situated in the suburban township of Leftwich. The Poor-law Union of Northwich comprises sixty townships. It is also the seat of the new County Court, superintendent registry, and excise districts. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £150, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, is a large structure, chiefly remarkable for its semi-circular chancel and figured roof. Holy Trinity church, in Castle Northwich, was built by the trustees of the river Weaver. There is also another church, dedicated to St. Paul, which was erected in 1849. There are places of worship for the Roman Catholics, Independents, Baptists, Wesleyan, and Primitive Methodists; also National and other schools, one of which has a small endowment. Friday is market day. Fairs are held on the 10th April, 2nd August, and 6th December.

NORTHWICK, a hmlt. in the par. of Blockley, upper div. of the hund. of Kiftsgate, co. Gloucester, formerly in Worcester, 1½ mile S. of Chipping-Campden. At a short distance from the village is Northwick Park, the seat of Earl Northwick, built by Lord Burlington. It contains several paintings by Vandyck, a portrait of Addison, and other art treasures.

NORTHWICK WITH REDWICK, a chplry, and tythg. in the par. of Henbury, lower div. of Henbury hund., co. Gloucester, 6 miles S.W. of Thornbury, its post town, and 11 N.W. of the Yate railway station. It is situated on the river Severn and on the Welsh road from Bristol to the Old Passage. There is a large sea-wall to prevent the encroachment of the river on the low lands. The New Passage, which crosses the Severn, adjoins the hamlet. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Henbury, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol. The church is a stone structure, with a low square tower containing one bell. It was erected on the site of the old one in 1840. There is an endowed mixed National school, and a place of worship for the Wesleyans at Redwick.

NORTHWOLD, a par. in the hund. of Grimshoe, co. Norfolk, 7 miles N. of Brandon, its post town, and 4 S.E. of Stoke-Ferry. The village is situated on the river Stoke, or Wissey, and on the turnpike-road from Thetford to Lynn. There are extensive malt-houses, also a brewery. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. In the neighbourhood is an extensive chalk-pit. The soil is of various and common qualities, about two-thirds being arable, and the remainder pasture. The par. includes the hmlt. of Whittington. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £883, and the glebe comprises 57 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £740, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, was built in the reign of Edward IV., and has a quadrangular tower of flint, embattled and quoined with freestone, and contains a clock and six bells. Surmounting the tower are eight carved pinnacles, and the nave has an oak roof, ornamented. There are remains of a shrine, with niches, and on the N. side of the chancel is a mural monument. The register dates from 1650. The living was formerly held by Dr. Burhill, the author of several learned works, and the friend of Sir W. Raleigh, whom he assisted in his "History of the World." The parochial charities produce about £150 per annum, arising from 226 acres of land, bequeathed for repairing the church and relief of the poor. There is a free school, also places of worship for the Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists. H. S. Partridge, Esq., is lord of the manor. A fair is held annually on the 30th November.

NORTHWOOD, a par. in the lib. of West Medina, Isle of Wight, co. Hants, 2 miles N.W. of Newport, its post town. The par., which is extensive, contains the chplry. and town of West Cowes [which see]. It is bounded on the E. by the navigable river Medina, on the W. by the Newtown river, on the N. by the sea, and on the S. by the Forest of Parkhurst. It is traversed from N. to S. by the road from West Cowes to Newport. The surface slopes gently towards the banks of the Medina. The living is a cur., annexed to the vic.* of Carisbrooke, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. The parochial charities produce about £50 per annum, including a rent-charge of £15, bequeathed in 1687 by J. Mann for the maintenance of orphans.

NORTHWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Peter, hund. of Thanet, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, near Margate.

NORTHWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Lawrence, hund. of Ringslow, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 1 mile N. of Ramsgate.

NORTHWOOD, a vil. in the par. of Stoke-upon-Trent, co. Stafford, 2 miles S.E. of Burslem. It is situated in the Potteries, near the Grand Trunk canal. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop. The church is a modern edifice.

NORTHWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of Stoughton, hund. of Westbourne, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 6 miles N.W. of Chichester.

NORTHWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of Ruislip, co. Middlesex, 3 miles N.E. of Uxbridge.

NORTHWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of Callington, co. Cornwall, 2 miles S.W. of Callington, and 11 S. of Launceston.

NORTHWOOD, a tnshp. in the par. of Wem, hund. of North Bradford, co. Salop, 3½ miles N.W. of Wem.

NORTHWOOD, a tnshp. in the par. of Ellesmere, co. Salop, 2 miles N. of Ellesmere.

NORTHWOOD, a tnshp. in the par. of Stottesden, co. Salop, 5 miles N. of Cleobury Mortimer.

NORTOFT, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Guilsborough, co. Northampton, 10 miles N.W. of Northampton. It is situated under Borough-hill, near the sources of the Avon and Nene.

NORTON, a par. and tnshp. in the hund. of Scarsdale, co. Derby, 4 miles S. by E. of Sheffield, its post town, and 6 N.W. of Eckington railway station. The village, which is large, is situated on the road to Chesterfield, near the river Sheaf. It is chiefly agricultural, but scythes, sickles, files, and farm implements, are manufactured to a small extent. Petty sessions are held at the Bagshawe Arms on the second Wednesday in every month, and a farmer's club is held monthly at the above-named inn. The surface is hilly and wooded. About two-thirds of the land is arable, the remainder meadow, pasture, and woodland. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £228. The church, dedicated to St. James, has a square tower containing six bells. The interior of the church contains numerous monuments, among which is an altar tomb to the memory of the parents of John Blythe, Bishop of Salisbury, and Geoffrey Blythe, Bishop of Lichfield, both which prelates were born here; also one to Sir Francis Chantrey, the celebrated sculptor, who was born in this parish in 1782. The same gentleman endowed a school with an annuity of £200. The Wesleyans and Unitarians have each a place of worship. There are several small charities for the benefit of the poor. Norton Hall and Norton House are the principal residences. A free school was founded and endowed by Edward Gill, in 1654, which has now an income of £67. There is also a National school for girls, which is supported by subscription.

NORTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Runcorn, hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 3½ miles N.E. of Frodsham. It is a station on the Manchester, Warrington, Frodsham, and Chester railway. It is situated on the Grand Trunk and Bridgwater canals. The township contains Norton Priory, an old seat, which was besieged by the Royalists in 1643. This mansion was built out of the ruins of an Austin canonry, founded by William Fitz-Nigell in 1133. At the Dissolution its revenue amounted to £258 11*s.* 8*d.* The inhabitants are wholly engaged in agriculture.

NORTON, a par. in the S.W. div. of Stockton ward, co. Durham, 1½ mile N. of Stockton-on-Tees, its post town, and 8 miles from Sedgefield. The parish, which is extensive, is situated near the junction of the Clarence and Stockton lines of railway, and on the turnpike road from Stockton to Sunderland. It is chiefly agricultural, and contains the manor of Blakeston. The village was formerly a market town, chartered by Henry II. At the N. end of the village is a large green, surrounded by well-built houses. The land is rich and very productive. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £378, in the patron. of the Bishop of Chester. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a square tower rising from the centre. The interior of the church contains several monuments, effigies, and paintings, and a stained window was inserted in 1853. The church was made collegiate by Bishop de Carileph, and the living was once held by Bernard Gilpin, "the Apostle of the North." The register dates from 1574. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. There is an endowed grammar school, which has existed since 1600, and which enjoys the privilege of presentation to one of the six scholarships founded by the University of Oxford in 1536, by the Rev. J. Claymund, vicar of this parish. There is also a National school and places of worship for the Wesleyan Methodists and Society of Friends. Norton House is the principal residence. The Bishop of Chester is lord of the manor.

NORTON, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Dudstone, co. Gloucester, 4 miles N.E. of Gloucester, its post town, and 6 N.W. of Cheltenham. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the high road from Gloucester to Tewkesbury, and near the river Severn. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is clayey, but very productive. The appropriate tithes were chiefly exchanged for land under an Enclosure Act in 1806, and the remainder have since been commuted for a rent-charge of £50. The glebe comprises 238 acres. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £51, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Bristol, to whom the impropriation belongs. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has an embattled tower containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans. The Norton hounds are kennelled here. Norton House is the principal residence. Miss Webb and Nathan Dyer, Esq., are lady and lord of the manor.

NORTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bromyard, hund. of Broxash, co. Hereford, 3 miles N.E. of Bromyard. It is situated near the river Frome, and contains some well-built houses. Part of the land is laid out in hop-grounds and orchards.

NORTON, a par. in the hund. of Cashio, or lib. of St. Alban's, co. Herts, 1 mile N.W. of Baldock, its railway station and post town, and 38 miles from London. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the Roman way Icknield Street. It is bounded on the E. by the river Iver, which divides this parish from those of Bygrave and Radwell. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £75. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure with a tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a free school for 12 children, endowed with an annuity of £16. There are ruins of a Roman camp 7 acres in extent at Wilbury-Hill, where Roman coins have been found. Norton Hall and Wilbury Hall are the principal residences. F. Pym, Esq., is lord of the manor.

NORTON, a par. in the hund. of Faversham, lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 3½ miles W. of Faversham, its post town, and 2½ S. of the Teynham railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. A small portion of the land is in hop-grounds, the remainder being chiefly arable and meadow. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £306, in the patron. of the Bishop of Worcester. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, contains some tablets.

NORTON, a par. in the hund. of Fawsley, co. Northampton, 2 miles N.E. of Daventry, its post town, and 3 from Weedon. It is a small agricultural village situated near the North-Western railway and the Grand Junction canal. The par. includes the hmlts. of Muscott and Thrupp, and is intersected by the Roman way Watling Street. The substratum is gravel, which is worked in several places for repairing the roads in the vicinity. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £270. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure with an embattled tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains a monument to Lady Seymour, bearing date 1602, and others to the Botfield family. The parochial charities produce about £51 per annum, realised from church estates. There is a school for children of both sexes, also a Sunday-school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The late Beriah Botfield, Esq., was lord of the manor and chief landowner.

NORTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Norton-Cuckney, Hatfield div. of the wap. of Bassetlaw, co. Nottingham, 1 mile N. of Norton-Cuckney, 4½ miles S.W. of Worksop, and 8 N.E. of Mansfield. It is situated near the confluence of the river Poulter with the lake in Welbeck Park.

NORTON, a par. in the hund. and co. of Radnor, 2 miles N. of Presteign, its post town, and 4 from Knighton. The village is of small extent, and chiefly agricultural. At a short distance beyond the village are the ruins of Oystermouth Castle, which have been partially restored at the expense of the Duke of Beaufort. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £147. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has an embattled tower. Norton Hall is the principal residence.

NORTON, a par. in the hund. of Blackbourn, co. Suffolk, 3½ miles S.E. of Ixworth, 7 N.E. of Bury St. Edmund's, its post town, and 2½ N.E. of Elmswell railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. It is a meet for the Suffolk hounds. There are excavations still remaining where Henry VIII. dug in search of gold. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £458, in the patron. of St. Peter's College, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. The parochial charities produce about £50 per annum. There is a National school, erected in 1830. The Baptists have a place of worship.

NORTON, a par. in the lower div. of Blackenhurst hund., co. Worcester, 3 miles N. of Evesham, its railway station and post town. It is situated on the Alcester road, and contains the hmlts. of Lenchwick and Chadbury. The village, which is small, is entirely agricultural. The impropriate tithes belong to the Dean and Chapter of Worcester. The living is a vic.* with the vic. of Lenchwick, or Lantchurch annexed, in the di c. of Worcester, joint val. £157, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The parish church, dedicated to St. Egwin, is an ancient cruciform structure with a tower containing six bells. The interior of the church contains monuments to the Bigg family, also effigies of knights in armour, and ladies in court dresses of the 16th century. The church was partly rebuilt in 1844. The portion untouched is still in a ruined condition. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There are ruins of an old stone bridge at Twyford which once crossed the river Avon.

NORTON, a par. and small town in the wap. of Buckrose, East Riding co. York, quarter of a mile E. by S. of New Malton, its post town. It is a station on the Scarborough railway. The village is situated on the E. bank of the river Derwent, which divides this town from that of Malton. The river is crossed by a stone bridge near the southern extremity of the town, and by a wooden bridge on the N. The par. includes the hmlts. of Sutton and Welham, and has many buildings of recent erection. The town is a rising and flourishing place, consisting of one long and wide street, which is well paved and lighted with gas. It contains many good shops, and a court-house, at which the magistrates meet monthly. There are extensive steam flour and saw mills, also a malting establishment. Norton has long been celebrated for horse-training, which is still carried on to a considerable extent. The race-course is situated on the Wolds, where an extensive grand stand has been erected. There is also a cricket-ground. The soil is of a sandy nature, with a subsoil of sand and gravel resting upon freestone, which is extensively quarried. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £120. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a Grecian structure, rebuilt in 1818, at an expense of £2,500. The interior contains numerous brasses and monuments of ancient date, also two carved oak chairs, presented in 1856 by Mrs. Bower of Welham Hall. There is a parochial school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. Near the town is a cemetery of recent formation, enclosing a chapel. A great number of Roman coins have been found in the neighbourhood, and at the bridge over the Derwent formerly existed a hospital founded in the reign of Henry II. by Roger de Flamville. Welham Hall is the principal residence. R. Bower, Esq., is lord of the manor.

NORTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Campsall, upper div. of the wap. of Osgoldcross, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N. of Askern, and 9 N. by W. of Doncaster. The village, which is extensive, is wholly agricultural. The ruins of a priory, which formerly existed here, have been converted into a couple of farmhouses, with cottages adjoining. There are charities of a small amount. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1814. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans, also a National school.

NORTON, a tythg. in the par. of Newton St. Cyres, co. Devon, 4 miles N.W. of Exeter. It is situated near the river Creedy.

NORTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Townstal, hund. of Coleridge, co. Devon, 1 mile from Dartmouth. It is situated on the river Dart.

NORTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Oystermouth, co. Glamorgan, 4 miles S.W. of Swansea.

NORTON, a tythg. in the par. of Freshwater, Isle of Wight, co. Hants, 4 miles S. by E. of Lymington, and 9 W. of Newport. It is situated near the source of the river Yar, which rises at Freshwater Gate. There are several seats, as Norton Lodge and Norton Cottage.

NORTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Selborne, co. Hants, 3 miles S. of Alton.

NORTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Culmington, co. Salop, 5 miles N.W. of Ludlow. It is joined with Bache to form a township.

NORTON, a hmlt. in the hund. of Stoddesden, co. Salop, 4 miles N. of Bridgnorth, and 14 S.E. of Shrewsbury. It is situated near the river Severn.

NORTON BAVANT, a par. in the hund. of Warminster, co. Wilts, 2½ miles S.E. of Warminster. The village, which is small and wholly agricultural, is situated on the road from Bath to Salisbury, near the river Wiley. About half the land is arable, and the remainder pasture and downs. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £250. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has been recently rebuilt. The charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a parochial school supported by subscription. The principal residence is Norton House.

NORTON, BISHOP'S, a par. in the E. div. of the wap. of Aslacoe, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 10 miles N.W. of Market-Rasen. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The living is a discharged vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £185, in the patron. of the Prebendary of Bishop's Norton in the cathedral of Lincoln, who is impropriator. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans.

NORTON-BRIZE, a par. in the hund. of Bampton, co. Oxford, 3 miles N.W. of Bampton, its post town, and 5 S.E. of Burford. The village, which is small, is situated near Norton Pits, and is chiefly agricultural. The surface is generally flat, and the principal portion is arable. The soil is rather shallow, and in some parts stone brash. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1775. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £300, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Brize, contains effigies in stone of John D'Aubigné and of the Greenwoods, in the costume of the time of Edward III., and one to the Wenmans of Caswell. There is a charity of £5 per annum, bequeathed by Goddard Carter in 1723, for the education of ten poor children. The Manor House is the principal residence.

NORTON-BY-BREDON, a hmlt. and chplry. in the par. of Bredon, middle div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, co. Worcester, 5 miles N.E. of Tewkesbury, its post town, and 1 mile S.E. of the Bredon station on the Bristol and Birmingham railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Avon, under Bredon-Hill. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1814. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Bredon, in the dioc. of Worcester. The church is an ancient structure with a square tower. The parochial charities produce about £17 per annum.

NORTON-BY-KEMPSEY, a par. in the lower div. of Oswaldslow hund., co. Worcester, 3 miles S. by E. of Worcester, its post town, and 2 S.W. of the Spetchley railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. There are some brick and tile kilns. The land is in good cultivation, and stone is quarried. The Birmingham and Gloucester railway passes through the parish. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £450, and the appropriate glebe contains 41 acres. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £100, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. James, is a small structure, with an embattled tower containing three bells, and has recently been restored. The chancel has a stained window. The parochial charities produce about £28 per annum, to be distributed among the poor. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans and a parochial school. Norton Hall is the principal residence.

NORTON-CANES, or NORTON-UNDER-CANNOCK, a par. in the S. div. of Offlow hund., co. Stafford, 8 miles W. by S. of Lichfield, its post town, and 5 N. of Walsall. There is a station on the South Staffordshire railway at Brownhills, in this parish. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated near the Roman way Watling Street, and on the Wyrley and Essington canal. The par. contains the hmlts. of Little Wyrley and Brownhills, also a considerable tract of open common. The district abounds in coal and ironstone, and at Brownhills there are some extensive collieries, giving employment to a large number of hands. The soil is productive, and the chief portion of the land is in a high state of cultivation. The appropriate tithes, which belong to the Prebendary of Alrewas, in the cathedral of Lichfield, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £353 16*s*. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £330, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient stone structure, with a square pinnacled tower containing three bells. It was rebuilt and enlarged, by subscription, in 1832, at a cost of £1,220. The interior of the church contains a font of great antiquity. The parochial charities produce about £55 per annum, of which £39 is the endowment of a school for both sexes, founded in 1776 by R. Gildart and P. Hussey. The Independents and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. Norton Hall, which formerly belonged to the bishops of Chester, and afterwards to the Aston family, and Wyrley Grove, are the principal residences. W. Hanbury and P. F. Hussey, Esqs., are lords of the manor.

NORTON-CANON, a par. in the hund. of Grimsworth, co. Hereford, 10 miles N.W. of Hereford, its post town, and 3 S.W. of Weobly. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road from Hereford to Kington and Aberystwith. The inhabitants are wholly engaged in agriculture. Above half the land is arable, the remainder meadow and pasture. The great tithes, belonging to the Dean and Chapter of Hereford, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £310, and the vicarial for £119. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £120, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a brick structure, with a stone tower containing four bells. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum, of which £8 goes to Barnard's school. The Dean and Chapter of Hereford are lords of the manor and principal landowners.

NORTON-CHIPPING. See CHIPPING NORTON.

NORTON COLD. See COLD-NORTON, cos. Essex and Stafford.

NORTON-COLEPARLE, a par. in the hund. of Malmesbury, co. Wilts, 4 miles S.W. of Malmesbury, its post town, and 8 N.W. of Chippenham. The parish, which is inconsiderable, is situated near the Roman way Ackman Street. The inhabitants are wholly engaged in agriculture. The surface is elevated and wooded. The soil is chiefly clay, alternated with stone brash. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £77 14*s*., and the vicarial for £100. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £110. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to All Saints. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum.

NORTON-CONYERS, a tnshp. in the par. of Wath, wap. of Allertonshire, North Riding co. York, 4 miles N. by E. of Ripon, and 9 S.E. of Bedale. It is situated on the river Ouse. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture, with a considerable tract of common.

NORTON-CUCKNEY. See CUCKNEY NORTON, co. Nottingham.

NORTON-DISNEY, a par. in the lower div. of the wap. of Boothby-Graffo, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 7 miles N.E. of Newark, its post town, and 4 from the Collingham and Swinderby railway stations. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Witham, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is generally of a gravelly nature, but in some parts a stiff clay. The land is chiefly arable and in good cultivation. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £115, and the glebe comprises 60 acres. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £172. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a tower containing 3 bells. The interior of the church contains monuments and brasses of the Disney family of the 16th century. There is a village school supported by voluntary contributions. Viscount St. Vincent is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

NORTON, EAST, a par. in the hund. of East Goscote, co. Leicester, 6 miles N.W. of Uppingham, and 14 E. of Leicester. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road from Leicester to Stamford. The lands, which were enclosed in 1651, are in good cultivation. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £7 2*s*., and the vicarial for £147 8*s*., and the glebe comprises 6 acres. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Tugby, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church is an ancient edifice, dedicated to All Saints. It has been recently restored and enlarged, and contains several stained-glass windows. The Wesleyan Methodists have a place of worship. There are free, day, and Sunday schools. Thomas Chamberlayne, Esq., is lord of the manor. The Manor House is the principal residence. On the enclosure of the parish, 12 acres were allotted to the poor, besides several small bequests.

NORTON-FERRIS, a hund. in the co. of Somerset, contains the pars. of Bratton-Seymour, Charlton-Musgrave, Chucklington, Kilmington, Penselwood, Shepton-Montague, Stoke-Trister, Wincanton, and parts of Maiden Bradley, and Stourton, comprising an area of 18,730 acres.

NORTON-FERRIS, a tythg. in the par. of Kilmington, hund. of Norton-Ferris, co. Somerset, 6 miles S. of Frome.

NORTON-FITZWARREN, a par. in the hund. of Taunton, co. Somerset, 2 miles W. of Taunton, its railway station and post town, and 6 N.E. of Wellington. The village, which is small, is situated on the Exeter railway, and on the river Tone. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil consists of a sandy loam, with a subsoil of marl and gravel. The canal from Taunton to Tiverton passes through the parish. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £283, and the glebe comprises 7½ acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £252. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has an embattled tower containing 5 bells. The chancel is separated from the nave by a carved screen. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. Monty's Court and Manor House are the principal residences. Charles Noel Welman, Esq., is lord of the manor.

NORTON-FOLGATE, an ext. par. lib. in the Tower div. of the hund. of Ossulstone, co. Middlesex, adjoining the ward of Bishopsgate Without in the City of London. It derives its name from its situation N. of Bishopsgate, and its adjunct, from the Saxon word Foldweg, a highway, in allusion to the Ermine Street which passed through this place. It is a precinct exempt from archidiaconal jurisdiction, being subject to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, to whom the manor belongs, and who at the time of the Domesday Survey possessed 10 cottages and 9 acres of land here.

NORTON-GREENS. See GREENS-NORTON, co. Northampton.

NORTON-HAWKFIELD, or HAUTVILLE, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Chew, co. Somerset, near Norton Malreward.

NORTON-HOOK. See HOOK-NORTON, co. Oxford.

NORTON-IN-HALES, a par. in the Drayton div. of the hund. of North Bradford, co. Salop, 4 miles N.E. of Market-Drayton, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Tern, and is wholly agricultural. The soil consists of sand, with a subsoil of red sandstone of the new formation, which is quarried for building purposes. The tithes were commuted for corn-rents under an Enclosure Act in 1819. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £305. The church, dedicated to St. Chad, is an ancient stone structure, with a square pinnacled tower containing a clock and 3 bells. The church has monuments to the Cotton family and several others. The living was formerly held by Dr. Lightfoot, the Hebrew scholar. The parochial charities produce about £22 per annum. There is a village school for both sexes, endowed with an annuity of £10. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship. Bellaport House is the principal residence. The Rev. H. K. Cokburn is lord of the manor.

NORTON-JUXTA-TWYCROSS, a par. in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 6 miles N. of Atherstone, its post town, and 6 W. of Market Bosworth. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Bilstone. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £273, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is an ancient structure with a short spired tower containing 3 bells. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum. The living was formerly held by the father of W. Whiston, the celebrated divine, who was born in this parish in 1667. There is a National school for both sexes. Earl Howe is lord of the manor.

NORTON-KINGS, or NORTON-BY-GALBY, a par. in the hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, 2½ miles S.W. of Billesdon, its post town, and 7 S.E. of Leicester. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the district of Stretton-Parva. It is said to have derived the suffix to its name from King William I. having held the manor for some time after the Norman conquest. About a third of the land is arable, and the remainder pasture. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Little Stretton annexed, in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £103. The church, dedicated to St. John, is a small stone structure, with a pinnacled tower containing a chime clock and eight bells. The parochial charities produce about £7 10*s.* per annum, of which £5 goes towards the clothing of four children, and the remainder is distributed to the poor in beef and bread at Christmas. Lord Stamford is lord of the manor.

NORTON, KING'S, a par. and town in the upper div. of the hund. of Halfshire, co. Worcester, 5 miles S. by W. of Birmingham. The par includes the town of its own name, and the chplries. of Moseley and Wythall. It received the grant of a market from James I., but this has for many years been discontinued. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of nails. The parish is intersected by the line of the Birmingham and Gloucester railway, and by the Birmingham and Worcester canal, which here forms a junction with that of Stratford-on-Avon, and passes through a tunnel of 2 miles into the parish of Alvechurch. An Act was passed in 1840 for establishing a court of requests here. Norton is also the head of a Poor-law Union, comprising five parishes, of which three, viz. Beoley, King's Norton, and Northfield, are in Worcestershire, Harborne in Staffordshire, and Edgbaston in Warwickshire. It is likewise the seat of a superintendent registry, but is included in the Birmingham new county court district. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £270, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a spacious structure, rebuilt in 1750 for £20,000, defrayed by Mrs. Fobrey. It has a tower, surmounted by a lofty spire, which has been twice shattered by lightning, first in February, 1843, and again on the 13th May, 1850. There is a free grammar school, endowed by Edward VI., with about £15 per annum. The parochial charities consist of several small bequests for the poor, producing together about £100 per annum. Hawkesley House, the seat of the Middlemores, was besieged and burnt by the Royalists in 1645. Fairs are held on the 25th April and 4th September.

NORTON-LE-CLAY, a tnshp. in the par. of Cundall, wap. of Hallikeld, North Riding co. York, 2 miles W. of Cundall, and 3 N.E. of Boroughbridge. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The soil consists of a rich loam. The chapel-of-ease, dedicated to St. John, is a stone structure, with a small belfry containing one bell. The Earl of Ripon is lord of the manor.

NORTON-LINDSEY, a par. in the Snitterfield div. of the hund. of Barlichway, co. Warwick, 3½ miles S.W. of Warwick, its post town. The village, which is of small extent and wholly agricultural, is situated between the roads from Henley and Stratford-on-Avon to Warwick. The rectorial tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £121 10*s.* The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Claverdon, in the dioc. of Worcester. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum.

NORTON, LOWER, or CURLEW, a hmlt. in the par. of Budbrooke, hund. of Barlichway, co. Warwick, 1½ mile N.W. of Warwick. It is situated near the Birmingham canal.

NORTON-MALREWARD, a par. in the hund. of Chew, co. Somerset, 4 miles S. of Bristol. Pensford is its post town. The par., which is of small extent, consists principally of four extensive farms, and contains the ext. par. place of Norton-Hawkfield, or Hautville. In the neighbourhood is Maes Knoll Tump, a tumulus 390 feet by 84, and 45 feet in height, above the level of the camp inside. It is bounded on the western side of the knoll by a deep ditch. A portion of the soil consists of a clayey nature upon a subsoil of red sandstone and white lias, which are quarried for building purposes. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £223, and the glebe comprises 57 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £283. The church has an original embattled tower, containing two bells. The only other portion of the old building is the Norman arch, the remainder having been rebuilt in 1861. There is a National school for both sexes. "Here Lane" is still opened to the public, and is used as a bridle road. Ammonites and fossil nautili are abundant in this neighbourhood.

NORTON-MANDERVILLE, a par. in the hund. of Ongar, co. Essex, 4 miles N.E. of Chipping-Ongar, its post town, and 8 N. of Brentwood. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Roding, and is wholly agricultural. It is supposed to have derived its name from its relative situation to Ongar, and the suffix from an ancient proprietor. About two-thirds of the land are arable, and the remainder pasture. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £83. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a tower surmounted by a shingled spire. There is an infant school.

NORTON, MIDSOMER. See MIDSOMER NORTON, co. Somerset.

NORTON-ON-THE-MOORS, a par. in the N. div. of Pirehill hund., co. Stafford, 3 miles N.E. of Burslem, its post town, 2½ N. by E. of Hanley, and 6 S.W. of Leek. The parish, which is of large extent, is situated in a bleak and hilly district, abounding in coal, and is intersected by the Caldon canal. It contains the hmlts. of Norton-Green, Brown-Edge, Bemersley, Ford-Green, Smallthorn, and Milton. There are numerous collieries, also an extensive iron foundry at Norton-Green. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £550. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, has a square tower at the W. end. There are also district churches at Smallthorn and Brown-Edge, the livings of which are perpet. curs.,* val. £102 and £100 respectively. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists, have each a place of worship. There are National schools for both sexes.

NORTON, OVER, a chplry. in the par. of Chipping-Norton, hund. of Chadlington, co. Oxford, three quarters of a mile N. by E. of Chipping-Norton.

NORTON ST. PHILIP, a par. in the hund. of Wellow, co. Somerset, 7 miles S.E. of Bath, its post town, and 4 S.W. of the Freshford railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the high road from Bath to Frome, and is chiefly agricultural. There was formerly a grange to Hinton Abbey, where a cloth fair was held, and where the royal troops attacked Monmouth in 1685. Malting is carried on, and there are also a brewery and a corn-mill. The soil is of a loamy nature, upon a subsoil of stone. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £123. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £91, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Philip and All Saints, is an ancient stone structure, with a lofty tower containing six bells, restored in 1847, The register dates from 1585. There is also a district church at Hinton-Charterhouse, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £100. A school for both sexes was erected in 1827, and endowed with an annuity of £50 by Joseph Nield, Esq. There are also infant and Sunday schools. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a place of worship.

NORTON PUDDING, a par. in the hund. of Gallow, co. Norfolk, 1 mile S. of Fakenham, its post town. The village consists of two or three farmhouses. There is an extensive plantation of fir trees. Two-thirds of the land are arable, and the remainder meadow and pasture. The living is a discharged rect. in the dioc. of Norwich. The rector receives a modus of £10 per annum in lieu of tithes. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, has long been in ruins.

NORTON-SUBCOURSE, a par. in the hund. of Clavering, co. Norfolk, 4 miles E. of Loddon, its post town, and 6 N. by W. of Beccles. The village, which is small and irregularly built, is situated near the river Yare, and is chiefly agricultural. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £179, and the vicarial for £160. In the reign of Edward III. there was a chantry or college for secular priests, subsequently removed to Castle-Mettingham in Suffolk. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £100. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient and commodious structure, with a circular tower containing four bells, The register dates from 1651. The charities consist of a poor's allotment, realising about £16 per annum. There are National and Sunday schools. Sir E. Bacon, Bart., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

NORTON-UNDER-CANNOCK. See NORTON CANES, co. Stafford.

NORTON-UNDER-HAMBDON, a par. in the hund. of Houndsborough, co. Somerset, 5 miles W. of Yeovil, its post town, and 4½ N. by E. of Crewkerne railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated in a wooded vale at the south-western extremity of Hambdon-hill, near the river Parret. It is chiefly agricultural, but the manufactures of sail-cloth and gloves are carried on to a small extent. The soil is of a sandy nature, with a subsoil of clay. Building-stone is extensively quarried. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £240. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £189. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, has an embattled tower crowned with pinnacles, and containing a clock and five bells. The busts of Henry VII. and his queen are sulptured in alto-rclievo in the N. aisle. The register dates from 1538. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. The church has recently been restored. There is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is held. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Major Quantock is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

NORWELL, a par. in the N. div. of the wap. of Thurgarton, co. Nottingham, 7 miles N.W. of Newark, its post town, and 2 from the Carlton railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on a branch of the river Trent, and is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the tnshps. of Norwell Woodhouse, Carlton-on-Trent, and Willoughby. The tithes were commuted for land and corn-rents under an Enclosure Act in 1826. The living, originally divided into three portions, called Secunda, Tertia, and Overhall, is a discharged vic. with the cur. of Carlton-on-Trent annexed, in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £336, in the patron. of the Bishop of Manchester. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is an ancient and commodious structure, with a tower containing three bells. It has a transept chapel containing the effigy of a knight. The parochial charities produce about £69 per annum, £53 of which goes to Marsden and Sturtevant's schools. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans.

NORWELL-WOODHOUSE, a tnshp. in the par. of Norwell, N. div. of the wap. of Thurgarton, co. Nottingham, 7 miles N. by W. of Newark.

NORWICH, a city, municipal and parliamentary borough, county and assize town, exercising separate jurisdiction, locally in the hund. of Humbleyard, co. Norfolk, 20 miles W. of Yarmouth, 23¼ W. by N. of Lowestoft, and 108 from London by road, or 113½ by the Great Eastern railway, on which it has two stations. There are also branch lines to Yarmouth, Lowestoft, Lynn, and Fakenham, the two first-named places being its nearest seaports. A steamboat also runs to Yarmouth by the river Yare, and a cut through Oulton Dyke to the river Waveney opens a way by water to Lowestoft, deep enough for craft of 100 tons. The harbour, lock, and sluice, at the sea entrance of this navigation, are extensive works. It is situated near the centre of the county, and on a bend of the river Wensum, just above its junction with the Yare. Both on account of its large population and its manufactures, Norwich is one of the most important places in England. It is equally interesting from its great antiquity, having grown out of the ruins of the British and Roman town Venta Icenorum, now the village of Caistor St. Edmund's. The East Angles, when they conquered this part of the country under Uffa, in 541, changed its name to Nordwic, or the Northern town, and built a royal fortress upon what was then a promontory, but is now the Castle-hill. It then continued to flourish for above three centuries, till the reign of the Saxon king Edmund, when it was taken by the Danes, but was restored by Alfred the Great in 872, and shortly after transferred to Guthrum, the Danish leader, as part of the Danelagh. It became a place of considerable importance under the succeeding Anglo-Saxon kings, by whom it was made a mint town. In the great Danish invasion under Sweyn, in 1004, it was taken and burnt, but was again settled by the Danes in 1010, who were able, it seems, to come up to it in their boats, a great part of the land upon which the modern town stands being then under water. The advantages of its site were appreciated by Canute the Great and his captain, Duke Torchil, who rebuilt the castle and extended the town. In the reign of

Edward the Confessor it had 25 parish churches and 1,320 free burgesses. William the Conqueror, upon the reduction of England, intrusted the constableship of the castle to Ralph de Waiet, or Guader, Earl of Norfolk, who conspiring, forfeited it to the crown, when it was conferred, together with the earldom of Norfolk, on Roger Bigod, who reduced the castle after a hard siege, and added the keep as it stands at present. In 1094, the bishopric of the East Angles was removed by William Rufus from Thetford to Norwich, and the foundations of the cathedral were laid by Herbert Losinga, the bishop. Henry I. granted the citizens their first charter, and kept his Christmas revels here in 1122. It was taken by the rebellious barons of Henry II. in 1174, and again by Louis, the Dauphin of France, during the baronial wars of John's reign. During the troubles of Henry III.'s reign, the cathedral was fired by the citizens in a dispute with the clergy, but was restored by Edward I. and reconsecrated in 1278. Towards the close of the same reign, the city was strongly fortified at the expense of the citizens, and surrounded by walls, which were defended by twelve gates and forty towers. In the reign of Edward III. the Flemings settled here in considerable numbers, and introduced the woollen and crape trades. It was frequently visited by the court during this reign, and was the scene of several tournaments; but in 1348-9, it suffered severely by the "black death," which carried off above half the inhabitants. In 1381 it was visited by Richard II., after the defeat of John the Dyer, one of Wat Tyler's men, by Henry Spencer, the warlike Bishop of Norwich. The succeeding monarchs, Henry IV., Henry VI., and Henry VII., also spent some time here, by the first of whom it was separated from the county of Norfolk and erected into a county of itself, and under the last it was partially burnt. In the reign of Edward VI. it was taken by the rioters under Robert Kett, who, being defeated by Dudley on Mousewold-heath, was hung from the castle wall. In the early part of Elizabeth's reign it was settled by about 4,000 Walloons from Flanders, who introduced the bombazine manufacture, and greatly improved the commercial prosperity of the town, which now had no fewer than 60 parish churches. In the civil war of Charles I. it supported the parliamentary cause, and as the royalists were not strong in this district, no contest took place. No public event of interest has occurred since that period, except the royal visits of Charles II. and Queen Anne, and the meeting of the Royal Agricultural Society here in 1849.—The county of the city of Norwich, which is much more extensive than the town itself, is about 4 miles in diameter and 14 in circuit, including many gardens and orchards, hence Norwich has been designated "the city in an orchard." It even comprises some good arable land, growing heavy crops of wheat, barley, oats, and beans. Its boundaries were unaltered by the Reform Bill, and includes 36 parishes within the city, besides 9 parishes or hamlets in the county of the city, viz. Earlham, Easton, Heigham, Hellesdon, Lakenham, Pockthorpe, Thorpe, Trouse, and part of Sprouston. The town itself is of irregular form, extending about 1½ mile in length from N.W. to S.E., and about 1¼ in breadth from S.W. to N.E. It is traversed by the windings of the river Wensum, which, entering from the N.W. is crossed by ten bridges in the town and suburbs. These latter are interspersed with gardens and orchards. The best part of the town is that in the immediate vicinity of the market-place, which is one of the most spacious in England, being near 600 feet long by 350 wide. Many of the older streets diverge from it, and are narrow and winding, others follow the direction of the ancient walls, parts of which are still standing. The principal streets have flagged foot-pavements, and are well lighted with gas, but the smaller streets are only partially paved and imperfectly lighted. The best shops are in the neighbourhood of the market-place, but some of the handsomest private residences are within the precincts of the cathedral, which form a peculiar jurisdiction of the dean and chapter, who appoint a coroner and ecclesiastical judges and officers. Considerable increase has taken place in the town during the last few years, the number of inhabited houses in 1851 having been returned at 15,086, and in 1861 at 17,112. The general prosperity is also marked by the rapid increase of the population, from 68,713 to 74,891 in the decennial period between 1851 and 1861.—Several manufactures are extensively carried on, above 2,400 hands being employed in weaving silk and wool, and near 2,000 in the boot and shoe trade, which has now become one of the staple trades of Norwich. The chief productions are bombazines, crapes, gauzes, mousselin de laine, silk shawls mixed with wool and mohair, fillover shawls, camlets for the foreign market, bareges, bandanas, paramattas, pincettas, worsteds, fringes for carriages, sewing cotton, sacking, sailcloth. There are also foundries, coachbuilding works, machine works, breweries, tanneries, maltkilns, chemical works, dye-works, paper-mills, pianoforte and organ builders, besides fellmongers, wool-staplers, glovers, upholsterers, rope-makers, and several large and powerful corn-mills. Trade in agricultural produce, coal, and other heavy goods, is carried on by means of the river and canals, chiefly in lighters or wherries of from 15 to 20 tons burden. Norwich has its own chamber of commerce, also three commercial banks, viz. the Norwich Crown Bank, of Harvey and Hudson; the Norwich and Norfolk Bank, of Gurney and Co. (head office); and the East of England Bank (head office); besides a savings-bank with above 10,000 depositors.—For parliamentary purposes the boundaries are co-extensive with those of the county of the city, and it has returned two members to parliament since the reign of Edward I. Under the new Corporations Reform Act, it is divided into 8 wards, governed by a mayor, who is the returning-officer, 16 aldermen, and 48 councillors, assisted by a sheriff, under-sheriff, recorder, judge of the borough court, clerk of the peace, town clerk, coroner, water-bailiff, and other officers, with the style of "the mayor, sheriffs, citizens, and commonalty of Norwich." The revenues of the corporation are between £1,450 and £1,500. Assizes and quarter sessions for the county and city are held in the town, which has a separate commission of the peace; also a borough court daily, court of pleas and court of conscience, and a county court.—The most interesting of the public buildings are the castle and the cathedral. The former, which stood on a hill 360 yards round, is, from its elevation, one of the most striking objects in the city. It originally covered 23 acres, and was divided into three courts. There remain of it the keep, a massive quadrangular building, 110 feet 3 inches from E. to W., 92 feet 10 inches from N. to S., and 69 feet 6 inches in height to the battlements, including a Norman arch and the entrance tower, known as Bigod's tower, of ornamented Norman work. This portion has been restored, or rather re-cased with an imitation of the ancient work, and is now used as the shire-hall when the assize courts sit. The eastern front has also been renovated, but is partly hidden by the incongruous addition of a modern county gaol. The other portions are the Barbican-bridge, 140 feet long, with an arch 43 feet span, said to be one of the largest and most perfect examples of an Anglo-Norman arch remaining. There are also remains of two round towers, called the Black and Devil's towers, 14 feet in diameter, which formed part of the original gateway; they stand at the inner end of the bridge, and were used as the prison up to 1793. Around the castle are well-laid-out gardens and a common terrace walk above, occupying the site of the inner ditch, and commanding a panoramic view of the city and neighbourhood. The foundation of the cathedral was laid in 1094 by Bishop Herbert Losinga, who also built the episcopal palace, and a monastery for 60 monks of the Benedictine order, the revenue of which establishment at the Dissolution was £1,050 17*s.* 6*d.* He, however, finished only the choir and tower of the cathedral, leaving the other portions to be added by succeeding bishops. Before its final completion in 1510 by Bishop

Nix, it underwent several restorations, having been much damaged by fire in the dissensions between the citizens and monks, which were of frequent occurrence. After the Reformation, the interior was much disfigured by the Puritans, who broke the painted windows, and destroyed nearly 100 tombs and brasses. Considerable alterations were made at the beginning of the present century, when it underwent a complete repair. In its present state it displays much of its original Norman architecture, although from the friable nature of the stone of which it is built, the exterior in many parts presents a decayed appearance. The length of the whole building from E. to W. is 407 feet, the breadth at the transepts 178, the breadth of the nave and side aisle 72, and the height of the central tower and spire 315. It is built in the form of a cross, and has a nave with a carved stone roof, choir, side aisles, transepts, several small chapels, and cloisters, with a tower of ornamented Norman work rising from the centre, and surmounted by an octagonal crocketed spire, while the E. end of the building has a circular apsidal termination. It has fifteen flying buttresses, several pointed clerestory windows, and a W. window in the pointed style of architecture, divided into three main lights, while the side divisions are in the Norman style. There has been a Lady chapel eastward, but it is now removed. The cloisters form an irregular square of 174 feet inner dimensions; and the deanery and prebendal houses comprise the remains of Bishop Herbert's priory. Within the cathedral precincts are three ancient gates of remarkable construction—the Erpingham-gate, built by Sir T. Erpingham in 1428, as a penance for being a Lollard. It is adorned with his statue and 38 minor ones. The gate of St. Ethelbert, with a chapel above, built about 1272, in place of a more ancient one. And St. Martin's, or the Bishop's-gate, leading to the palace. Also the old water-gate. The bishop's palace, the greater part of which was built by Bishop Samson in 1318, has recently been restored. It is chiefly Norman, and comprises a grand hall, 110 feet by 60, and a spacious chapel which was much disfigured by the Puritans. The other public buildings are the Guild-hall, an ancient and spacious structure of flint, built in the middle of the 15th century on the site of the old thatched Tolbooth. It has a painted window, and contains the city regalia, portraits of William III. and of several of the mayors of Norwich, and the sword of Admiral Don Xavier Winthuysen, presented to the corporation by Admiral Lord Nelson. St. Andrew's or New Hall, originally built by the Erpinghams in 1415 for the nave of the Black Friars' church, but now converted into one of the finest Gothic halls in the kingdom, having been restored in 1774. It measures 120 feet by 70 feet, and contains a statue of Lord Nelson, by Thomas Milnes, also a good collection of portraits, including those of Queen Anne and her consort Prince George of Denmark, Horace Walpole, Lord Nelson, by Beechey, and others by Gainsborough, Opie, Catton, &c. It is used for public banquets, the musical festivals, and other popular gatherings. The Shire hall, built by Wilkins in 1822, is in the Tudor style, and stands near the castle ditch now filled in and planted. The county gaol forms part of the old castle described above. The city gaol, built in 1829, at a cost of £24,000, has accommodation for 100 prisoners; adjoining it is the old bridewell of good flint-work, where Peter, the wild man, was kept. The corn exchange is a Grecian structure built in 1828, at a cost of £6,000. The Theatre Royal, built in 1826, is a large and convenient edifice. The Assembly and Concert Rooms comprise a suite of apartments 143 feet long, and have recently been augmented by a new ball-room 70 feet by 35 feet. The union workhouse is a large building, including the Grey Friary, and with the infirmary, will accommodate near 800 inmates. The cavalry barracks cover ten acres. The County Lunatic Asylum at Thorpe is also an extensive building, and has been recently enlarged so as to accommodate 400 patients. There are gas-works, water-works, and two railway stations; also a literary institution, with 12,000 volumes, and a museum; public library founded in 1784, with 18,000 volumes; a city library, with 2,000 volumes; Dean and Chapter's library, with 3,000 volumes; an anatomical museum attached to the college; a society of arts, founded in 1803; a school of design, a people's college, young men's institute, bazaar, yacht club, several musical societies, a horticultural society, which holds its exhibitions annually, medical society, the Norwich Union Fire and Life Insurance offices; and two cemeteries, one situated at Thorpe, and the other recently formed in the western suburb, the latter being of large extent and having two chapels. The musical festival is held triennially, and the profits devoted to the hospitals. The corn market is held in the Corn Exchange, mentioned above, and the cattle market in an open area adjacent to the castle. There are also a seed and skin market, and a hay market, as well as the meat and fish markets, which last are held in the grand market place.—The diocese of Norwich forms part of the province of Canterbury, and extends over the whole of Norfolk and part of Suffolk, including those archdeaconries with that of Norwich. Until recently it was of larger extent, taking in part of Cambridgeshire. Now it contains 795 benefices, of which 46, annexed to Ely, are in the patronage of the bishop, whose revenue is fixed at £4,465. The bishop has the privilege of sitting in the Upper House of Parliament, in his own right, as titular Abbot of St. Benet-at-Holme, being the only Abbot in England. The Chapter includes a dean, chancellor, three archdeacons, five canons, eight honorary canons, and seven minor canons, and has the right of presentation to 43 benefices. Amongst the eminent prelates who have filled this see may be mentioned Cardinal Pandulph, Wren, Montague, Hall, Horne, and Stanley. Besides the cathedral described above, there are the following parish churches, viz. St. Andrew, St. Augustine, St. Benedict, St. Clement, Christ Church, St. Edmund, St. Etheldred, St. George Colegate, St. George Tombland, St. Giles, St. Gregory, St. Helen, St. John Maddermarket, St. John Sepulchre, St. John Timberhill, St. James with Pockthorpe, St. Lawrence, St. Margaret, St. Martin-at-Palace, St. Martin-at-Oak, St. Mary Coslany, St. Mary-in-the-Marsh, St. Matthew's Thorpe, St. Michael Coslany, St. Michael-at-Plea, St. Michael-at-Thorn, St. Paul, St. Peter Hungate, St. Peter Mancroft, St. Peter Mountergate, St. Peter Southgate, St. Saviour, SS. Simon and Jude, SS. Stephen and Swithin, the livings of all which are rects. or perpet. curs., varying in val. from £232 to £43. Some of these are interesting and even venerable structures. The most deserving of note are St. Andrew's, the second church in the city for splendour; it has an antique font, a monument to Suckling, the father of the poet, and two early brasses. St. Etheldred's, a venerable pile founded before the Conquest, containing a Norman doorway and an old font. St. George Tombland, remarkable for its square tower, with pinnacles 120 feet high, which was rebuilt in 1445. St. Gregory's, an ancient edifice, containing an octagonal font, brazen lectern, several ancient brasses, and a monument with a long epitaph to a Francis Bacon. St. John Maddermarket, a large ancient structure, containing five brasses, the earliest 1430. St. Lawrence, built by the monks of Bury in 1472, on a site once covered by the sea, has a tower 112 feet high, and over the western doorway is a representation of the martyrdom of St. Lawrence, and in the interior four brasses, the earliest 1425. St. Peter Mancroft is a perpendicular building erected in 1430, with a tower and peal of 12 bells; it is the largest of the parish churches, being 212 feet long by 70 wide. There are two Roman Catholic churches in the town, a Jews' synagogue, 15 places of worship belonging to the leading sects of Protestant Dissenters, besides the old Dutch and Walloon churches, the former of which is now used as the chapel of the union poor-house, and the latter as the sanctuary of the New Jerusalem. The charitable foundations are numerous, and some of them even wealthy, their revenues in the aggregate amounting to above £16,000 per annum; of these St. Giles's or the Great Hospital is one of the most ancient, as well as the richest. It was founded in 1249 by Bishop Suffield, and has now an income of £6,300. Its building is the old church of St. Helen's, which has accommodation for 93 aged men and 88 women, who are boarded and lodged; part of the income, however, is appropriated to the Grammar School and sermons. Doughty's hospital, founded in 1687, has an income of £1,000, and supports 28 poor men and 11 women. Cook's hospital occupies the site of the Greyfriars, and has an income of near £200; there are also almshouses for about 200 people, founded and partially endowed by Pye, Coom, and others. The Norfolk and Norwich hospital, to which a small medical school is attached, was erected in 1772, at a cost of £13,323, and has accommodation for 100 patients. The Bethel hospital for poor lunatics has accommodation for 70 patients, and an income of about £1,630. The Children's hospital has an income from endowment of £1,500, and provides for the board and education of 70 boys and 50 girls. The Magdalen asylum is chiefly supported by subscription. There are besides a dispensary, blind school, eye infirmary, and many benevolent and friendly societies. The educational establishments include the Norwich grammar school, founded in 1325 by Bishop Salmon, and refounded by Edward VI. in 1547, with an income from endowment of £110. It is held in the ancient chantry, and has about 80 scholars, who are entitled to compete for 15 scholarships at Cambridge University. Amongst its scholars have been Archbishop Parker, the great lawyer Coke, Admiral Nelson, Dr. Kaye, founder of Caius College, Bishops Cousen, Greene, Maltby, and Monk. There are nine charity schools in Norwich, which educate together 600 boys and 400 girls, including Anguish's school for boys, founded in 1618, with an endowment of £1,160; Baron's girls' school, with an income of £600; Scott's school, and six others; also numerous public schools, including a diocesan training school, National and model schools, infant schools, British and Foreign Society schools, and extensive denominational schools belonging to Roman Catholics, Independents, Presbyterians, Unitarians, and others. —Two newspapers, the Norfolk Chronicle and the Norfolk News, are published weekly on Saturday.— There are many remains of antiquarian interest, as parts of the town walls, the Dungeon, or Cow-tower, built in 1390, which is 52 feet high and 27 feet in diameter; Kett's Castle, or St. Leonard's Priory, built by Bishop Herbert in 1100, and burnt by Kett's mob in the reign of Edward VI.; Hall of the White Friars convent, built by Earl Fitzwarren in 1256; Hall of St. Mary's College, built by John le Brun in 1250; cloisters and kitchen of the Black Friars, founded in 1226, and now forming part of St. Andrew's Hall; remains of the Benedictine nunnery at Carrow; Fastolf's Place, or Falstaff's Castle, built by Fastolf of Caistor in 1450-60; Surrey House, an ancient Elizabethan mansion on Mousewold Heath, with stained arms, near the site of the Duke of Norfolk's palace; besides numerous remains of ecclesiastical edifices, as De Domina, De Sacco, God's House, or Hildebrand de Mercer's spital, De Pica (the only one of this order in England), &c. It is the head of new County Court, superintendent registry, and new Poor-law Union districts. Bilney, the Protestant martyr, suffered here in 1531, and others in the reign of Queen Mary.—A regatta takes place annually at Thorpe. Wednesday and Saturday are market days, when much business is done, chiefly in corn, cattle, and horses. Fairs are held on Friday in Passion week, and on Monday and Tuesday in Easter and Whitsun weeks.

NORWOOD, a large suburban district, partly in the par. of Croydon, hund. of Wallington, and partly in the par. of Lambeth, hund. of Brixton, co. Surrey, 1 mile S. of Dulwich, and 4 miles S. of Lambeth. It has a commodious station, called the Norwood Junction, at South Norwood, on the Croydon and Epsom line, and two stations—one at Gipsy Hill and the other at Lower Norwood—on the Crystal Palace and West-End railway. It derives its name from a wood, or forest of oak trees, which formerly covered a considerable tract of country, and was at one time infested by gipsies, who have given name to Gipsy Hill. It comprises many detached houses and villa residences, large hotels occupying the more eligible sites, and is divided into Lower Norwood, Upper Norwood, and South Norwood. There are two potteries of red earthenware at Lower and South Norwood respectively, but no other manufactures are carried on. The Beulah Spa, a mineral spring discovered in 1827, and the South Metropolitan Cemetery, are places of great attraction to London visitors during the summer months. There are three churches in Norwood—viz. St. Luke's, All Saints', and St. Mark's. The livings of all are perpet. curs.; that of St. Luke, Lower Norwood, val. £700, is in the par. of Lambeth and in the dioc. of Winchester, while those of All Saints', Upper Norwood, and St. Mark, South Norwood, are in the par. of Croydon and dioc. of Canterbury. The church of St. Luke is a Grecian structure with a tower and Corinthian portico, erected at a cost of £17,500. The church of All Saints, built in 1829, is a Gothic structure situated at Beulah Hill. St. Mark's has only recently been erected for the district of South Norwood. There are places of worship for Wesleyans, Independents, and Baptists, and a Roman Catholic institution, called "The Convent of Our Lady of the Orphans," also National, British and Foreign, and industrial schools. At Westow Hill is a pauper school for the children of the City and East and West London Unions, and in Upper Park-road, a similar school for the parish of Lambeth.

NORWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of Wales, wap. of South Strafforth, West Riding co. York, 7 miles S. by W. of Rotherham, and 8 E. by S. of Sheffield. It is situated near the river Rother and Chesterfield canal.

NORWOOD PARK, a hmlt. in the par. of Glastonbury, co. Somerset, 1 mile E. of Glastonbury.

NORWOOD-PRECINCT, a chplry. in the par. of Hayes, hund. of Elthorne, co. Middlesex, 1 mile S. of Southall railway station, 3 miles N.W. of Brentford, and 2½ N.W. of Hounslow, its post town. The village, which is extensive, is situated on the Grand Junction canal, near the Great Western railway. The Precinct contains the hmlts. of Norwood-Proper, Southall-Green, and a part of North-Hyde and Southall. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of London, val. £128. The church is a small rustic structure with a curious wooden belfry. It has been enlarged, and contains several old tombs. There are four almshouses, erected by the late John Robins in 1815. There is a free school, called Bicoe, founded by a gentleman of that name. The district church of St. John, at Southall-Green, built and endowed by Mr. Dobbs in 1839, and the Hanwell Lunatic Asylum, are included in this Precinct.

NORWOOD WITH CLIFTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Fewston, lower div. of Claro wap., West Riding co. York, 5 miles N.E. of Otley. The village, of irregular form, is situated under Jack-hill, and is wholly agricultural. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor.

NOSELEY, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, 7 miles N. by E. of Market-Harborough, and 3 E. of Billesdon. It is situated on the river Welland, and has descended through the Blackets, Mortevalles, or Martevals, to Sir A. G. Hazelrigge, Bart., of Noseley Hall. A chantry, or college, was founded here about 1274 by Anketine de Martival, and dedicated to St. Mary. It is a large ancient structure clothed in ivy. The interior contains three piscinas, a carved font of great antiquity, and several stone seats, also effigies of the Hazelrigges and some stained windows. Noseley Hall is an ancient mansion, the interior of which contains the portraits of Charles I., Cromwell, Peter the Great, and other works by eminent masters. It is the seat of Sir A. G. Hazelrigge, Bart., who is the lord of the manor and chief landowner, and in whose family the mansion has remained for many centuries.

NOSS HEAD, a promontory on the E. coast of co. Caithness, Scotland, 5 miles N. by E. of Wick. It is situated between Sinclair and Wick bays, and has on it a lighthouse 175 feet high, containing a revolving light, which may be seen at sea for 15 miles.

NOSS ISLAND, one of the Shetland group, coast of Scotland. It is situated on the E. side of Brassay Island, and is only accessible by means of ropes passed from the opposite cliffs of Brassay.

NOSTAL, a hmlt. in the par. of Wragby, upper div. of the wap. of Osgoldcross, West Riding co. York, 4 miles S.E. of Wakefield. There was formerly an Austin priory, founded by Ilbert-de-Lacy in the reign of William Rufus. Near its site has been erected a family residence, the gallery of which contains a collection of paintings by Flemish artists, also "The Family of Sir T. More." It is joined with Hardwick to form a township.

NOSTERFIELD, a hmlt. in the par. of West Tanfield, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S.E. of Masham.

NOTGROVE, a par. in the hund. of Bradley, co. Gloucester, 5 miles N.W. of Northleach, its post town, and 9 from the Adlestrop station on the Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton railway. The village, which is inconsiderable, is wholly agricultural. The land is generally sheep-walks and the soil a stone brash. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1770. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £256. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to St. Bartholomew.

NOTLAND CASTLE, a stronghold in the Isle of Westray, Orkney Isles, coast of Scotland, near Noup Head.

NOTLEY ABBEY, a monastic ruin at Long Crendon, co. Bucks, 2 miles N. by E. of Thame. It was founded in 1162 by Giffard Earl of Buckingham for canons of the Augustine order, and had at the Dissolution a revenue of £438.

NOTLEY, BLACK, a par. in the hund. of Witham, co. Essex, 1¼ mile S.E. of Braintree. The village, which is small and chiefly agricultural, is situated on elevated ground commanding views of the adjacent country. The surface is undulating, and the lower grounds are watered by the Hoppett brook, which describes part of the northern boundary of the parish. The soil is generally a rich loam alternating with gravel. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £497. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £465, in the patron. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is a small edifice with a belfry of wood, surmounted by a shingled spire. In the churchyard is a monument to the distinguished naturalist, the Rev. John Ray, who was a native of this parish, as was likewise Bishop Bedell, of Kilmore, who died in 1641. There is a National school. The parochial charities produce about £35 per annum. Many Roman antiquities, comprising vessels of copper, brass, and blue glass, and several glazed earthen urns, were found here in 1752.

NOTLEY, WHITE, a par. in the hund. of Witham, co. Essex, 4 miles N.W. of Witham, and 4 S.E. of Braintree. The village, which is small and chiefly agricultural, is situated near the river Brain. The land is chiefly arable, with a small proportion of pasture and woodland. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £254, and the vicarial for £248 13s. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £270, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedication unknown, is an ancient stone structure with a lofty spire. There is a National school. The charities produce about £12 per annum, including Whitebread's.

NOTOWN, a hmlt. in the par. of Bleasby, co. Notts, 3 miles S. by E. of Southwell.

NOTTAGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Newton-Nottage, co. Glamorgan, 6 miles W. by S. of Bridgend.

NOTTINGHAM, the county town of Nottinghamshire, constituting a co. in itself, a municipal and parliamentary borough, market town, and the seat of a Poor-law Union, 15½ miles from Derby, and 124 miles N.W. of London by road, or 130 by railway, having stations on the Midland, Great Northern, and Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire lines. It is situated at the union of the rivers Lene and Trent, in the wap. of South Thurgarton. The original form of the name Nottingham was Snatingaham, or Cavetown, and the place was so called from the numerous excavations in the sandy rock on which the castle is built, and which can still be seen. There was a Roman settlement here; and after the conquest of the country by the Saxons the town belonged to Mercia. For several years it was held by the Danes, and was taken from them in 868 by Burhed, king of Mercia, with the assistance of Ethelred and his brother Alfred; but they again occupied it, and were not finally expelled till the reign of Edmund, in 941. In the reign of Edward the Confessor the number of burgesses in the town was 192; but the number subsequently decreased, and in Domesday Book is given as 134. William I. gave the government of the district to his natural son, William Peverell, who built a castle on the site of the present one, and fortified the whole town, which became a place of importance for military operations, and was twice taken and partially burnt during the wars in Stephen's reign, in 1140 and 1153; in 1264 it was taken by Henry III. during the barons' war, and during John's reign it was attacked by the barons. Numerous parliaments were also held here—among others, the first parliament held by Richard I. after his release from captivity; that in 1337, when the Flemish manufacturers were invited to settle in the kingdom, and three others in the reign of Richard II. In 1330 Edward III. surprised and captured Roger Mortimer, the favourite of his mother Queen Isabella, in the castle, by means of a secret passage excavated through the rock, still shown as "Mortimer's Hole." In 1460 Edward IV. was proclaimed here. Richard III. stayed at the town on his way to Bosworth, and Henry VII., in 1487, on his way to the battle of East Stoke. In May, 1642, when Charles I. had resolved not to yield to the demands of the parliament, he marched hither from York, and formally set up his standard within the castle precincts, on a spot now known as Standard Hill, and it chanced that the standard was almost immediately blown down by a violent storm of wind and rain, which was naturally looked upon by the people as a bad omen of his future success. Next year the town was besieged and taken by Colonel Hutchinson, who remained there to watch the royalist garrison at Newark. The castle was completely destroyed as a fortress during the Protectorate, and after the Restoration was sold by the Duke of Buckingham, in whose possession it then was, to the Duke of Newcastle, who rebuilt it as a dwelling-house; but it was burnt by the Reform rioters in 1830, owing to the then duke's opposition to the Reform Bill, and has not been repaired, although the county paid him a considerable sum as compensation. Of the old castle, in which King David of Scotland was for some time a captive, there are no remains except a gate. Remains of the town walls may be seen above Narrow Marsh, and there are traces of an ancient chapel in the park. There were formerly here a Grey Friary, founded 1250, and granted to the family of the Heneages; a White Friary, founded by Reginald Grey de Wilton; a Hospitallers' house and lazar hospital of the time of Henry III., and a cell of St. Mary's priory in the castle.—Nottingham stands on an eminence on the left bank of the Lene, overlooking the Vale of Trent. On the S. side there is the Vale of Belvoir and the Nottingham Wolds; but on the N. side it is sheltered by a chain of hills. The town is irregularly built, and the old streets are crooked and narrow; but the newer part of the town is composed of spacious streets with well-built houses. The paving and lighting is throughout good, and there is a copious supply of water laid on by two companies. Since 1849 the size of the town has increased with great rapidity. Before that time the adjoining land was unavailable for building purposes, owing to the rights of common possessed by the freemen; but in that year a bill was passed for their enclosure, and they have since been rapidly covered with factories and dwelling-houses. A space of about 18 acres was, however, reserved for recreation, and has been laid out as an arboretum, which is open to the public on Sundays, Mondays, and Wednesdays, subscribers alone being admitted on other days. The land immediately surrounding it is occupied by rows of houses. The market-place contains about 5½ acres, and is one of the largest in the kingdom. The houses round it have projecting upper stories, forming a colonnade in front of the shops. The E. end is occupied by the New Exchange, a brick building erected in the last century, and repaired in 1814. The N. side contains offices for the clerks of the magistrates and for the police, and the remainder of the ground floor is occupied by shops, over which are large rooms for assemblies and other public business. The market-place formerly contained two crosses. The County Hall, a stone building on the High Pavement, was built in 1770, and repaired in 1854. It contains two courts, with every convenience for the judges, juries, &c. The townhall, Weekday Cross, a plain building, was erected in 1741 on the site of an earlier edifice. The house of correction, in St. John-street, stands on the site of a house of the order of St. John of Jerusalem. The corn exchange, a building 77 feet by 55, was erected in 1850 from the designs of Mr. Hine, but is now used by the General Exchange and Commercial Association. An old house named Thurland Hall, built in 1651, is used for public dinners. There are extensive cavalry barracks in the Castle Park, and near the Castle Gate a building formerly used as a riding school for the yeomanry, but now as a circus or for other public purposes. A new post-office has been built at St. Peter's Gate, and near it are the offices of the Sanitary Committee and the corporation accountant. There is a small theatre in the town. The bridge over the Trent, to the S. of the town, was built in 1683, but has been frequently repaired in various styles. It replaced that built by Edward the Elder. There are five banks, besides savings-banks, in the town. Turkish baths, with swimming and hot baths, have been built in Gedling-street, and the corporation has also erected sheds for bathing purposes on the Trent, a short distance above the bridge, the use of which is free.—The principal manufactures in Nottingham are cotton and silk stockings, bobbin-net, and lace.—The handlooms used in these manufactures are let out to workmen at a weekly rent; but of late years steam machinery has come into use, and the number of large factories has of course increased. Most of the machinery is made in the town itself, and there are also several mills for spinning cotton and woollen yarn and for throwing silk, and works for dyeing the various goods manufactured. At Radford there are coal-pits, and there is one iron-foundry in the town. Other manufactures are white lead, pins, wire, and brass fenders. Nottingham ale is celebrated for its good quality in the midland counties, and a large trade in malt is carried on also.—The local government of Nottingham is carried on by a mayor, 14 aldermen, and 42 councillors, with the style of the "mayor and burgesses of the town of Nottingham." The first charter of incorporation was granted by Edward II., and the town was constituted a county—excluding, however, the castle and gaol—in the 27th year of Henry VI. The revenue of the borough is about £12,700. The limits of the municipal and parliamentary boroughs are co-extensive. Two members have been returned to the House of Commons since the reign of Edward I. The population in 1851 was 57,407, with 11,549 inhabited houses, while in 1861 the number of persons was 74,693, and the number of houses 15,441, showing an increase in the decennial period of 17,286 inhabitants. The Poor-law Union contains the three parishes of the town and Standard Hill, and the superior registry is of the same extent. The new County Court district comprises the above, with Radford and Basford (excluding the parsishes of Annesley with Felley, Ilkestone, Heanor, Selstone, and Kirkby-in-Ashfield), and the parsishes of Brancote, Stapleford, Tollerton, Plumtree, Attenborough, Keyworth, and Edwalton. The courts held in the town are the assizes for the county, the quarter sessions for South Notts, and the county court, which are held in the Shire Hall, and the assizes and quarter-sessions for the county of the town in the townhall. Courts leet and baron are also held every six months, the mayor being lord of the manor. The earldom is held by the family of Finch Hatton.—The archdeaconry of Nottingham, in Lincoln diocese, comprises the deaneries of Nottingham, Newark, Retford, Southwell, and Bingham, which contain about 200 benefices. Nottingham deanery is divided into three sections. The first includes the benefices of Annesley, Awsworth, Basford with Cinder Hill, Beeston, Billborough, Bramcote, Bulwell, Eastwood, Greasley, Hucknall Torkard, Kirkby-in-Ashfield, Lindby, Mansfield with St. John's, Mansfield Woodhouse, with Skegby, Nuthall, Papplewick, Selstone, Stapleford, Sutton-in-Ashfield, Tevershall, Trowell, and Wollaton with Cossall; the second contains Arnold, Attenborough, Burton, Joyce with Bulcote, Carrington, Colwick, Epperstone, Gedling with Stoke Bardolph, Goralstore, Hoveringham with Thurgarton, Lambley, Lowdham, and Sneinton; the third contains Hyson Green, Kimberley, Lenton, the benefices in Nottingham and Radford, with Christchurch. The livings in the town are as follows:—St. Mary's is a vic.,* val. £450. The church, a cruciform building in the perpendicular style, with a pinnacled tower in the centre, is known as the High Church. It stands on an eminence in the centre of the town. The S. porch and the windows are decorated, but the W. front has been spoiled by restoration. It is calculated to hold 2,000 persons. There are remains of a few ancient brasses, and there is a font with a Greek inscription which reads the same both ways. St. Nicholas is a rect.,* val. £216. The church, which stands in Castle-street, was pulled down by Colonel Hutchinson, and rebuilt 1678, and was twice enlarged in the last century. It is built of brick, with stone facings. St. Peter's is a rect.,* val. £400, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is near the market-place, and was built in the perpendicular style, but has been much altered. There is a tower at the W. end, surmounted by an octagonal spire. St. James's is a perpet. cur., val. £200, and is extra parochial, being on Standard Hill. The church, a late English building with a tower, was erected in 1808 on the site of the chapel of the White Friars. St. Paul's, in St. Mary's parish, is a perpet. cur. The church is in the Grecian style, and was erected in 1822. Trinity is a perpet. cur., val. £400, in the patron. of four trustees. The church was built and the endowment raised by subscription in 1840. The style is Gothic, with a spire of 117 feet. St. John the Baptist, at Leenside, is a perpet. cur.,* val. £150, in the patron. of the Bishop of Lincoln. The church is in the early English style, and was built in 1843. St. Ann's, lately erected as a chapel-of-ease to St. Mary's, stands in the old burial-ground. St. Luke's, Carlton-road, is a perpet. cur., val. £150, in the patron. of trustees. The church was opened in 1863. St. Matthew's, Upper Talbot-street, is a perpet. cur., val. £200. St. Mark's, St. Michael-street, opened 1855, is a perpet. cur., val. £400, in the patron. of trustees. Trinity Free Church, Bunker's Hill, is a chapel-of-ease to Trinity Church. A new church—St. Saviour's—is being built in Arkwright-street. The Roman Catholic church of St. Barnabas was built by Pugin in 1841, in the early English style. It is 180 feet in length, with a spire of 164 feet. The stained-glass windows and other decorations were given by the Earl of Shrewsbury. The Jews have a synagogue in the town, and there are about 20 chapels, belonging to the Independents, Baptists, Unitarians, Quakers, and Methodists. The Independent chapel at Castle Gate is being rebuilt on the site of the old chapel. The free grammar school was founded by Mrs. Agnes Mellor in 1513, but was reorganised by the corporation in 1807, and it has recently been rebuilt. Thorpe's blue-coat school, founded 1723, was removed in 1853 from Middle Pavement to the Mansfield-road. The present building is in the Elizabethan style. There is a government school of design, which is well attended; an industrial school for girls, a charity school for boys, and National, British, and Sunday schools in connection with the Church of England and various sects. The mechanics' institute, Milton-street, Mansfield-road, was established in 1837, and contains a lecture-hall, class-rooms, library, and museum of natural history and science. There is also an artisan's library in Thurland-street, containing several thousand volumes. The cemetery is on the Derby-road, and contains about 12 acres, with a chapel. It was opened in 1837. There is also a cemetery belonging exclusively to the Church of England, on the edge of the forest, about 16 acres in size; and another, near the General Cemetery, belonging to the Society of Friends. There are several old almshouses and other charitable institutions. Plumtre's hospital was founded 1392 by John Plumtre, and was rebuilt in 1823. It provides residence for thirteen aged widows, and gives relief to a few out-pensioners. Collin's hospital was endowed by Mr. Abel Collin in 1704, for twenty-four men and women, who are provided with rooms, coals, and a weekly allowance. Willoughby's hospital was founded in 1525, for nineteen inmates. Other hospitals and almshouses are—Labray's hospital, for six frame-work knitters, founded 1700; Wartnaby's and the Warsergate hospitals; Wooley's Bedehouse and St. Nicholas White Rents, for six inmates each; Handley's hospital, for twelve persons; Lambley's and Patten's almshouses, for twenty-two burgesses or widows of burgesses; Bilby's almshouses, for eight aged persons, and G. Westrope's almshouses. The General hospital, on Standard Hill, was built in 1781 by subscription, and has since been enlarged. The land surrounding it was given by the corporation and the Duke of Newcastle. The institution for the blind of the midland counties stands in Clarendon and Chaucer streets, overlooking the arboretum, on land given by Mr. Samuel Fox. The county lunatic asylum was built in 1812 on the Southwell-road, and can take in about 150 patients. The dispensary, in Broad-street, was opened in 1843. The workhouse, which can receive 1,000 persons, is in York-street. There are also public baths and washhouses.—The principal estates in the neighbourhood are Wollaton Hall, belonging to Lord Middleton; Clifton Grove, to Sir R. J. Clifton, Bart.; Wilford Hall, to H. Smith, Esq.; and Colwich Hall, to J. Musters, Esq. The Rev. Gilbert Wakefield was a native of Nottingham, as were Henry Kirke White, who wrote a description of Clifton Grove and other poems, and Philip James Bailey, author of "Festus."—The Midland and Great Northern railways both have stations here; the former at West Croft, the latter at East Croft. The Grantham canal and the Nottingham, Cromford, and Grewash canal pass through the town.—The newspapers published here are the Nottingham Review, Journal, and Guardian, and the Nottingham and Newark Mercury.—Markets are held on Wednesday and Saturday for corn and cattle, and fairs on the Friday after January 13th for cattle, the 7th and 8th of March for cheese, cattle, &c., the Thursday before Easter for horses, and the 2nd October, "goose fair," for geese, cloth, cattle, cheese, &c.—Races are run annually in July, on a circular course of 1 mile 454 yards, on the N.E. side of the town. There are two cricket-grounds —one near the racecourse and the other at Trentbridge.

NOTTINGHAMSHIRE, an inland co. of England, bounded on the N. by Yorkshire, on the N.E. and E. by Lincolnshire, on the S. by Leicestershire, and on the W. by Derbyshire. Its length from Stanford to the top of Misson Carr is 51 miles, and its greatest breadth 26, while the average breadth is 18, and its circuit 145 miles, comprising an area of 526,076 statute acres. It lies between 0° 40′ and 1° 20′ W. long., and 52° 47′ and 53° 30′ N. lat. Nottinghamshire was originally inhabited by the British tribe of the Coritani, who have left a few remains of their occupation, as the camps at Oxon, and Barton, or Brent's Hill, and some tumuli at Worksop. Under the Romans it formed part of the province called Flavia Cæsariensis. They had stations at Brough (Crocolana), East Bridgeford (Margidunum) Willoughby (Verometum), and between Thorpe and Farndon (Ad Pontem). These were connected by the Fosse Way and its branches, traces of which may be seen near Verometum. At Winnyhill, near Mansfield, there are remains of a Roman villa, and there are other remains at Holly Hill, Hexgrave, Hemlock Stone, near Wollaston, and at Creswell Crags, near Worksop. Subsequently Nottinghamshire belonged successively to Northumbria and Mercia. In 867 the sons of Regnar Lodbrog overran it, and in 878 it was ceded to them by Alfred, and was not recovered till the reign of Edmund (941). William the Conqueror granted the district to his nephew, William Peverell, who built Nottingham Castle. When the survey of England was taken for Domesday Book, five wapentakes N. of the Trent belonged to Nottingham, but at present there are only three. In addition to the historical events mentioned under Nottingham, nothing occurred in the county before the civil war worthy of mention, except the death of John at Newark, 17th October, 1216, and the defeat of Lambert Simnel by Henry VII. at East Stoke in 1487. After the raising of the royal standard at Nottingham in 1642, the town fell into the hands of the opposite party, but Newark continued in the power of the king, being occupied by a force under Sir John Henderson. In 1644 it was besieged by Lord Willoughby, and Sir John Meldrum, but the besieging army was routed and driven across the Trent by Prince Rupert. In the winter of 1645 it was again besieged, but did not surrender till May, 1646, when Charles was brought thither by the Scotch, to whom he had given himself up at Southwell. The county was disturbed by riots in 1812 and 1816, owing to the introduction of machinery into the stocking trade.—Of ecclesiastical establishments there were formerly priories at Mattersey and Thurgarton; abbeys at Beauvale, Newstead, Worksop, Rufford, Welbeck, and Radford; and collegiate churches at Nottingham and Southwell. Of these, Newstead, an Augustinian abbey, founded 1170, has remains of the chapel, a beautiful specimen of early English, but the place is chiefly interesting as having been the residence of the late Lord Byron. Mansfield, Balderton, Newark, and Hovringham churches are partly Norman; and those at Hawton, Upton, St. Peter, near Southwell, Coddington, Blythe, and Bingham are early English. The primate's house at Southwell; Thurland Hall at Nottingham; and the old mansions at Rampton, belonging to the family of the Eyres; Odsark, belonging to the Cliftons; Wiverton, to the Chaworths; Shelford, to the Stanhopes; Haughton, and Bilsthorpe are worthy of inspection. There are castles at Nottingham and Newark, both of which were destroyed for military purposes after the civil wars.—Nottinghamshire is mostly undulating country, and in the vales of Belvoir and Trent absolutely flat. The southern part between the Soar and the Smite is called the Wolds, consisting of moor and pasture, watered by the Fairham Brook and other tributaries of the Trent, and is mostly level, with the exception of the hills near Leake. The western side, between Nottingham and Worksop, is more rugged, and there is a range of hills running nearly the whole distance between these places. The highest point is at Sutton-in-Ashfield, near Mansfield, about 600 feet high. A spur from the range at Kirkby-in-Ashfield is called Robin Hood's hills. N.W. of Mansfield are the Birklands woods and the Rufford moors, remains of Sherwood Forest, where many trees may still be seen which were probably standing in Robin Hood's time, one of which is called Robin Hood's Larder, or the Shambles Oak, and another, the Parliament Oak, is said to be the spot where King John first received the news of his brother Richard's release from captivity. The Major Oak in Birklands is generally said to be the largest tree in the Forest, though it is by no means the oldest. The northern part of the county again becomes flat, with the exception of a single hill at Gringley. The principal river is the Trent, which enters the county near the S.W. corner, and flows N.W. through Nottingham and Newark to North Clifton, whence, as far as a short distance beyond West Stockwith, it divides the county from Lincolnshire. It is navigable for vessels of 200 tons as far as Gainsborough, and for river vessels throughout Nottinghamshire. The following rivers are tributaries to it. The Soar divides Nottingham from Leicestershire from the southern point of the former county, flowing N.W. through Normanton to its junction with the Trent, a distance of about 8 miles. The Grewash unites with the Trent at a point about 3 miles below the entrance of the Soar. It rises in the Forest, and is the boundary on the Derbyshire side from Pinxton to its mouth. The Lene rises near Newstead, and passes through Nottingham on its way to the Trent. The Dover Beck rises near Robin Hood's Pot, and, after a south-easterly course of about 10 miles, falls into the Trent a little below East Bridgeford. The Deven, with its tributaries, the Smite and the Cardyke, water the south-eastern corner of the county, between the Fosse Way and the border. The Idle is formed by the junction of the Maun and the Poulters, which unite near West Drayton. It passes East Retford, to which town it is navigable, and after a winding course through Mattersey and Bawtry, turns towards the E., and falls into the Trent at East Stockwith. The Ryton rises near Shireoaks chapel, and joins the Idle just above Bawtry. Two small streams join it near Blyth. The Poulter rises on the Leicestershire border, and forms lakes in Welbeck and Clumber parks. The Maun rises near Mansfield, and flows through the Clipstone Water meadows; after which it is joined by the Rainsworth water, which rises near Robin Hood's hills, and near Perlett by the Meden, which flows in a north-eastern direction from Skegby. —The climate is dry and healthy. The E. is the rainy quarter for wind, the W. winds being intercepted by the Derbyshire hills. The western side of the county, to a line through Worksop, Mansfield, and Arnold, is formed of magnesian limestone and Old Red sandstone, overlying coal, which occurs in beds of from 2 to 5 feet thickness, and dipping to the E. It is worked at Eastwood, Bilborough, Radford, and one or two places of less importance. Thence to a line through Harby and Newark marl and New Red sandstone are the prevailing formations, and E. of this lias, which runs S. to the Wold hills. The Forest is principally quartz or gravel. Gypsum is worked at Sneinton, Great Markham, Beacon and Red hills; red and yellow stone at Mansfield; bluestone at Staunton, Maplebeck, and Beacon Hill; paving stone at Linby; and hard limestone at Mansfield Woodhouse.—The soil in the N. and E. is a sandy clay, but in the W. is mostly barren light sand. Turnips are the principal crops cultivated, but wheat, barley, oats, beans, &c., are grown to a less extent. Hops are grown at Tuxford, Ollerton, and East Retford, and apples on the heavy soils, but no cider is made. The neighbourhoods of Nottingham and Newark abound in market gardens. Large numbers of oxen and sheep are pastured in the meadows along the Trent and Soar, and in the vicinity of the latter river there are a few dairies, where good cheese is made, but not in any great quantity. Of cattle, the Hereford and shorthorn are preferred for the best pastures, and the Scots for inferior land. The Leicester sheep are mostly found throughout the county, but on many farms cross-breeds are preferred. The farms vary from 70 acres to 300, and are mostly held at will. The forest land belonging to the dukes of Newcastle and Portland are planted with oak, pine, and other trees, for the navy and other purposes.—The staple manufacture of Nottinghamshire is cotton and silk hose and bobbinet lace. Framework knitting is carried on in nearly every village of the southern part of the county. There are cotton mills at Nottingham, Mansfield, Newark, Worksop, and Retford, where there is also a sail manufactory. Coarse pottery is made at Sutton, silk and indiarubber gloves at Nottingham.—Nottinghamshire is divided into six wapentakes: Bassetlaw, in the N. of the county; Newark, in the E.; Bingham, in the S.E.; Rushcliffe, in the S.; Broxton, in the W.; and Thurgarton, in the centre. Each of these are formed into two divisions, N. and S. with the exception of Bassetlaw, which is divided into Hatfield and North and South Clay, and Thurgarton, which is divided into North and South Thurgarton and Southwell, which lies between them. The county of the town of Nottingham also forms a separate division; and in addition to these there were formerly two liberties, Southwell and Scrooby, composed of detached parishes in Bassetlaw and Thurgarton, but the liberties have now been abolished, and the parishes assigned to the wapentakes in which they lie. The number of parishes in the county is about 180, besides 50 chapelries and 14 districts; the townships (which are the civil divisions) and hamlets are about 500. The market towns are, Nottingham (the county town), Newark, East Retford, Bingham, Mansfield, Southwell, Worksop, Ollerton, Tuxford, Blyth, Bawtry, and Sutton-in-Ashfield. Four members are returned by the county, two for each division, N. and S., and two by each of the boroughs of Nottingham, Newark, and East Retford, and in the election for the last the wapentake of Bassetlaw also joins. For the N. division Mansfield is the election town, with Nottingham, Nuthall, and Retford, for polling-places for the S. division. Newark is the election town, and Bingham, Southwell, East Leake, Loundam, and Sutton-on-Trent, the polling-places. Nottingham, Newark, East Retford, Bingham, Mansfield, Worksop, Southwell, Basford, and Radford, are Poor-law Unions and superior registries, and except Southwell, the heads of new County Court districts. The population of the county was 270,427 in 1851, and 293,867 in 1861, showing an increase of 14,466. The local government is vested in a lord-lieutenant, custos, high sheriff, about 30 deputy lieutenants, and between 50 and 60 magistrates. Nottinghamshire is in the Midland circuit and the N.E. military division. Assizes are held at Nottingham, and quarter sessions at that town, Newark, and East Retford. The county prison and house of correction are at Nottingham and Southwell respectively.—Nottingham constitutes an archdeaconry in the diocese of Lincoln, province of Canterbury, and is divided into the deaneries of Bingham, Retford, Southwell, Nottingham, and Newark, comprising about 200 benefices. The earldom is held by the family of Finch Hatton. The county is full of the seats of noblemen and gentlemen, of which the following are the most worthy of note:—Clumber and Worksop, the Duke of Newcastle; Clipston and Welbeck, the Duke of Portland; Thoresby, Earl Manvers; Rufford, Earl Scarborough; Scriby, Viscount Galway; Wiseton, Earl Spencer; Bunny Park, Lord Rancliffe; Wollaton, Lord Middleton; Clifton, Clifton, Bart.; Norwood, Sutton, Bart.; Owthorpe, Bromley, Bart.; Shirland, Clarke, Bart.; Wallingwells, White, Bart.; Annesley, Musters; Arnold Grove, Turbutt; Bishop Field, Duncombe; Bleasby Hall, Kelham; Blythe, Walker; Brookhill, D'Ewes Coke; the Chauntrey, Sykes; Elton, Norton; Elston, Darwin; Firbeck, Knight; Flintham, Hildyard; Grove Hall, Eyre; Kelham, Sutton; Kirklington, Sotheron; Lenton, Wright; Mansfield Woodhouse, Need; Mapperley, Wright; Muskham, Handley; Newstead Abbey, Wildman; Osberton, Foljambe; Ossington, Denison; Papplewick, Nixon; Ruddington, Moore; Ranby, Blaydes; Sherwood, Houldsworth; Staunton Hall, Staunton; Syerston, Fillingham; Thorney, Neville; Thrumpton, Wescombe; Thurgarton, Martin; Tollerton, Barry; Watnall, Rolleston; Winkbourne, Burnell; &c. The county is hunted by the Rufford and Mr. Lumley's foxhounds, and the Sherwood harriers.—The Great Northern railway runs N. from Grantham through Newark, East Retford, and Bawtry. A branch from Grantham joins the branch line from Derby to Lincoln, which runs through Nottingham and Newark, near Carlton, about 4 miles from Nottingham. The Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire passes through Worksop and East Retford, after leaving which town, it divides into branches, one to Gainsborough, the other to Lincoln. The Derby and Lincoln line already mentioned has a branch at Nottingham to Mansfield, and another short one to Southwell. The Erewash Valley line runs from Attenborough along the Erewash, turning at Pinxton towards the E., and ending at Mansfield. The Nottingham and Grantham canal connects the Trent with the Witham, and sends a branch to Bingham. The Chesterfield canal leaves the Trent at Stockwith, and passes East Retford and Worksop on its way to Chesterfield. The Erewash canal runs by that river as far as Langley Bridge, where the Cromford canal joins it. The principal high roads from Nottingham, with the distances, are as follows:—To Bunny 6 miles, Loughborough 14, and Leicester 25; to Tollerton 4 miles, Broughton 12, and Melton Mowbray 18; to Bingham 8 miles, and Grantham 22; to Newark 20 miles, and Lincoln 36; to Arnold 4 miles, Newstead 9, Mansfield 13, Welbeck 22, Worksop 25, and Doncaster 40; to Beauvale Abbey 8 miles, Codnor Works 13, and Alfreton 16; to Wollaton 2 miles, and Derby 14. The roads from Newark are—to Southwell 6 miles, Mansfield 17, and Chesterfield 29; to Caunton 6 miles, Ollerton 12, and Worksop 20; to Sutton-on-Trent 8 miles, Tuxford 20, and East Retford 27.

NOTTINGHAM-FEE, a lib. in the par. of Blewberry, hund. of Morton, co. Berks, 5 miles S.W. of Wallingford.

NOTTING HILL, a suburban district in the par. of Kensington, and Kensington div. of the hund. of Ossulstone, co. Middlesex, 4 miles W. of St. Paul's, London. It is a station on the Metropolitan railway, and has constant communication with the City and West End by omnibus. It is situated nearly opposite Holland Park, and comprises many modern villa residences and ranges of houses, all built since 1828, including Notting Hill-square, Ladbroke-square, Stanley-terrace, and Lansdown-crescent. So recently as the end of the last century foxes are said to have been hunted in the fields, now entirely built over. It was formerly the property of the De Veres, from whom it passed to the Knottingbernes, who have given their name to the district. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of London, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. John, is a cruciform structure, with a good spire, built on the site of the Hippodrome. There is also a proprietary chapel at Horbury.

NOTTINGTON, a hmlt. in the pars. of Broadway and Buckland Ripers, hund. of Cullifordtree, co. Dorset, 3 miles N. of Weymouth. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road from Weymouth to Dorchester, near the river Wey. It has a pump-room and baths, in connection with a mineral spring, which is highly impregnated with sulphur. It is much frequented in summer by visitors from Weymouth. The principal residence is Nottington House, the seat of Colonel Steward, who is proprietor of the Isle of Portland and a considerable part of Weymouth.

NOTTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Roystone, wap. of Staincross, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N. of Barnsley, and the same distance S. of Wakefield. It has a joint station with Roystone on the North Midland railway. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on rising ground, beneath which a small rivulet takes its rise. A part of the hamlet of Staincross is in this township.

NOTTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Maiden Newton, co. Dorset, 7 miles N.W. of Dorchester.

NOUGHAVAL, a par. in the bar. of Burren, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles N.E. of Kilfenora. Ennistimon is its post town. It is 4 miles long by 2 broad. The surface is very rocky, and includes much mountain pasture. The living is a suspended rect. in the dioc. of Kilfenora, and in the patron. of the bishop. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, also a hedge-school. Lismoher House and Lodge are the chief residences. In the vicinity are ruins of three castles, likewise of two or three forts.

NOUGHAVAL, a par. partly in the bar. of Kilkenny West, co. Westmeath, and partly in the bars. of Rathcline and Shrule, co. Longford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. Ballymore is its post town. The soil is mostly of excellent quality. Several small islands are included in the parish. The living is a perpet. cur. with Forgney annexed, in the dioc. of Meath, val. £181, in the patron. of the crown. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and several day schools; also a police station. Cartroon and Rathmore are the principal seats. Near the village are ruins of an abbey and a castle.

NOVAR, a hmlt. in the par. of Rosskeen, co. Ross, Scotland, 6 miles from Invergordon, and 8 N.E. of Dingwall. It is a station on the Inverness and Aberdeen Junction railway. The estate, which is the property of — Munro, Esq., is situated on the N. bank of Cromarty Frith.

NOWTON, a par. in the hund. of Thingoe, co. Suffolk, 2½ miles S.E. of Bury St. Edmund's, its railway station and post town. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. There is a meet for Mr. Buck's harriers. The par. includes the hmlt. of Horsecroft. The boundary between this parish and Hawstead passes through the N. and S. doors of Nowton church. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £314. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a small edifice, with a tower containing six bells. It was enlarged and restored in 1843. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a small school, supported by Mr. Oakes. H. J. Oakes, Esq., is lord of the manor. Nowton Court is the principal residence.

NOX, a tnshp. in the par. of Pontesbury, co. Salop, 5 miles W. by S. of Shrewsbury.

NOYADD, the name of several ancient seats in Wales.

NUCETOWN, a vil. in the par. of Moragh, bar. of Kinnalmeaky, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles W. by N. of Bandon. Fairs are held in January, October, and December.

NUFFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Ewelme, co. Oxford, 7 miles W. of Henley, its post town, 2 W. by N. of Nettlebed, and 4 from Wallingford. The village, which is inconsiderable, is situated under the Chiltern hills, and is wholly agricultural. There was formerly a Trinitarian friary, founded prior to 1360. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £430, and the glebe comprises 62 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £405. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a small ancient edifice, with a square tower. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum.

NUN-BURNHOLME, a par. in the wap. of Harthill, East Riding co. York, 3 miles E. by S. of Pocklington. The village, which is small and wholly agricultural, is situated on a branch of the river Derwent. It had formerly a small Benedictine nunnery, founded by Roger de Morlais or Morley in the reign of Henry III., which at the Dissolution had a revenue of £10 3s. 3d. The par. includes the hmlt. of Thorpe-le-Street. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £350, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is dedicated to St. James. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a school partly supported by the rector.

NUNEATON, a par., post, and market town, in the Atherstone div. of the hund. of Hemlingford, co. Warwick, 5 miles S. of Hinckley, 18 N. by E. of Warwick, and 96½ N.W. of London. It has a junction station at Bond-End on the Trent Valley railway, where the Nuneaton and Coventry line branches off, also on the Birmingham and Leicester section of the Midland railway. It is situated on the river Anker, which is here crossed by three bridges, and near the Coventry canal. The par. comprises the hmlts. of Attleborough and Stockingford, which are separate cure. It is a polling-place for the northern divisions of the county. Its name is derived from the small river Ea, and from a priory founded in Stephen's time by Robert Earl of Leicester, for nuns of the order of Fontevrault in Picardy. Its prioress received the grant of a weekly market from Henry III., and at the time of the Dissolution its revenue amounted to £290 15s. 0½d. The ruins are still traceable, including some arches, &c. The town, which consists principally of one long street, with a cross street leading to the market place, contains some modern houses, interspersed with cottages of more ancient date. It is well built and lighted with gas, and contains a bank, newsroom, gas works, prison, market-house, and townhall. The new county court is held monthly, and the Local Board of Health on the first Wednesday of every month in the townhall, which is a modern edifice of brick. Petty sessions are held every alternate Saturday at the "Newdegate Arms." Three constables are annually elected at the court leet for the town and hamlets, and there is also a permanent constable. The manufacture of ribbons is carried on to a considerable extent, and a good trade is also done in framework knitting, hat making, iron founding, edge-tools and implements, and elastic web making. In the vicinity of the town are a large corn-mill, malting establishments, collieries, quarries of freestone, and brickfields. In some parts of this parish a fine clay for pottery and manganese have been found. Nuneaton is the head of a Poor-law Union, embracing eight parishes, the poor-house being at Coton, and of new County Court and superintendent registry districts. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £902, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has a square embattled and pinnacled tower, containing six bells. The interior of the church contains a marble monument to Sir Marmaduke Constable, also others to the Stratford and Trotman families. There are also two district churches, viz. at Stockingford and Attleborough, the livings of which are perpet. curs.,* val. £120 and £170 respectively. The parochial charities produce about £551 per annum. There are almshouses in the churchyard for four aged persons. An English free school was founded and endowed in 1712 by Richard Smith for the instruction of fifty boys and thirty girls. There are also a National school for both sexes, and infant schools. The Primitive and Wesleyan Methodists, General Baptists, and Independents, have each a place of worship. The Roman way, Watling Street, passed about 2 miles distant from the town. Market day is Saturday. Fairs are held on February 18th, May 14th, July 1st, and October 7th. October 31st for horses and cattle.

NUNEHAM-COURTNEY, a par. in the hund. of Bullingdon, co. Oxford, 5¼ miles S.E. of Oxford, its post town, and 4 N.E. of Abingdon. The village, which is small, is situated on the E. bank of the river Isis, or Thames, and on the road from Oxford, through Henley to London. It is neatly built, the cottages being at equal distances, and shaded by a row of poplars. The manor was formerly held by the De Courcies, Courtenays, and other distinguished families. In the vicinity of the village is Nuneham Park, the seat of the late Earl of Harcourt. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The Berkshire hounds meet here. The tithes have been commuted for the rent-charge of £446 16*s*. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £456. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a small Grecian structure with a dome, rebuilt in 1764 at the expense of Simon Earl of Harcourt. It has an altar-piece by "Mason." The parochial charities produce about £30 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. Nuneham Park is the principal residence. This place gave the inferior title of viscount to the Earl of Harcourt, which title is now extinct. G. G. Harcourt, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

NUNKEELING-WITH-BEWHOLME, a par. in the N. div. of the wap. of Holderness, East Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of Hornsea, and 11 N.E. of Beverley. Sigglesthorne is its post town. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. There was formerly a Benedictine nunnery, founded in 1150 by Agnes de Archis. Its revenue at the Dissolution amounted to £50 17*s*. 2*d*. The soil is fertile, and the land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture, with but little wood. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. £55. The church is a small structure, containing effigies of a crusader. The charities are of a small amount. There is a school for both sexes.

NUN-MONKTON, a par. in the upper div. of Claro wap., West Riding co. York. See MONKTON, NUN.

NUNNEY, a par. in the hund. of Frome, co. Somerset, 3 miles S.W. of Frome, its railway station and post town, and 120 W. of London. The village, which is large, is situated on a small stream in confluence with the river Frome. The par. includes the hmlt. of Trudox Hill, at which place are the remains of a Roman camp. There are traces of a nunnery, which is supposed to have given name to the village, also the ivy-covered ruins of De-la-Meres' Castle, which was garrisoned by the Royalists during the civil war, but was taken and burnt by the Roundheads in 1645. On the banks of the Frome are numerous lime kilns, and an edge-tool manufactory. A large proportion of the land is in pasture. The soil is of various qualities, but in general rich, with a subsoil of clay and limestone. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £366 10*s*., and the glebe comprises 58 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £400. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing six bells. The interior of the church contains several effigies and monuments of great antiquity, including those of the De-la-Meres and other proprietors of the manor, who resided at the castle. The register dates from the 16th century. There are various charities, the chief of which is that of Thomas Turner, who bequeathed in 1839 the sum of £14,000 for instruction, sickness, and old age. There are two National schools, both of which have Sunday-schools in connection with them. There are places of worship for Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive and Reformed Methodists. James Theobald, Esq., is lord of the manor. An annual cattle fair is held on the 11th November.

NUNNINGTON, a par. in the wap. of Rysdale, North Riding co. York, 6 miles S.E. of Helmsley, 2 N. of Hovingham, and 2 E. of Oswaldkirk. York is its post town. The village, which is small, is situated in the fertile vale of the river Rye, and on the high road between Kirby-Moorside and York. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The higher grounds command extensive views of Ryedale and the adjacent country. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1776. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £284. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a stone structure with a square tower, containing three bells. The church was rebuilt in 1678 by Ronald Grahme, at which time the same gentleman founded a hospital and school, with an annuity of £20, which has since been increased. There is a charity of about £9 per annum. A Sunday-school is held at the school-room. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. There is an ancient building at the E. end of the village, formerly the residence of Viscount Preston, but now converted into a farm-house. William Rutson, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The celebrated ram show of Mr. T. Stamper is held on the first Friday in August.

NUNNINGTON, a tythg. in the par. of Wivelscombe, hund. of West Kingsbury, co. Somerset, 14 miles S.W. of Bridgwater. It is situated in a valley, under the Manadown Hills.

NUNNY-KIRK, a tnshp. in the par. of Nether-Witton, W. div. of Morpeth ward, co. Northumberland, 2 miles N.W. of Nether-Witton, and 8 N.W. of Morpeth. It is situated on the river Font, and contains Nunny-Kirk Hall, a stone mansion situated in a well-wooded vale.

NUNRIDGE, or NUNRIDING, a tnshp. in the par. of Mitford, W. div. of Morpeth ward, co. Northumberland, 3 miles N.W. of Mitford church, and 4 N.W. of Morpeth. It is situated near the river Font. The soil is of a clayey nature.

NUNSCROSS, a vil. in the bar. of Newcastle, co. Wicklow, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Wicklow. It is situated in the valley of the Vartrey, near the Devil's Glen.

NUNTHORPE, a chplry. and tnshp. in the par. of Ayton, W. div. of Langbaurgh lib., North Riding co.

York, 3½ miles N.E. of Stokesley, its post town, 6 S.E. of Middlesborough, and 1½ mile from the Nunthorpe station on the Stockton and Darlington railway. The village, which is inconsiderable, is situated on the road between Stokesley and Redcar. This place takes the prefix to its name from a Cistercian nunnery, which was removed here from Hutton in 1160. The soil is of a stiff clay, and the surface flat. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £46. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small stone structure, rebuilt in 1824. The village and Sunday schools are supported by voluntary contributions. The Whinstone-Dyke passes along the S. part of the township. Nunthorpe Hall is the principal residence. The trustees of the late W. Simpson, Esq., are lords of the manor.

NUNTON, a par. in the hund. of Downton, co. Wilts, 3½ miles S.E. of Salisbury, its post town, and 98½ from London. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Avon, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a cur.* annexed to the vic. of Downton, in the dioc. of Sarum. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. There is a National school. The Baptists have a place of worship. New Hall is the principal residence.

NUNTON, a hmlt. in the island of North Uist, Western Islands, coast of Scotland, near Lochmaddy.

NUNWELL, a seat in the Isle of Wight, co. Hants, 6 miles E. by S. of Newport. It is situated under Nunwell Down, and belongs to the Oglander family, which has been settled in the island for many generations.

NUNWICK, a tnshp. in the par. and lib. of Ripon, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.E. of Ripon. It is situated near the river Ure. Here was formerly a circle surrounded by five stones, each 8 feet high and 20 in girth. It is joined with the hamlet of Howgrave to form a township.

NURNEY, a par. in the bars. of Forth and Carlow and East Idrone, co. Carlow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N.E. of Leighlin Bridge, its post town. The par. is 4 miles long by 1½ mile broad. The surface consists of a part of the Barrow's valley. It is crossed by the road from Carlow to Bagnalstown. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. £173, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by the late Board of First Fruits in 1791. Knockthomas and Orchard House are the chief seats.

NURNEY, a par. in the bar. of Carbury, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.N.W. of Carbury. Kildare is its post town. It is 3 miles long by 1½ mile broad. There is a good deal of bog. The river Boyne impinges on the northern border. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kildare, val. with Castle-Carbury, £233, in the patron. of Viscount Harberton. There is a Roman Catholic chapel and a day school. Nurney House and Williamston House are the principal residences.

NURNEY, a par. and vil. in the bar. of West Offaly, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3½ miles S.W. of Kildare. Naas is its post town. It is 1½ mile in length and the same in breadth. The surface is well cultivated, and intersected by the roads from Kildare to Athy, and from Calverstown to Monastereven. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Kildare, val. with two others, £152, in the patron. of the bishop. There are a church and two Roman Catholic chapels. Nurney House is the principal seat.

NURSERY, a suburb of Sheffield (which see), co. York.

NURSLING, or NUTSHALLING, a par. in the hund. of Redbridge, co. Hants, 2 miles N. of Redbridge, its railway station and post town, 3½ of Romsey, and 5 N.W. of Southampton. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road from Romsey to Southampton, near the Andover canal and river Anton, or Test. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. About half the land is arable, the remainder meadow and pasture. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £550, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a stone and brick structure, with a tower surmounted by a wooden spire. The interior has a monument of the Mill family. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum, which goes to Crammer's Sunday-school. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. There is a private lunatic asylum, called Grove Place, which was formerly a hunting-seat of Queen Elizabeth, and is approached by an avenue of lime trees.

NURSTEAD, a tythg. in the par. of Buriton, hund. of Finch-Dean, co. Hants, 1½ mile S. of Petersfield.

NURSTED, a par. in the hund. of Toltingtrough, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 4 miles S. of Gravesend, its post town, 24 S.E. of London, and half a mile from the Meopham railway station. The village, which is inconsiderable, was formerly called Newstead, and was the property of Odo Bishop of Bayeux. The land is partly in hop grounds. Part of the old hall is still remaining, with its oak roof and windows, and the ruins of a keep. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £173 8*s.* 6*d.* The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £140. The church, dedicated to St. Mildred, is a small structure, with a square western tower containing one bell.

NURSTON, a vil. in the par. of Penmark, co. Glamorgan, 5 miles S.E. of Cowbridge.

NURTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Pattingham, co. Stafford, 5 miles W. of Wolverhampton.

NUTBIN, a hmlt. in the par. of Weyhill, co. Hants, 3 miles N.W. of Andover.

NUTBOURNE, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Westbourne, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 5 miles W. of Chichester. It is situated on Langston Harbour.

NUTBOURNE, a hmlt. in the par. of Pulborough, hund. of West Easwrith, rape of Arundel, co. Sussex, 4 miles S.E. of Petworth. It is situated on the river Arun.

NUTFIELD, a par. in the second div. of the hund. of Reigate, co. Surrey, 2 miles E. of Reigate, its post town, and 1 mile W. of Bletchingley. At the former place is the junction station of the South-Eastern railway. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on the road from Godstone to Reigate. It is celebrated for its production of fuller's earth, amounting to 6,000 tons annually, but this mineral is now nearly worked out. There are also hearthstone quarries of great magnitude. The soil consists of a sandy loam and deep clay. About two-thirds of the land are arable, and the remainder meadow, pasture, and woodland. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £500, in the patron. of Jesus College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to SS. Paul and Peter, is a small structure with an embattled tower. The interior of the church has an old monument of Thomas de Roldham. There is a National school. In 1755, about 900 Roman brass coins of the Lower Empire were found in the neighbourhood within an earthen vessel.

NUTHALL, a par. in the S. div. of Broxtow wap., co. Nottingham, 4½ miles N.W. of Nottingham, its post town, and 3 N.W. of Basford railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road from Nottingham to Alfreton, and is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the chplry. of Awsworth and the hmlt. of Hempshill. The substratum abounds with coal, of which some mines are in operation at Awsworth. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £350. The church, dedicated to St. Patrick, is a small ancient structure, with a tower containing one bell. It has stained windows and tombs of the Bohuns. There is also a district church at Awsworth, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £101. A school, which was originally endowed with land, in 1744, by Richard Smedley, was erected in 1846. About 1 mile N.E. of the village is a stone quarry. Nuthall Temple, occupying a commanding site near the village, was built by the Sedleys in imitation of the Villa Capra at Vicenza, Italy, and is situated in an extensive park, embellished with plantations and an artificial lake.

NUTHAMPSTEAD, a hmlt. in the par. of Barkway. hund. of Edwinstree, co. Herts, 2 miles E. by S. of Barkway. Here was formerly a chapel-of-ease.

NUTHILL, formerly a par., but now joined to Burstwick, in the S. div. of the wap. of Holderness, East Riding co. York, 8 miles E. by N. of Hull. There is now only one farmhouse. The church has long been in ruins.

NUTHURST, a par. in the hund. of Singlecross, rape of Bramber, co. Sussex, 4 miles S. of Horsham, its railway station and post town, and 42 from London. The village, which is wholly agricultural, is situated on a branch of the river Adur. The land is partly in hop grounds, and the wheat grown is exceedingly good. The soil is light, and the surface well wooded with fine oak timber. The road from Horsham to Worthing runs through the parish on the E. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £319, in the patron. of the Bishop of London. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a tower, surmounted by a shingled spire, containing three bells. The roof of the church is of carved oak, and there are several stained windows. The church was enlarged, at a considerable expense, in 1856, chiefly defrayed by J. T. Nelthorpe, Esq. It contains an ancient octagonal font of Purbeck marble, and several mural monuments to the families of Tudor, Aldridge, and Nelthorpe. The register dates from the 15th century. There is a National school for both sexes. A chapel-of-ease has recently been erected at Copsale, in which Divine service is held on Sunday evenings. Nuthurst Lodge is the principal residence, and commands extensive views of the Weald and South Downs.

NUTHURST, a hmlt. and chplry. in the par. of Hampton-in-Arden, Solihul div. of the hund. of Hemlingford, co. Warwick, 4 miles N. of Henley, and 5 S. of Coleshill. Birmingham is its post town. It is situated near the Birmingham canal, and the line of the London and North-Western railway where the Derby section branches off. It belongs to the Spooners of Elmdon, and is a meet for the North Warwickshire hounds. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Hampton-in-Arden, in the dioc. of Worcester. The original chapel-of-ease having become dilapidated, it was rebuilt about twenty years ago chiefly at the expense of Bolton King, Esq.

NUTLEY, a par. in the lower half of the hund. of Bermondspit, co. Hants, 5½ miles S.W. of Basingstoke, its post town and railway station, and 13½ N.E. of Winchester. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. It is a meet for the H. H. hounds. The Basingstoke canal, and the line of the South-Western railway, pass through the parish. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £200, and the glebe comprises 23½ acres. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Candover-Preston, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a flint and stone edifice, rebuilt in 1846. Thomas Fitzgerald, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

NUTLEY, a chplry. in the par. of Maresfield, hund. of Rushmonden, co. Sussex, 6 miles S.E. of East Grinstead, and 8 N. by E. of Lewes. It is situated in Ashdown Forest. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £100, in the patron. of the Rector of Maresfield.

NUTSHALLING. See Nursling, co. Hants.

NUTWELL, a hmlt. in the par. of Armthorpe, West Riding co. York, 3 miles E. of Doncaster.

NUTWELL COURT, a seat in the par. of Topsham, hund. of Wonford, co. Devon, 5 miles S.E. of Exeter. It is situated on the river Ex, near its confluence with the Clyst, and belongs to Sir T. T. Drake, Bart., through Lord Heathfield.

NYLAND, a par. in the hund. of Glaston-Twelve-Hides, co. Somerset, 3 miles S.E. of Axbridge, and 6 N.W. of Wells. The par., which is inconsiderable, includes the hmlt. of Batcombe. It had a church, dedicated to St. Andrew, which King Kenewalch gave to Glastonbury Abbey in 670. It is now considered to belong to Glastonbury parish.

NYLAND, a tythg. in the par. of Kington Magna, co. Dorset, 6 miles W. of Shaftesbury.

NYMET, BROAD, a chplry. in the par. and hund. of North Tawton, co. Devon, 1½ mile S.W. of Bow. It is an insignificant place, containing only 50 acres, but was formerly a distinct parish. The living is a sinecure rect. held with that of Bow.

NYMET-ROWLAND, a par. in the hund. of North Tawton, co. Devon, 4½ miles S. by E. of Chumleigh, 8 N.W. of Crediton, its post town, and 1 mile W. of the Lapford station on the North Devon railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Taw, and is wholly agricultural. The soil consists of loam, with a subsoil of shale. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £70. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is a stone structure with a tower containing three bells. John Wreford, Esq., is lord of the manor.

NYMET-TRACEY. See Bow, co. Devon.

NYMPH BANK, a good fishing ground off the S. coast of Ireland, between Cape Clear and Waterford.

NYMPHSFIELD, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Berkeley, co. Gloucester, 5 miles N.E. of Dursley, and 2½ E. of Frocester, of which it was formerly a chapelry. Stonehouse is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The soil is of a clayey nature. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £258, and the glebe comprises 27 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £260. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing one bell. There is a National school, also a Roman Catholic school. William Leigh, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

NYMPTON, BISHOP'S. See Bishop's Nympton, co. Devon.

NYMPTON, KING'S, a par. in the hund. of Witheridge, co. Devon, 3 miles N. of Chumleigh, 5 S. of South Molton, its post town, and 2½ from the South Molton Road station on the Taw Vale railway. The village is situated on the river Mole, and on the road from Exeter to Barnstaple. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agricultural pursuits. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £376. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient stone structure, with a wooden spired tower containing five bells. There is an endowed school for both sexes. The Bible Christians have a place of worship. King's Nympton Park, the principal residence, is situated in an extensive and well-timbered park, watered by the river Mole, over which a stone bridge has been recently constructed. H. M. Byne, Esq., is lord of the manor. An annual fair is held on the Monday nearest to St. James's Day.

NYMPTON ST. GEORGE, a par. in the hund. of South Molton, co. Devon, 2½ miles S.W. of South Molton, its post town, and 5½ N.E. of South Molton Road station on the Taw Vale railway. It is a small agricultural village, situated on the river Mole. The road to Chumleigh passes through the village. The glebe comprises 100 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £310. The church, dedicated to St. George, is a stone structure, with a brick tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains a font of great antiquity, and several monuments to the Kanlake family. There is a school entirely maintained by the Rev. William Fortescue. Sir T. Dyke Acland, Bart., is lord of the manor and principal landowner. An annual cattle fair is held on the first Wednesday after the 1st July.

NYNEHEAD, or NINEHEAD, a par. in the hund. of Taunton, co. Somerset, 1½ mile N. by W. of Wellington, its post town and railway station, and 7 miles W. of Taunton. The village, which is small and irregularly built, is situated in the fertile vale of Taunton Dean, on the Western canal, and near the line of the Exeter railway. The river Tone, which flows through the parish, formerly inundated the low-lying lands, but was widened and improved in 1815. The inhabitants are principally engaged in agriculture. The soil consists of a rich loam, with a subsoil of marl. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £200, and the vicarial for £184 10s. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £172. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a small structure with a square tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains some monuments to the Sanford family. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a free school for both sexes, educating above sixty children. It was erected by, and is entirely supported at the expense of, E. A. Sanford, Esq. Nynehead Court, the principal residence, is situated in a well-wooded park, watered by the river Tone, which here forms a cascade. E. A. Sanford, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

NYTIMBER, a tythg. in the par. of Pagham, hund. of Aldwick, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 4 miles S. of Chichester.

O.

OA, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of Kildalton, island of Islay, coast of Scotland, 20 miles W. of Tarbet. It is situated under Oa Point and Dun-Aidh Castle. This par. is in the presb. of Islay, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £120. The church is of modern erection.

OADBY, a par. in the hund. of Guthlaxton, co. Leicester, 3½ miles S.E. of Leicester, its post town, and 3 N.E. of the Wigston railway station. The village, which is large, is situated on the road from Leicester to Market Harborough. It chiefly consists of one long well-built street. A large portion of the inhabitants are employed in the making of hose and frame-work knitting. Part of the tithes were commuted for an annual money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1759, and the glebe comprises 18 acres. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £210. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient edifice, supposed to have been erected about the year 1100, with a spired tower containing four bells. The interior of the church contains a piscina, and several tombs of great antiquity. The church was thoroughly restored and re-roofed in 1853. The parochial charities produce about £44 per annum, arising from an allotment of 15 acres, appropriated under an Enclosure Act for the reduction of the poor's rates. There are National and infant schools. The Primitive Methodists, Particular Baptists, Calvinists, and Arminians, have each a place of worship. G. A. L. Keck, Esq., is lord of the manor.

OAGHILL, a vil. in the par. of Arranmore and island of Inishmore, bar. of Arran, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 1½ mile W.N.W. of Kilronan. In the village is a Roman Catholic chapel. It is also the site of a lighthouse and signal tower.

OAKAMOOR. See OAKMOOR, co. Stafford.

OAKE, or OAK, a par. in the hund. of Taunton, co. Somerset, 6 miles W. of Taunton, its post town, and 4½ N.W. of the Wellington railway station. The village, which is small and straggling, is situated on the river Tone, near the line of the Exeter railway. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is a strong loam, and in some parts stony. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £190. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £200. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is a small structure with a tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce £40 per annum. There is a school for children of both sexes. Philip Broadmead, Esq., is lord of the manor.

OAKELEY. See OAKLEY, co. Salop.

OAKEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Codsall, S. div. of Seisdon hund., co. Stafford, 4½ miles N.W. of Wolverhampton.

OAKENGATES, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Prior's Lee and par. of Shiffnal, hund. of Brimstree, co. Salop, 3 miles N.W. of Shiffnal, and 17 E. by S. of Shrewsbury. It is a station on the Chester, Shrewsbury, and Wolverhampton section of the Great Western railway, and also on the Coalport branch of the London and North-Western. It is situated near the Welsh border, in a country abounding in coal and iron ore. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £52, in the patron. of the bishop.

OAKENSHAW, a hmlt. in the par. of Birstall, wap. of Morley, West Riding co. York, 3½ miles S. by E. of Bradford. It is a station on the Midland railway.

OAKFIELD, a vil. in the par. of Beath, co. Fife, Scotland, 3 miles N.E. of Dunfermline. It is also the name of several private seats in England and Wales.

OAKFORD, a par. in the hund. of Witheridge, co. Devon, 8 miles N.W. of Tiverton, its post town, and 3 S.W. of Bampton. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road from Bampton to South-Molton, near the Eske, a branch of the river Ex. It is chiefly agricultural. The soil is of a clayey nature, with a subsoil of rock. Stone for building is quarried. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £425, and the glebe consists of 90 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £384. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a square embattled and pinnacled tower, containing a peal of eight bells. The church was rebuilt in 1839. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum.

OAKHAM, a soke in the co. of Rutland, contains the pars. of Belton, Braunston, Brooke, Clipsham, Egleton, Langham, Oakham, and Wardley, comprising an area of 18,140 acres. It was presented by Edward IV. to his favourite Gaveston.

OAKHAM, or OKEHAM, a par., market and county town, in the hund. of the same name, co. Rutland, 6 miles N. of Uppingham, 12 E. by S. of Melton-Mowbray, and 96 N. by W. of London by road, or 102 by railway. It is a station on the Syston and Peterborough section of the Midland railway. This place, which is said to derive its name from the numerous oak-trees, which formerly grew in the vicinity, is situated in the vale of Catmose, called by the Britons Coed-maes, or, "the woody plain," near the sources of the river Gwash, or Wash. The par. contains, besides the town of Oakham, the capital of the county, the manors and tnshps. of Oakham, Deanshold, of which the Dean and Chapter of Westminster are lords, Oakham Lordshold, which anciently went with the castle, Baileythorpe and Gunthorpe, and the Forest of Leighfield. It formed part of the dower of Editha, queen of Edward the Confessor, and, at the time of the Domesday Survey, was held by the Mauleverers under the crown. It subsequently passed to Walkelin de Ferrars, who built the castle, and was given by Richard II. to Edward, son of the Duke of York, with the title of Earl of Rutland. After having been successively possessed by the noble families of Bohun, De Vere, and Stafford, it became the baronial seat of Thomas Lord Cromwell in the reign of Henry VIII., and subsequently of the Villiers and Finches. The only portion of the ancient castle still used is the hall in which the assizes and quarter sessions are held, and the public business of the town and county is transacted; the other parts are in ruins, but a grand-jury room has recently been added. Upon the castle-gate and over the judges' seat are nailed a number of horse-shoes, presented by the several peers of the realm on their first visit to the town in accordance with an immemorial custom. The oldest shoe with a date is of the time of Elizabeth, and is very large and curiously worked and gilt. There is one of bronze and or-molu of George IV. when prince regent, one of the late Duke of York, and one of the Princess Victoria, before her accession to the throne.—The older parts of the town, which contains about 3,000 inhabitants, consist of timbered houses with thatched and sloping roofs, but the greater part has been rebuilt, and within the last few years great alterations have taken place. The streets are remarkably clean, well lighted with gas, and have been recently paved and flagged at an expense of £1,600. The principal public buildings are the county gaol and house of correction, the market cross, Agricultural Hall in High-street, where the Rutland Agricultural Society hold their meetings, and where are the association rooms and library; the dispensary, situated in High-street, built in 1832, and the union poorhouse, besides two commercial banks and two breweries, one of which, known as the patent steam brewery of Messrs. Crowson, is considered to be unequalled in the county. The inhabitants are amply supplied with water, and the air is considered remarkably salubrious. It anciently enjoyed the staple of wool, and some years since a silk manufactory was established for weaving silk-shag for covering hats; but no manufactures are now carried on except the knitting of fancy hosiery, in which part of the female population are engaged. A good trade is done in coal, corn, malt, and agricultural produce, which are conveyed in barges on the Melton-Mowbray canal. It is under the jurisdiction of the county magistrates, who hold petty sessions monthly at Empingham. The assizes and quarter sessions for the county are held in the town, as also a new county court. It is the place of election, and a polling-place for the return of members of parliament for the county. Courts leet are held annually by the lord of the castle for the manor of Lordshold, and triennially by the Dean of Westminster for the Deanshold, at which parochial and other officers are elected. The county militia have their headquarters here.—The tithes, with some slight exceptions, were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act, obtained in 1820. The appropriation belongs to the Dean and Chapter of Westminster. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. with the curs. of Brooke, Egleton, and Langham annexed, £1,000. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a spacious Gothic structure, chiefly of the reign of Henry VI. It has a tower, surmounted by a lofty spire, containing a peal of six bells, and had annually a chantry and three guilds. It contains several monuments of the Flowers family, and the clinical library of Lady Harrington, and near it is a Lady well, once sacred to the Virgin. There are chapels-of-ease at Brooke, Egleton and Langham. The Independents, Wesleyan, and Calvinistic Methodists, Particular Baptists, and Society of Friends have places of worship, but the last-named meeting-house is only occasionally used, the number of Friends in the county having diminished of late years. The free grammar school was founded about 1584 by the Rev. Robert Johnson, archdeacon of Leicester, who also established a similar school at Uppingham. These schools, which have hospitals annexed to them, were incorporated, and further endowed by Queen Elizabeth, with certain alienated ecclesiastical property producing an income of about £3,000 per annum, besides 38 exhibitions, ranging in value from £16 to £40, at various colleges. At Oxford and Cambridge the number of pensioners is now 100. There are also National and Sunday schools. The hospital of SS. John and Anne, originally instituted in the reign of Richard II. by Walter Dalby, was reformed in the reign of Elizabeth, and has now an income from endowment of £200, applied to the relief of 20 aged men on the foundation, who reside at their own homes, the buildings of the hospital, with the exception of the chapel and warden's house, having fallen to decay.—Oakham Poor-law Union comprises Cold Overton and Knossington in Leicestershire, and 27 pars. or tnshps. in Rutland. It is the head of superintendent registry and new County Court districts. Oakham was the birth place of Geoffrey Hudson, the dwarf, who was only 18 inches high at the age of seven years, when he was served up in a pie at Burley before Charles I., and subsequently grew to be 3 feet 9 inches.—Monday and Saturday are market days, the former chiefly for corn and cattle, and the latter for butchers' meat, butter, and provisions. The three principal fairs are held on the 15th March, 6th May, and 9th September, under the original charters, and other fairs, chiefly for cattle, on some Monday in every month, excepting January, so arranged as not to interfere with Stamford fairs.

OAKHAM DEANSHOLD AND LORDSHOLD, two manors in the par. and soke of Oakham, co. Rutland.

OAKHAMPTON. See OKEHAMPTON, cos. Devon and Somerset.

OAKHANGER, a hmlt. in the par. of Selborne, co. Hants, 4 miles S.E. of Alton.

OAKHANGER, a hmlt. in the hund. of Kintbury Eagle, co. Berks, 3 miles N.E. of Hungerford, and 21 W. by S. of Reading. It is situated near the river Kennet, and the branch line of the Great Western railway.

OAKHILL, a tythg. in the par. of Froxfield, co. Wilts, 2 miles W. of Hungerford.

OAKHILL, a vil., partly in the par. of Ashwick, hund. of Kilmersdon, and partly in that of Shepton-Mallet, hund. of Whitestone, co. Somerset, 3 miles N. by E. of Shepton-Mallet. There is an extensive brewery.

OAKINGHAM. See WOKINGHAM, co. Berks.

OAKINGTON, a par. in the hunds. of Northstow and Chesterton, co. Cambridge, 6 miles N.W. of Cambridge, its post town, and 8 from St. Ives. It is a station on the Cambridge and Wisbeach section of the Great Eastern railway. The par. contains the hmlt. of Westwick. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. The soil consists of a stiff loam, and the subsoil of clay. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £199, in the patron. of Queen's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a large stone structure, restored in 1850. The parochial charities produce about £50 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school. The Baptists have a place of worship.

OAKLANDS, the name of several private seats in England and Ireland.

OAKLEY, a par. in the hund. of Stodden, co. Bedford, 4 miles N.W. of Bedford, its post town, and 7 N.E. of Newport-Pagnell. It is a station on the Midland railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the navigable river Ouse, which is here crossed by an old stone bridge of five arches. Disastrous floods occurred here in November, 1823, and in November, 1852, doing serious damage for miles around. The fishing in the river is preserved by the Duke of Bedford's order. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. It is a meet for the Oakley hounds. The surface is boldly undulating, and about half a mile from the village is Oakley Hill, commanding an extensive prospect. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1803. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Bromham, in the dioc. of Ely. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing five bells. The interior of the church has recently been restored. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. There is a free school for both sexes, built at the expense of the Duke of Bedford. The Dissenters have two places of worship. Oakley House occupies a central position in the parish, and is the seat of the Duke of Bedford who is lord of the manor.

OAKLEY, a par. in the hund. of Ashendon, co. Bucks, 6 miles N.W. of Thame, its post town, and 1½ mile S.W. of Brill. The village, which is small, is situated on the borders of Oxfordshire. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The par. includes the chplry. of Addingrave, but the chapel-of-ease has gone to decay. The tithes were commuted for land and a corn-rent under an Enclosure Act in 1819. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £230. The church, dedicated to St. Matthew, is an ancient structure, with a low tower in connection with a stair turret at the S.E. angle, which rises above the tower. The church contains tombs of Admiral Tyrrel and James Tyrrel, author of a "History of England." The parochial charities produce about £100 per annum, £80 of which belongs to the poor in pasture land. Mrs. Ricketts is lady of the manor.

OAKLEY, or OAKLEY MAGNA, a par. in the hund. of Hartismere, co. Suffolk, 3 miles S.E. of Eye, 2 S.E. of Scole, its post town, and 2½ N.W. of Diss railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated in a valley, and is wholly agricultural. It is bounded on the N. by the river Waveney, which separates it from the county of Norfolk. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Brome, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has a square tower and south porch. It is situated about a quarter of a mile from the village. The register dates from 1538. The charities produce about £22 per annum, realised from town lands, and which is expended on the church. Oakley House is the principal residence. Sir E. C. Kerrison, Bart., is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

OAKLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Croxall, N. div. of the hund. of Offlow, co. Stafford, 4 miles N. by W. of Tamworth. It is a station on the Birmingham and Derby section of the Midland railway.

OAKLEY, or OAKELEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Bishop's Castle, co. Salop, 1 mile N.E. of Bishop's Castle, and 17 miles S.W. of Shrewsbury. It is situated near the river Clun, and is joined with Lee to form a township.

OAKLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Mucclestone, N. div. of the hund. of Pirehill, co. Stafford, 1½ mile from Mucclestone, and 3 miles N. by E. of Drayton-in-Hales.

OAKLEY, a tythg. in the par. of Cirencester, hund. of Crowthorne, co. Gloucester, 2 miles from Cirencester, and 16 S.E. of Gloucester. It is situated on the river Churn, or Corin, near the Thames and Severn canal. Here is the seat of Earl Bathurst, built after the model of Petworth, and containing a portrait gallery, with paintings by Lely and Kneller. In the immediate vicinity is the old market cross and the Cirencester Agricultural College.

OAKLEY, a post town in the par. of Carnock, co. Fife, Scotland, 4 miles W. of Dunfermline. It has a station on the Stirling and Dunfermline railway. The village is entirely of recent origin, and is the seat of a prosperous iron trade. The houses are chiefly stone buildings of one story.

OAKLEY, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Cranborne, co. Dorset, 2 miles from Cranborne. It is situated in Cranborne Chase, near the line of the London and South-Western railway.

OAKLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Cranford Magna, co. Dorset, 1 mile S.E. of Wimborne-Minster. It is situated on the river Stour.

OAKLEY-CHURCH. See CHURCH-OAKLEY, co. Hants.

OAKLEY, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Tendring, co. Essex, 6 miles S. of Ipswich, and 5 S.E. of Manningtree. It is situated near Harnford Creek, an inlet of the North Sea opposite Pewit Island. A desperate conflict took place here between Ethelwolf and the Danes. Near the village are the remains of an ancient castle, including the keep and traces of a moat. The land is fertile and wholly arable. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £800, in the patron. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient edifice, with a steeple recently rebuilt. There are places of worship for Baptists and Wesleyans. The charities consist of Drake's almshouses. A fair is held on the 25th of April.

OAKLEY, GREAT, a par. in the par. and hund. of Corby, co. Northampton, 4 miles N. of Kettering. It anciently formed part of Rockingham Forest. The village, which is inconsiderable, is situated on the road from Kettering to Rockingham, near a branch of the river Nen. It is a meet for the Warwick hounds. The principal residence is Oakley House, the seat of Sir W. de Capell Brooke, Bart. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £50. The church is dedicated to St. Michael, and has a tower built about 1600 with materials supposed to have been brought from Pipewell Abbey, about 3 miles distant. There is a chapel for Dissenters.

OAKLEY, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Tendring, co. Essex, 1 mile E. of Great Oakley, and 4 miles S.W. of Harwich. The village, which is small and wholly agricultural, is situated near the sea-shore. The greater part of the land is arable and the remainder meadow. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £415. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £500. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small ancient edifice with a tower of stone. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. There is a National school. Some ancient gold coins were found here in 1802.

OAKLEY, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Corby, co. Northampton, 2 miles E. of Great Oakley, and 5 N. by E. of Kettering. The village, which is small and wholly agricultural, is situated in a vale on the road from Kettering to Stamford. The land is divided between arable and pasture, with about 119 acres of woodland. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act, and the glebe comprises 106 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £81. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a spacious structure, with a square embattled tower of great antiquity. There are two schools partly supported by subscription.

OAKLEY, NORTH, a tythg. in the par. of Kingsclere, hund. of Chutely, co. Hants, 3 miles N.W. of Church Oakley, and 6 W. of Basingstoke.

OAKLEY PARK, a seat of Earl Powis, in the hund. of Muselow, co. Salop. It is situated on the river Teme, and contains some paintings.

OAKLEY PARVA, a hmlt. in the par. of Great Oakley, hund. of Hartismere, co. Suffolk, 3 miles S.E. of Scole. It was anciently a distinct parish, but was united with Oakley in 1449. The church has long been in ruins.

OAKMERE, a tnshp. in the par. of Delamere, first div. of the hund. of Eddisbury, co. Chester, 4½ miles N.E. of Tarporley, and 6 S.W. of Northwich. Petty sessions are held monthly at the Vale Royal Abbey Arms Inn. The chief portion of the township belongs to the crown.

OAKMOOR, or OAKAMOOR, a chplry. in the par. of Cheadle, S. div. of the hund. of Totmonslow, co. Stafford, 3 miles N.E. of Cheadle, and 13 N. by E. of Stafford. It is a station on the North Staffordshire railway. It is situated in a hollow of the moorlands near the river Chenet, or Tean, and on the Uttoxeter canal. The inhabitants are engaged in the neighbouring collieries and brass works. The cotton manufacture is also carried on. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £60, in the patron. of the Rector of Cheadle. The church is a small but commodious edifice.

OAKOVER, a par. in the N. div. of the hund. of Totmonslow, co. Stafford, 2 miles W. by N. of Ashborne. This parish, which is very small and wholly agricultural, is situated on the river Dove. It is a meet for Mr. Yates's harriers. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £20. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a small ancient structure, completely overgrown with ivy, eglantine, and roses. It contains a triple canopied brass, bearing date 1520, to one of the Oakovers. The charities consist of a share with Mappleton. There is a square entrenchment, supposed to be Roman, and several tumuli. Oakover House, situated in a well-wooded park, was rebuilt on the site of the former mansion, and has for many generations been the seat of the Oakover family. It contains a picture-gallery, where is preserved the "Holy Family," by Raphael, which was hidden under the floor during the parliamentary war in the reign of Charles I.; the "Magi at the Tomb," by C. Dolci; the "Unjust Steward," by Rubens, and other paintings by Titian, Vandervelde, and others.

OAKPORT, a lough in co. Roscommon, Ireland, 2 miles E. of Boyle. It is situated between lough Key and the river Shannon.

OAKRIDGE, a tythg. in the par. of Bisley, co. Gloucester, 3 miles N.E. of Minchinhampton. It is situated near the Thames and Severn canal and the line of the Cheltenham railway. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £64, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a commodious edifice.

OAKS, a vil. in the ext. par. district of Charley, hund. of West Goscote, co. Leicester, 5 miles S.W. of Loughborough. It is situated on the wolds in Charnwood Forest, and is a bare hilly tract, disafforested shortly after the Conquest. In the vicinity is Bardon Hill. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £100, in the patron. of the lords of the manors. The church is a modern structure.

OAKS. See COPT-OAKS, co. Leicester.

OAKS, a tnshp. in the par. and hund. of Pontesbury, co. Salop, 6 miles S.W. of Shrewsbury. It is situated on a branch of the Severn. In the vicinity are lead mines.

OAKS, a hmlt. in the par. of Almondbury, West Riding co. York, 1 mile S.E. of Huddersfield.

OAKS, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Lindley, par. of Huddersfield, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.W. of Huddersfield.

OAKSEY, a par. in the hund. of Malmesbury, co. Wilts, 6 miles S.W. of Cirencester, its post town, 5 N.E. of Malmesbury, and 2 S. of the Tetbury Junction railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the line of the Cheltenham railway, and is wholly agricultural. The par. includes Flintham and Wick. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £500. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has an embattled tower containing six bells. The church has some stained windows, and an ancient square font. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is a National school. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship. Mrs. Salisbury, of Salisbury, is lady of the manor.

OAKSHADE, a hmlt. in the par. of Stoke d'Abernon, second div. of Elmbridge hund., co. Surrey, 1½ mile N.E. of Stoke d'Abernon, and 3 miles N. by W. of Leatherhead. A National school for both sexes was founded here in 1820 by H.R.H. the late Duchess of Kent.

OAKSHOT, a hmlt. in the par. of Petersfield, lower div. of the hund. of Finch Dean, co. Hants, 3 miles N.W. of Petersfield. It is situated in the vale of the Rother, near the high road to Portsmouth.

OAKS, THE, a seat of the Earl of Derby, on Banstead Downs, co. Surrey, 4 miles E. of Epsom. It was built by the Hunters' Club and General Burgoyne, who here composed the poem entitled the "Maid of the Oaks." From this seat the Epsom Races, which take place on the Friday before Whit Sunday, are called the Oaks. There are also seats of this name in the counties of Derby and Leicester.

OAKS, THE, a railway station on the western section of the Lancashire and Yorkshire line. It is the first station after leaving Bolton.

OAKTHORPE, a tnshp. and hmlt. in the pars. of Stretton-en-le-Field, Measham, and Church-Gresley, hund. of Repton, co. Derby, 3 miles S.W. of Ashby-de-la-Zouch, its post town, and 10 N. of Atherstone. The village, which is small, is situated on the canal. There is a coal mine; also a steam mill, which gives employment to part of the inhabitants. The Primitive Methodists and the Wesleyans have each a place of worship. There is a National school.

OAKWOOD, a demesne in the incorporation and rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 2 miles W. by N. of Chichester. It belongs to the Baring family.

OAKWOOD, a chplry. in the par. and first div. of the hund. of Wotton, co. Surrey, 6 miles S.W. of Dorking, its post town. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. It is situated on a branch of the river Wey, near Wotton Park, where John Evelyn, the author of "Sylvia," was born in 1620. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £322. The church, dedicated to St. John, contains a brass of one of the Delahale family, bearing date 1431.

OAKWOOD TOWER, a border castle in the co. of Selkirk, Scotland, 4 miles S.W. of Selkirk. It is situated on the Ettrick water, and belongs to the Scotts of Harden. It is celebrated in Scottish story as the abode of the hero in the Yarrow legend, and of Michael Scott, the wizard.

OAKWORTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Keighley, wap. of East Staincliff, West Riding co. York, 3 miles from Keighley, and 33 W. by S. of York. It is situated in a vale under Blackstone Edge, near the river Aire. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in the cotton and worsted mills. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc of Ripon, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church is a modern edifice. The Wesleyans have a chapel. There are National and other schools.

OALA, a hmlt. in the par. of Coonagh, co. Limerick, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Pallas Grean.

OARE, or OURE, a chplry. in the par. of Chieveley, hund. of Faircross, co. Berks, 5 miles N.E. of Newbury, and 5 from Ilsley. The village is small and chiefly agricultural. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Chieveley, in the dioc. of Oxford. The church is a small edifice, without a tower, not capable of containing more than 70 persons. The Society of Friends have a burial-ground.

OARE, or ORE, a par. in the hund. of Faversham, lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 2 miles N.W. of Faversham, its railway station and post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Swale, over which is a ferry to the Isle of Harty. It is a coastguard station, with a staff of 25 men. The oyster beds are very productive. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £219. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £103, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a small ancient structure, built of flint and stone, with a wooden tower. The register dates from 1714. There is a parochial school, also a Sunday-school. Gerard Gosselin, Esq., is lord of the manor.

OARE, a par. in the hund. of Carhampton, co. Somerset, 13 miles W. of Minehead, its post town, and 7 E. of Lynton. The village, which is very small, is situated near the river East Lynn, on the road from Porlock to Lynton. It is wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £80, and the glebe consists of 11 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £103. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure, with a square tower containing one bell. The register dates from 1674. Nicholas Snow, Esq., is lord of the manor. A revel is held on the Sunday nearest old St. James's Day.

OARE, a tythg. and chplry. in the par. of Wilcot, hund. of Swanborough, co. Wilts, 2 miles N.W. of Pewsey, its post town, and 4 S.W. of Marlborough. The tything is situated on the Kennet and Avon canal. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Wilcot, in the dioc. of Sarum. The church is a small ancient structure.

OATH, a tythg. in the par. of Aller, co. Somerset, 2 miles N.W. of Langport.

OATHILL, a tythg. in the par. of Wayford, hund. of Crewkerne, co. Somerset, 3 miles S.W. of Crewkerne.

OATHLAW, a par. in the co. of Forfar, Scotland. It comprises the hmlt. of Finhaven. It extends in length 6 miles from E. to W., with an extreme breadth of 3 miles. It is bounded by the pars. of Tannadier, Aberlemno, Rescobie, and Kirriemuir. The surface is in general flat, rising towards the S., where, at Finhaven Hill, it attains an elevation of 1,500 feet above the level of the adjacent country. The best part of the land is fertile and well cultivated. The prevailing rocks are granite and conglomerate. The soil is partly clay and partly muir, and the climate is moist. The village of Oathlaw is about 3½ miles N. of Forfar. It is situated at the confluence of the rivers Lemno and South Esk. On the N. bank of the former river, at Battledyke's Farm, were formerly traces of a Roman camp of 80 acres, supposed to be the station Ad Æsicam, now almost obliterated by the plough. There are also ruins of Finhaven Castle, formerly the seat of the Lindseys, earls of Crawford. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in agriculture, and others in the stone quarries. This par. is in the presb. of Forfar, and synod of Angus and Mearns. The minister has a stipend of £158. The parish church has a tower, much dilapidated. There is a parochial school, also a parochial library. Oathlaw was formerly called Findhaven, and once formed part of the great forest of Claton, which extended from the present village of Finhaven to Kerrie Muir.

OATLANDS PARK, a demesne in the second div of the hund. of Godley, co. Surrey, 3 miles S.E. of Chertsey, and 12 N. by E. of Guildford. It is situated on the bank of the Thames, near the river Wey navigation. Henry VIII. made it his favourite seat; and it continued to be a royal residence for about a century, being frequently visited by Elizabeth, Queen Anne of Denmark, and Henrietta Maria, wife of Charles I., whose first baby, Prince Henry, was born here, and in consequence was frequently styled Henry of Oatlands. It subsequently became the property of the Herbert family, and was much improved by the celebrated Duke of Newcastle, who constructed the grotto at a cost of £40,000. Having been much damaged by fire in 1793, the house was rebuilt by the Duke of York, and was recently purchased by B. Hughes, Esq. The park and grounds have been much curtailed, and are now let in building plots.

OAT-SHEAF, a hmlt. in the par. of Heckington, co. Lincoln, 4 miles E. of Sleaford.

OAZE, a sandbank at the Thames' mouth, about 5 miles E. of the Nore light, with only 1½ fathom water.

OBAN, a seaport and parliamentary borough, forming a quoad sacra par., in the pars. of Kilmuir and Kilbride, district of Lorn, co. Argyle, Scotland, 35 miles N.W. of Inverary, and 126 W. by N. of Edinburgh. It is situated on the western coast of Argyleshire, in the Sound of Mull, and at the head of a bay protected from the fury of the Atlantic Ocean by the small island of Kerrera; and has anchorage in from 12 to 14 fathoms water. It is a small town of about 2,000 inhabitants, but promises to become a place of considerable trade as a mart for the western Highlands and the middle district of the Western Isles. The streets are regular, but the houses in general small. The only public buildings are the custom-house and post-office, but there are two convenient piers. The port is chiefly frequented by fishing boats and coasting vessels (the latter importing coals, and exporting grain and whisky), and by several steamers in the summer, conveying tourists from this place to Staffa, Iona, and the Caledonian canal. As a parliamentary borough it unites with Ayr, Campbeltown, Inverary, and Irvine, in returning one member to parliament. The par. is in the presb. of Lorn, and synod of Argyle. There are a church, Free and United Presbyterian churches, Independent and Episcopalian chapels. There are parochial and other schools. About 2 miles to the southward is the ferry to the island of Kerrera, and from thence 8 miles to Achnacraig, in the Isle of Mull. In the vicinity are the ruins of Dunolly Castle, the ancient seat of the Macdougalls of Lorn.

OBARRAS, or HOPEBARRAS, a tnshp. in the par. of Clun, hund. of Purslow, co. Salop, 7 miles S. of Bishop's-Castle.

OBLEIGH. See UBLEY, co. Somerset.

OBLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Clunbury, hund. of Purslow, co. Salop, 8 miles S. of Bishop's-Castle.

OBORNE, a par. in the hund. of Sherborne, co. Dorset, 1½ mile N.E. of Sherborne, its post town, and about the same distance W. of Milborne Port. The parish, which is of small extent and wholly agricultural, is situated on the road from London to Sherborne. On the north-western border is Sherborne Park, the seat of Earl Digby. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £165, and the glebe comprises 7 acres. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £172. The church is dedicated to St. Cuthbert. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. The manor belongs to Caius College, Cambridge.

O'BRENNAN, a par. in the bar. of Trughanackmy, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles N.N.E. of Tralee. Ardfert is its post town. The surface is mountainous, lying principally among the Stacks range. There is a considerable proportion of bog. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. £51, in the patron. of the bishop. The nearest place of worship is at Tralee. O'Brennan House is the chief residence.

O'BRIENSBRIDGE, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Lower Tulla, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles N.E. of Limerick. It is 6 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 3 miles. It includes the vil. of Bridgetown. The surface, which is hilly, comprises a large proportion of waste land. It extends along the bank of the Shannon river, which is here crossed by a bridge of fourteen arches founded by O'Brien. The island of Innislosky is within the limits of this parish. The interior is traversed by the road from Killaloe to Limerick. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Killaloe, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church was a gift from the late Board of First Fruits in 1820. There are two Roman Catholic chapels. Cloneboy is the principal seat. There is a medicinal spring at Montpelier. Fairs are held on the 25th July and 7th November.

OBTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Thurlby, wap. of Ness, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 1 mile S.W. of Thurlby, and 2 miles S. of Bourne.

OBY, a par. in the hund. of West Flegg, co. Norfolk, 11 miles N.E. of Norwich, and 4 N. by E. of Acle, its post town. The par. which is of small extent, is situated on the river Bure, and is wholly agricultural. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The living is a rect.* annexed to that of Ashby, in the dioc. of Norwich. The inhabitants attend the church of Ashby, but the glebe-house is situated in this parish.

O'CALLAGHAN'S MILLS, two hmlts. distinguished as Lower and Upper, in the bar. of Lower Tulla, co. Clare, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Tulla.

OCCANEY, an ext. par. place in the upper div. of Claro wap., West Riding co. York, 3 miles N. of Knaresborough. It is in conjunction with Walkingham Hill.

OCCLESTONE, a tnshp. in the par. of Middlewich, hund. of Northwich, co. Chester, 1¾ mile S. of Middlewich, its post town. It is situated at a short distance from the Grand Junction canal and railway. The village, which is small and irregularly built, is situated on the river Wenlock, and is wholly agricultural. The manor house is now converted into a farmhouse. E. Vernon, Esq., is lord of the manor.

OCCOLD, a par. in the hund. of Hartismere, co. Suffolk, 2½ miles S. by E. of Eye, its post town, and 5½ S.E. of the Mellis railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Benningham Green, and is within the parliamentary borough of Eye. The soil is extremely fertile. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £405, and the glebe comprises 43 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £362. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a square embattled tower containing a clock. The interior of the church contains a brass to W. Corbald. It underwent extensive alterations in 1854. The register dates from 1681. The parochial charities produce about £120 per annum, of which £62 is realised by the town estates. There is a National school. The Baptists have a place of worship. The Rev. Charles Chapman is lord of the manor.

OCHILLS, a range of hills extending between Dunblane and the Frith of Tay, co. Perth, Scotland. They attain an elevation of 2,300 feet at Bencleugh, or the Hill of Alva, which is covered with snow, except two months in the year, and at Craigleith falcons are occasionally met with. The subsoil consists chiefly of slaty rock and greenstone, abounding with coal, copper, lead, silver, cobalt, arsenic, and various minerals, which are partially worked. The slopes of the hills afford good pasture, and some of the more fertile spots are under cultivation.

OCHILTREE, a par. in the district of Kyle, co. Ayr, Scotland. It comprises the vil. of the same name. It extends in length about 8 miles from N. to S., with an extreme breadth of 5 miles. It is bounded by the pars. of Stair, Auchinleck, Old Cumnock, New Cumnock, Dalmellington, and Coylton. The surface is moderately even, the greatest altitude being to the S., which rises 1,000 feet in some parts. It is divided betwixt arable, pasture, and moss. The soil is chiefly a clayey loam upon a subsoil of stiff clay. Ironstone, marl, freestone, and coal exist. The parish is traversed by the road from Cumnock to Ayr; and is within easy access of the Auchinleck and Cumnock stations of the Glasgow and South-Western railway. The village of Ochiltree is about 5 miles W. of New Cumnock, 4 W. by N. of Old Cumnock, and 11½ E. of Ayr. It is situated at the confluence of the Burnock and Lugar Waters, on the road from Cumnock to Ayr. Weaving and snuff-box making employ a considerable portion of the inhabitants. There are also extensive manufactories for shearing hooks. There are ruins of three ancient castles, the property of the Earl of Glencairn. John Knox, the Scottish reformer, was a native of this village. This par. is in the presb. of Ayr, and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The minister has a stipend of £261. The parish church was rebuilt in 1789. Beside the parish church there are a Free church and a parochial school. Ochiltree gave title of baron to the Stewarts of Avondale, now dormant. Fairs are held on the second Wednesday in May and on the first Tuesday in November.

OCHTERTYRE, a demesne in the co. of Perth, Scotland, 3 miles N.E. of Comrie. It is situated in the vale of Glen Turret, celebrated by Burns, and belongs to Murray, Bart. There is also another seat of this name in the same county on the river Teith, and about 3 miles N.W. of Stirling.

OCK, a hund. in the co. of Berks, contains the pars. of Appleton, Drayton, Fyfield, Kingston Bagpuize, Marcham, Milton, Steventon, Sutton-Courtney, Tubney, Little Wittenham, Long Wittenham, and parts of Drenchworth, West Hanney, Longworth, and Stanford-in-the-Vale, comprising an area of 28,250 acres.

OCK, a small river in the co. of Berks, rises in the White Horse range of hills, near Kingston Lisle, and joins the Isis at Abingdon.

OCKBROOK, a par. in the hund. of Morleston, co. Derby, 5½ miles E. by S. of Derby, and 1 mile N. of the Borrowash railway station. The village, which is large, is situated near the canal on the road from Nottingham to Derby. The rivers Derwent and Trent, and the Midland Counties railway, run through the parish. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the cotton mills on the banks of the Derwent, and in the manufacture of bobbin and lace thread. The tithes were commuted for an allotment of land under an Enclosure Act in 1772. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £154. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a low-spired tower containing three bells. The E. window is of stained glass. The church was restored and enlarged in 1835. The parochial charities produce about £21 per annum. There are National and infant schools for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. There are two boarding-schools, one for boys and the other for girls, and in the centre a large chapel. The Moravians have an establishment here, founded in 1750. The principal buildings stand in a regular line, and consist of a single sisters' house, in which upwards of thirty females are engaged in fine needlework, also a smaller house for about the same number of single men. Ockbrook House is the principal residence. The neighbourhood is studded with genteel residences.

OCKENDON, NORTH, or OCKENDON OF THE SEVEN FOUNTAINS, a par. in the hund. of Chafford, co. Essex, 6½ miles S.W. of Romford, its post town, and 5 N. of Grays railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. It formerly belonged to King Harold II. The parish abounds in springs, hence the appendix to its present name. The land is chiefly arable, with a small proportion of pasture and woodland. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £490, and the glebe comprises 30 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £545. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, is an ancient structure, partly covered with ivy, with a stone and flint tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains three brasses of W. Poyntz and two stained-glass windows of considerable antiquity. The church was thoroughly restored in 1858 at the expense of Richard Benyon, Esq., of Englefield, Berks. The pulpit is of oak, richly carved, and in the N. chancel are several tombs. There is a National school. North Ockendon is a meet for the South Essex hounds. In the churchyard is a spring of water.

OCKENDON, SOUTH, or OCKENDON ROKELY, a par. in the hund. of Chafford, co. Essex, 4 miles N. of Grays railway station, its post town, and 8 S. of Romford. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, contains some well-built houses. There are several mounds of an ancient date. About two-thirds of the land are arable, the remainder pasture and woodland. In a building called Furnace House iron was formerly smelted. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £750. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is of great antiquity, and has a round embattled tower, formerly surmounted by a wooden spire. The interior of the church contains a canopied brass of Sir I. Bruyn, bearing date 1480, also two others, and a richly-moulded doorway. The register dates from 1538. There is a British school. The Wesleyans and Independents have each a place of worship. Some Saxon silver coins have been found, and vestiges of a Roman road may be traced.

OCKER-HILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Wednesbury, hund. of South Offlow, co. Stafford, 8 miles N.W. of Birmingham. It is a station on the Wolverhampton and Walsall section of the London and North-Western railway. It is situated in the valley of the river Teme, near the Birmingham canal. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately.

OCKHAM, a par. in the second div. of Woking hund., co. Surrey, 4¼ miles from Weybridge, 7 N.E. of Guildford, and 1 mile E. of Ripley, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Wey, and is wholly agricultural. It is mentioned in Domesday Book as having belonged to Richard de Tonbridge, and was purchased of the Sutton family in 1711 by the Lord High Chancellor, Sir Peter King, from whom it has descended to the Earl of Lovelace, of East Horsby Park, and who takes from this place the inferior title of viscount. The land is partly in common. Charcoal is burnt in the neighbourhood. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £292, and the glebe comprises 139 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £248. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a chapel attached, and a low embattled tower at the W. end containing five bells. It has a singular E. window, containing seven painted arches. There are brasses of a priest, bearing date 1360, and several monuments to the ancestors of the Earl of Lovelace. The church was erected about 1290, and stands in Ockham Park. The register dates from 1567. There are industrial, training, and infant schools, built by the late Earl of Lovelace, at a great expense, in the Swiss style. William of Ockham, the invincible doctor, was born in this parish.

OCKLEY, or STONE STREET, a par. in the first div. of Wotton hund., co. Surrey, 7 miles S. by W. of Dorking, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Roman and modern road to Arundel, and is wholly agricultural. On Holmbury Hill are traces of a Roman encampment. On Ockley Green the Saxons under Ethelwolf, about 851, defeated the Danes. From the summit of Leith Hill, distant about 2 miles N. of the village, a view is commanded, embracing as many as fourteen counties, including the environs of London and a sea prospect; the view is further extended by ascending the monument which stands on the hill. The S. side of the hill only is in this parish. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £539, and the glebe comprises 130 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £539, in the patron. of Clare Hall, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to St. Margaret. There is a parochial school with a small endowment. Ockley Court is the principal residence, at which is a meet for the Horsham hounds.

OCKLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Bolsover, co. Derby, 5 miles E. of Chesterfield.

OCLE-LIVERS, an ext. par. lib. in the hund. of Broxash, co. Hereford, 6 miles N.E. of Hereford. A Benedictine Priory was founded here in 1160 as a cell to the abbey of Lira, in Normandy.

OCLE-PITCHARD, a par. in the hund. of Broxash, co. Hereford, 8 miles E. of Hereford, its post town, and 5 S.E. of Bodenham railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Hereford and Bromyard turnpike road. The Hereford and Gloucester canal passes by the village on the southern side. The soil is of a clayey nature, but fertile. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The land is partly in hop grounds. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Hereford, valued in the king's books at £4 19*s*. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient stone structure, with a square tower containing three bells. The chancel has a painted quarry glass window. The parochial charities produce about £1 15*s*. per annum. There is a free school for children of both sexes. James Leech Harrison, Esq., is lord of the manor.

OCTON, or OCTUM, AND OCTON-GRANGE, tnshps. in the par. of Thwing, wap. of Dickering, East Riding co. York, 7 miles N. of Great Driffield, and 8 W. by N. of Bridlington.

O'DAGH, or THREE-CASTLES, a par. in the bars. of Fassadinin and Cranagh, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles E.S.E. of Freshford, its post town. It is 3 miles long by 2½ broad. The surface consists of a part of the Nore valley, and has mostly a fertile soil. It is traversed by the road from Freshford to Kilkenny. The river Nore is crossed by a bridge in this parish, and here is a police station. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, val., with two others, £337, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was given by the late Board of First Fruits in 1796. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to those of Freshford and Tullaran. Here are a Sunday and six daily schools. O'Dagh House is the chief seat.

ODCOMBE, a par. in the hund. of Houndsborough, co. Somerset, 3 miles W. of Yeovil, and about the same distance from South Petherton, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The soil consists of sand and clay. About half the land is arable, the remainder pasture and meadow. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £370, and the glebe comprises 50 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £461, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, has a tower containing a clock and six bells. The register dates from 1669. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum. There is a British school for children of both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. W. Philips, Esq., is lord of the manor.

ODDER, an ancient par. in the co. of Meath, Ireland, 4 miles N. by W. of Dunshaughlin. Here was once a nunnery of the order of St. Augustine, founded by the Barnwell family.

ODDINGLEY, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, co. Worcester, 2½ miles S.E. of Droitwich, its post town, and half a mile E. of Dunhampstead railway station. The parish, which is of small extent, is intersected by the Birmingham and Gloucester railway, and by the Birmingham and Worcester canal. The village, which is small and wholly agricultural, is situated on the eastern side of the road from Birmingham to Worcester. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £181, and the glebe comprises 12 acres. The living is a rect* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £173. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient stone structure with a tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There are Sunday and day schools on the British system, chiefly supported by Mrs. Galton. J. H. Galton, Esq., is lord of the manor.

ODDINGTON, UPPER AND LOWER, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Slaughter, co. Gloucester, 1 mile S.W. of Addlestrop station on the Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton railway, and 2 miles E. of Stow-on-the-Wold. Chipping Norton is its post town. The par. contains two distinct hmlts., distinguished as Upper and Lower. The soil consists of stone brash. The tithes were commuted for land and corn-rents, under an Enclosure Act in 1786. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £344, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient stone structure, situated in a wooded spot, half a mile distant from the village. It is now unfrequented in consequence of a new one having been erected in a more central position between the villages. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is a National school for children of both sexes. There are several residences in the village. Sir J. C. Reade, Bart., is lord of the manor.

ODDINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Ploughley, co. Oxford, 8 miles N. by E. of Oxford. The parish is intersected by the river Ray. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The surface is level, and the soil a loamy clay, alternating with stone brash on a subsoil of limestone. There is a mineral spring, and limestone is quarried. The tithes were commuted for a corn-rent under an Enclosure Act in 1791. The parsonage house was built in 1821. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £407, in the patron. of Trinity College, Oxford. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to St. Andrew. There is a parochial school. At Oddington Grange are traces of a Cistercian abbey, founded by Sir Robert de Gait in the reign of Stephen. In 1821 about twenty skeletons were found buried in the limestone rock in armour. In various parts of the parish Roman coins and pottery have been found.

ODD-RODE, a tnshp. in the par. of Astbury, hund. of Northwich, co. Chester, 4 miles S.W. of Congleton. It is a station on the North Staffordshire railway. Lawton is its post town. The tnshp., which is extensive, is situated on the Trent and Mersey canal, and contains the hmlts. of Scholar-Green, Hall-Green, Kent-Green, Rode Heath, Thurlwood, Odd-Rode, and part of Mow Cop. The houses are well built, though somewhat irregular. A large portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the collieries and stone quarries. The soil is of a mixed nature, with clay predominant. From the summit of Mow-Cop Hill, which rises to the height of 1,091 feet above sea-level, an extensive view is obtained. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £200, in the patron. of the Rector of Astbury. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. There are free schools for children of both sexes, entirely supported by the Wilbraham family, at whose expense they were erected. The Wesleyans have places of worship at Hall-Green and Mow-Cop. Old Moreton Hall is an ancient timbered house, built in 1549. Odd-Rode Hall is the principal residence.

ODELL, a par. in the hund. of Willey, co. Bedford, 8 miles N.W. of Bedford, its post town, and 1 mile N.E. of Harrold. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Ouse, and is wholly agricultural. Odell was formerly a market town under the Fitzwarrens. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, valued in the king's books at £19. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient, ivy-mantled structure, with a square tower containing a clock and five bells. The interior of the church has monuments to the Alston family. Odell Castle, the seat of the Alston family, is the principal residence. It is situated on an eminence in the midst of well-wooded grounds, and includes the remains of the ancient castle. Crewe Alston, Esq., is lord of the manor. A fair is held on Whit Thursday.

ODSTONE, a hmlt. in the par. of Shackerstone, hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 1 mile N. of Shackerstone, and 4 miles N. by W. of Market-Bosworth. It is situated on a branch of the river Anker. Earl Howe is lord of the manor.

ODIHAM, a par. and market town in the hund. of the same name, co. Hants, 28 miles N.E. of Winchester, 41 W. by S. of London, and 3 from the Winchfield station on the London and South-Western railway. The parish is intersected by the line of the London and South-Western railway, and by the Basingstoke canal; this latter passes about a mile N.E. of the town, and has on its banks commodious wharves, chiefly employed for the conveyance of chalk, timber, and coals, in which a considerable trade is carried on. The parish is of large extent, comprising about 7,200 acres, of which nearly two-thirds are arable, the remainder meadow, pasture, and hop grounds, with about 300 acres of woodland, and double that extent of common. The town is situated on the side of a chalk hill, and in the immediate vicinity are chalk pits. It was anciently a free borough belonging to the bishops of Winchester, who had a palace here, and about a mile N.W. of the town, at a place called North Warnborough, stood a castle, built shortly after the Norman conquest. This fortress sustained a siege of fifteen days in the reign of John, by the army of Louis the dauphin of France, though garrisoned only by three officers and ten privates. In the 27th year of Edward I. the town, park, and hundred were granted to Queen Margaret as part of her dower. In the reigns of Edward I. and Edward II. it was summoned to send members to parliament, but made no returns. In the reign of Edward III. the Scotch king, David Bruce, who had been made prisoner at the battle of Neville's Cross in 1346, was kept prisoner in the fortress for eleven years. It was subsequently given by James I. to the Zouche family. Under the provisions of the Reform Act it is a polling-place for the county elections. Petty sessions are held fortnightly by the county magistrates, and a court-leet annually at Easter, when constables are appointed by the Bishop of Winchester as lord of the manor. The town and parish together in 1861 contained 2,833 inhabitants. It has a mechanics' institute, with a library of 1,000 volumes, and a branch bank. The remains of the bishop's palace, still called Palace Gate, have been converted into a farmhouse. At a short distance from the town is Dogmersfield Park, the residence of the Mildmay family, surrounded by a park, in which is a lake covering 44 acres. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Grewell annexed, in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £560, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a spacious brick structure, coated with stucco, and was partially restored and reseated in 1851. It contains an ancient brass, bearing date 1470. The Independents and Lady Huntingdon's Connexion have each a place of worship. There is a free school for the education of 28 boys, founded and endowed by Robert May in 1694, also National, British, and infant schools. The parochial charities produce about £309 per annum. There are several endowed almshouses. Those near the church were founded in 1623 by Sir Edward More, others by Mapleton and Wyeth. William Lilly, the grammarian and first master of St. Paul's school, was born here in 1468. Market day is Tuesday. Fairs are held on the Saturday before Mid-Lent Sunday, and on the 31st July for horses and cattle.

ODIHAM, MIDDLE and LOWER, hunds. in the Odiham div. of co. Hants. The former contains the pars. of Dogmersfield, Grewell, South Warnborough, Winchfield, and part of Odiham; while the latter contains the pars. of Elvetham, Hartley-Wintney, Rotherwick, and part of Eversley, comprising together 14,130 acres.

ODIN, a lead and silver mine in the Peak under Mam Tor, co. Derby. It yields three ounces of silver per ton, and is said to have been worked by the Saxons. Various other minerals, as barytes, manganese, petroleum, and fluor spar, are found in sinking the levels by which this mine is worked.

ODNESS, a fishing station under Odness Head, E. side of Stronsay Island, Orkney Islands, coast of Scotland, opposite the Boa rock.

O'DORNEY, a par. in the bar. of Clanmaurice, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles N. of Tralee, its post town. It is 3 miles long by 1 mile broad, and contains the vil. of Abbeydorney. The surface is hilly, including a part of the Stacks mountains. The living is an impropriate cur. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, also three hedge schools. Ardfert Abbey is the seat of W. Crosbie, Esq. Some remains of the church exist, but in a ruinous state.

ODSALL-MOOR, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Bierley and par. of Bradford, West Riding co. York, near Bradford. It is situated on the canal near the source of the river Aire. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in the collieries and iron mines.

ODSEY, a hund. in the co. of Herts, contains the pars. of Ashwell, Broadfield, Bygrave, Caldecott, Clothall, Cottered, Hinxworth, Kelshall, Radwell, Reed, Rushden, Sandon, Therfield, Wallington, Yardley, and part of Royston, comprising an area of 32,410 acres.

ODSEY, a manor and hmlt. in the par. of Guilden-Morden, hund. of Odsey, co. Cambridge, 4 miles W. by S. of Royston. It gives name to the hundred.

ODSTOCK, a par. in the hund. of Cawden, co. Wilts, 3 miles S. of Salisbury, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Avon, and is chiefly agricultural. At Clearbury Ring, to the S. of the village, is an extensive mound probably at one time a Roman camp. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1783. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £282. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

ODSTONE, a tythg. in the par. of Ashbury, hund. of Shrivenham, co. Berks, 6 miles N.W. of Lambourn.

ODUN, a demesne in the par. of Northam, co. Devon, 1 mile from Appledore, and 3 miles N. by E. of Bideford. It is situated under Hubberstone Hill, on Bideford Bay, at the mouth of the river Torridge, and is celebrated as the place where the Saxon earl Odun and the men of Devon defeated the Danish pirate Hubba. The victory is still celebrated at Odun Hall, the seat of the Hogge family.

OFFA'S DYKE, or CLAWD OFFA, an ancient rampart formed by King Offa of Mercia towards the close of the 8th century, separating the Saxon kingdom of Mercia from the territory still retained by the Welsh beyond the Severn. It was from 50 to 60 feet wide, having a ditch on the Welsh side, and was defended by a line of small forts extending from Caedwn, near Mold, to Criggion, on the Severn, and thence through Dean Forest to Chepstow.

OFFALY, EAST, a bar. in the co. of Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland Its boundaries are Carbery Connell, Kilcullen, King's County, and West Offaly. It is 12 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 5 miles. It contains the pars. of Ballymany, Ballysax, Carn, Cloncurry, Dunmurry, Grangeclare, Lullymore, Pollardstown, Thomastown, and parts of Ballyshannon, Feighcullen, Kildare, Kilmeage, Moone, Rathangan, and Tully.

OFFALY, or OPHALY, WEST, a bar. in the co. of Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. Its boundaries are King's County, East Offaly, Kilcullen, East Narragh, and Rheban. It is 13 miles long, and its average breadth is 2½ miles. It contains the pars. of Ballybrackan, Duneany, Harristown, Kildangan, Kilrush, Knovinstown, Lackagh, Monasterevin, Nurney, Walterstown, and parts of Ballyshannon, Fontstown, and Rathangan. This barony was anciently part of the territory of the O'Connors, O'Dempseys, and O'Duins.

OFFCHURCH, a par. in the Kenilworth div. of the hund. of Knightlow, co. Warwick, 3 miles E. of Leamington, its post town, and 5 N.E. of Warwick. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Leam, and near the line of the North-Western railway. The Warwick and Napton canal and the Roman Fosse Way intersect on the southern boundary of the parish. It formerly belonged to the Mercian kings, and subsequently to the priory of Coventry. The Warwickshire hounds meet in the neighbourhood. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is of various qualities, but generally fertile. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £140. The church, dedicated to St. Gregory, is an ancient structure with a square tower containing four bells. The interior of the church contains several monuments and tablets. There is a parochial school for children of both sexes. Offchurch Bury is a mansion situated on the banks of the Leam, in a well-wooded park. The Earl of Aylesford is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

OFFCOTE-UNDERWOOD, a lib. in the par. of Ashborne, hund. of Wirksworth, co. Derby, 2 miles from Ashborne, and 13 N.W. of Derby. It is situated in the valley of the river Henmore, near Dovedale.

OFFENHAM, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Blackenhurst, co. Worcester, 2 miles N.E. of Evesham, its railway station and post town, and 16 from Worcester. The village, which is of small extent, is situated at the ferry on the river Avon, and is chiefly agricultural. Offenham derives its name from the Saxon king Offa, who once resided here. There are traces of a seat of the abbots of Evesham, to whom the manor subsequently belonged. There is no carriage road through the village, which is exceedingly retired. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £123, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The church, dedicated to SS. Mary and Milburgh, is an ancient stone structure with a tower (of more modern date) containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. There is a National school, with a library adjoining, supported by an annuity bequeathed by John Millard in 1827.

OFFERLANE, a par. in the bar. of Upperwoods, Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles W.S.W. of Mountrath, its post town. It is 9 miles long by 8 broad, and contains the vils. of Castletown and Coolraine. The rivers Tonnet and Nore here join their waters. The Slievebloom mountains render the surface hilly. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. £543, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a modern structure, erected chiefly at the expense of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. There are several Roman Catholic chapels, also Sunday and daily schools in the parish. Roundwood may be mentioned as one of the numerous seats. In this parish are remains of three castles and ruins of Monderhilt monastery.

OFFERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Stockport, hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 2 miles S.E. of Stockport. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. Offerton partly belongs to Isherwood of Marple. The soil consists principally of clay. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans.

OFFERTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Hope, hund. of High Peak, co. Derby, 7 miles N. of Bakewell, and 5 N.E. of Tideswell. It is situated on the river Derwent.

OFFERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Houghton-le-Spring, N. div. of Easington ward, co. Durham, 1½ mile E. of Painshaw, and 4 W. of Sunderland. The township, which is small, is situated on a rock near the river Wear.

OFFHAM, a par. in the hund. of Larkfield, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 7 miles W. of Maidstone, its post town, 3 E. by S. of Wrotham, and 1½ mile W. of Malling. The village, which is of small extent, is situated about half a mile S. of the Maidstone road, and is wholly agricultural. There is an ancient "quintain" on the green. One-third of the land is used for the cultivation of hops, and the remainder is chiefly common. The great Roman military way from the Weald to London crosses the parish. There are quarries of Kentish ragstone, which is very abundant. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £218. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a tower steeple on the N. side, between the nave and chancel. The register dates from the middle of the 17th century. There is a village school. Pepinstraw, in this parish, is the birthplace of Jack Straw, the rebel in the reign of Richard II. Sir Richard Tufton, Bart., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

OFFHAM, a tythg. in the par. of South Stoke, hund. of Avisford, rape of Arundel, co. Sussex, 1 mile N.E. of Arundel.

OFFHAM STREET, a vil. in the par. and hund. of Lewes, co. Sussex, 2 miles from Lewes, and 8 from Brighton. It is situated on the old Roman road under the South Downs.

OFFLEY, BISHOP'S. See BISHOP'S OFFLEY, co. Stafford.

OFFLEY, GREAT. OFFLEY, or OFFLEY ST. LEGERS, a par. in the hund. of Hitchin, co. Herts, 3 miles S.W. of Hitchin, its railway station and post town, and 6 N.E. of Luton. The par., which is large, is situated among the chalk hills, and contains the hmlt. of Puthridge. It formerly belonged to King Offa, from whom it derived its name, and who is said to have died here. After the Norman conquest it was successively possessed by the St. Legers, Hoos, Boleyns, Spencers, and Salusburies. The village is chiefly agricultural. At Highdowns, in this parish, are several barrows and dykes, supposed to be of British origin. The impropriate tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1768. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £298. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, is an ancient structure containing monuments of the Spencers and others. The parochial charities produce about £87 per annum, part of which belongs to the vicar. There is a village school for both sexes. Offley Place is the principal residence.

OFFLEY, HIGH, a par. in the hund. of Pirchill, co. Stafford, 4 miles S.W. of Eccleshall, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Liverpool and Birmingham canal, and is wholly agricultural. The par. comprises the hmlts. of Shebdon and Woodseaves. The impropriation belongs to Sir Thomas Broughton. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £313, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure containing monuments of the Skrymsher family, also one to the late Bishop Ryder, erected in 1851 at the expense of the present vicar. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum. Miss T. Hinckes, of Tettenhall, is lady of the manor.

OFFLOW, NORTH, a hund. in the co. of Stafford, contains the pars. of Alrewas, Alrewas-Hayes, Bromley-Regis, Edingale, Hanbury, Ridware Hampstall, Ridware-Mavestyn, Ridware-Pipe, Rolleston, Tamhorn, Tatenhill, Thorpe-Constantine, Tutbury, Whittington, Yoxhall, and parts of Burton-on-Trent, St. Chad and St. Michael-in-Lichfield, Clifton-Campville, Croxall, and Tamworth, comprising an area of 75,080 acres.

OFFLOW, SOUTH, a hund. in the co. of Stafford, contains the pars. of Aldridge, Armitage with Handsacre, Canwell, Darlaston, Drayton-Bassett, Elford, Farewell, Handsworth-with-Soho, Harborne, Hints, Longdon, Norton-under-Cannock, Ogley-Hay, Rushall, Shenstone, Statfold, Tipton, Walsall, Wednesbury, Weeford, West Bromwich, and parts of St. Michael-in-Lichfield, Tamworth, and Wolverhampton, comprising an area of 95,640 acres.

OFFORD CLUNEY, a par. in the hund. of Toseland, co. Huntingdon, 3½ miles S. by W. of Huntingdon, its post town, and the same distance N.E. of St. Neot's. It is a station on the Great Northern railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the eastern bank of the river Ouse, and is wholly agricultural. Offord Cluney was called Ottanford by the Saxons. The soil consists of clay and gravel. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1801. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £370, in the patron. of the Bishop of Peterborough. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The interior contains two piscinas. The parochial charities, including 4 acres of land, produce about £20 per annum, of which £4 goes to the National school. The Dean and Chapter of Westminster and the rector are lords of the manor. Dr. Newcome, late master of St. John's College, Cambridge, was once rector of this parish.

OFFORD-DARCY, a par. in the hund. of Toseland, co. Huntingdon, 4½ miles N.E. of St. Neot's. Huntingdon is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the eastern bank of the river Ouse, and is chiefly agricultural. The Great North road passes about two miles distant. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £42 12*s*. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £195. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, containing a piscina and monuments of the Nailours, who held the manor, and some old brasses, one of which bears date 1400. There is a Sunday-school. The Baptists have a place of worship.

OFFTON, a par. in the hund. of Bosmere, co. Suffolk, 4½ miles S.W. of Needham Market, its post town, 8 N. by W. of Ipswich, and 5 W. of Claydon railway station. The village, which is small and straggling, is wholly agricultural. Upon a chalk hill are ruins of a castle which formerly belonged to King Offa of Mercia, from whom this place took its name. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £216 10*s*. The living is a vic.* with the rect. of Little Bricett annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £124. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a square tower. Tolmash Hall, formerly the seat of the Kemps and D'Autreys, is now a farmhouse. James Cuddon, Esq., is lord of the manor.

OFFWELL, a par. in the hund. of Colyton, co. Devon, 2½ miles S.E. of Honiton, its post town, and 12 from the Collumpton railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The soil is of a clayey and stony nature. On Honiton Hill is a tower erected at the expense of Dr. Coplestone, the late Bishop of Llandaff, who was born in this parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £347. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a stone structure with a tower containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum. There is a National school with a small endowment, in which a Sunday-school is also held. Offwell House is the principal residence.

OGBOURNE, or OKEBURNE, ST. ANDREW, a par. in the hund. of Selkley, co. Wilts, 2 miles N. of Marlborough, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Kennet, and on the high road from Marlborough to Swindon. The inhabitants are principally engaged in agriculture. The par. includes the tythgs. of Rockley and Maisey, or Massey. The soil is chiefly gravel and chalk. The extensive tract called Marlborough Downs occupies a considerable part of the parish. The appropriate tithes, belonging to the Dean and Chapter of Windsor, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £830, and the vicarial for £180. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £160, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Windsor. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure with a square tower. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. At Rockley, the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem had formerly a preceptory, and there was also a chapel of ease dedicated to St. Leonard.

OGBOURNE ST. GEORGE, a par. in the hund. of Selkley, co. Wilts, 4 miles N. of Marlborough, its post town. The village, which is small and irregularly built, is situated on the road from Marlborough to Swindon, and near the river Kennet. There was formerly a Benedictine cell to the Abbey of Bec Herlewin, in Normandy, founded by Maud de Wallingford in 1149, and which became the richest cell to that house in England. It was given to King's College, Cambridge, and the Charter-house. In the neighbourhood are several barrows, and a strong entrenched camp called Barbury Castle, where the Britons were defeated in 556 by the West Saxons with great loss. A large portion of the Downs which extend into this parish is now in a fair state of cultivation. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The impropriation belongs to the Dean and Chapter of Windsor. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £244, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Windsor. The church, dedicated to St. George, is an ancient structure with a square tower. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum. The Baptists and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship.

OGBURY, an ancient camp in the par. of Durnford, hund. of Amesbury, co. Wilts, 2 miles S.W. of Amesbury. It is situated on the bank of the river Avon, and is surrounded by a bank and fosse 33 feet high, enclosing about 62 acres.

OGDENS, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Fordingbridge, co. Hants, 23 miles S.W. of Winchester. It is situated principally within the limits of the New Forest.

OGLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Whalton, W. div. of Castle Ward, co. Northumberland, 6¼ miles S.W. of Morpeth. There are slight remains of the moated castle of the Ogles, in which Copeland confined David, King of Scotland, after capturing him at Neville's Cross.

OGLETHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Bramham, wap. of Upper Barkstone Ash, West Riding co. York, 3 miles W. of Tadcaster. It is situated near the line of the Roman road Watling Street, which here crosses Bramham Moor, where Sir T. Rokeby, in the wars of the Roses, defeated the Earl of Northumberland. The country abounds in coal and limestone, which are worked.

OGLEY-HAY, an ext. par. place in the S. div. of Offlow hund., co. Stafford, 5 miles N.E. of Walsall, its post town, and 5 S.W. of Lichfield. It is a small and prosperous village, situated on the Wyrley and Essington canal. There are several collieries, in which a large portion of the inhabitants is employed. To the N. of the village are traces of Knave's Castle, a Roman encampment. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £170, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. James, is a stone structure with a low-spired tower, erected in 1851. There are two National schools for both sexes, erected in 1850. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship, also a chapel at Brownhills for the Independents.

OGMORE, a hund. in the co. of Glamorgan, contains the pars. of St. Andrew Minor, St. Bride Major, Colwinstone, St. Donat's, Ewenny, Llandyfodog, Llandow, Llanganna, Llangeinor, Marcross, St. Mary Hill, Merthyr-Mawr, Monknash, Penlline, and Wick.

OGMORE, a salmon and trout stream of the co. of Glamorgan, rises in the mountains of Llandyfodog, and falls into the Bristol Channel.

OGONNELLOE, a par. in the bar. of Lower Tulla, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles N.W. of Killaloe, its post town. It is 4 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 3 miles. The surface borders on part of Lough Derg and Scariff Bay. It is somewhat hilly, Knocknalicka being the principal summit. The soil is gravelly, but productive. The Killaloe and Scariff road passes through the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. £123, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was gifted by the late Board of First Fruits in 1812. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, two Sunday and four day schools. Tinarana House is the principal residence. Here are the ruins of Cahir Castle and Ballybran church.

O'GRADY, a small lough in the bar. of Upper Tulla, co. Clare, Ireland, 2 miles W. by S. of Scariff.

OGSTON, an ancient par. in the co. of Elgin, Scotland, now joined to Drainie.

OGULLA, a par. in the bar. of Roscommon, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles S.S.W. of Elphin, its post town. The par. is 4 miles long by 3 broad, and contains the town of Tulsk. The soil is excellent, and there is a considerable extent of pasture. It is traversed by the roads from Roscommon to Boyle, and from Strokestown to Castlerea. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. with Elphin, £354, in the patron. of the crown. Toomana is the principal residence in the neighbourhood.

OGWELL, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Wonford, co. Devon, 2 miles W. of Newton-Abbot station and post town, and 8 N.E. of Totnes. It is situated near the great western road leading to Teignmouth, in the celebrated Bradley Vale. The par. contains the hmlt. of Holbean. There are several quarries of limestone; and iron, manganese, and marble are found, the last being of a very fine quality. In May, 1595, the greater part of the village was destroyed by fire. It is now a small agricultural village. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £245, and the glebe comprises 2 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £180. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is a plain stone structure, with a tower containing three bells. In the interior of the church are an ancient font, and monuments. The charities amount to about £13 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, with a small endowment. Pierce G. E. Taylor, Esq., is lord of the manor, and owner of most of the soil.

OGWELL, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Wonford, co. Devon, 3 miles W. of Newton-Abbot, its railway station and post town. The village, which consists of a few farmhouses, is situated about a mile from the Newton and Ashburton road, and is wholly agricultural. On West Hill there is a quarry of madrepose marble. Iron and manganese exist in the neighbourhood. The soil consists of a mixture of heavy clay and light red loam, on a subsoil of clay and limestone. Sir H. Seale's hounds meet in this neighbourhood. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £105, and the glebe comprises 22 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £127. The church is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing three bells. The font is of white freestone, and there are three ancient stone stalls or sedilia. P. G. E. Taylor, Esq., is lord of the manor.

OGWEN, a small lake and river of the co. of Carnarvon, rises near Capel Curig, and falls into the sea near Bangor.

OICH, a loch in the co. of Inverness, Scotland, 4 miles S.W. of Fort Augustus. It is about 5 miles long, and forms part of the Caledonian canal, between Loch Ness and Loch Lochie.

OICH, a river of the co. of Inverness, Scotland, rises in Loch Oich, the waters of which it discharges into Loch Ness at Fort Augustus.

OIKELL, a river of the co. of Sutherland, Scotland, rises under Benmore, and, flowing through the glen of Strath Oikell, traces the boundary of Ross-shire, and falls into Dornoch Frith.

OILGATE, a vil. in the par. of Edermine, bar. of Ballaghkeen, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Enniscorthy. It is situated on the Enniscorthy and Wexford road, about 1 mile from the river Slaney. Here are a police station and a Roman Catholic chapel. Fairs are held on the 5th March, 21st May, 15th August, and 10th December.

OKEFORD, CHILD. See CHILD-OKEFORD, co. Dorset.

OKEFORD-FITZ-PAINE, or FIPENNY, a par. in the hund. of Sturminster-Newton-Castle, and Sturminster div. of co. Dorset, 7 miles N.W. of Blanford-Forum, its post town, and 4 S.E. of Sturminster. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near Banbury Camp, and is chiefly agricultural. It was formerly a market town, under the Nicholes, from whom it came to the Fitz-Paynes. There are some brick-kilns. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £490, and the glebe comprises 72 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £491. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure, with a square tower, and has recently been restored. The register dates from 1533. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. There is a parochial school. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. Lord Rivers is lord of the manor. On Banbury Hill is a circular camp with a single trench. In 1753 several British silver coins were found.

OKEHAMPTON, a par., market town, and municipal borough, locally situated in the hunds. of Lifton and Black Torrington, co. Devon, 21 miles W. of Exeter, and 195 W. by S. of London. It is situated in a wooded valley on the northern border of Dartmoor, near the confluence of two rapid trout streams called the East and West Okement. These streams, issuing out of Cranmere Pool, on Dartmoor, flow E. and W., but, after rounding a succession of hills, again converge, and unite their waters about a quarter of a mile below the town. The borough, which is co-extensive with the parish, includes, besides the town of Okehampton, the vils. of Cheesacott, Kingbear, and five other hmlts. In the immediate vicinity of the town, which is built in the lowest part of the valley, are some rich meadows. Shortly after the Norman conquest this manor was given by William I., with the earldom of Devon, to Baldwin de Brioniis, who distinguished himself at the battle of Hastings. In Domesday Survey it is described as held of the king by Baldwin the Viscount, who had his castle here, and at which place were four burgesses and a market. Subsequently it became the property of the Courtenays, the hereditary county sheriffs, and keepers of the castle of Exeter, who for several generations resided at Okehampton Castle, which stood on the summit and eastern slope of a rocky eminence about a mile to the S.W. of the town. Of this once imposing structure the principal remains are the keep, the rest having been dismantled by order of Henry VIII. The town, which is a borough by prescription, received its first charter from Robert de Courtenay in the time of Edward I.; but this being found inadequate, a new charter of incorporation was granted to the burgesses by James I. in 1623, with many special privileges, which were confirmed and amplified by Charles II. Under this charter it is still governed by a mayor or portreeve, recorder, justice of the peace, and 8 burgesses. It sent two members to parliament once in the reigns of Edward I. and Edward II., and again in 1640, from which time it continued to make regular returns till disfranchised by the Reform Act. The town, which consists of several streets irregularly laid out, contained, in 1851, 2,194 inhabitants, but had decreased in 1861 to 1,929. Some of the inhabitants are employed in weaving serges, or long ells, for the Chinese market; and there is a considerable retail trade for the supply of the surrounding country. The lordship of the borough is vested in the mayor and burgesses, but the manor and castle belong to A. B. Saville, Esq., of Oatlands. The Okehampton Poor-law Union comprises 28 parishes and townships, the union poorhouse being situated in this parish. It is also the head of a superintendent registry and new County Court districts. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £350, and the glebe consists of 200 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £600. The church, dedicated to All Saints, stands on rising ground some distance W. from the town. It is a modern structure, rebuilt at a cost of £3,000, the former one having been burnt down in 1842. Besides the parish church there is a chapel-of-ease, dedicated to St. James, situated in the market-place. This edifice, which was originally founded as a chantry, is small, but has a massive tower of granite, and is now the property of the corporation. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. There are National and infant schools situated in the town, and a literary society with a small library. The parochial charities produce about £120 per annum. Market day is Saturday. Fairs are held in the months of March, May, July, August, and September, chiefly for cattle.

OKEHAMPTON, or OAKHAMPTON, a tythg. in the par. of Wiveliscombe, hund. of West Kingsbury, co. Somerset, 1 mile N.E. of Wiveliscombe, and 15 S.W. of Bridgwater. It is situated in a comb or vale under the Manadown hills.

OKEHAMPTON, MONK, a par. in the hund. of Black Torrington, co. Devon, 2½ miles N.E. of Hatherleigh, its post town, and 8 S.W. of Eggesford railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on the E. bank of the river Okement, and is wholly agricultural. The soil consists of dunland, with a subsoil of clay. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £131. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a stone structure of recent erection, except the tower, which is ancient and contains four bells. There are painted windows in the chancel. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a school for both sexes, erected in 1841. Hugh Mallet, Esq., is lord of the manor.

OKEMENT, or OCK, a river of the co. of Devon, rises in Cranmere Pool, in Dartmoor, and falls into the river Torridge near Hatherleigh.

OKENEY-CUM-PETSOE, a par. or hmlt. in the hund. of Newport, co. Bucks, 2 miles S.E. of Olney. It was formerly a separate parish, but is now assessed with the adjoining parish of Emberton. The living is a discharged rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, joined with that of Petsoe, and valued in the king's books at £2 17*s.* 6*d.* The church, which was dedicated to St. Martin, has long since been demolished.

OLA, ST., an ancient par. in the Middle Orkney Islands, coast of Scotland, now joined to Kirkwall.

OLAVE, ST., a priory on the river Waveney, co. Suffolk, 6 miles S.W. of Yarmouth. It is now a ruin.

OLAVE, ST., MARY-GATE, a par. partly in the lib. of St. Peter's, East Riding, and partly in the wap. of Bulmer, North Riding, co. York. It is adjacent to the city of York, of which it forms a suburb.

OLCON, a river of the co. of Hereford, rises under the Black mountains, and falls into the Munnow near Clodock.

OLD, or WOLD, a par. in the hund. of Orlingbury, co. Northampton, 10 miles N.E. of Northampton, its post town, and 6½ from Kettering. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. It lies about 2 miles W. of the turnpike road from Northampton to Market-Harborough. The surface is undulating, and the soil very productive. The tithes were commuted for 343 acres of land under an Enclosure Act in 1767. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £355, in the patron. of Brazenose College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a stone structure, with a square tower containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £132, of which £26 goes to the free school. The Independents have a place of worship.

OLD ALRESFORD. See ALRESFORD, OLD, co. Hants, and the like for other places with this prefix.

OLDBAR, an ancient par. in the co. of Forfar, Scotland, now joined to Aberlemno.

OLDBAWN, a hmlt. in the par. of Tallaght, bar. of Uppercross, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, near Tallaght. It stands on the river Dodder, and has a paper-mill.

OLDBERROW, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Blackenhurst, co. Worcester, 2½ miles W. of Henley-in-Arden, its post town, and 6 S.E. of Redditch. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on the borders of Warwickshire, from which county it is separated by a small stream flowing from Oldberrow Hill. The inhabitants are wholly engaged in agriculture. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £206, and the glebe comprises 12 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £200. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small ancient edifice, with a belfry containing three bells. The church has an E. window adorned with coats of arms. The parochial charities produce about £3 5*s.* per annum. William Newton, Esq., is lord of the manor.

OLDBOROUGH, an ancient camp on the White Horse Hill, in the par. and hund. of Calne, co. Wilts, 2 miles E. of Calne, and 26 W. by N. of Salisbury. It is supposed to have been formed by the Danes after their defeat at Ethandune, and is surrounded by a double ditch.

OLDBRIDGE, a vil. in the par. of Donore, in the bar. of Lower Duleek, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Drogheda. It is situated on the right bank of the river Boyne, and is interesting as being the scene of the principal movements of 1690.

OLDBURY, a par. in the Chelmarsh div. of the hund. of Stottesden, co. Salop, 1 mile S.W. of Bridgnorth, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the turnpike road from Bridgnorth to Cleobury-Mortimer. The parish is bounded on the E. by the river Severn. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is of loam, with a subsoil of clay. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £210, and the glebe comprises 19 acres, valued at £60 per annum. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £254. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone structure, with a turret containing two bells. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There are traces in this parish of the encampment from which the parliamentary army in the civil war of Charles I. bombarded the castle of Bridgnorth.

OLDBURY, a tnshp. and market town in the par. of Halesowen, Halesowen div. of the hund. of Brimstree, co. Worcester, formerly in Salop, 5 miles W. of Birmingham, its post town, 4 N. by E. of Halesowen, and 3 E. of Dudley. It is a station on the Birmingham, Wolverhampton, and Stour Valley railway. It is a thriving place, situated in the heart of a rich mineral and manufacturing district. The town stands on the Birmingham canal, and on the high road from Birmingham to Dudley. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the coal mines, and in the iron and steel works, which are very extensive. Brewing and malting are carried on, and there are brick and tile kilns. Limestone is abundant, and is largely used for building. Until recently, there was a small prison for the confinement of debtors. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £156, in the patron. of the Vicar of Halesowen. The church (called Christ Church), was erected by grant of the parliamentary commissioners: there is besides an additional church, also partly erected by the commissioners, which was opened in 1841, and has a tower. There is a National school for both sexes, also schools for the Unitarians and Wesleyans. The Independents, Wesleyans, Baptists, Unitarians, Primitive and New Connexion Methodists, have each a place of worship. Courts leet and baron are held annually. Market day is Tuesday. Fairs are held on June 6th and October 3rd.

OLDBURY, a hmlt. in the par. of Ightham, hund. of Wrotham, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, half a mile W. of Ightham, and 4 miles N.E. of Sevenoaks. In the neighbourhood are remains of an ancient camp of 137 acres in extent.

OLDBURY, a hmlt. in the par. of Mancetter, Atherstone div. of the hund. of Hemlingford, co. Warwick, 2 miles S. of Atherstone, and 4 N.W. of Nuneaton. It is situated near the site of the ancient Manduessedum on Watling Street. In the vicinity are ruins of a Roman camp, surrounded by a rampart 6 feet in height, where British arms have been discovered. Here was once a small nunnery of the Dominican order, dedicated to St. Lawrence, and subordinate to the abbey of Polesworth. Its revenues at the Dissolution were valued at £6 0*s.* 10*d.* The principal residence is Oldbury Hall.

OLDBURY-ON-THE-HILL, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Grumbald's Ash, co. Gloucester, 5 miles S.W. of Tetbury. Chippenham is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated among the Cotswold hills. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £245. The living is a rect. with the rect.* of Didmarton annexed, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, joint val. £387. The church, dedicated to St. Arild or St. Ariva, is a small ancient structure. There is a village school supported by the Duchess of Beaufort.

OLDBURY-UPON-SEVERN, a tythg. and chplry. in the par. of Thornbury, lower div. of the hund. of Thornbury, co. Gloucester, 2¼ miles N.W. of Thornbury, its post town, and 7 S.W. of the Berkeley station on the Birmingham and Bristol railway. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on the river Severn, which has a good salmon fishery. There are two Roman camps in the neighbourhood. The soil is of a loamy nature upon a subsoil of clay. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Thornbury, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £60, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The church is an ancient structure, with a tower containing one bell. The church has been partially restored. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. H. Howard, Esq., is lord of the manor.

OLDCASTLE, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Abergavenny, co. Monmouth, 6 miles N.E. of Abergavenny, its post town, and 9 from Crickhowell. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated upon the E. slope of the Black mountains, which skirt the vale of Ewyas near the river Monnow. The village consists of a few farmhouses. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £18 4*s.* 6*d.*, and the glebe consists of about 123 acres. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £73. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. Lord Cobham, the companion of Henry V., was burnt here for heresy in 1417. This place was once the residence of Sir John Oldcastle. The remains of the castle are but slight, a farmhouse having been erected on its site. Roman coins have been found in the neighbourhood. There are also several encampments, supposed to be Roman.

OLDCASTLE, a par., post and market town in the bar. of Fore, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 22 miles N.W. of Navan, and 52 from Dublin. It is the terminus of the Dublin, Drogheda, and Oldcastle railway. The par. is 5 miles long by 3 broad, and has mostly a good soil. It is traversed by the road from Dublin to Enniskillen. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Kilbride, £354. The church was erected by aid of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Loughcrew. There is a Methodist meeting-house, also a Sunday-school of that sect, and several day schools. The town stands at the intersection of the roads from Dublin to Killeshandra, and from Castlepollard to Bailieborough, near the river Crosswater. The principal public buildings are the market house, savings-bank, dispensary, and a foundation school. There are extensive corn mills and lime quarries in the vicinity. J. L. W. Napper, Esq., is proprietor of the town. The Oldcastle Poor-law Union consists of 13 electoral divisions in the counties Meath, Westmeath, and Cavan. Petty sessions are held at intervals. Monday is market day. Fairs are held on the second Monday in June, 20th August, and 28th October.

OLDCASTLE, a demesne in the par. of Kilconduff, bar. of Gallin, co. Mayo, Ireland, 2 miles from Swinford, and 15 N.E. of Castlebar. It is situated on a branch of the river Moy.

OLDCASTLE, a harbour on the E. side of Clare Island, co. Mayo, Ireland. It is situated in Clew Bay.

OLDCASTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Malpas, higher div. of the hund. of Broxton, co. Chester, 2 miles S.W. of Malpas. It is situated on the river Elf, and once had a castle of Roman origin from whence it derives its present name. The remains of the castle were destroyed about 1680. On Oldcastle Heath an affray took place between the Parliamentarians and Royalists in 1644, in which the latter were defeated, and Colonels Vane and Convers killed. J. W. Dod, Esq., is lord of the manor.

OLDCASTLE, a vil. in the par. of Slains, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 3 miles E. of Ellon.

OLDCASTLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Lower Coyty, hund. of Newcastle, co. Glamorgan, 2 miles N.E. of Bridgend. It is situated on the river Ogmore, and has ruins of a fort.

OLDCASTLE, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Underditch, co. Wilts.

OLDCASTLE PRECINCT, an ext. par. place in the city of Canterbury, co. Kent.

OLDCOATS, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Styrrup, pars. Blyth and Harworth, co. Nottingham, 2 miles N.W. of Blyth, and 4 N. of Tickhill. The surface is gently undulating, and the land chiefly arable. The Vicar of Harworth performs Divine service every Sunday in the school-house. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans.

OLDCONNELL. See CONNELL, OLD, co. Kildare.

OLDCOTT, a tnshp. in the par. of Wolstanton, N. div. hund. of Pirehill, co. Stafford, 2 miles N. of Newcastle-under-Lyme, and the same distance from Burslem, It is situated in the pottery district, near the Grand Trunk canal. It includes the village of Golden Hill, on the road from the potteries to Manchester. The district abounds in collieries and iron mines, which give employment to the major part of the population. This tnshp. is ecclesiastically annexed to the district par. of Tunstall. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

OLDCOURT, a demesne near Bray, co. Wicklow, Ireland. The mansion was originally built in the reign of Henry VI. by Sir Thomas Mulso, whose tower is still standing.

OLDCRAIG, a castle near Peterhead, co. Aberdeen, Scotland. It formerly belonged to the family of Marischal.

OLDENEY, an island in the par. of Assynt, co. Sutherland, Scotland, 7 miles S.W. of Scourie. It is situated near Point of Store, between Clashnessie and Nedd Bays.

OLDERFLEET, a ruined castle on Curraan peninsula in Lough Larne, co. Antrim, Ireland, 1 mile S.E. of Larne. It is situated at the ferry to Magee Island, where Edward Bruce effected a landing in 1315.

OLDFIELD, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Dunham-Massey, par. of Bowden, co. Chester, 1½ mile W. of Altrincham. It is situated on the Bridgwater canal, and a branch of the river Mersey.

OLDFIELD, a tnshp. in the par. of Heswall, co. Chester, 3 miles N.W. of Great Neston, and 4 N. by W. of Parkgate. It is in conjunction with Heswall to form a township.

OLDFIELD, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Honley, and par. of Almondbury, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of Huddersfield. It is situated near the river Colne. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the woollen trade.

OLDFIELD ROAD, a station on the western section of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. It is the first station after leaving Manchester.

OLD FOLLY and OLD PARK, vils. in the hmlt. of Beausall, par. of Hatton, co. Warwick, 3½ miles N.W. of Warwick.

OLD-FORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Bow, hund. of Ossulstone, co. Middlesex, a quarter of a mile N. of Stratford-le-Bow, and 4 miles E. by N. of St. Paul's, London. It is a station on the Great Eastern railway. It is situated at the bridge on the river Lea, and is included in the borough of the Tower Hamlets. Here are situated the East London water and British gas works. There are chemical works, and various other manufactories. In the neighbourhood is the gate of an old seat called King John's palace.

OLDHAM, a parochial chplry., tnshp., market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the par. of Prestwich-cum-Oldham, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 4 miles N. of Ashton-under-Lyne, 6 N.E. of Manchester, and 190 N.N.W. of London. It has stations on the E. section of the Lancashire and Yorkshire, the Oldham branch of the London and North-Western, and the Oldham and Guide-bridge Junction section of the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railways. It is a large manufacturing town of modern date, situated on an eminence near the right bank of the river Medlock, and skirted by the small rivers Irk and Irwell. The rapid rise of this town is mainly attributable to its situation on the edge of the Lancashire coal-field, which gives employment to a considerable number of its inhabitants, and to the great increase of cotton manufactures, consequent on the important innovations in machinery introduced by Arkwright and others. For manufacturing purposes, Oldham seemed especially adapted by nature, the mill system requiring for its success coal and water power, which were both here combined in the greatest abundance. The first mention of textile manufactures in Oldham is in the reign of Charles I., and subsequently linen websters are frequently mentioned in the parish registers; but the great development of trade did not take place till about a century ago, when mills on Arkwright's plan, driven by water-power, were erected here in 1770, and on the expiration of his patents in 1783 and 1789, a still further development of manufacturing industry took place. The erection of water-mills was shortly followed by the application of steam power, for which the unbounded supply of coal was of great importance. A branch canal, joining the Ashton canal, was cut in 1792, coming up to Hollinwood, and several lines of railway now intersect the township, so that its productions can be carried speedily to all parts of the country, giving to Oldham an important place in the manufacturing system of Lancashire. It was first chartered on the 13th of June, 1849, and is divided into eight wards, the bounds of the municipal borough being conterminous with those of the township, which has an area of 4,617 acres. In 1760 it is said to have consisted of only 60 dwellings. In 1801 it contained only 12,024 inhabitants, and 25 mills, but had increased by 1841 to 42,595, and ever since has gone on augmenting in population at a greater ratio than any other town in Lancashire, with the exception of Manchester and Preston. In 1851 it had a population of 52,820, with 9,900 inhabited houses, and in 1861 72,333, with 13,810 inhabited houses, and about 100 mills within the township, though there are at least 150 within the parliamentary borough. The limits of the parliamentary borough, which is a new borough under the Reform Act, returning two members to Parliament, include, besides the municipal borough, the townships and hamlets of Chadderton, Crompton, Hollinwood, Mumps, Royton, and Shaw, containing altogether 18,335 houses, inhabited by a population of 94,344, and somewhat above 2,000 electors. It is governed by a mayor, 8 aldermen, and 24 common councillors, with the style of "mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of the borough of Oldham."—The town is well supplied with water and lighted with gas, the works being the property of the corporation. In order to secure a more abundant supply of water, additional works have been undertaken, at a cost of about £200,000, under a recently obtained Act of Parliament. The public buildings comprise the townhall, a Grecian structure, in York-street, copied from the Ionic temple of Ceres, near Athens, and approached by a flight of steps. It contains several spacious apartments, one appropriated to the county court, where also the county magistrates hold petty sessions on Monday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Saturday, another appropriated to the corporation business, an entrance hall with painted window, and an assembly room above. On the ground floor are the offices of the police. The Lyceum is a block of buildings in Union-street, erected in 1856. It contains lecture and club-rooms, two class-rooms, a library, public news and reading-rooms, and an observatory, with a telescope presented by J. Platt, Esq., the president of the institution. The Working Man's Hall, in Horsedge-street, was originally erected in 1844, at the suggestion of the late Mr. Fergus O'Connor, M.P., but was greatly improved in 1854, and the assembly room heightened, which is now the largest room in the town. The Temperance Hall, in Horsedge-street, was originally built for a hall of science by the disciples of the eccentric philanthropist, Robert Owen, but was afterwards let as a casino, and is now the property of the Temperance Society. The public baths, situated in Union-street, were erected in 1854, as a memorial to the late Sir Robert Peel, whose bust, executed in marble by Munro, stands in the vestibule near the entrance to the reading and waiting hall. The union workhouse, situated in the Royton-road, was erected in 1851, at a cost of £13,300. The Oldham Lunatic Asylum was erected in 1856, at a cost of £2,000. There are besides three commercial banks, a savings-bank, and numerous insurance offices. The subscription bowling-green is situated on Frank-hill.—The principal manufactures are fustians, velveteens, corduroys, cotton, woollen, and silk goods, employing above 100 steam-engines and 17,000 hands within the limits of the borough, besides nearly as many more in the populous suburbs and manufacturing villages which surround Oldham. The manufacture of hats is also a very important branch of industry, and before the introduction of silk hats was even more remunerative than at present, the beavers requiring greater skill and capital in their production. It was in this manufacture that Mr. Thomas Henshaw, the principal benefactor of the town, realised his great wealth. After a temporary depression, the trade has again to some extent revived, and is now carried on by six large firms. There are many important works for the manufacture of mill machinery and engines, which has recently become one of the staple trades of the town, the one firm of Messrs. Platt Brothers employing nearly 4,000 hands. There are besides several extensive iron and brass foundries, gas meter manufactories, firms for bobbin and pattens, rollers, moulds, pipes, nails, tanneries, rope-works, and other establishments, besides about 30 collieries in the vicinity, which last give employment to about 1,200 persons.—Oldham is a polling-place for the county elections, and a petty-sessions town. The Oldham Poor-law Union contains the townships and hamlets of Alkrington, Chadderton, Crompton, Middleton, Oldham, Rayton, Thornham, and Tonge. It is also the seat of a new County Court district co-extensive with the poor-law union, and the head of a superintendent registry district, formed in 1848 out of that of Ashton-under-Lyne. Two weekly newspapers—the Oldham Advertiser and Telegraph and the Oldham Chronicle—are published in the town, both on Saturday.—The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £346, in the patron. of the Rector of Prestwich, who retains the great tithes, and the patronage of the curacies of Oldham, and the district churches of St. Peter's, Ringley, Hollinwood, and St. James's, on Greenacres-moor. The church of St. Mary, which stands near the centre of the town, is a modern structure, rebuilt in 1827, with a castellated tower surmounted with pinnacles, and containing twelve bells. In the chancel is a painted E. window. Besides the five churches mentioned above, there are four newly constituted parishes, under Sir Robert Peel's Act, having endowments each of about £150, in the patronage of the crown and bishop alternately. Coldhurst church was erected in 1848, and is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. Glodwick church was erected in 1844, on a site presented by Earl Howe. Waterhead church, also a modern structure, is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. Werneth church, erected in 1855, has a tower surmounted by a spire, and is dedicated to St. Thomas. There is also the district church of St. John, situated within the borough of Oldham, but belonging to the township of Chadderton, not yet completed. The Roman Catholics have a church in Shaw-street, with schools in connection. There are numerous Dissenting places of worship, including three belonging to the Wesleyan Methodists, three to the Independents, and one each to the Primitive, New Connexion, and Wesleyan Association Methodists, Baptists, Particular Baptists, Unitarians, Society of Friends, and Mormons. There are two large cemeteries, formed in 1857, one at Greenacres-moor, and the other in the township of Chadderton. The charities produce about £150 per annum, exclusive of the bequest by Thomas Henshaw, who, by a will dated November, 1807, left £40,000 for the endowment of a blue-coat school at Oldham, on condition that the inhabitants would provide a site and suitable buildings, and £20,000 for the Blind Asylum in Manchester. These sums were vested in trustees, who had to sustain a protracted suit in Chancery against the heirs-at-law; and, in consequence, the money had accumulated to above £100,000 in 1829, and the school-house was completed in 1834. This institution is built on an elevated site fronting the S., and has three gables. The grammar-school was founded in 1611, and has an income from endowment of about £35. There are also National, British, Sunday, and infant schools in the several districts, and denominational schools in connection with the Primitive and New Connexion Methodists.—Saturday is market day. Fairs are held on the first Thursday after Candlemas, on the 2nd May, 8th July, and on the Wednesday after 12th October.

OLDHAMS, a vil. in the tnshp. of Sharples, co. Lancaster, 4 miles E. of Chorley.

OLDHAMSTOCKS, a par. in the co. of Haddington, Scotland. It comprises the vils. of Oldhamstocks and Bilsdean. It extends about 6 miles in length from N.E. to S.W., with a varying breadth of from 1½ mile to 3 miles. It is bounded on the N.E. by the German Ocean, and on other sides by the pars. of Cockburnspath, Abbey St. Bathan's, and Innerwick. A small portion of the par. is in the co. of Berwick. The surface is moderately even, but gradually rises towards the Lammermuir Hills, where it becomes hilly, fit only for sheepwalks. The coast line, which is bold and rocky, is but 1½ mile in extent. On the coast the soil is dry and fertile. Coal, limestone, ironstone, and freestone, abound in the lower district. The parish is traversed along the coast by the road from Dunbar to Berwick, and by the North British railway, which has stations at Innerwick and Cockburnspath. The village of Oldhamstocks is about 6 miles S.E. of Dunbar, and 3 S.E. of Innerwick. It is a fishing station, situated in the valley of the Dean, on the road from Dunbar to Dunse, and near the coast of the North Sea. It was made a burgh of barony in 1489. This par. is in the presb. of Dunbar and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale. The minister has a stipend of £297. The parish church, which is situated in the village, was built in 1701. There are a parochial school, besides two other schools. Dunglass is a modern mansion, standing on the site of the old castle, and near the western bank of the small river, which here divides East Lothian from the shire of Berwick. The Castle of Dunglass is frequently mentioned in Scottish history, and was the place where James VI. lodged with his retinue the first night after he left Edinburgh in 1603, on his journey to London. It was by accident or treachery blown up in the year 1640, when Lord Haddington and many neighbouring gentry perished in its ruins. In the vicinity is the old collegiate church of Dunglass, which was built in 1450 by Sir Thomas Home, of that ilk, but is no longer used. Fairs are held on the last Tuesday in July, and on the second Thursday in November.

OLD-HOUSE, a hmlt. in the par. of Old Cleeve, co. Somerset, 2 miles S.W. of Watchet.

OLDINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Worfield, co. Salop, 3 miles N. of Bridgnorth.

OLDLAND, a hmlt. in the par. of Bitton, upper div. of the hund. of Langley, co. Gloucester, 4 miles S.E. of Bristol, its post town. The village, which is large, is situated near the navigable river Avon, and on the line of the Roman road, Via Julia. There are numerous market gardens. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the collieries, and the manufacture of hats and pins are carried on to some extent. The unfortunate Duke of Monmouth is said to have encamped on Sydenham Meadow a few days before the battle of Sedgmoor. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £30, in the patron. of the Vicar of Bitton. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a large stone structure with a square tower containing two bells. There is a National school for both sexes.

OLD-LANE, a vil. in the tnshp. of North Outram, West Riding co. York, 1 mile N.E. of Halifax.

OLD-LAUND-BOOTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Whalley, higher div. of the hund. of Blackburn, co. Lancaster, 3 miles S. by W. of Clitheroe. It is situated near the rivers Calder and Ribble, on the line of the Bolton and West Yorkshire railway. There is a National school for both sexes.

OLD MAN MOUNTAIN, a summit on the shore of Conistone, or Thurston Water, co. Lancaster. It is 2,576 feet high, and commands a fine view.

OLD-MILL, a vil. in the tnshp. of Monk Bretton, par. of Royston, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.E. of Barnsley. It is situated near the line of the North Midland railway.

OLD MILLS, a hmlt. in the bar. of Upper Glenarm, co. Antrim, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Larne.

OLDMIXTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Bleadon, co. Somerset, 6 miles N.W. of Axbridge.

OLDMOOR, a tnshp. in the par. of Bothal, E. div. of Morpeth ward, co. Northumberland, 4 miles N.E. of Morpeth. It is a station on the North-Eastern railway.

OLD PARK, a hmlt. in the par. of Hatton, co. Warwick, 4 miles N.W. of Warwick.

OLD-PARK, a tnshp. in the par. of Auckland St. Andrew, S.E. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, 3 miles N.E. of Bishop-Auckland. The village consists of a few farmhouses. The manor-house was rebuilt by Dr. Warton, who frequently entertained the poet Gray here.

OLD PASSAGE, or AUST FERRY, on the Severn, co. Gloucester, 4 miles W. of Thornbury. It was the Trajectus of the Romans, and is now spanned by a railway bridge.

OLDRIDGE, a chplry. in the par. of St. Thomas the Apostle, hund. of Wonford, co. Devon, 3 miles S. by W. of Crediton. The village is small and chiefly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £60. The church is a modern edifice.

OLDROME, a vil. in the par. of Dundonald, co. Ayr, Scotland, 8 miles N. of Ayr. It was formerly designated Rumford.

OLDSTEAD, a tnshp. in the par. of Kilburn, wap. of Birdford, North Riding co. York, 6 miles N. of Easingwold, and 5 S.E. of Thirsk. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The soil consists of gravel and clay, on a subsoil of limestone.

OLD-TOWN, a vil. in the tnshp. of Wadsworth, and par. of Halifax, West Riding co. York, 6 miles N.W. of Halifax.

OLDTOWN, a post-office vil. in the par. of Clonmethan, bar. of West Balrothery, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Naul. It is situated on the road from Kilsallagan. There is a Roman Catholic chapel. The parish church stands near the village. Here is also a dispensary within the Balrothery Poor-law Union. There are also several private seats of this name in various parts of Ireland.

OLD WARREN FARM, an ext. par. place in the lib. of Broad Hinton, co. Wilts, 6 miles N.W. of Marlborough.

OLIVE-GREEN, a hmlt. in the pars. of Hamstall-Ridware and Yoxhall, co. Stafford, 6 miles N. of Lichfield.

OLLABERRY, an ancient par. in the Shetland Islands, Scotland, now joined to Northmaven.

OLLANTIGH, an ancient seat near Wye, co. Kent, 5 miles N. by E. of Ashford. It is situated on the river Stour, and was built in the reign of Henry VII. Archbishop Kemp was born here in 1382, and Mrs. Macauley in 1733.

OLLERSETT, a hmlt. in the par. of Glossop, hund. of High Peak, co. Derby, 4 miles N.W. of Chapel-en-le-Frith.

OLLERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Knutsford, hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 2 miles S.E. of Nether Knutsford. The land is partly in common.

OLLERTON, a tnshp., post and market town, in the par. of Edwinstowe, Hatfield div. of Bassetlaw wap., co. Nottingham, 9 miles S.E. of Worksop, and 17 N.E. of Nottingham. It is situated in Sherwood Forest, on the river Maun, near its confluence with the Rainsworth water. It is a polling-place for East Retford. A portion of the land is in hop-grounds. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Edwinstowe, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church is a modern edifice, with a tower containing one bell. The parochial charities produce about £46 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel. There are National and free schools; the latter is entirely supported by the Earl of Scarborough. A court-leet is held on the 24th October annually by the steward of the Earl of Scarborough, who is lord of the manor. Market day is Friday. Annual cattle fairs are held on the 1st May, and last Friday in September.

OLLERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Stoke-upon-Tern, Drayton div. of the hund. of North Bradford, co. Salop, 1½ mile S. of Stoke-upon-Tern, and 5 miles S.W. of Market-Drayton. It is situated near the river Tern. The Independents have a chapel.

OLNAFIRTH, an ancient par. in the Shetland Islands, coast of Scotland, now joined to Delting.

OLNEY, or OULNEY, a par., post and market town, in the hund. of Newport, co. Bucks, 5 miles N. of Newport-Pagnell, and 9 from the Wolverton station on the London and North-Western line of railway. It is situated in a valley on the northern bank of the river Ouse, which is here crossed by a stone bridge of five large arches, and two smaller flood arches. The town consists principally of one long street, with the market-place in the centre. The houses, which have been rebuilt since the destructive fire of 1786, are chiefly of stone, and tiled. The lace manufacture was formerly carried on here to a considerable extent, but has latterly decayed. The inhabitants are now principally employed in agricultural pursuits, and a few in making worsted hose. This place was once the residence of Cowper, the poet, previous to 1786, at which period he removed to Weston Underwood. His house is going fast to decay. The par., which lies in the most northern part of the county, comprises the hmlt. of Warrington. The land is level, and subject to winter floods. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £148. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient structure, with a lofty spired tower, which was partially rebuilt in 1807, and contains a good peal of bells. In the churchyard was formerly a chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary, with a chantry founded by Lord Basset. The living was once held by Browne, the author of "Piscatory Eclogues," while Scott, the commentator, and John Newton, were curates. The latter, with Cowper, composed the "Olney Hymns." The parochial charities produce about £112 per annum, out of which £66 is realised by the Causeway estate. There are British, National, and infant schools; also twelve almshouses, which were erected and endowed by the Misses Smith, belonging to the Society of Friends. The Baptists, Independents, and the Society of Friends, have each a place of worship. Courts leet and baron are held under the Earl of Dartmouth, who is lord of the manor, at the Bull inn annually. Market day is Thursday. Fairs are held on Easter Monday, cherry fair June 29th, and a pleasure fair October 13th.

OLNEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Barby, co. Northampton, 5 miles N.W. of Daventry.

OLRICK, a par. in the co. of Caithness, Scotland. It comprises the vil. of Castletown. It extends in length about 5 miles from N. to S., with an extreme breadth of 3½ miles. It is bounded on the N. by Dunnet Bay, and on the other sides by the pars. of Dunnet, Bower, and Thurso. The surface is generally level, but rises towards the S., where it becomes hilly, affording excellent sheep-walks. The soil of the arable lands lying towards the sea is rich and fertile. Oats are extensively cultivated. The principal hills are Durran and Olrick. From the latter there is a fine prospect, with traces of a watchtower on its summit. The parish contains the loch of Durran, which is nearly 3 miles in circumference. Along the coast, which is rugged and shelving, though not bold, are some sandy links. To the E. is Castle Hill Bay, where is a commodious harbour, and near it another bay called Murkle, which might easily be made an excellent harbour at no great expense. The village of Olrick is about 16 miles N.W. of Wick, and 3½ S.E. of Thurso. It is situated on Dunnet Bay. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the sandstone, limestone, slate, and flagstone quarries, with which this district abounds, and others in the fisheries. There was formerly a nunnery at Murkle, connected with St. Columba's church. This par. is in the presb. of Caithness, and synod of Sutherland and Caithness. The minister has a stipend of £218. The parish church was erected in 1841. There are also a Free church, parochial school and library, and other schools. The principal mansions are Murkle (a seat of the late Earl of Caithness), Ratter, Olrick, and Castle Hill, this last so called from an old castle, of which scarcely a vestige is discernible. Picts' houses occur in various parts of the parish.

OLVESTON, a par. in the lower div. of Langley hund., co. Gloucester, 9 miles N. of Bristol, its post town, and 7½ N.W. of Yate railway station. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on the river Severn, and on the high road from Sodbury to Aust Passage. The par. comprises the tythgs. of Upper Tockington and Cote, also the hmlts. of Ingst and Rudgway. The soil is of a light loamy nature, with a subsoil of limestone, and interspersed with red marl, sand and black clay. An Act for enclosing waste lands was passed in 1841. The impropriate tithes belong to the Dean and Chapter of Bristol. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £799, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Bristol. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, is an ancient structure, with a square embattled and pinnacled tower containing a clock and six bells. The interior of the church contains an ancient brass to Walter Dennis Knighton, a former lord of the manor. The church was restored and enlarged in 1840. The parochial charities produce about £25 per annum. There is an endowed National school. The Wesleyans, Reformed Wesleyans, and Society of Friends, have each a place of worship. Robert Cann Lippincott, Esq., is lord of the manor. An annual cattle fair is held at Tockington on the 9th May and 6th December.

OMAGH, a bar. in the co. of Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. Its boundaries are co. Donegal, the bars. of Strabane, Dungannon, Clogher, and co. Fermanagh. It is 31 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 12 miles. It contains the towns of Omagh, Castlederg, and Drumquin, the pars. of Clougherney, Dromore, Drumragh, Kilskeery, East and West Longfield, Skirts of Urney and Ardstraw, Termonamongan, and parts of Cappagh, Donacavey, Magheracross, and Termonmaguirk.

OMAGH, a post and market town, and the chief town of co. Tyrone, in the par. of Drumragh, in the bar. of Omagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 109 miles from Dublin. It is a station on the Londonderry and Enniskillen railway. It is situated on the river Strule, where the Camowen and Drumragh join their waters, and on the road from Enniskillen to Coleraine. The principal street, which ascends a sharp declivity, is a well-edificed thoroughfare, crossed at one extremity by two other streets. It contains the parish church of Drumragh, erected in 1777 by the Mervyns, a Roman Catholic chapel, and several meeting-houses belonging to Protestant Dissenters, also charity and National schools. The principal public buildings are the market-houses, court-house, county gaol, poorhouse, infirmary, two banks, fever hospital, &c. It is an assize and sessions town, and the headquarters of the N.W. military district, also the site of a chief police station. One weekly newspaper, the Tyrone Constitution, is published on Friday. The leather trade is carried on to some extent, and a brisk business is done in corn. The town was burnt in 1689 by James II., and in 1743 the greater part of the place was again destroyed by fire arising from accident. A religious establishment is said to have been founded here at the close of the 8th century, the site of which was given to Sir H. Piers at the suppression. In 1498 O'Nial surrendered the town to the Earl of Kildare, and in 1609 it came to Lord Castlehaven, and subsequently to the Mervyns, from whom it was wrested in 1641 by Phelim O'Nial. Market day is Saturday. Fairs are held once a month.

OMBERSLEY, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, co. Worcester, 4 miles S.W. of Droitwich, its post town and railway station, and 6 N. of Worcester. The village, which is extensive, is situated on the river Severn, and is wholly agricultural. Ombersley had formerly a market, under grant from Edward III. to Evesham Abbey, but the privilege has long been disused. The manor came from the Mores to Archbishop Sandys, in whose family it still remains. The Worcestershire hounds meet in the neighbourhood. The land, which is extremely fertile, is partly in hop-grounds, and the scenery varied. Courts baron and courts of survey, with view of frankpledge, are held twice a year. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £390. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is a modern structure with a spired tower containing six bells. It was rebuilt in 1829, at an expense of £15,000. In the burial-ground are the remains of an ancient cross. The parochial charities produce about £50 per annum. There are three free schools, also an infant school. Ombersley Court, late the residence of the dowager Marchioness of Downshire, was built about 1740, and contains some rare paintings by Vandyke and other masters.

O'MEATH, a hmlt. in the bar. of Lower Dundalk, co. Louth, near Carlingford.

OMEY, a par. in the bar. of Ballynahinch, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, containing the town of Clifden, its post town. It is 10 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 3 miles. The islands of Omey, Tarbert, Ennisturk, Cruagh, High, and Friar are included within the limits. It is situated on the coast of the Atlantic, between Ardbear harbour and Claggin Bay, in the vicinity of Aghris Point. The surface is somewhat mountainous, and contains a large proportion of bog and waste land. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. with Ballynakill, £87, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which is at Clifden, was built in 1812 by means of a gift from the late Board of First Fruits. The two Roman Catholic chapels are united to that of Ballindoon. There are several day schools in this parish.

OMOA, NEW TOWN, a vil. in the par. of Shotts, co. Lanark, Scotland, 5 miles S.E. of Airdrie, and 3 E. of Motherwell. It is situated on the road from Airdrie to Carluke. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the ironworks.

OMPTON, or ALMPTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Kneesal, South Clay div. of the wap. of Bassetlaw, co. Nottingham, 3 miles S.E. of Ollerton, its post town, and 10 N.W. of Newark. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road from Ollerton to Newark, and is wholly agricultural. Earl Manvers is lord of the manor.

ONAGHT, a vil. in the island par. of Aranmore, bar. of Aran, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles W.N.W. of Kilronan. In the vicinity is the hill of Dun-Onaght, with its church ruins.

ONCHAN. See KIRK-ONCHAN, Isle of Man.

ONECOTE, or ONCOTT, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Leek, N. div. of the hund. of Totmonslow, co. Stafford, 5 miles S.E. of Leek, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Hamps, and is chiefly agricultural. There are copper mines at Mixon, and traces of copper and lead are found imbedded among limestone in most of the hills. Within this chapelry is a deep valley surrounded by rocks called Narrowdale, where the sun is invisible for several months in the year. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £110, in the patron. of the Vicar of Leek. The church is a small stone edifice, with a tower containing one bell. The local charities produce about £11 4*s.* per annum, of which £10 is from land, and the remainder from the interest of £30 left by Joan Adsetts in 1788. The money is divided among the poor of Onecote and Bradnop.

ONEHOUSE, a par. in the hund. of Stow, co. Suffolk, 2 miles N.W. of Stowmarket, its railway station and post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The Stow union poorhouse is situated in this parish. The soil consists of a stiff clay. There is a mineral spring. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £246. The church, dedicated to St. John, is a small flint, stone, and brick structure, with a round tower containing one bell. The chancel was rebuilt at the beginning of the present century. There is a village school. Robert John Pettiward, Esq., of Finborough Hall, is lord of the manor. The hall, which is partly moated, belonged in the reign of Edward III. to Bartholomew Burghersh, one of the knights appointed to attend on the Black Prince at the battle of Crecy.

O'NEILLAND, EAST, a bar. in the co. of Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. Its boundaries are Lough Neagh, co. Down, and the bars. of Lower Orior and West O'Neilland. It is about 9 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 5 miles. It contains Portadown and Lurgan, and the pars. of Montiaghs, Leagoe, and parts of Magheralin and Shankill.

O'NEILLAND, WEST, a bar. in the co. of Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is bounded by co. Tyrone, Lough Neagh, and the bars. of Lower Orior and East O'Neilland. Its length is 11 miles, and its extreme breadth 8 miles. This bar. contains the town of Rich Hill, and the pars. of Drum-cree, Newry, and Fartaraghan, and parts of those of Armagh, Clonfeacle, Grange, Killyman, Kilmore, Loughgall, and Mullaghbrack.

ONELY, a hmlt. in the par. of Barby, hund. of Fawsley, co. Northampton, 7 miles N. by W. of Daventry.

ONESACRE, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Bradfield, West Riding co. York, 6 miles N.W. of Sheffield.

ONGAR, a hund. in the co. of Essex, contains the pars. of Bobbingworth, Chigwell, Fyfield, Greenstead, Kelvedon-Hatch, Lambourne, High and Little Laver, Magdalen-Laver, Loughton, Moreton, Navestock, Norton-Mandeville, North-Weald-Bassett, Chipping and High Ongar, Abbots and Beauchamp Roothing, Shelley, Stanford-Rivers, Abbots and Tawney Stapleford, Stondon-Massey, Thoydon-Bois, and Garnon and Mount Thoydon, comprising an area of 58;060 acres.

ONGAR, CHIPPING. See CHIPPING-ONGAR, co. Essex.

ONGAR, HIGH, a par. in the hund. of Ongar, co. Essex, 1 mile N.E. of Chipping-Ongar, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road to Chelmsford, a short distance from the river Roding. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. It is a meet for the Essex hounds. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £1,282. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a spacious structure with a brick tower, which was erected in 1858 in place of the old steeple, which was removed. The register dates from 1653. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum, besides almshouses. Forest Hall, Chevers, Ash Hall, and Ongar Park are the principal residences. There is a National school.

ONIBURY, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Munslow, co. Salop, 5 miles N.W. of Ludlow, its post town. It is a station on the Shrewsbury and Hereford railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Onny, and is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Walton. The soil is of a clayey, gravelly, and limy nature. A part of the vil. of Onibury is in the par. of Stanton Lacy and part in Stokesay par. It is a meet for the Ludlow hounds. The parish is traversed by the road from Ludlow to Shrewsbury. There are several quarries of good building-stone. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £330, and the glebe comprises 90 acres, valued at £140 per annum. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £316. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure with a tower containing a clock and four bells. The interior of the church has a brass of Dorothy Pytt, bearing date 1633. The church was restored and repewed in 1837, and reroofed in 1840. There is a National school for both sexes, which is endowed with an annuity of £6 13*s.* 4*d.*, bequeathed by William Norton, Esq., in 1593. The Earl of Craven is lord of the manor.

ONNELEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Madeley, N. div. of the hund. of Pirehill, co. Stafford, 6 miles S.W. of Newcastle-under-Lyme.

ONN, HIGH AND LITTLE, tnshps. in the par. of Church-Eaton, W. div. of the hund. of Cuttlestone, co. Stafford, 7 miles W. by N. of Penkridge.

ONNY, a small river of co. Salop, rises in Shelve Poole, under Stiperstones, and joins the Teme at Oakley Park.

ONSLOW, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Chad, co. Salop, 2 miles W. of Shrewsbury.

ONSLOW, a hmlt. in the par. of Pontesbury, co. Salop, 7 miles S.W. of Shrewsbury.

ONSTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Weaverham, second div. of Eddisbury hund., co. Chester, 1½ mile W. of Weaverham, and 5 miles N.W. of Northwich. It is a small village near the line of the Grand Junction railway, and is wholly agricultural. The trustees of the late J. H. S. Barry, Esq., are lords of the manor.

OOLA, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Coonagh, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles E.S.E. of Pallas Grean. It is a station on the Great Southern and Western railway. The surface consists of part of the Golden Vale. It has woodland and good pasture. It is traversed by the road from Tipperary to Limerick. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Emly, val. £265. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Sollokid. There is a day school. Castle Lloyd is the principal residence. There is a police station in the village, and at a short distance the ruins of Ballyneety Castle.

OONY, a small lough in co. Monaghan, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Clones.

OPENSHAW, a tnshp. in the par. of Manchester, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 3½ miles S.E. of Manchester, its post town. It is a station on the Sheffield and Lincolnshire railway. It is situated on the Manchester and Stockport canal, and on the road to Ashton-under-Lyne. There are extensive cotton mills and dye works, also a large railway carriage manufactory, which together afford employment to a large number of the inhabitants. The soil is of a clayey nature, alternating with sand, and resting on a subsoil of sandstone. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester. The church, dedicated to St. Barnabas, has a square tower surmounted by a spire. The church was erected in 1838 at an outlay of £4,500. There are commodious National schools for both sexes, endowed with £500, and in which a Sunday-school is also held. The Wesleyans and Roman Catholics have each a place of worship. George C. Legh, Esq., is lord of the manor.

ORAN, a par. in the bar. of Ballymoe, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 8 miles N.W. of Roscommon. Frenchpark is its post town. It is 3 miles long and 2½ broad. The surface, which lies along the small river Suck, consists mostly of a good soil. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. with Drimtemple, £137, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is at Drimtemple. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, a hedge school, and several day schools. St. Patrick is alleged to have founded a religious house here, which became the burial-place of St. Cethecus. There are scanty ruins of a church, erected on the site of this foundation, also of a round tower.

ORANBEG, a vil. in the par. of Oranmore, bar. of Dunkellin, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 1 mile N.E. of Oranmore. It is situated on the road to Athenry.

ORANMORE, a par. and post town in the bars. of Galway and Dunkellin, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles E. of Galway, and 127 from Dublin. It is a station on the Midland Great Western railway. The par. is 9 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 4½ miles. The surface lies on Galway Bay, in the vicinity of Lough Corrib. It is boggy, with a good proportion of fertile soil. The roads from Galway to Dublin and Limerick, and from Tuam to Gort and Ennis, traverse the interior. The villages of Renville and Newtown-Butler are within the parochial limits. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. £225, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1834. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Ballinacourty. There are several day schools in the parish. The town is situated at the head of Oranmore Bay. It is a petty sessions town and police station. The houses are small, and the streets irregularly laid out, but, from its being situated on a great thoroughfare, the place is generally busy. Oran Castle is a seat occupying the site of an ancient castle, built by the Clanricardes, and was held by the rebels in 1643. Wallscourt is the seat of Lord Wallscourt. The Browne family of Castlemacgarret take title of baron from this place. A round tower is seen at Murrough. Fairs are held on the 23rd May and 20th October.

ORANSA. See ORONSAY, co. Inverness.

ORBY, a par. in the Marsh div. of the wap. of Candleshoe, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 6½ miles N.E. of Spilsby, its post town, and 2 from the Burgh or Gunby station on the East Lincolnshire railway. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. It is situated on the W. side of the road from Burgh to Great Grimsby, about 4 miles from the German Ocean. The impropriation belongs to the Bishop of Lincoln. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £160, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient freestone structure, with a tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains an old octangular font. It was erected in the latter end of the 13th century by one of the priors of Thornholm, and was thoroughly restored and repaired in 1848. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is a school for children of both sexes. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. The Rt. Hon. R. C. N. Hamilton and the Rev. R. G. Walls, M.A., are lords of the manor and principal landowners.

ORCHARD, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Sixpenny-Handley, West Shaston div. of co. Dorset, 4½ miles S.W. of Shaftesbury, its post town. The parish is of small extent, and wholly agricultural. The village is situated on a branch of the river Stour. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Iwerne-Minster, in the dioc. of Sarum. The church is a modern stone structure, erected on the site of the old one.

ORCHARDLEIGH, a par. in the hund. of Frome, co. Somerset, 2 miles N. of Frome, its railway station and post town. The par., which is of small extent, is situated 2 miles W. of the road from Bath to Weymouth, and is partly bounded by the river Frome. The soil consists of loam and marl on a subsoil of limestone. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The land is entirely pasture and woodland. The greater portion of the parish is included in the park. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £167. The church is a small Norman edifice of great antiquity, and has a tower containing one bell. The interior of the church contains some monuments of the Champneys family. The register dates from 1670. A Sunday-school is held at the church. Orchardleigh Park, the principal residence, is situated in well-wooded grounds, which comprise nearly 800 acres, and are adorned by an artificial lake of 28 acres. William Duckworth, Esq., J.P., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

ORCHARD-PORTMAN, a par. in the hund. of Taunton, co. Somerset, 2 miles S.E. of Taunton, its post town. The par., which is of small extent, is situated on the high road from Taunton to Chard. The Blackdown hounds meet in this parish. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £115 16*s.*, and the glebe comprises 24 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone structure with a square tower, containing four bells. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. Lord Portman is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

ORCHARD, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Sixpenny-Handley, co. Dorset, 4½ miles S.W. of Shaftesbury, its post town, and 4 N.E. of Sturminster Newton. The village, which is small and wholly agricultural, is situated in the vale of Blackmore on the river Stour. The land is chiefly in pasture and orchard, with a small proportion of arable. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. and vic. of Fontmell-Magna, in the dioc. of Sarum. The church is small. The register dates from 1653.

ORCHARD WYNDHAM, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Decuman, co. Somerset, 2 miles S. of Watchett, and 15 W. of Bridgwater. It is situated on a creek of the Bristol Channel, and was given at the Conquest to the Mohuns. It now belongs to the Wyndhams, who have an old seat with a chapel attached, built by Sir John Sydenham in 1490.

ORCHESTON ST. GEORGE, a par. in the hund. of Heytesbury, co. Wilts, 7 miles N.W. of Amesbury, the same distance E. of Lavington, and 12 S. by E. of Devizes, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road between Salisbury and Devizes, traversing Salisbury Plain, and is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Elston. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £493 13*s.* 4*d., and the glebe comprises 36 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £485, in the patron. of Wadham College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. George, is an ancient structure, with E. and W. windows of stained glass. It was erected in the 14th century, but was completely restored in 1833. There is a National school. R. S. Chapman, Esq., is lord of the manor.

ORCHESTON ST. MARY, a par. in the hund. of Branch, co. Wilts, half a mile N. of Orcheston St. George, and 11 miles S.E. of Devizes, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. It is situated near the road from Devizes to Salisbury. The glebe comprises 38 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £361, in the patron. of Clare Hall, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone edifice, with a square tower containing three bells. The chancel has recently been rebuilt. Miss M. F. Mills is lady of the manor.

ORCHY, a rivulet of co. Argyle, Scotland. It rises in Loch Tulla, and, flowing through Glenorchy, falls into Loch Awe.

ORCOP, a par. in the upper div. of Wormelow hund., co. Hereford, 8 miles W. of Ross, its post town, and 6 E. of Pontrilas railway station. The village, which is of irregular form, is situated on a branch of the river Wye, and on the W. side of the Hereford and Monmouth road. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil consists of clay and loam, with a subsoil of sandstone and limestone. The living is a don. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £31. The church, dedicated to St. John, is an ancient stone structure, with a wooden tower containing four bells. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum. There is a school, which is supported by the Rev. M. H. Miller, M.A. G. Symons, Esq., is lord of the manor.

ORD, a tnshp. in the par. of Tweedmouth, hund. of Islandshire, co. Northumberland, formerly in Durham, 1 mile S.W. of Berwick. It is situated on the river Tweed.

ORD, a demesne and rivulet in the Isle of Skye, co. Inverness, Scotland, 5 miles S.W. of Broadford. It is situated on the shore of Loch Eishort.

ORDIE, a trout stream of co. Perth, Scotland. It rises in the parish of Aughtergaven, and joins the Tay at Luncarty.

ORDIQUHILL, a par. in the co. of Banff, Scotland. It was formerly a chplry. in the par. of Fordyce, but was erected into a separate parish about the year 1622. It contains the vils. of Corncairn and Ordiquhill. It extends in length about 3½ miles from E. to W., with an extreme breadth of 2½ miles. It is bounded by the pars. of Fordyce, Boindie, Marnoch, and Grange. The surface is moderately even towards the N., but in other parts is of a hilly character. It attains its greatest altitude at Knock Hill, on the S.W. boundary, where it rises 1,640 feet above sea-level. The peat mosses are very extensive, and there is a considerable tract of heath. A large portion of the land has recently been drained, and is now in an excellent state of cultivation. The soil is in general deep and good, but on a cold and wet subsoil. The village of Ordiquhill is about 9½ miles S.W. of Banff, and 6 from the Keith station on the Great North of Scotland railway. It is situated on the river Boyne, and is traversed by the roads from Banff and Portsoy to Huntley. The prevailing rocks are gneiss and mica slate. There are numerous mineral springs, which were formerly much frequented. This par. is in the presb. of Fordyce and synod of Aberdeen. The minister has a stipend of £204. The parish church was erected in 1805. Besides the parish church are a Free church and parochial school and library. Park House is the principal residence. W. Godall, who assisted Ruddiman in his works, was a native.

ORD-MOOR, a demesne near Mullbuy Common, co. Ross, Scotland, 3 miles N.W. of Beauly. It belongs to the Mackenzies. Large sheep and cattle fairs are held here once in every month between March and December.

ORD-OF-CAITHNESS, or CAITHNESS PAPS, one of the Morven hills, 1,200 feet high, on the borders of Caithness and Sutherland, Scotland, 2 miles N.E. of Helmsdale. It is situated near the coast, and has been cut through by the Great Northern road.

ORDSALL, a par. in the Hatfield div. of the wap. of Bassetlaw, co. Nottingham, 1 mile S. of East Retford, its post town. The village is situated on the river Idle, about half a mile from the London road. The par. includes the hmlts. of Thrumpton, White Houses, and South Retford, and forms a suburb of East Retford. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the paper mills. The Chesterfield and Worksop canal, and the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire and Great Northern railways pass in the vicinity. Till the close of the last century this district was chiefly open forest ground. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £480. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £424. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a lofty square tower, which was struck by lightning in 1823. There are charities to a small amount. The Duke of Newcastle is lord of the manor.

ORE, a par. in the hund. of Baldslow, rape of Hastings, co. Sussex, 2 miles N.W. of Hastings, its post town. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the road from Hastings to Battle, and commands a sea view. The land is partly in hop-grounds. The Hastings union poorhouse and the cemetery are in this parish. The surface is diversified with hill and dale, and tolerably well wooded, especially the estate of Coghurst. Sandstone is quarried for building. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £580. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, has a low square tower and S. aisle recently added. The interior of the church contains a double canopied brass bearing date 1400. The register dates from 1600. A new district Church, called Christ church, was opened in 1859 for the convenience of the inhabitants residing at Fairlight. There is a National school for both sexes. Ore Place and Coghurst Hall are the principal residences. The former was once the residence of John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, but has been recently rebuilt by Sir Hansard Elphinstone, Bart., so that but little remains of the original edifice. There is a chalybeate spring.

ORELL AND FORD, a tnshp. in the par. of Sephton, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 5 miles N. of Liverpool.

ORESTONE, a hmlt. in the borough of Plymouth, hund. of Roborough, co. Devon, 1 mile S.E. of Plymouth. It is situated on the Sound, near the mouth of the river Plym, and has a large quarry of red sandstone. A fossil skeleton of a rhinoceros was found here embedded in the rock, and is now preserved in the museum of the College of Surgeons in London.

ORETON, a tnshp. in the par. of Stottesden, co. Salop, 4 miles N.E. of Cleobury Mortimer.

ORFORD, a par., post and seaport town, having separate jurisdiction, but locally in the hund. of Plomesgate, co. Suffolk, 5 miles S.W. of Aldborough, 12 E. of Woodbridge, and 20 E. by N. of Ipswich. The parish, which was anciently called Sudborn-cum-Capellâ de Orford, is situated on the river Ore, which joins the sea in Hollesley Bay, below Butley Creek. It contains, besides the town of its own name, the lordship of Gedgrave, Havergate Island, and Raydon. Orford sent three ships to the siege of Calais in the reign of Edward III. It was formerly a market town and representative borough, with an extensive trade prior to its harbour being choked by the shifting sands. The river is now navigable only up to Aldborough quay, but a considerable trade is done in coal and corn. There is also an extensive oyster fishery, carried on under license from the corporation. The town, which was incorporated prior to the reign of Richard III., is governed, under a charter of James I., by a mayor, recorder, 8 portmen, 12 burgesses, chamberlain, coroner, harbour-master, and other officers. There are two lighthouses, termed High and Low Lights, or more frequently the "Orford Ness Lights," within a mile of each other, and about 1½ mile E. of the town, which has a townhall, but is ill built, and has recently been reduced to a state of comparative insignificance. The elective franchise was granted in the 23rd of Edward I., but the exercise of it was discontinued till the reign of Henry VI., from which period two members were regularly returned to parliament until the passing of the Reform Act, when the borough was disfranchised. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £317, and the glebe comprises 10½ acres. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Sudborne, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is an ancient structure, with a ruined chancel and tower, the latter having fallen down in 1830. The interior of the church contains an old font, nine brasses bearing dates prior to 1500, and a monument to the Rev. Francis Mason, a former rector, and author of "Vindiciæ Ecclesiæ Anglicanæ." There were formerly two chapels dedicated to SS. John the Baptist and Leonard. The Methodists have a place of worship. On an eminence at the W. end of the town are the ruins of Orford Castle, supposed to have been built very soon after the Conquest. It consists of an eighteen sided keep 54 feet in diameter and 12 thick, flanked by three square embattled towers 90 feet in height, which serve as a sea mark. There are also traces of a gateway tower, and of an outer wall and double fosse. Orford gives title of earl to the Walpole family. Herbert de Losinga, the first bishop of Norwich, is said to have been born here. A hospital, dedicated to St. Leonard, was founded here in the reign of Edward II., and continued to flourish till 1589, and a priory of Augustine Canons was established about the 23rd of Edward I. A fair is held on the 24th June.

ORFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Warrington, co. Lancaster, 1 mile N. of Warrington.

ORFORD, an ext. par. place adjoining the par. of Binbrook St. Gabriel, in the S. div. of the hund. of Walshcroft, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 1 mile N.W. of Binbrook, and 7 N.E. of Market Rasen. There was formerly a priory of Præmonstratensian nuns, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, and founded in the reign of Henry II. by William de Albini.

ORFORDNESS, a promontory on the coast of Suffolk, in N. lat. 52° 5′, and E. long. 1° 34′, 2 miles E. of Orford. It is marked by the Orfordness lights, and is the point where the tides of the North Sea and English Channel meet, with sands to the N. and S.

ORGARSWICK, a par. in the lib. of Romney Marsh, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 2½ miles N.W. of Dymchurch, and 4 N.E. of New Romney, its post town. It is situated in Romney Marsh, and consists of a few farmhouses. The living is a sinecure rect. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £39, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. There is no church, the few inhabitants frequenting that of Dymchurch.

ORGREAVE, a tnshp. in the par. of Alrewas, N. div. of the hund. of Offlow, co. Stafford, 4½ miles N.E. of Lichfield. It is situated on the river Trent.

ORGREAVE, a tnshp. in the par. of Rotherham, S. div. of the wap. of Strafforth, West Riding co. York, 4 miles S.W. of Rotherham. It is situated on the W. bank of the river Rother, near the North Midland railway.

ORINSAY, an islet in the par. of North Uist, Western Islands, coast of Scotland, 3 miles S. of Boveray Island.

ORIOR LOWER, a bar. in co. Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is bounded by East and West O'Neilland, co. Down, and by the bars. of Upper and Lower Fews. It contains the vils. of Pointzpass and Tandragee, and the pars. of Ballymore, and parts of those of Forkill, Kilclooney, Killevy, Kilmore, and Loughgilly.

ORIOR, UPPER, a bar. in co. Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. Its boundaries are Fews, and cos. Louth and Down. It contains the pars. of Jonesborough, and parts of Forkill, Killevy, Loughgilly, and Newry.

ORITOR, a vil. in the bar. of Dungannon, co. Tyrone, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Cookstown. Fairs are held here in July, August, October, and November.

ORKNEY ISLANDS, the Orcades and Thule of the ancients, are a group of islands lying off the coast of Caithness, at the north-eastern extremity of continental Scotland, from which they are separated by a channel called Pentland Frith, from 6 to 12 miles broad. They are grouped with considerable compactness, and lie between the parallels of 54° 47′ and 59° 20′ N. lat., and between 2° 4′ and 3° 23′ W. long. They are upwards of 67 in number, but only 29 of them are inhabited, the remainder being small holms appropriated to the pasturage of sheep. There are also many rocky islets, called skerries, which sustain no herbage, and are therefore altogether waste. The aggregate area is about 600 square miles, or 384,000 acres, of which about 84,000 are under cultivation. The rocks belong to the Old Red sandstone formation, with the exception of a little granite near Stromness, and some basalt dykes. In the sandstone numbers of rare fossil fish, including the asterolepis, have been met with, and in the peat mosses, stumps of large trees, hazel-nuts, deer's-horns, and other carbonised fossils occur, showing that forests once covered the surface, although at present it is bog and moorland, the climate being eminently unpropitious to the growth of trees. The soil is chiefly clay and sand, intermixed with peat-moss, and in many places shell marl, and bog iron-ore are met with. Sanday is the most fertile of the islands. There are no streams deserving the name of rivers in any of the islands; but springs of pure water are frequent, and several freshwater lakes, the largest of which, called Stennis, is in the island of Mainland, and measures near 14 miles in circuit.—These islands were anciently inhabited by the Picts, but were taken possession of by the Norwegians in 870 under Harold Harfager, and continued to be governed by a line of Norwegian jarls or eorls till 1468, sometimes acknowledging the sovereignty of Denmark and Norway, and at other times that of Scotland, but were finally secured to James III. of Scotland as the dower of his queen, and have subsequently been held as a stewartry by the Sinclairs, Stewarts, Mortons, Hamiltons, and at present by the house of Dundas, Earls of Zetland.—The population at the commencement of the present century was 24,445, which had increased in 1851 to 31,455, and in 1861 to 32,395. The old rent, according to the Scottish valuation, was £7,050, but the real rent, under the new valuation in 1860, was £41,694. For political purposes the Orkneys constitute a civil county, returning, in conjunction with the Shetland archipelago and Fair Island, one member to the imperial parliament. The parliamentary constituency in 1860 was—Orkney 429, and Shetland 182, making together 611. They are governed in common with the Shetland Isles as one county, by a lord-lieutenant, sheriff, and vice-admiral, assisted by a sheriff substitute and other officers.—The county town is Kirkwall, in the island of Pomona, the only royal burgh in the shire. The whole district is divided into 30 parishes, containing about 97 villages and hamlets. About 13 of the islands are of considerable size. The principal are Mainland, or Pomona (the largest), Coppinshay, Gava, Gairsay, Lambholm, Papa, South Hoy, North Ronaldshay, Westray, Sanday, Eday, Stronsay, Rousay, and Shapinsay. Nearly all the larger islands are of exceedingly irregular form, being pierced in every direction by friths or arms of the sea. In some of these islands the coasts are flat and sandy, and in others bold and rocky, particularly towards the W., where the cliffs rise from 100 to 500 feet, and in the island of Hoy to the height of 1,000 feet perpendicularly. The surface is in general level, the only mountains being in the island of Hoy, and here the highest elevation (Wart Hill) is but 1,600 feet. The climate is moist, but not severe. In winter, storms of sleet and rain are frequent, but in summer the weather is generally fine and steady. Agriculture has until very recently been neglected, in favour of the fisheries and the manufacture of kelp, which last industry is now much less than formerly. Great exertions have within the present century been made to bring more of the land into cultivation, and shell marl and seaweed are extensively employed as manure. —The native breeds of cattle and sheep are very small, the latter having soft hairy fleeces and dun faces; but many new varieties have been introduced of late years with the object of improving the natives. Rabbits and poultry are numerous, and game is abundant. During the season of incubation the cliffs swarm with myriads of sea-fowl, and in the hilly parts eagles are so numerous, that the king's falconer in the present century was wont to visit the islands annually for the young hawks and falcons. The herring and cod fisheries are very productive, and large numbers of lobsters are sent to London.—The principal manufacture carried on in these islands is that of straw plait for bonnets, in which at one time about 5,000 young women were employed, though at present scarcely half that number. Wire-wrought hosiery, hemp, flax, linen, woollens, and stockings also employ a few hands. Boat-building, sail-making, and cordage, are carried on to some extent. Commerce has been greatly facilitated by the improvements effected in Kirkwall Harbour. There are besides deep and well-sheltered harbours at Inganess Bay and Stromness, which last place ranks as a burgh of regality. At Start Ness and Pentland Skerries are lighthouses. The principal exports are herrings, of which above 40,000 barrels are sent to Spain and other continental countries, hardy cattle for stock, wool, hides, butter, eggs, kelp, straw plait, an inferior variety of barley called bigg, hare-skins, and lobsters.—The principal seats are Græmsay, of Sir G. E. Honyman, Bart.; Tankerness, of Baikie; and Tresness, of Traill, M.P. Orkney constitutes a synod of the national church, containing three presbyteries; and was the seat of a bishopric, now united with and merged into Aberdeen. The family of Fitzmaurice take from hence the title of earl.

ORLESTONE WITH HAM-STREET, a par. partly in the hund. of Ham, and partly in the lib. of Romney Marsh, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 6 miles S. by W. of Ashford, its post town, and 3 from Appledore. It is a station on the Ashford and Hastings branch line of railway. The village, which is small, is situated near the Military canal, and is chiefly agricultural. Bricks are made in the parish. The land is divided between arable and pasture, with about 700 acres of woodland. The soil is fertile, producing good wheat crops. There are several chalybeate springs. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £157 18*s.*, and the glebe consists of 48 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £155. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. It is situated in a secluded spot about three-quarters of a mile N. of the village. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans. Thomas Thornhill, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner. An annual cattle fair is held the last Thursday in August.

ORLETON, a par. in the hund. of Wolphy, co. Hereford, 5 miles S.W. of Ludlow, and 1¼ mile from Woofferton, its railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on a branch of the river Teme, and near the Leominster canal. Orleton is a petty sessions town, and was formerly held by the Mortimers, and subsequently belonged to Blount the antiquary. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The land is partly in hop grounds. The soil consists of clay and sand, with a subsoil of rock and sand of a singular nature. Many of the houses are of ancient date. The "Churn" landslip is in this parish, also the hamlet of Comberton. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £145 14*s.*, and the vicarial for £129 9*s.* The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £166, in the patron. of the Governors of Lucton School. The church is of great antiquity, and has a tower crowned with an oak-shingled spire, and containing three bells. The church has an ancient font, a piscina, two chests hewn out of the solid oak, portions of several stained windows, and monuments to the Blount family. The churchyard contains an old cross. The parochial charities produce about £5 12*s.* per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. It was erected, with a master's residence, in 1855, at an outlay of £1,000. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. Orleton Court is an ancient building. W. Blount, Esq., is lord of the manor. A large cattle fair is held on the 23rd of April, and is celebrated for its best bred "Herefords."

ORLETON, a tnshp. in the par. of Eastham, upper div. of the hund. of Doddingtree, co. Worcester, 7 miles S.E. of Tenbury, its post town, and 3 E. of Eastham. It is situated on the river Teme, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Eastham, in the dioc. of Hereford. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist.

ORLINGBURY, a hund. in co. Northampton, contains the pars. of Brixworth, Broughton, Cransley, Hannington, Hardwick, Great and Little Harrowden, Isham, Lamport, Old, Orlingbury, Pitchley, Scaldwell, and Walgrave, comprising an area of 29,600 acres.

ORLINGBURY, a par. in the hund. of the same name, co. Northampton, 3½ miles N. of Wellingborough, its post town, and 4 from Kettering. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The tithes were commuted for land and corn rents under an Enclosure Act in 1808. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £405. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a lofty pinnacled square tower. The church was opened in 1843. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a large, newly-erected school adjoining the church. The Dissenters of various creeds have each a place of worship. Orlingbury House, the principal residence, is a stone mansion of recent construction. Allen A. Young, Esq., is lord of the manor.

ORME'S HEAD, GREAT AND LITTLE, two headlands on the coast of Carnarvon, with a rocky bay between, near the estuary of the Conway. They form part of a lofty limestone ridge of hills, rising from 500 to 700 feet above the sea level, and serve as sea-marks. Sea-fowl breed in the cliffs, and several varieties of rare plants are found.

ORMISTON, a par. in the co. of Haddington, Scotland. Shortly after the Reformation this parish was considerably enlarged by the annexation of the estate of Paystoun, which was then disjoined from Pencaitland. It comprises the vils. of Ormiston and House of Muir. It extends in length about 4½ miles, with an extreme breadth of 3½ miles. It is bounded on the W. by the co. of Edinburgh, and on the other sides by the pars. of Tranent, Pencaitland, and Humbrie. The surface is chiefly level, and in an excellent state of cultivation. Freestone, ironstone, and limestone abound, and coal is worked on the property of the Earl of Hopetoun. At Dodridge Law are traces of a Danish or British camp. The village of Ormiston is about 2 miles S. of Tranent railway station, and 8 W. of Haddington. It is situated on the left bank of the river Tyne, near its head. It comprises one spacious street, with an ancient cross in the centre, near the site where once stood a Roman Catholic chapel. The houses consist of two stories, and are well built, many of them having good gardens and orchards, with which the district abounds. This par. is in the presb. of Dalkeith, and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale. The minister has a stipend of £250. The parish church was erected in 1856. There are also a Free church, a parochial school, besides other schools. Ormiston Hall, the seat of the Earl of Hopetoun, is near the old seat where Wishart the martyr was taken by Bothwell and given up to Cardinal Beaton. In the garden is Wishart's yew-tree, said to be upwards of 300 years old; its trunk is 11 feet in circumference and 25 feet high. Lord Justice Cockburn was a native of Ormiston, and in 1747 sold the manor, which had belonged for centuries to his family, to John Earl of Hopetoun, who then became proprietor of the whole parish.

ORMOND, LOWER, a bar. in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is bounded by Kings County, co. Galway, and the bars. of Upper Ormond and Owney and Arra. It extends over an area of 135,724 acres, and contains Cloghjordan and the pars. of Aglishcloghane, Ardcrony, Ballingarry, Borrisokane, Cloghprior, Dorrha, Dromineer, Finnoe, Killodiernan, Knigh, Lorrha, Loughkeen, Modreeny, Terryglass, Uskane, and parts of those of Kilbarron, Kilruane, Monsea, and Nenagh.

ORMOND, UPPER, a bar. in co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is surrounded by the bars. of Lower Ormond, Upper Kilnemanagh, Owney, Arra, and King's County. It area is 79,472 acres. It contains the pars. of Aghnamedle, Ballygibbon, Ballymackey, Ballynaclogh, Dolla, Kilkeary, Kilmore, Kilnaneave, Latteragh, Lisbunny, Templederry, Templedowney, and parts of Kilruane and Nenagh. It gives title of marquis to the Butlers.

ORMSBY, a par. in the lib. of Langbaurgh, North Riding co. York, 5 miles from Middlesborough, its post town, and 1 mile from the Ormsby station on the Stockton and Darlington line of railway. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the main road from Stockton to Redcar, and is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the tnshps. of Eston, Morton, Normanby, Upsall, and Ormsby, and is bounded on the N. by the river Tees. At Cleveland port, about 2 miles to the N. of the village, a considerable traffic is still carried on in timber, lime, coal, and agricultural produce, by means of lighters, though part of the trade has been diverted by the improvement of the navigation to Stockton, and the extension of the Stockton and Darlington railway. The living is a vic.* with the perpet. cur. of Eston annexed, in the dioc. of York, val. £167, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Cuthbert, is a small ancient stone edifice, with a turret containing two bells. The church was repaired in 1820, at an expense of £700. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum, of which £3 goes towards Pennyman's school. There is a small library and reading room. Ormsby Hall, the principal residence, is a stone mansion, situated in a small park. Captain J. H. Pennyman, R.E., is lord of the manor.

ORMSBY, NORTH, or NUN ORMSBY, a par. in the wap. of Ludborough, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 5½ miles N. by W. of Louth, its post town, and 2½ S.W. of the Ludborough railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. There was formerly a priory of Gilbertine Nuns, founded in the reign of Stephen, by William Earl of Albermarle and Gilbert de Ormsby. Its revenue at the Dissolution was valued at £80, and the site was granted by Henry VIII. to Sir R. Heneage. Roman coins have been found here. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £87. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, has a turret containing one bell. The church was rebuilt in 1848. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans. Erasmus Saunders, Esq., of Upway, is lord of the manor.

ORMSBY ST. MARGARET, a par. in the hund. of East Flegg, co. Norfolk, 5 miles N.W. of Yarmouth, its post town, and 1 mile from the sea. The village, which is situated on the eastern coast, is chiefly agricultural. The par. comprises the hmlt. of Scratby. The inhabitants of this parish have the privilege of being exempt from such tolls as existed prior to the reign of Charles II., and from serving on juries out of the manor. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the fisheries. The surrounding country is wooded, and the higher grounds command an extensive sea view. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £772 14*s.*, and the vicarial for £290 17*s.*, and the glebes comprise, respectively, 51 and 65 acres. The living is a vic. with those of Scratby and Ormsby St. Michael annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £420, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The parish church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is an ancient structure with a lofty square embattled tower with the figures of four monks. On the S. side is an embellished Norman doorway. The interior of the church contains brasses to the Clere family, bearing date 1521. There were formerly four churches in this parish, but those of St. Peter and All Saints have long been in ruins. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum, which goes to a school. The Baptists and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. There is a National school for both sexes. The site of the ancient mansion of the Clere family is now occupied by a farmhouse, there being but one arch of the noble pile remaining. Ormsby House and Scratby Hall are the principal residences; the latter was formerly the seat of the Earl of Home.

ORMSBY ST. MICHAEL, or LITTLE ORMSBY, a par. in the hund. of East Flegg, co. Norfolk, 6 miles N.W. of Yarmouth, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural, and is included in the East and West Flegg incorporation. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the fisheries. In the neighbourhood is an extensive lake called Ormsby Broad. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Ormsby St. Margaret, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church has a square tower, and was thoroughly repaired in 1838. The interior of the church contains several monuments to the Upelve and Manning families. The parochial charities produce about £33 per annum, realised from the town lands.

ORMSBY, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Hill, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 6 miles W. of Alford, its post town and railway station, and 8 N.W. of Spilsby. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Wolds, and is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Ketsby, and the remains of a Roman exploratory encampment, 3 acres in extent, where several coins of the Emperor Constantine have been discovered. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £91 11*s., and the rectorial for one of £888, and the glebe consists of 59 acres. The living is a rect. with those of Ketsby, Driby, and the vic. of Calceby annexed, in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £800. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, has a tower containing five bells. There is a small chapel containing tombs of the Massingberd family, and near the chancel is a brass to Sir William Skypwythe, his wife, and family, bearing date 1495. The register dates from 1580. The father of John Wesley was rector of this parish, through the interest of the Massingberd family, in 1690, prior to his removal to Epworth. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum, realised from church land. There are National schools for both sexes, erected in 1858. Ormsby Hall, the principal residence, is situated in a well-timbered park. The trustees of the late C. B. Massingberd, Esq., are lords of the manor.

ORMSIDE, or ORMSHEAD, a par. in the E. ward, co. Westmoreland, 3 miles S.E. of Appleby, its post town, and 7 W. of Brough. It is situated on the river Eden, and contains the vils. of Great and Little, Ormside. The manor was formerly held by the Vescis, Radcliffes, Pickerings, Hyltons, and others. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil consists of red clay, with a subsoil of stiff clay. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £166, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient stone structure, situated on the S. bank of the river Eden, with a square tower containing two bells. It has a private chapel belonging to the Tufton family. In the interior is a brass to Sir Christopher Pickering, bearing date 1620, and two others, dating 1652 and 1693, to the Hylton family. The register commences from 1540. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a National school for children of both sexes. Sir R. Tufton, Bart., is lord of the manor.

ORMSKIRK, a par., post, and market town, in the hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 12 miles N.E. of Liverpool, and 12 from Wigan. It is a junction station on the East Lancashire railway, where the St. Helen's branch turns off. It is situated on the old road between Liverpool and Preston, near the Douglas navigation, and near the Leeds and Liverpool canal. The par., which is of large extent, comprises the tnshps. of Bickerstaffe, Burscough, Lathom, Ormskirk, Scarisbrick, and Skelmersdale, with a population of 17,049, of which 6,426 are within the town limits. Ormskirk is a polling and petty sessions town, and has been much improved of late years. It is governed by a local board of health, and by a constable and other minor officers chosen at the court leet, which is held in October. It contains four streets, diverging at right angles from a central area used as the market-place. It is lit with gas, and is amply supplied with water. There are a savings-bank, townhall, and corn market, sessions house, dispensary, union poorhouse, and gas-works. The petty sessions for the division are held monthly, also a county court at the sessions house. An extensive retail trade is done for supply of the surrounding country, and some of the inhabitants are engaged in the manufacture of rope, hats, and silk weaving. There are also a large iron foundry, two breweries, and establishments for balance-making. The soil is of a mossy and loamy nature, with a subsoil of sand and clay. Great quantities of carrots and of early potatoes are grown for supply of the Liverpool market. The town has long been celebrated for its gingerbread, which is exported. There are considerable coal mines within the parish. Ormskirk Poor-law Union comprises 21 parishes or townships within the county of Lancaster, it is also the seat of a superintendent registry district. The living is a vic. with the cur. of Scarisbrick annexed, in the dioc. of Chester, val. £290. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is a commodious stone structure with a square embattled tower and a steeple, detached from each other. The bell tower is said to have been erected at the suppression of Burscough priory, from which place the peal of eight bells were removed to Ormskirk. The church contains N., W., and S. galleries, and on the S.E. side of the chancel is a mortuary chapel of the Stanley family, in which are marble effigies of the first Earl and Countess of Derby; likewise, in the Eccleston chapel is the brass effigy of a knight in armour. In addition to the parish church are the following district churches—viz. at Bickerstaffe, Burscough Bridge, Lathom, Newburgh, Lathom St. James's, and Skelmersdale, the livings of which are all perpet. curs., varying in val. from £150 to £60. The church at Burscough Bridge is a modern edifice with a campanile turret, erected in 1831. The parochial charities produce about £521 per annum. The free grammar school was founded about 1614, and is endowed with various benefactions producing about £150 per annum. There is also another endowed school in Derby-street, founded in 1724, by James Earl of Derby, for a Blue-coat school, but now called the United Charity School, with accommodation for upwards of 800 scholars, and conducted on the National plan. The Independents, Wesleyans, Unitarians, and Roman Catholics have each a place of worship. The union workhouse, situated in the Wigan road, was erected at an outlay of about £4,000. There is a weekly newspaper published in the town, called the Ormskirk Advertiser. The Earl of Derby is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Market day is Thursday. Fairs are held on Whit Monday and Tuesday and the 10th September.

ORONSA, ORANSA, ORNSAY, or ORONSAY, several small islands of this name on the N. coast of Scotland, one in Loch Bracadale, on the W. side of the Isle of Skye, co. Inverness; another in Slate Sound, opposite Loch Hourn, co. Inverness; a third at the S. side of South Uist, Western Islands, near Boisdale; a fourth on the S. side of Barra Island, Western Islands; and a fifth on the S. side of Colonsay Island, co. Argyle. The inhabitants of these islands are chiefly employed in the cod, ling, and herring fisheries.

ORPHIR, a par. and post-office vil. in the S. district of Mainland, or Pomona, Orkney Islands, coast of Scotland, 7 miles S.W. of Kirkwall. It comprises that portion of Pomona bounded on the S. and W. by Scalpa Flow, together with the island of Cava, and a curiously formed rock or skerry, called the Barrel of Butter. It was called by the Northmen Jorfior, corrupted into Orphir, from jord, "land," and fior, "fire," because the large peat mosses in the eastern part of the parish supplied peat for fuel to the surrounding district. The parish, which is about 7 miles long by 3½ broad, is traversed by the road from Kirkwall to Stromness, and is bounded on the N. and N.W. by a range of hills, the highest summit of which, Wart Hill, is about 700 feet above sea level. The parish is advantageously situated for commerce, having a coast line, including sinuosities, of near 12 miles, in general bold and rocky, but indented with bays or coves, one of which, called the Bay of Houton, forms a safe harbour for small vessels. Near the centre of the parish is the Loch of Kirbister, between 2 and 3 miles in circumference, and abounding with excellent sea-trout, and in various parts of the parish are mineral springs, the most celebrated of which is Scoridale, noted for its tonic, diuretic, and antiscorbutic properties. A large part of the surface is hilly, pasture, or moss, but in parts near the coast it is fertile, the soil being a rich loam mixed with stones. In favoured localities the crops are good, and the fisheries on the coast are very prolific. There are quarries of flagstone, sandstone, and trap, and bog-iron ore is abundant. The principal landed proprietors have houses on their estates, the chief seats being the Hall of Clairstran, the property of the late Lord Armadale, and Graemsay, of Sir G. E. Honyman, Bart. From the summit of a hill near the church a view is commanded of all the Orkneys, embracing 25 islands, and parts of Caithness and Sutherland. The par. is in the presb. of Carriston and synod of Orkney. The minister's stipend is £158, with glebe. The poor's estate produces about £12 per annum. The parish church was erected in 1829. There is a Free church, also two schools maintained by mortifications. In the churchyard is a stone pile, 18 feet in diameter and 20 feet high, rudely resembling the Pantheon at Rome, called Girth House, and supposed to have been an ancient Romish chapel, of which several existed in this part of the country. In the district of Swambister is an ancient circular tower 180 feet in circumference, supposed to have been the stronghold of Sueno Boerstrop, who was murdered by Paul, the Norwegian Count of Orkney. There are also barrows and tumuli in various parts of the parish.

ORPINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Ruxley, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 4 miles S.E. of Bromley, its post town, 3 S. by W. of Foot's Cray, and 1 mile from the St. Mary Cray railway station. The village is situated at the source of the river Cray, and is chiefly agricultural. In consequence of the numerous springs attending the rise of the river Cray, the parish is subject to frequent inundations. Hops and fruit are grown extensively. The par. includes the hmlts. of Orpington, Crofton, and St. Mary Cray. Brickmaking is carried on. Queen Elizabeth was entertained at the Manor House in 1573 by Sir P. Hart. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of St. Mary Cray annexed, in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £372, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with an embattled tower containing one bell; the doorway is of ancient workmanship, and the interior of the church contains a brass to T. Wilkynson, bearing date 1511. There is a British school for both sexes, supported by J. C. Stapleton, Esq. Sir P. H. Dyke, Bart., is lord of the manor of Great Orpington, and J. G. Stapleton, Esq., of Little Orpington. A fair is held on Holy Thursday.

ORR, or ORE, a river in the co. of Fife, Scotland, rises near Dunfermline, and, flowing through Loch Fitty, joins the river Leven near Dysart. There was formerly a loch of this name, which has been drained.

ORRELL, a tnshp. in the par. of Wigan, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 3 miles W. of Wigan, its post town. It is a station on the W. section of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. The village, whic'i is considerable, is situated near the Leeds and Liverpool canal, and on the high road to Ormskirk. In this township are extensive collieries, employing a large portion of the inhabitants. Divine service is performed in the National school-house at Far-Moor. The Independents have a place of worship, and the Roman Catholics a chapel at Serenus Place, with Sunday-schools in connection. A party of Benedictine nuns from France settled at Orrell Mount in 1821.

ORRERY AND KILMORE, a bar. in the co. of Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is bounded by the bars. of Fermoy and Duhallow, and by co. Limerick. It contains the pars. of Aglishdrinagh, Bregoge, Buttevant, Cooliney, Dromdowney, Kilbroney, Kilrogan, Kilmaclenine, Lackeen, Liscarroll, Rathgoggan, Shandrum, and parts of Ballyclogh, Ballyhay, Churchtown, Corcomohide, Hackmys, Imprick, Kilbolane, and Tullylease.

ORRIN, a river in the co. of Ross, Scotland, rises near Loch Monar, and, flowing through Orrin Glen and several small lochs, joins the river Conan, near Urray.

ORRISMORE, an extensive bog or moor in the bar. of Ballynahinch, co. Galway, Ireland. It extends over 15,000 acres, and contains several small lakes.

ORROCK, a lofty hill in the co. of Fife, Scotland, 2 miles N.W. of Burntisland.

ORSAY, or OVERSAY, an islet in the district of Islay, co. Argyle, coast of Scotland, 3 miles S.W. of Jura. It is situated near Rhinn's Point, at the W. corner of the Isle of Islay, and has a lighthouse on it 150 feet high, put up in 1825, and visible for 17 miles at sea, warning mariners of the vicinity of the Coryditua whirlpool.

ORSETT, a par. in the hund. of Barstable, co. Essex, 13 miles S.E. of Romford, its post town, 18 S. by W. of Chelmsford, and 4 N.E. of Grays railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. Orsett Poor-law Union comprises 18 parishes. The union poorhouse was erected here at an outlay of £3,115. The soil in the northern part of the parish is heavy and swampy, but in the middle lighter and more fertile. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £1,225. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £820, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Giles and All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a brick tower surmounted by a spire and containing five bells. There is a National school for both sexes, also an infant-school endowed with Anson's annuity of £80. There are other charities and four almshouses. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. There is a literary institution, which has recently been erected at the expense of R. B. Wingfield Baker, Esq., of Orsett Hall. In the neighbourhood are vestiges of ancient entrenchments.

ORSLOW, a hmlt. in the par. of Church Eaton, co. Stafford, 7 miles W. of Penkridge.

ORSTON, a par. in the N. div. of the wap. of Bingham, co. Nottingham, 5 miles N.E. of Bingham, its post town, and 1 mile N. of Elton railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Smite, a branch of the Devon. In the neighbourhood is a mineral spring famed for its medicinal virtues. Limestone is abundant, and there is an extensive bed of gypsum used for floors. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in framework knitting, and the rest in agriculture. The tithes were commuted under an Enclosure Act in 1796 for 132 acres of land. The living is a vic. with the curs. of Scarrington and Thoroton annexed, in the dioc. of Lincoln, joint val. £240, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower containing four bells. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a National school of recent erection. The Wesleyan Methodists have a place of worship. Earl Manvers is lord of the manor.

ORTACH, a reef of rocks lying between Alderney and the Caskets, Channel Islands.

ORTON, a par. in the ward and co. of Cumberland, 5 miles S.W. of Carlisle, its post town, and 7 N.E. of Wigton. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the tnshps. of Great Orton and Baldwinholme. The village is of ancient date, and was formerly defended against the moss troopers by earthworks. From an elevation called Parson's Thorn, upwards of a dozen churches may be seen, among which are several in Scotland. Coal is found. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £370. The church is a small ancient structure. There is a school adjoining the church endowed with about £5 per annum.

ORTON, a chplry. in the par. and hund. of Rothwell, co. Northampton, 5 miles W. of Kettering, its post town, and 1 mile S.W. of Rothwell. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The surface is hilly, but fertile. Under an Enclosure Act, passed in 1782, a sum of £100 is annually paid to Rothwell Hospital in lieu of tithes. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Rothwell, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church is dedicated to All Saints. Henry Hungerford Holdich Hungerford, Esq., is lord of the manor.

ORTON, a lib. in the par. of Wombourn, S. div. of Seisdon hund., co. Stafford, 3 miles S.W. of Wolverhampton. It is situated on the Birmingham canal.

ORTON, a junction station on the Great North of Scotland and Inverness and Perth Junction railways, co. Elgin, Scotland, 6 miles from Elgin.

ORTON, a par. and market town in the East ward of co. Westmoreland, 6 miles from Shap, its post town, 9 S. by W. of Appleby, and 3 from the Tebay station on the Lancaster and Carlisle railway. The town, which consists chiefly of one irregular street, is situated under Orton Scar beacon, and on the high road between Appleby and Kendal. It is watered by a branch of the river Lune, in which trout and other fish abound. The par., which is extensive, comprising near 60 square miles, includes the tnshps. of Langdale, Bretherdale, Orton, Tebay, Ruisbeck, and parts of Birkbeck Fells and Fawcet Forest. There are several mineral springs in the neighbourhood. The land is exceedingly hilly, with much meadow and pasture, and a large extent of unenclosed common. There is an abundance of lime and freestone, also quarries of white sandstone. Traces of lead and copper are met with. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1769. On the highest part of Orton Scar was formerly a beacon, communicating with those of Penrith, Stanmore, and Whinfell-in-Kendal. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £192, in the patron. of the landowners. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient stone structure with an embattled tower containing four bells. In the chancel is a tablet to Richard Burn, author of the "Justice of Peace," and other works. He was Vicar of Orton 49 years, and Chancellor of Carlisle upwards of 20 years. The church formerly belonged to Conishead priory. Bishop Barlow was born at Langdale in this parish in 1607. The parochial charities produce about £24 per annum. There is an endowed school for both sexes, built in 1809, also an infant school. A Sunday-school is held at the church. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. In the parish are traces of several ancient camps and earthworks, where Roman coins have been found, also a Druidical temple, and a circular tumulus of loose stones, besides several other camps of more recent date. Orton Hall, the principal residence, is situated in the midst of pleasure grounds, and within an easy distance of the main road. The old hall is now occupied as a farm dwelling. Market day is Friday. Fairs are held on 3rd May, Friday before Whit-Sunday, and second Friday after old Michaelmas Day.

ORTON, CHERRY. See ORTON WATERVILLE, co. Hunts.

ORTON, COLE. See COLE ORTON, co. Leicester.

ORTON-LONGVILLE, or OVERTON-LONGVILLE, a par. in the hund. of Norman Cross, co. Huntingdon, 2 miles S.W. of Peterborough, its post town, and 1 mile from the Overton station on the Northampton and Peterborough railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the main road from Peterborough to Oundle, and is bounded on the N. by the river Nen, on which is a wharf at Woodstone, about 2 miles distant. The manor anciently belonged to the Lovetofts, from whom it came to the Copes and Gordons. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. From Wisbeach to Northampton the river has been rendered navigable for barges. There are stone-quarries in which are found numerous fossils. The living is a rect.* with that of Botolph-Bridge united, in the dioc. of Ely, joint val. £332. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing two bells. The interior of the church, which has been entirely restored, contains an effigy of a Knight Templar, a Norman font, and several monuments of great antiquity. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, also another school supported by Lady Huntly. Horton Hall is the principal residence. The Marquis of Huntly is lord of the manor.

ORTON-ON-THE-HILL, a par. in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 5 miles N. of Atherston, its post town, and 9 S.W. of Ashby-de-la-Zouch. The village, which is small and irregularly built, is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Little Orton. The Atherstone hounds meet in the neighbourhood. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £218, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Edith, is a large ancient edifice, with a spired tower containing four bells. There is also a district church at Twycross, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £130. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. Orton Hall is the principal residence. D. S. Perkins, Esq., is lord of the manor.

ORTON WATERVILLE, or ORTON, CHERRY, a par. in the hund. of Norman Cross, co. Huntingdon, 3 miles S.W. of Peterborough, its post town, and within half a mile of the Overton station on the London and North Western railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the Peterborough and Oundle road and the river Nen. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. A short time back many were employed in the stone-quarries and gravel pits, but these are now nearly exhausted. The soil is of various qualities, with a subsoil of clay and gravel. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1805. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £354, in the patron. of Pembroke College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure of large dimensions, with a square embattled tower containing four bells. The parochial charities produce about £30 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. This manor in 1480 passed from Archbishop Booth to Pembroke College, of which the master and fellows are lords of the manor.

ORWELL, a par. in the co. of Kinross, Scotland, 2 miles N. of Kinross. It comprises the vils. of Milnathort and Middleton. It extends in length about 9½ miles from E. to W., with an extreme breadth of 3½ miles. It is bounded on the S.E. by Loch Leven, and on other sides by the pars of Kinross, Fossoway, Dunning, Forgandenny, Forteviot, Arngask, Strathmiglo, and Portmoak. The surface is moderately even in the southern and eastern parts of the parish, but in other parts rises into hilly heights, and towards Kinloch Braes attains an altitude of 760 feet above the sea. Red sandstone is the predominant rock. The soil in the low lands is loam, sand, and clay, with an intermixture of gravel. The parish is traversed northward by the road from Edinburgh to Perth, and eastward by that from Stirling to Cupar. It is situated on Loch Leven among the Ochil hills, and is watered by the river Queigh. In the vicinity of the Ochils stands Carn-a-vain, a vast collection of loose stones, which has been recently greatly reduced in size by the stones being taken away for dyke-building. On Orwell farm, near Loch Leven, are two standing stones 6½ and 8 feet in height. This par. is in the presb. of Kinross and synod of Fyfe. The minister has a stipend of £155. The parish church was erected in 1729. There are a Free church, and an United Presbyterian church. There is a parochial school, and several private schools, also a public library.

ORWELL, a par. in the hund. of Wetherley, co. Cambridge, 7 miles N. of Royston, and 3 N. of Shepreth, its railway station. Arrington is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the Roman road, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is of a clayey and chalky nature with a subsoil of gualt, clay, and limestone. The rectorial and vicarial tithes have been reunited under the authority of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £313, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, or, according to others, to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure with a tower containing a clock and five bells. There are monuments of Professor Stubbs and Mason, formerly rectors of this parish. The parochial charities produce about £132, of which £50 goes to Colbatch's school. A school-house was erected on the site of the older one in 1853, at which the Sunday-school is also held. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans. At Malton, anciently a district parish, are remains of a church now used as a barn. Captain Bendyshe is lord of the manor.

ORWELL, a hmlt. in the bar. of Raphoe, co. Donegal, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Stranorlar.

ORWELL, the navigable part of the river Gipping below Ipswich, co. Suffolk. It falls into the sea at Harwich, and has on its bank Orwell Park, the seat of the late Admiral Vernon, Viscount Orwell.

OSBALDESTON, a tnshp. in the par. and lower div. of the hund. of Blackburn, co. Lancaster, 4 miles N.W. of Blackburn. It is a small agricultural village situated near the river Ribble.

OSBALDWICK, a par. in the wap. of Bulmer, North Riding co. York, 2 miles E. of York, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the tnshp. of Murton. The soil is of a loamy and clayey nature, with a subsoil of clay and gravel. The tithes for the commons of Osbaldwick were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1769, and assigned to the prebendary of Strensall in the cathedral of York. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of York, val. £250, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas, is a small ancient structure. There is a chapel-of-ease at Murton in this parish. The parochial charities produce about £28 per annum, of which £9 goes to the support of the school. There are three private lunatic asylums in this parish. T. S. Watkinson, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

OSBASTON, a tnshp. in the pars. of Cadeby and Market-Bosworth, hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 1½ mile N.E. of Market-Bosworth, its post town. The village is of small extent, and wholly agricultural. There is now no church, the chapel-of-ease having been destroyed many years ago. Osbaston Hall, the principal residence, is surrounded by a lake and lawn, and was formerly the seat of the Munday family.

OSBASTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Ercall Magna, co. Salop, 5 miles N.W. of Wellington.

OSBASTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Kinnerley, co. Salop, 4 miles S.E. of Oswestry.

OSBERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Worksop, co. Nottingham, 4 miles N.E. of Worksop. It is situated on the Chesterfield canal and the river Ryton. Mr. Lumley's hounds meet in this neighbourhood.

OSBORNE, the private demesne of her Majesty Queen Victoria in the Isle of Wight, co. Hants, 1 mile S.E. of Cowes. It is an Italian marine villa with a campanile tower, commanding a view of the island, and of the shipping at Spithead. It has been almost wholly rebuilt by Cubitt on the site of the old seat of the Mann family, and has in its grounds an alcove and the ruins of Barton Priory, now partially restored.

OSBOURNBY, a par. in the wap. of Aveland, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 3 miles N. of Falkingham, its post town, and 6 S. of Sleaford. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on the road from London to Lincoln. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1795, and the glebe comprises about 140 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £234, in the patron. of Hulme's Trustees. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is a structure of the 14th century, with a tower containing three bells. The church contains a font, several stalls, a screen, and the remains of a rood loft. The charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a free school, in which a Sunday-school is also held, both of which were endowed by Sir T. Whichcote, the former with £20 per annum, and the latter with £15 per annum. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Sir T. Whichcote, Bart., is lord of the manor.

OSCOTT, a vil. in the tnshp. of Perry Barr, and par. of Handsworth, S. div. of the hund. of Offlow, co. Stafford, 4 miles N.W. of Birmingham. It contains St. Mary's Roman Catholic college, founded in 1794, and devoted to religious and secular purposes. The college was re-erected by Pugin in 1840 at a cost of nearly £60,000. The entire buildings form a large cruciform edifice with a chapel attached.

OSCROFT, a tnshp. in the par. of Tarvin, co. Chester, 5 miles E. of Chester. It is in conjunction with Tarvin to form a township.

OSEBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Haydor, co. Lincoln, 5 miles N.W. of Folkingham.

OSGATHORPE, a par. in the hund. of West Goscote, co. Leicester, 2 miles N.E. of Swannington railway station, and 5 N.E. of Ashby-de-la-Zouch. Loughborough is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated in a fertile valley on the Charnwood Forest canal. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is excellently adapted for brick-making, which is carried on to some extent. Limestone is abundant. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1785. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £184. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a belfry containing two bells. The parochial charities consist of Harley's free grammar school, and almshouses for seven clergymen's widows, six of whom receive £43 per annum, and the other an annuity of £20, bequeathed by John Allsop, Esq., in 1683; also Mrs. Margaret Mead's charity of £5 per annum, distributed in bread to the poor, and £1 to the minister for prayer reading every Friday. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans. J. B. Story, Esq., is lord of the manor.

OSGODBY. See KIRKBY-CUM-OSGODBY, co. Lincoln.

OSGODBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Hemingbrough, wap. of Ouse, East Riding co. York, 2½ miles N.E. of Selby, its post town. It is situated near the Hull railway and the river Ouse. Certain impropriate tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1811. G. P. Dawson, Esq., of Osgodby Hall, is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

OSGODBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Cayton, wap. of Pickering Lythe, North Riding co. York, 2½ miles S.E. of Scarborough.

OSGODBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Lavington or Linton, wap. of Beltisloe, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 3 miles N.E. of Corby.

OSGOLDCROSS, LOWER, a wap. in the West Riding of co. York, contains the pars. of Aldingfleet, Kellington, Whitgift, Womersley, and part of Snaith, comprising an area of 58,230 acres.

OSGOLDCROSS, UPPER, a wap. in the West Riding of co. York, contains the pars. of Ackworth, Badsworth, Kirk-Bramwith, Burgh-Wallis, Campsall, Castleford, Darrington, Ferry Frystone, Owston, Pontefract, Pontefract-Park, Kirk-Smeaton, and parts of Featherstone, South Kirkby and Wragby, comprising an area of 49,510 acres.

OSGOODBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Thirkleby, wap. of Birdforth, North Riding co. York, 1½ mile N.E. of Thirkleby, and 5 miles S.E. of Thirsk. The township consists of three farms. The soil is of a clayey nature. The Archbishop of York is lord of the manor.

OSLESTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Sutton-on-the-Hill, hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 6½ miles N.W. of Derby, and 7½ N.W. of Sutton-on-the-Hill. It is joined with Thurvaston to form a township.

OSLOW, a tnshp. in the par. of Church-Eaton, W. div. of the hund. of Cuttlestone, co. Stafford.

OSMASTON, a par. in the hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 2½ miles S.E. of Ashborne, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on an eminence near the road from Derby to Manchester. It is wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £104, and the glebe comprises about 27 acres. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, has a tower containing five bells. It was erected on the site of the old one, together with the National school, about the year 1845, at the expense of F. Wright, Esq., who is lord of the manor and chief owner of the soil. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans. Osmaston Manorhouse is the principal residence.

OSMASTON, a par. in the hund. of Repton, co. Derby, 2 miles S.E. of Derby, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road from London to Ashby-de-la-Zouch. The river Derwent, the canal, and the Midland railway pass through the parish. The inhabitants are wholly engaged in agriculture. The soil is sand and loam upon a subsoil of gravel. The glebe comprises 25 acres, within the parish, besides land at Belton and Hathern. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £280. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum. Osmaston Hall, the seat of the Wilmot family, was erected in 1696. It has a gallery of paintings by eminent English, Flemish, and Italian masters. Sir R. Wilmot, Bart., is lord of the manor.

OSMERDIKE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Faxfleet, par. of South Cave, East Riding co. York, 6 miles E. of Howden. It is situated on the Hull railway, and near the river Humber, opposite the estuary of the Trent.

OSMINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Culliford-Tree, co. Dorset, 4 miles N.E. of Weymouth, its post town, and 8 S. of Dorchester. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road between Weymouth and Wareham, near the coast of the English Channel, and is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlts. of Osmington Mills, Ringstead, and Upton. At the first-named place is a coastguard station. The manor formerly belonged to King Athelstane, who gave it to the abbey of Milton. Building-stone is plentiful, and a peculiar kind of excellent stone called "horse-flesh" is largely worked. The soil consists of a strong clay upon chalk. This place is said to have derived its name from Osmond, the patron saint. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £250. The living is endowed with a portion of the rectorial tithes, the remainder being appropriated by the landowners. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £252, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Osmond, has a square tower containing four bells. The chancel has a stained window, also a monument of great antiquity, upon which are the arms of Warham, with an inscription roughly executed. The whole of the structure, with the exception of the tower, was rebuilt, and a S. aisle added, in 1846. The parochial charities consist of the interest of £200, the bequest of the late Mrs. Susannah Toogood, which is laid out in warm clothing for the aged poor. There is a parochial school, which is supported by subscriptions.

OSMONDISTON. See SCOLE, co. Norfolk.

OSMONDTHORPE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Templenewsam, pars. of Whitkirk and Leeds, West Riding co. York, 4 miles S.E. of Leeds.

OSMONDTHORPE, a hmlt. in the lib. of Southwell and Scrooby, co. Notts, 3 miles N.W. of Southwell.

OSMOTHERLEY, a par. in the wap. of Allertonshire, North Riding co. York, 7 miles N.E. of Northallerton, its post town, and 6½ S.E. of the Welbury railway station. The village, which is extensive, is situated among the Hambleton hills, near the Codbeck and Wiske streams, which rise on the Osmotherley Moors. The par. includes the tnshps. of Ellerbeck, West Harlsey, and Thimbleby. There are extensive quarries of excellent freestone. The ruins of the Carthusian priory at Mount Grace, founded in 1396 by Thomas Duke of Surrey, and of the castle of West Harlsey, are in this parish. There are corn mills, bleach works, and an extensive linen manufactory, which gives employment to a large number of hands. An ancient cross, much disfigured, stands in the centre of the village. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of York, val. £130. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a tower containing three bells. There is a National school. The Wesleyans and Roman Catholics have each a place of worship, and the Friends a meeting-house. Annual fairs are held on 3rd May and October 18th for cattle and sheep.

OSMOTHERLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Ulverstone, hund. of Lonsdale North of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 3 miles from the parish church, and 2½ N.W. of Ulverstone. The township consists of a few straggling farmhouses. There is a Church school, endowed with £16 per annum, in which Divine service is performed every alternate Sunday. The Duke of Buccleuch is lord of the manor.

OSNABURGH, or DAIRSIE MUIR, a vil. in the par. of Dairsie, co. Fife, Scotland, 3 miles N.E. of Cupar. It is situated on the road from Cupar to Tayport. The inhabitants are principally engaged in linen weaving.

OSNEY, or OSENEY, a small island in the river Isis, co. Oxford, half a mile W. of Oxford. It has the remains of a priory of the order of St. Augustine, founded in 1074 by Robert D'Oyley, and valued at the Dissolution at £654. In 1542 it became the seat of a diocese, which shortly after was translated to St. Frideswide's, in the city of Oxford.

OSNEY, NORTH. See REWLEY, co. Oxford.

OSPRINGE-LIBERTY, a par. in the hund. of Faversham, lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 1 mile W. by S. of Faversham. This place is an independent franchise, governed by its own constable. On a stream which flows through the village are gunpowder-mills, a range of infantry barracks, and the union workhouse for the union of Faversham. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £832, and the vicarial for £305, and the glebe comprises 32 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £389, in the patron. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The church is an ancient structure dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul. There is a village school. There are remains of Roman fortifications and earthworks, supposed to indicate the site of the ancient Durolevum. Henry III. founded a hospital here, dedicated to the Holy Cross, in 1235, which, falling into decay, was escheated to the crown in the reign of Edward IV., and converted into dwelling-houses.

OSSA SKERRY, an islet in the Shetland Islands, coast of Scotland, 3 miles N.W. of Eshaness.

OSSEMSLEY-FORD, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Christchurch, co. Hants.

OSSETT-WITH-GAWTHORPE, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Dewsbury, lower div. of Agbrigg wap., West Riding co. York, 3 miles W. of Wakefield, its post town, and 1½ mile N.W. of Horbury station on the Manchester railway. It is also a station on the Wakefield and Batley branch of the West Yorkshire railway. The village, which is of large extent, is situated on the S. side of the road from Dewsbury to Wakefield, near the river Calder. The tnshp. includes the hmlts. of Ossett, South Ossett, Ossett Street, and Gawthorpe. There are coal mines of great productiveness, and an extensive foundry. In the vicinity are machine manufactories, and woollen, worsted, and cotton mills, giving employment to a greater part of the inhabitants. There are also gasworks. The soil is loam and clay, with a subsoil of clay and stone. On Ossett Common are the Cheltenham Baths, the water of which contains iron and hydrogen. The vicarial tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act, in 1807. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £162, in the patron. of the Vicar of Dewsbury. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, has a tower containing one bell. The register dates from 1792. There is a National school at Gawthorpe, erected in 1840, and licensed by the bishop for Divine service, also a free school and a Sunday-school; the former is endowed with an annuity of £24 and a residence for the master. The Independents, Wesleyans, Reformed Methodists, and Christian Brethren, have each a place of worship. There is a burial ground of recent formation, also a savings-bank, and mechanics' institute. S. W. L. Fox, Esq., is lord of the manor.

OSSIAN'S HALL, a spot in the par. of Little Dunkeld, co. Perth, Scotland. It is situated at a fall of the river Braan, near the Rumbling Bridge.

OSSINGTON, a par. in the N. div. of Thurgarton wap., co. Nottingham, 10 miles N.W. of Newark-on-Trent, its post town, 4 S. by E. of Tuxford, and 3 W. of the Carlton railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Carlton and Knecsall turnpike road. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The greater part of the land is arable, with about 500 acres of woodland. The soil is a productive clay. The living is a don. in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church, dedicated to the Holy Rood, has a square tower, containing four bells. It contains several monuments. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a free school for both sexes, entirely supported by Lady Charlotte Denison. Ossington Hall, the principal residence, is surrounded by an extensive park and pleasure grounds. The Right Hon. J. E. Denison, M.P., is lord of the manor.

OSSORY, a dioc. in the prov. of Leinster, Ireland. This diocese was first established by St. Keiran, in the 6th century. It is about 36 miles long and 23 broad, and comprises parts of Kilkenny, Queen's County, and King's County. In 1833 it was joined to Ferns and Leighlin. The episcopal seat is at Kilkenny. It includes 128 pars. and 70 benefices. Ossory was the ancient Ossraigh, and gives title of Earl to the Butler family. The Roman Catholic dioc. comprises 39 pars., and has a cathedral at Kilkenny.

OSSULSTONE, a hund. in the co. of Middlesex, situated between Brentford and the river Lea. It contains the divs. of Finsbury, Holborn, Kensington, and Tower, including London and Westminster, comprising an area of 47,950 acres. The hundred gives title of baron to the Earl of Tankerville.

OSTEND, a hmlt. in the par. of Burnham, co. Essex, 6 miles N.E. of Rochford.

OSTENHANGER. See WESTENHANGER, co. Kent.

OSTERLY HOUSE, a seat in the par. of Hanwell, hund. of Elsborne, co. Middlesex, 1½ mile N.W. of Brentford, and 8 miles W. of Paddington. It is situated on the river Brent, and formerly belonged to Sheen Priory. It subsequently became the property of Sir Thomas Gresham, who entertained Queen Elizabeth here in 1577. The House, which was rebuilt in 1760, is the seat of the Countess of Jersey.

OSWALDKIRK, a par. in the wap. of Ryedale, North Riding co. York, 3 miles S. of Helmsley, its post town, and 1½ mile N. of Gilling railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the high road from York to Helmsley, and near the river Rye. It is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the tnshp. of Oswaldkirk Quarter-Ampleforth, at which place are the ruins of a Roman Catholic college. The soil consists of clay, and is very productive. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £409 10*s., and the glebe comprises 55 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of York, val. £868. The church, dedicated to St. Oswald, contains several monuments. The register dates from 1538. The parochial charities produce about £34 per annum, of which £5 goes to Fysher's school. The Wesleyans meet at a private house for Divine worship. R. B. Oakley, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner. There are remains of an old monastic edifice. Roger Dodsworth, the antiquary, was born at Newton-Grange.

OSWALD, KIRK. See KIRK-OSWALD, co. Cumberland.

OSWALDKIRK QUARTER, a tnshp. in the par. of Ampleforth, wap. of Ryedale, North Riding co. York, 8 miles N.E. of Easingwold. The village is small, and chiefly agricultural. There is a National school.

OSWALD, ST. See WALL, co. Northumberland.

OSWALD, ST., pars. in the cities of Chester and Durham, which see.

OSWALDSLOW, LOWER, a hund. in the co. of Worcester, contains the pars. of Aston White Lady, St. John Bedwardine, Berrow, Bredicot, Broadwas, Churchill, Coombe d'Abitot, Coombe Earl's, Coombe-Hill, Grimley, Hallow, Hinlip, Holt, Kempsey, Knightwick, Lindridge, Little Malvern, Norton-by-Kempsey Oddingley, Ombersley, Redmarley D'Abitot, Spetchley, Stoulton, Warndon, Welland, Wichenford, Wolverley, and parts of Claines, Hartlebury, St. Martin, St. Peter, and Ripple, comprising an area of 80,565 acres.

OSWALDSLOW, MIDDLE, a hund. in the co. of Worcester, contains the pars. of Alvechurch, Bishampton, Cropthorne, Crowle, Castle-Elmley, Fladbury, Hanbury, Harvington, Himbleton, Huddington, Rouse-Lench, Inkberrow, Overbury, Sedgeberrow, Stoke-Prior, Tibberton, and part of Bredon, comprising an area of 58,540 acres.

OSWALDSLOW, UPPER, a hund. in the co. of Worcester, contains the pars. of Blockley, Cleeve-Prior, Daylesford, Evenload, Shipston-on-Stour, Tidmington, Tredington, and part of Iccomb, comprising an area of 20,960 acres.

OSWALDTWISTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Whalley, lower div. of the hund. of Blackburn, co. Lancaster, 1 mile from Accrington, its post town, 3½ miles S.E. of Blackburn, and near Church Town station on the East Lancashire railway. The village, which is of large extent, is situated on the Leeds and Liverpool canal. It is lighted with gas, and well supplied with water. The houses are chiefly of stone. A large portion of the inhabitants are employed in the cotton mills and print works. There are also extensive collieries, potteries, and stone quarries. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £300. The church, dedicated to Emanuel, has a tower containing one bell. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There are National schools for both sexes, also Sunday-schools. The Independents, Wesleyans, Wesleyan Association, Baptists, and Primitive Methodists, have each a place of worship, and the three former have a Sunday-school in connection with their chapels. Sir R. Peel, Bart., is lord of the manor.

OSWESTRY, a hund. in two divs., Lower and Upper, in the co. of Salop. It formed part of Wales previous to 1535. The Lower hund. contains the pars. of West Felton, Kinnerley, Knockin, Melverley, and Ruyton-of-the-Eleven-Towns, comprising an area of 20,230 acres. The Upper hund. contains the pars. of Halston, Llanyblodwell, St. Martin, Selattyn, Whittington, and parts of Llansillin, Llanymynech, and Oswestry, comprising an area of 42,350 acres. It gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. and dioc. of St. Asaph.

OSWESTRY, a par., market town, and municipal borough in the Upper div. of Oswestry hund., co. Salop, 18 miles N.W. of Shrewsbury, and 179 miles from London. It is a station on the Shrewsbury and Chester section of the Great Western railway, and on the Cambrian, Newtown, and Welsh Coast railway. It is one of the chief towns on the borders of Wales, and is situated on high ground on the main road from London to Holyhead. The surrounding scenery comprises the vale of Shropshire, with the Wrekin, and the Staffordshire hills on one side; and the views towards the counties of Montgomery and Denbigh on the other. The par., which consists of nearly 16,000 acres, is divided into 16 tnshps., including the libs. of the town. The town is of great antiquity, and was originally named by the Britons Croes Oswallt, after St. Oswald, King of Northumberland, who lost his life here in a battle, fighting against the heathen king, Penda of Mercia, in 642. The Saxons called it Maserfield, or Maes Oswallt, signifying "Oswald's field," and subsequently Oswaldstre, or "Oswald's town." Being situated between Offa's and Watt's dykes, and a border town, it was the scene of many severe conflicts, as well between the Saxons and Britons as the Welsh and Normans. Walter Fitzalan, the founder of the Stewart dynasty, who built a castle here in the reign of King Stephen, also walled in the town and fortified it. Henry II. having been defeated by the Welsh at Berwyn Hill in 1164 made Oswestry his headquarters. In the reigns of King John and Henry III. Oswestry was twice burnt, in the latter reign by the Welsh under Llewellyn. During the civil wars of Charles I. it was taken by the parliamentarian army and dismantled. William Earl of Arundel granted the first charter to the town in the reign of Henry II., but Richard II. gave the first royal charter to Oswestry, which King Charles II. subsequently confirmed.—The town has very much improved during the last fifty years. The streets are for the most part spacious, well paved, and lighted with gas, and the houses are generally well built. The sum of £16,000 has lately been expended in supplying it with water, and a complete system of drainage has also been carried out at a considerable cost, while some years ago a large commodious cattle and sheep market was added to the town. Many of the ancient houses built of wood still exist in parts of the town. It is divided into two wards, and governed by a mayor, six aldermen, and eighteen councillors, with the style of "mayor, aldermen, common councilmen, and burgesses of Oswestry."—The population in 1851 was 4,817 with 995 inhabited houses, which in 1861 had increased to 5,414 with 1,125 inhabited houses. The Oswestry Poor-law Union contains 14 parishes and townships, and the workhouse is situated about a mile from the town.—The public buildings are the townhall, situated near the site of the castle, and forming one side of the principal square called Bailey-head: it contains a statue of King Oswald in stone. The corn market is roofed in with glass, and has a clock tower. There are besides, the borough gaol, a theatre, and the savings-bank. Two large buildings have lately been erected—one at the S. end of the town, called the Victoria Rooms, for public meetings, assemblies, &c.; and the other at the N. end, containing a reading-room and a hall for lectures.—The ruins of the ancient castle are but scanty; they, however, are sufficient to indicate its primitive strength. Flower walks have been planted on the site, a lofty artificial mount, from which good views of the surrounding scenery may be obtained. The town gates were taken down about 1780. There is a spring of water which bears the name of Oswald's well.—Quarter sessions, petty sessions, and a county court are held monthly at Oswestry, which is a polling-place for the northern division of the county. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the malting trade, which is very flourishing. Brickmaking is also carried on to some extent. The linen and woollen manufacture has very much declined of late.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £477. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary, was originally part of an old monastery. It is a commodious structure with a square tower and eight bells. In it are some curious tablets and monumental inscriptions. In addition to the parish church there are the district churches of Trinity and Trefonen—the former a perpet. cur., val. £150, in the patron. of the vicar; the latter a perpet. cur., val. £175. There is also Morton Chapel, on the immediate boundary of the parish, to which the townships of Morton and Crickheath, and a part of the township of Sweene, have been assigned as a district, val. £600, in the patron. of the bishop. Aston chapel is a private one belonging to Mrs. Lloyd, of Aston Hall, and has no district assigned to it; the townships of Pentregaer and Cynynion are assigned to the church at Rhydycroesau. There are also places of worship for Baptists, Calvinistic and Primitive Methodists, Independents, Welsh Independents, and Wesleyans. The free grammar school was founded and endowed by David Holbeck in the reign of Henry IV. There are also National and infant schools, built in the Elizabethan style, and a dispensary. Eure's almshouses are among the charities. The Earl of Powis is lord of the manor.—Market days are Wednesday and Saturday, the former for corn, when much business is done, and the latter for cheese, poultry, and provisions. Fairs for the sale of cattle are held on the first Wednesday in every month.

OSYTH, a par. in the hund. of Tendring, co. Essex, 10 miles S.E. of Colchester. It is situated near the sea-shore, on a creek or arm of the navigable river Colne, which here separates into two branches, and has two wharves in this parish. The surface is marshy, and about two-thirds arable, the remainder being pasture and woodland. It is a coastguard station, and has remains of a nunnery, originally founded by St. Osyth, daughter of Redwald, King of East Anglia, who was martyred by the Danes when they destroyed the nunnery. At the time of the Domesday Survey the site belonged to the see of London, but shortly afterwards a priory for Augustine canons was refounded on the site of the ancient nunnery by Richard de Belmeis, Bishop of London. At the Dissolution its revenues amounted to £758 5*s.* 8*d.*, and the site was given to the Cromwells, from whom it subsequently came to the D'Arcies and Nassaus, Earls of Rochford. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £2,503. The living is a don. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £100. The church, dedicated to St. Osyth, is a spacious structure, principally of the time of Henry VI. In the chancel are two monuments of alabaster to the first two Lords D'Arcy. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum, which goes to the support of the free school. The Priory is a modern mansion, formed out of the remains of the ancient monastery, and approached by a gateway of hewn stone, mixed with flints, and having two towers and posterns.

OTBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Walesby, S. div. of Walshcroft hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 1 mile N. of Walesby, and 2 miles N.E. of Market-Rasen.

OTELEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Ellesmere, co. Salop, 1 mile S.E. of Ellesmere. It is situated on the Ellesmere canal, and forms, with Newton and Spoonhill, a township.

OTFORD, a par. in the hund. of Codsheath, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 3 miles N. of Sevenoaks, its post town. It is the terminus of a branch line of the London, Chatham, and Dover railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Darent, and is wholly agricultural. It is the Saxon Ottanford, where, in 773, Offa, King of Mercia, defeated Aldric, King of Kent, and also the scene of the defeat of the Danes, under Canute, in 1016, by Edmund Ironside. Shortly before the Norman conquest it became the property of the see of Canterbury, and was the favourite retreat of Thomas-à-Becket, who had a palace here, which was repaired by Archbishop Warham at an expense of £33,000. In it Henry VIII. was entertained; but all that now remains is a roofless tower and the cloistered side of a court, now converted into stables. Near the ruin is Becket's well, enclosed by a wall, and said to have been used by him as a bath. A hospital for lepers was founded here in the reign of Henry III. The soil is chalky, and the land partly in hop-grounds. Lime is burnt, and there are some brick kilns. The great tithes belong to the Dean and Chapter of Westminster, but are leased to Lord Willoughby de Broke. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £179, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Westminster. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, has an E. window, renewed after the design of the original one, which was destroyed when the church was burnt in 1637. The interior of the church contains several monuments, among which is one by Sir William Cheer, composed of seven kinds of marble, erected to the memory of Charles Polhill, Esq. The register dates from 1635. The parochial charities produce about £24 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Dowager Lady Amherst is lady of the manor.

OTHAM, a par. in the hund. of Eyhorne, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 3 miles S.E. of Maidstone, its post town. The village, which is of small extent and chiefly agricultural, is situated about 1 mile from the road between London and Ashford, and on the rivulet Lenham, a branch of the river Medway. This stream, which forms the northern boundary of the parish, works several mills in its course to the Medway. Otham manor formerly belonged to the Hendleys and Horns of Gore Court. A Premonstratensian abbey was founded here in the reign of Henry II., but was removed to Beaulieu in 1200, and thence to Bayham. The soil is of various qualities, but admirably adapted for fruit and hops, which are grown extensively. Kentish ragstone is abundant, and several quarries belonging to the Earl of Romney are worked for building purposes. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £400, and the glebe comprises 38 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £412. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient stone structure, with a spired tower containing three bells. The church contains several monuments of great antiquity. The register dates from 1538. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum, besides houses for the poor. There is a parochial school. Dr. Horne, Bishop of Norwich, and author of the well-known Commentary on the Psalms, was born here in 1730. The Earl of Romney is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

OTHERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Penkridge, E. div. of the hund. of Cuttlestone, co. Stafford, 1 mile S.E. of Penkridge.

OTHERTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Cotheridge, co. Worcester, 4 miles W. of Worcester.

OTHERY, a par. in the hund. of Whitley, co. Somerset, 7 miles E. of Bridgwater, its post town, and 4½ N.W. of Langport railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Parret, which forms its western and southern boundaries, and is traversed by the high road from Taunton to Bath, and by that from Bridgwater to Langport. It is wholly agricultural. The soil is of a sandy and loamy nature, with a subsoil of limestone. There is a quarry of good building-stone. The par. includes the hmlt. of Boroughbridge, and once belonged to the abbey of Glastonbury, to which it was given by Alfred the Great. The appropriation belongs to the Bishop of Bath and Wells. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £166, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient cruciform structure, with a tower 75 feet high, containing five bells. The register dates from 1560. There is a National school, at which a Sunday-school is also held. The Independents have a place of worship.

OTLEY, a par. in the hund. of Carlford, co. Suffolk, 8 miles N. of Ipswich, its post town, and 7 N.W. of Woodbridge. The village, which is considerable, is wholly agricultural. In the neighbourhood is an ancient entrenchment. The Hall, built in the reign of Elizabeth, and once the seat of the Gosnold family, is now a farmhouse. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £650, subject to the payment of rates, and the glebe comprises 70 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £670. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a square tower containing five bells. The church has an E. window, presented by Paul Storr, Esq. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum, which is distributed to the poor in bread. There is a school for both sexes, with residence for master, both of which were erected at the expense of the Rev. Francis Storr. The Baptists have a place of worship. The Earl of Abergavenny and Gurdon Rebow, Esq., are lords of the manor.

OTLEY, a par., post and market town, partly in the upper div. of Skyrack wap., and partly in the upper div. of Claro wap., West Riding co. York, 9 miles S.W. of Harrogate, 10 from Leeds, and 3½ from the Arthington station, on the North-Eastern line. The Leeds and Bradford railway passes through the parish to Ilkley. It is situated in a valley under the precipitous heights of Almscliffe and Chevin, or Cefn Hill, and is watered by the river Wharfe, over which is a bridge of seven arches. The par., which is of large extent, comprises the tnshps. of Baildon, Bramhope, Burley, Denton, Farnley, Poole, Esholt, and six others. In Domesday Book Otley is mentioned as Othelai, and is supposed to have derived its name from Otho, its ancient Saxon proprietor. It was given by King Athelstane to the Archbishop of York, who had an episcopal residence on the site now occupied by the manor house, and held courts of quarter session in the town till the reign of William IV., when the right of appointing the magistrates was transferred by Act of Parliament to the lord-lieutenant of the West Riding. It is a polling and petty sessions town, and formerly returned two members to parliament. The town is small, but well built, and is paved and lighted with gas. It has a good supply of water. There are a county court, two banks, savings-bank, mechanics' institute, police station, and gasworks. Its chief trade formerly consisted of woollen manufactures, but these have given place to the worsted and paper-mills; spinning, weaving, and machine-making are also carried on. A county court is held monthly. Quarter sessions are held here, also petty sessions on the first Friday in each month, at the court-house, Clapgate. The river Wharfe abounds with smelts, eels, grayling, trout, and occasionally salmon. A new road was cut from Leeds through the town in 1841, in order to avoid the steep ascent of the Chevin. A large proportion of the land is in pasture and moorland, including part of Rombald's Moor. Lord Fairfax, the parliamentary general, was born at Denton Park, in this parish, in 1611, and died here in 1671. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £300. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a cruciform structure with a tower surmounted by a wooden spire, and containing eight bells. The interior of the church contains monuments of the Fawkeses, Vavasours, Fairfaxes, Pulleynes, and other distinguished families. In addition to the parish church are the following district churches—viz. at Baildon, Bramhope, Burley-with-Menston, Denton, Esholt-with-Hawkesworth, Farnley, and Poole, the livings of which are perpet. curs., varying in val. from £148 to £40. The parochial charities produce about £82 per annum, part of which is distributed to the poor in bread every Sunday, besides a dole at Christmas. There are National and Roman Catholic schools, also a free grammar school at Clapgate, founded in 1611 by Thomas Cave, Esq.; but its foundation has recently been altered by the Court of Chancery. The Wesleyans have a Sunday-school at Walkergate. There are places of worship and Sunday-schools for the Independents, Wesleyan Methodists, Primitive Methodists, Roman Catholics, and Christian Brethren. The Manor House and Westborne Lodge are the principal seats. Otley is under Gilbert's union Wharfedale, which comprises 18 tnshps. The Archbishop of York is lord of the manor. Market day is Friday, and a cattle market every alternate Friday. The principal cattle fairs are held on the Wednesday in Easter week, second and fourth Wednesday after Easter, Whit-Wednesday, and the Monday following 2nd August, also two statute fairs for the hiring of servants on the Fridays preceding and following old Martinmas Day.

OTMOOR, a marshy tract of 4,000 acres, co. Oxford, about 9 miles N.E. of Oxford, on the bank of the river Ray. It is crossed by the Roman road Akeman Street, and has traces of a Saxon camp near Merton.

OTTER, a river of the co. of Devon, rises under Black Down, and after a course of 23 miles falls into the English Channel at Otterton. The East Devon Otter hounds hunt on its bank.

OTTERBOURNE, a par. in the lower half div. of Buddlesgate hund., co. Hants, 4 miles S. of Winchester, its railway station and post town, and 8 N.W. of Southampton. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road from Winchester to Southampton, and on the river Itching. The par. includes the tythg. of Boyatt. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The Itching navigation and the South-Western railway pass through the district. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Hursley, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. Matthew, is a cruciform structure of blue brick, erected in 1839 at a cost of £4,000. The interior is decorated with stained windows, and contains two bells. There is a National school for both sexes. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship. The President and Fellows of Magdalen College, Oxford, are lords of the manor.

OTTERBURN, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkby-in-Malham, W. div. of Staincliff wap., West Riding co. York, 5 miles S.E. of Settle, and 3 from Kirkby-in-Malham. It is situated on the river Aire, and is a meet for the Craven hounds. The soil is rich and fertile, on a substratum of limestone.

OTTERBURN-WARD, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Elsdon, S. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 3½ miles W. of Elsdon, and 9 N.E. of Bellingham. Newcastle is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Reed, and on the turnpike road from Newcastle to Jedburgh. Otterburn is celebrated in Border story as the scene of the well-contested battle described in the popular ballad of Chevy Chase. This battle was fought on the 15th August, 1388, between the English and Scots, the former being defeated, and Harry Percy, surnamed Hotspur, and his brother Ralph, made prisoners, while the Scottish commander, Earl Douglas, was left dead on the field. On the spot where the battle was fought are several tumuli, also remains of intrenchments, and a cross which marks the spot where Douglas fell. There is a woollen manufactory, and some of the inhabitants are engaged in carding, dyeing, and fulling. There is also a colliery. The soil is of a loamy nature, with lime. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Durham, val. £200. The church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, is a stone structure erected in 1858, at the expense of the Misses Davidson and Mrs. Askew, at a cost of £3,000. It contains a stone screen richly carved. At the same period a school-house was erected by the former ladies, and the old school-house added to the master's residence. A church for the United Presbyterians was built in 1834. Otterburn Tower, the principal residence, was erected on the site of the old castle, which sustained frequent attacks of the Scottish Borderers. Thomas James, Esq., is lord of the manor.

OTTERDEN, a par. partly in the hund. of Eyhorne, lathe of Aylesford, and partly in the hund. of Faversham, lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 7 miles S. of Faversham, its post town, 3 N. of Charing, and 3 N.E. of Lenham. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £207 10*s., and the glebe comprises 225 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £307. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, was rebuilt on the site of the old one in 1753. There are several monuments of great antiquity to the Curteis and Bunce families. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum, besides almshouses. Otterden Place is the principal residence. The Rev. Charles Wheler is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

OTTERFORD, a par. in the hund. of Taunton, co. Somerset, 7 miles S. of Taunton. Honiton is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated under the Black Down Hills, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is of a clayey nature, but fertile. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £87. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, is an ancient stone structure with a tower containing three bells. There is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. William Beadon, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

OTTERHAM, a par. in the hund. of Lesnewth, co. Cornwall, 6 miles N.E. of Camelford, its post town, and 12 W. of Launceston. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Attery, and on the main road from Stratton to Camelford. It is mentioned in Domesday Book as Othram, and after the Conquest was held by the Earl of Mortaigne, and afterwards by the Champernounes, Coplestons, and others. The soil consists of a dark loam, producing good grain crops. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £174. The church, dedicated to St. Dennis, is an ancient stone structure with a tower containing three bells. A Sunday-school is held at the church. G. W. Owen, Esq., is lord of the manor. There is a barrow situated near the road to Stratton.

OTTERHAMPTON, a par. in the hund. of Cannington, co. Somerset, 6 miles N.W. of Bridgwater, its post town, and 4½ from Nether Stowey. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the western bank of the river Parret, an arm of the Bristol Channel, and is wholly agricultural. The soil consists of a black clay on a subsoil of limestone, which is quarried. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £220, and the glebe comprises 18 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £240. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient stone structure with a square tower containing four bells. A new chancel was built in 1844. The register dates from 1642. There is a Church school. The Independents have a chapel. R. G. Evered, J.P. and Deputy-Lieutenant, is lord of the manor.

OTTERINGTON, NORTH, a par. in the wap. of Allertonshire, North Riding co. York, 3 miles S. of Northallerton, its post town and railway station, and 8 from Thirsk. It is situated on a branch of the river Swale, and contains the tnshps. of Thornton-le-Beans, Thornton-le-Moor, and North Otterington. The line of the Great Northern railway runs through the district. The appropriation belongs to the Dean and Canons of Christ Church, Oxford. The living is a vic.* annexed to that of Thornton-le-Street, in the dioc. of York, val. £130, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone structure, with a low tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum.

OTTERINGTON, SOUTH, a par. in the wap. of Birdforth, North Riding co. York, 4½ miles N.W. of Thirsk, its post town, and 5 S.E. of Northallerton. It is a station on the North-Eastern railway. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The land is nearly evenly divided into arable and pasture. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £290. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, erected on the site of an older one, has a tower containing three bells.

OTTERSAY. See STOCKLINCH-OTTERSAY, co. Somerset.

OTTER'S-POOL, a station on the Warrington section of the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway.

OTTERSTOUN, a loch in co. Fife, Scotland, 3 miles N.E. of Inverkeithing. On its banks, which are well wooded, is the seat called Otterstoun House.

OTTERSWICK, a bay on the coast of Sanday Island, Orkney Islands, coast of Scotland. It lies between Tafts Ness and the Reve Rocks.

OTTERTON, a par. in the hund. of East Budleigh, co. Devon, 3½ miles S.W. of Sidmouth, its post town, and 3 N.E. of Budleigh Salterton. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on the coast of the English channel near Otterton-Point, and on the eastern bank of the estuary of the river Otter. There once existed here an alien priory of black monks as a cell to the Abbey of St. Michael-in-periculo-Maris, in Normandy, which at the suppression was granted to Sion Abbey. The soil is a heavy loam, alternated with sand. Red sandstone is quarried in the cliffs for building purposes. At Hederland, in this parish, was formerly a chapel-of-ease. The vicarage is endowed with all the tithes, except the sheaf tithe, which belongs to the lord of the manor, and the glebe contains about 24 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £312. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure, with a tower at the eastern end containing five bells. The interior of the church contains memorials of the Duke family. The parochial charities produce about £5 10s. per annum. There is an endowed school for both sexes. The trustees of the late Lord Rolle are lords of the manor and chief landowners. Fairs are held on Easter Wednesday and October 11th.

OTTERY ST. MARY, a par., market town and hund. in itself, in the co. of Devon, 5 miles S.W. of Honiton, 12 E. of Exeter, and 165 from London. It has a station 2½ miles from the town, on the London and South Western railway, from whence a branch line is being constructed through the town to Sidmouth and Salterton. The town is situated in a valley on the eastern bank of the river Otter, from whence it derives its name. The manor was granted by King Edward the Confessor to the chapter of Rouen, in Normandy, from whom it passed by sale, in the reign of King Edward III., to Bishop Grandison, who founded the collegiate church. At the confiscation of Church lands, at the Reformation, Henry VIII. gave the manor to the Earl of Hertford, and it is still charged with an annual rent-charge to the Hardwicke family. The town is irregularly laid out, but there are many well-built houses and shops. The soil is sandy, upon a subsoil of gravel. The population in 1851 was 2,534 with 524 inhabited houses, which in 1861 had decreased to 2,429 with 542 inhabited houses. The manufacture of Honiton lace is carried on in many of the cottages by the women and children; and there is an extensive silk factory, chiefly for the manufacture of shoe ribbons and handkerchiefs of excellent quality. The woollen trade formerly flourished in the town; but it has now entirely disappeared. Certain officers of the manor are chosen annually at the court-leet of the lord; and the town has of late years been put under a local board of health, whereby the salubrity of the place has been greatly improved, through drainage and an abundant water supply. It is also lighted with gas, and a convenient townhall has been recently erected, where petty sessions are held alternately with Sidmouth. The King's school was founded by Henry VIII. in 1545, and endowed with £10 per annum, which has been subsequently increased to about £30 from various sources. The great tithes, of the value of nearly £1,000 per annum, were granted by the king to the Dean and Canons of Windsor, and the small tithes vested in a Church corporation, which accounts for the inadequate income of the vic.,* which only amounts to £160 per annum, partly contributed by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. The parish church, dedicated to St. Mary, was built by Bishop Grandison in 1335 on the site of a church consecrated by Bishop Bronscombe in 1260. An additional aisle was built about 1520 by Cicely Countess of Stafford, on the N.W. side, in the perpendicular style, with fan-tracery. The whole edifice was restored in 1851 at the cost of above £4,000, under the care of Mr. Butterfield. The following district churches have been erected since 1840—viz. St. John's, Tipton; SS. Philip and James's, Escot; St. Michael's, West Hill; and St. James's, Alpington, with parsonage houses and schools attached to them. The three first are perpet. curs., varying in value from £60 to £80 per annum. John Coleridge was once vicar of the parish and master of the King's school, and his son, Samuel Taylor Coleridge, the poet, was born in the school house. There are National and Sunday schools, besides a boarding and day schools; and also two blocks of almshouses, under the management of a body of feoffees, who distribute their trust funds, to the amount of nearly £800 per annum, for the relief of deserving poor who are not in the receipt of parish pay. Sir Walter Raleigh is said to have inhabited a house in Mill-street, of which no traces remain. The Right Hon. Sir J. T. Coleridge, Knt., resides at Heath's Court, and Sir Thomas Hare at a mansion, of the Tudor era, called Cadhay. The market day is on Thursday, and a great market is held on the first Thursday in February and December. Fairs are held on the first Tuesday after Shrove Tuesday, the first Tuesday after Whitsun week, and the 15th August, if on a Tuesday, if not, on the Tuesday following.

OTTERY-VENN, a par. in the hund. of East Budleigh, co. Devon, 3 miles S.W. of Ottery St. Mary, its post town, and 4½ N.W. of Sidmouth. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the western bank of the river Otter, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. annexed to the vic. of Harpford, in the dioc. of Exeter. The church, dedicated to St. Gregory, has a tower containing three bells. S. Yelverton, Esq., is lord of the manor and proprietor of chief part of the soil.

OTTRINGHAM, a par. in the S. div. of Holderness wap., East Riding co. York, 3¼ miles E. of Patrington, 6 E. by S. of Hedon, and 10 S.E. of Hull, its post town. It is a station on the Hull and Holderness section of the North-Eastern railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on Ottringham Drain, which flows into the Humber. A great portion of the land is marshy. The soil is strong but rich, with a clayey subsoil. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The tithes were commuted for annual money payments under an Enclosure Act in 1758. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £83. The church, dedicated to St. Wilfrid, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower surmounted by a spire and containing three bells. The church was restored and reroofed in 1843. The register dates from 1566. There is a National school for both sexes endowed by Mrs. Mary Fox, in 1792, with the interest of £100 per annum. A Sunday-school is also held in the school-room. The Wesleyans have a place of worship with a school attached. Francis and William Watt, Esqs., are lords of the manors and principal landowners.

OUBROUGH, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Ellerby, par. of Swine, East Riding co. York, 6 miles N.E. of Hull, and 5 N. of Hedon.

OUDE, a rivulet of the co. of Argyle, Scotland. It flows through Loch Tralig to Loch Melford in Lorn.

OUEN, or OWEN, ST., a par. in the Isle of Jersey, Channel Islands, 3 miles N.W. of Aubin, and 6 N.W. of St. Helier's. It is situated at the north-western extremity of the island, and is bounded on the W. by the Bay of St. Ouen, which has from 8 to 16 fathoms water, with the Great Sand Bank in front of it. The surface is varied, and the land well cultivated. Stone is quarried for building purposes. The principal residence is the manor house, for many generations the seat of the De Carteret family, the last of whom, Sir Charles de Carteret, died in 1716, and has a monument in Westminster Abbey. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £130, in the patron. of the governor of the island. The church is an ancient Norman structure. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans, also a parochial school. On the heights to the N.W. are the ruins of Grosnez Castle, commanding a sea view.

OUGARNEE, a stream of the co. of Clare, Ireland, rises in Lough O'Grady, and joins the Shannon at Bunratty.

OUGHAVAL, a par. in the bar. of Murrisk, co. Mayo, Ireland, 10 miles S.W. of Castlebar. It is an extensive parish situated under Croagh Patrick on Westport Bay, which is 4 miles long by 3 wide, and has Innisgort light at the N. entrance. It contains the flourishing market town and bonding port of Westport, which see. The surface is boggy, but much of the land is arable. Limestone is quarried, and traces of lead and copper occur. The property principally belongs to the Marquis of Sligo, whose seat is Westport House. The population of this district suffered severely in the famine of 1847, but is reviving. A brisk export and import trade is carried on at Westport Quay, and some of the inhabitants are engaged in the linen manufacture, but this has recently declined. The living is a vic., with that of Westport annexed. The parish church is situated in Westport, where are also two Roman Catholic chapels.

OUGHTER, a lough in the co. of Cavan, Ireland, near Killeshandra. It is about 4 miles long by 3 wide, forming part of the river Erne, and has numerous islets.

OUGHTERAGH, a par. in the bar. of Middlethird, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N.N.E. of Cahir, its post town. It is intersected by the road from Cahir to Cashel, and consists of a good soil and pasture lands. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. with Mortlestown, £209, in the patron. of the bishop. The nearest church is at New Inn. There is a school. Oughteragh House is the chief seat.

OUGHTERAGH, a par. in the bar. of Carrigallen, co. Leitrim, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, containing the town of Ballinamore, its post town. It is 7 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 4 miles. It is situated on the river Yellow, and has a hilly broken surface. The soil is of medium quality. Several small lakes occur in the interior. The road from Carrick-on-Shannon to Belturbet passes through the parish. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Kilmore, val. £516, in the patron. of the bishop and crown alternately. The church was built in 1787 at the expense of the parish. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, and also two day schools. Willowfield is the chief residence. Lime and flagstone are quarried.

OUGHTERARD, a small post and market town in the par. of Kilcommon, bar. of Moycullen, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 15 miles N.W. of Galway, and 133 from Dublin. It is situated on the rivulet Feagh at its embouchure into Lough Corrib. It consists of a long straggling street, and contains a church, Roman Catholic chapel, schools, infantry barracks, chief police station, and a dispensary, which last is within the Galway Poor-law Union. Quarter and petty sessions are held, and a stipendiary magistrate resides in the town. A marble quarry occurs in the neighbourhood. Clareville is the principal seat in the vicinity. Aghenure Castle close by was a seat of the O'Flahertys; near it is a spa and Druidical remains.

OUGHTERARD, a par. in the bar. of South Salt, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Naas. It is 3 miles long, and its greatest breadth is over 2 miles. The surface is diversified, and intersected by the road from Dublin to Cork. The living, formerly a rect. in the dioc. of Kildare, does not now appear to exist as a separate benefice. The church, supposed to have been built in 1609, is now a ruin. The Ponsonby family had a vault in the crypt. An ancient chantry formerly occupied the site of the church. A round tower is seen in the vicinity.

OUGHTERBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirk-Bampton, ward and co. of Cumberland, 1 mile S.W. of the parish church, and 7 miles W. of Carlisle. It is situated on high ground, and contains the hmlt. of Studholm.

OUGHTERLEAGUE, or BILL, a par. in the bars. of Clanwilliam and Lower Kilnamanagh, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Cashel, its post town. It lies near the course of the river Suir. The soil is mostly good. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. with Ballintemple £590, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Ballintemple. There are two day schools. Grovestown and Killenure are the chief seats.

OUGHTERSIDE, a tnshp. in the par. of Aspatria, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 5 miles N.W. of Maryport. It is situated on the river Ellen. There are several collieries.

OUGHTIBRIDGE-WITH-GATE, a vil. and ecclesiastical district in the chplry. of Bradfield, par. of Ecclesfield, West Riding co. York, 6 miles N. of Sheffield. It is a station on the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway. It is situated on the river Dun, and has recently been formed into a separate ecclesiastical district. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of steel and in the making of files, which latter is carried on to a considerable extent. The substratum contains good building-stone. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, and in the patron. of the Incumbent of Wadsley. The church was erected in 1842. There are places of worship for Independents and Wesleyans. At Onesacre is a school endowed with £15 per annum.

OUGHTMAMA, a par. in the bar. of Burren, co. Clare, Ireland, 3 miles S. of Burren, and 14 N. of Curofin. It is situated on the Clare side of Galway Bay, in Ballyvaghan Bay, which has an anchorage in 2½ fathoms water inside the Lobster rock. The surface is mountainous and rocky, but in parts fertile. The parish includes the bathing place of Aughinish and the small port of Finavarra, with the ruins of Turlough Castle. On the coast are Aughinish Point and Finavarra Head, commanding a sea view. The principal seats are Mount Vernon and Finavarra House. The living is a rect. united with Kilcornane. There are three Roman Catholic chapels and several schools.

OULART, a vil. in the bar. of Ballaghkeen, co. Wexford, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Enniscorthy, and 12 N. by E. of Wexford. It is situated near the coast under Oulart hill, and is a petty sessions town, and chief police station. The village contains a fever hospital and a dispensary. The principal residence is Newfort. Colonel Foote was defeated here in 1798 by a party of Irish rebels. Fairs are held on old Christmas Day, Shrove Tuesday, Easter Monday, and Michaelmas Day.

OULER, a lough in the bar. of North Ballinacor, co. Wicklow, Ireland, 8 miles N. of Rathdrum, and 3 N.E. of Glendalough, or "the two laked glen." It is situated in a wild spot under Thonelagee Mountain, 1,830 feet above the sea level, and discharges its superfluous waters into the river Avonmore, of which it forms one of the principal sources.

OULNEY. See OLNEY, co. Bucks.

OULSTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Coxwold, wap. of Birdforth, North Riding co. York, 2½ miles S.E. of Coxwold railway station, and 3¾ N.E. of Easingwold, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. There is an excellent draw-well of great depth. The village school is partly supported by the inhabitants, and partly by an annuity of £10, given by Sir G. O. Wombwell, Bart., who is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The Roman Catholics have a place of worship, and the Wesleyans meet for Divine worship in the school-room. The land is chiefly in pasture and meadow, with a small proportion of arable, and about 100 acres of woodland and common.

OULTON, a par. in the hund. of South Erpingham, co. Norfolk, 3½ miles N.W. of Aylsham, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road from Aylsham to Holt, near the river Bure, and is wholly agricultural. The land is chiefly arable, with a small proportion of pasture, and 150 acres of woodland and plantations. Part of the impropriate tithes, not in the hands of the landowners, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £20 10*s.*, and the vicarial for £168, and the glebe comprises 13 acres. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £153. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, has a square embattled tower, containing one bell. It is situated on an eminence about a mile from the village. The register dates from 1706. There is a charity of 10*s.* per annum to the poor widows of Oulton, out of the Hall estate, bequeathed by E. Bell in 1694. There is a National school for both sexes, also a workhouse. The Independents have a place of worship. The Hall is the chief seat.

OULTON, or OLDTON, a par. in the hund. of Mutford, co. Suffolk, 2 miles W. of Lowestoft, its post town, and 1 mile from the Mutford Bridge railway station. The village, which is large and of irregular form, is chiefly agricultural. It is bounded on the S.W. by that part of Lake Lothing called Oulton Broad, and by the river Waveney. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the fisheries. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £450, and the glebe comprises 50 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £378. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient Norman structure, with a square tower containing five bells. The interior contains brasses of a priest, bearing date 1310, and of a Fastolf of Oulton High House. The edifice was once cruciform, but both transepts have been taken down, and other parts are in a dilapidated condition. The register dates from 1659. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There are a parochial school, and a school for adults. The Mutford union poorhouse is in this parish.

OULTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Wigton, ward and co. of Cumberland, 2 miles N.W. of Wigton, and 11 S.W. of Carlisle. The village, which is considerable, is situated near a branch of the river Wampool. The inhabitants are partly engaged in the neighbouring cotton-mills and dye-works. The great tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act, in 1823. There is a place of worship for Baptists. A workhouse was erected here in 1828.

OULTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Norbury, co. Stafford, 3 miles N.E. of Newport. It is situated on the canal.

OULTON, a vil. in the lib. of Kibblestone, co. Stafford, 1 mile N.E. of Stone. It contains the Oulton Retreat lunatic asylum.

OULTON, LOW, a tnshp. in the par. of Over, hund. of Eddisbury, co. Chester, 4 miles N.E. of Tarporley. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near Delamere Forest, and is wholly agricultural. Darley Hall, formerly the seat of the Starkie family, has been pulled down, and a farmhouse erected on its site.

OULTON-WITH-WOODLESFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of Rothwell, lower div. of Agbrigg wap., West Riding co. York, 5 miles N.E. of Wakefield, and 5 E. by S. of Leeds, its post town. It is a station on the Midland railway. The village, which is large, is situated on a branch of the river Aire. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the stone quarries, which are very extensive. The surface is varied, and the soil fertile. The Hall is situated in a well-wooded demesne. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £300. The church, dedicated to St. John, is a modern structure, with a square embattled tower, crowned with pinnacles, and surmounted by a spire. The chancel, which is hexagonal, is embellished with stained windows. It was erected in 1830, at the cost of £12,000, left by John Blayds, Esq., in 1827. There is a school for children of both sexes. The Wesleyans have places of worship. John Calverley, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

OUN, or ONN, HIGH and LITTLE, hmlts. in the par. of Church Eaton, co. Stafford, 6 miles W. of Penkridge. It is situated near the Grand Junction canal.

OUNDLE, a par., post and market town, in the hund. of Polebrook, co. Northampton, 8 miles from Thrapston, 13 from Peterborough, and 30 N.E. of Northampton. It is within half a mile of its station on the Peterborough branch of the London and North-Western railway. It is situated on the northern bank of the river Nen, by which it is nearly surrounded, and which is here crossed by two bridges. The par. contains, besides the town of its own name, the hmlts. of Ashton, Biggin, Churchfield, and Elmington. Oundle is a polling and petty sessions town, and is mentioned in Domesday Book as Undela. The town, which is of considerable antiquity, contains several houses built with the stones of Fotheringham Castle. It is well paved and lighted with gas, and contains a townhall, several good shops, two branch banks, a savings-bank, and a commodious market house, with shambles, situated in the old market place. The magistrates meet once a fortnight at the townhall to hold petty sessions, and a court for the hundred occurs annually; also courts leet and baron are held annually, in October, under Jesse Watts Russell, Esq., who is lord of the manor. From its elevated position the town commands extensive views of the river and surrounding country. This neighbourhood is celebrated for its numerous mineral springs, among which is one that emits a singular noise, and is called "Drumming Well." A portion of the inhabitants are employed in lace making. The Poor-law Union of Oundle comprises 37 parishes or townships, 32 of which are in the county of Northampton, and 5 in that of Huntingdon. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £500, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient cruciform structure, with an embattled tower consisting of five stories, and 105 feet in height. It is crowned with a spire 96 feet high, and contains eight bells. The interior of the church contains a brass lectern on a pedestal, also several monuments. The charities produce about £110 per annum. There are almshouses for seven aged men founded by the Lord Mayor Laxton in 1556, and under the superintendence of the Grocers' Company; there is also a hospital for eighteen aged females, founded and endowed by the Rev. Nicholas Latham in 1611. The educational establishments consist of Laxton's Free

Grammar school, Latham's Blue-coat school, National, British, and infant schools. The two first named schools are in connection with the charitable institutions before-mentioned, and were founded and endowed about the same period. The Baptists, Independents, Wesleyans, and Roman Catholics have each a place of worshp. Lilford Hall and Biggin Hall are the principal residences. Market day is Thursday. Fairs are held on the 25th Febuary for horses and cattle, Whit-Monday, 21st August, for stock, and a pleasure fair on the 12th October.

OURNISH, or ORNISH, an islet in Loch Skiport, Western Islands, coast of Scotland. It is situated on the north-eastern side of South Uist Island.

OURRID, a lough in the co. of Galway, Ireland, 12 miles W. of Oughterard. It is situated under Ourrid Hill.

OUSBY, or ULFSBY, a par. in the Leath ward, co. Cumberland, 9 miles N.E. of Penrith, its post town. It is a small and straggling village, situated on a branch of the river Eden, under Cross-Fell, and near Maiden Way. It is said to have derived its name from Ulff, a Dane, who once held it. The par., which is of large extent, comprises the hmlts. of Ousbyshire, Bradley, Fell-Side, and the Row. From its elevated position among the hills, it is subject to great damage from the Helm Winds, which occur frequently from September to May, and do great injury to the corn. The soil is chiefly a red marl, or rich loam alternated with sand, upon a subsoil of red sandstone and limestone. There are veins of lead and several small seams of coal. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £353, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Luke, is a stone edifice with a bell turret. The interior has effigies of a knight in wood. The living was formerly held by Robinson, the antiquarian. The charities produce about £3 per annum, which goes towards the poor-rate. There is a National school, which was erected in 1856.

OUSDEN, or OWSDEN, a par. in the hund. of Risbridge, co. Suffolk, 7 miles S.E. of Newmarket, its post town, and 10 S.W. of Bury St. Edmund's. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The soil is of a loamy nature on a subsoil of clay and chalk. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £26 10*s*. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £285. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a small Norman structure, with a tower containing five bells. The register dates from 1675. The parochial charities produce £6 per annum, besides Moseley's charity of £10 bequeathed for the education of 20 children of this parish. There is a parochial school. Ousden Hall is the principal residence. T. J. Ireland, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

OUSE, the name of several considerable rivers in England. The root being derived from the Celtic word Uisg, "water," is the same as Isis and Esk. The most important of all these streams is the Great Ouse, which was known to the ancients by the name of Trivona, and has its source in Ouse Well, near Brackley, in Northamptonshire. This river has a course of about 140 miles, chiefly in an easterly direction, through a flat country, and receives in its course to the Wash the tributary waters of the Tare, which joins near Stony Stratford; of the Ouzel, which joins at Newport Pagnell; of the Ivel, which joins near Templeford; of the Cam, which joins at Stretham; of the Lark, which joins at Prickwillow Bridge; and of the Little Ouse, which joins at Brandon Bridge, and so to the Wash at Lynn, where it is joined by the Nar and other streams, forming a considerable estuary ten miles from the sea. The navigation at the September equinox is rendered dangerous by the sudden swell of the tide, called the "bore," or "eagre," occasioned by the shape of the channel, which pents up the rising waters. The river is navigable for sea-borne vessels of large tonnage to Lynn, but the entrance is much blocked up with sand brought down by the stream, and known as the Roaring Middle, Bell, Breast, Ferrier, and other sands. The channel, which has been used since 1812, is narrow and intricate, and is about 15 miles long from the Deeps, which form the eastern half of the Wash, but it is well marked out by buoys, and has from 1 to 7 fathoms water. In one part is a life beacon 34 feet high, with a railed top for seamen to get to in case of shipwreck. Above Lynn the stream is navigable for barges to Ely, about 25 miles from its mouth, and as far as Bedford for boats.—2. The Little Ouse, or Brandon river, rises at Lopham Fen, in the parish of North Lopham, only 9 feet distant from the source of the river Waveney, the two streams taking opposite directions in their course to the sea. At Thetford the Little Ouse is joined by the Thet, and after a course of 34 miles falls into the Great Ouse at Brandon Bridge.—3. The Yorkshire Ouse is formed by the junction of the Swale and the Ure, or Yore, near Boroughbridge. It flows in a south-easterly direction along the border of the East and West Ridings, and receives in its course the tributary waters of the Wharfe, Aire, and Don, from the W., and of the Derwent from the N. The whole length of the stream is about 60 miles. The upper portion, called indifferently the Ure, Yore, or Ouseburn, is navigable for barges as far as Linton, and the lower portion, below York, or Ouse proper, is navigable for large vessels, which come up all the way from Faxfleet, where the united streams of the Ouse and Trent form the estuary of the Humber.—4. The Sussex Ouse rises at Slaugham, and after a course of 28 miles in a southerly direction, with a bend to the E., falls into the English Channel at Newhaven, where is a small harbour and packet-station for the Dieppe steamers.

OUSE AND DERWENT, a wap. in the East Riding co. York. It is situated betwixt the rivers from which it takes its name, and contains the pars. of Dunnington, Elvington, Escrick, Fulford, Ambo, Hemingbrough, Heslington, St. Paul, Naburn, Riccall, Skipwith, Thorganby, Wheldrake, and parts of Catton, St. Lawrence and Stillingfleet, comprising an area of 52,710 acres.

OUSEBURN, GREAT, a par. in the wap. of Lower Claro, West Riding co. York, 5 miles S.E. of Boroughbridge, and 14 W. by N. of York, its post town. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated in the vale of the Ure, over which is a wooden bridge to Aldwork, on the site of the ancient ferry. The parish gives name to the Poor-law Union, the house of which has accommodation for about 100 paupers. The soil consists of loam and clay, producing good crops of grain. The greater part of the land is arable. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1770. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £213. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure, with a square embattled and pinnacled tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains some mural monuments. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum. There is a school for both sexes, erected by H. S. Thompson, Esq., who is lord of the manor and principal landowner. There is also a Sunday-school.

OUSEBURN, LITTLE, a par. and post town in the waps. of Upper and Lower Claro, West Riding co. York, 4¾ miles S.E. of Boroughbridge, 8½ N.E. of Knaresborough, and 13 N.W. of York. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near Ouseburn Head, and is chiefly agricultural. The par., which is bounded on the E. by the navigable river Ouse, comprises the tnshps. of Little Ouseburn, Kirby Hall, Thorpe-Underwoods, and Widdington. The land is fertile, and nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1801. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £300, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is an ancient stone structure, with a square tower containing two bells. The parochial charities produce about £26 per annum. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans. E. Robinson, Esq., is lord of the manor.

OUSEFLEET, a tnshp. in the par. of Whitgift, lower div. of Osgoldcross wap., West Riding co. York, 6 miles

S.E. of Howden, and the same distance N.E. of Goole. It is situated on the river Ouse, which bounds the township on the N. In 1727, Emanuel Empson founded here a small endowed school, which has now an income from land of about £40 per annum. The Independents have a place of worship. The tithes of this township were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1828.

OUSLETHWAITE, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Worsborough, West Riding co. York, 2 miles S. of Barnsley.

OUSTHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Pocklington, Wilton Beacon div. of the wap. of Harthill, East Riding co. York, 1½ mile N.E. of Pocklington. There are traces of a large moated mansion in the neighbourhood.

OUSTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Chester-le-Street, middle div. of Chester ward, co. Durham, 3 miles N.W. of Chester-le-Street, and 5 S. of Gateshead. There is a large colliery, which employs the chief part of the inhabitants. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

OUSTON, or OWSTON, a par. in the hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, 6 miles W. of Oakham, its railway station and post town, and 8 S. of Melton-Mowbray. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on elevated ground near a branch of the river Wreak, and is chiefly agricultural. Ouston was anciently called Osulveston, or Oulveston, and in Henry II.'s time had a priory of canons regular of the order of St. Augustine, founded by Sir Robert Grimbald, and endowed with lands producing at the Dissolution £173 18*s.* 9*d.* The site was given to the Ratcliffes, and no traces of it now remain except the church and the glebe house, the rest of the buildings having been taken down about the middle of the last century, and the materials used in building the church of East Carlton and a farmhouse at Ouston. The par. includes the hmlt. of Newbold Saucy. The land is nearly all in pasture. The glebe house is an ancient building originally used as the dormitory of the abbey. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £72. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, which formerly belonged to the priory, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing two bells. The Rev. H. Palmer, M.A., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

OUSTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Stamfordham, N.E. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 1½ mile S.W. of Stamfordham, and 9 miles N.E. of Hexham.

OUTCHESTER, a tnshp. in the par. of Bambrough, N. div. of Bambrough ward, co. Northumberland, 2 miles E. of Belford. It is situated on the western bank of the river Waren, or Warn, near its outlet into Budle Bay, and was the site of the Castrum Ulterius of the ancient port of Warnmouth. There is a small Roman camp at Chester Hill, which is of a square form, and was approached from Alnwick. The land is fertile, with a subsoil of clay and limestone. The bay affords anchorage for small vessels. The principal trade is in the export of corn and flour, and in importing coal and wood.

OUTER, HIGH, a par. in the city of Glasgow, co. Lanark, Scotland. See GLASGOW.

OUTGATE, a hmlt. in the par. of Leverton, co. Lincoln, 6 miles N.E. of Boston.

OUTLANDS, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Bishop's Offley, par. of Adbaston, hund. of Pirehill, co. Stafford, 3 miles W. of Eccleshall.

OUT LANE, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Longwood, West Riding co. York, 4 miles N.W. of Huddersfield.

OUT-LANE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Bolton and par. of Calverley, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.E. of Bradford. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the woollen factories.

OUT-NEWTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Easington, S. div. of Holderness wap., East Riding co. York, 2½ miles N. of Easington, and 4 E. of Patrington. The village is small and of irregular form. There are ruins of an ancient chapel near the sea cliffs.

OUTRATH, a par. in the bar. of Shillelogher, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S.E. of Kilkenny, its post town. It is situated in the vicinity of the Nore river. The road from Kilkenny to Knocktopher passes through the parish. The soil is mostly good. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with Inchiholohan, £408, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Grange. There is a day school. Prospect House is the chief seat in the neighbourhood.

OUTSEATS, a hmlt. in the par. of Hathersage, hund. of High Peak, co. Derby, 6 miles N.E. of Tideswell.

OUTWELL, a par. partly in the hund. of Wisbeach, Isle of Ely, co. Cambridge, and partly in that of Clackclose, co. Norfolk, 6 miles S.E. of Wisbeach, its post town, and 6 E. of the Downham railway station. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on the river Nen. There was formerly a Benedictine house at Molycourt, which was made a cell to Ely priory by Henry VI. The soil is of a loamy nature, on a subsoil of clay. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £114. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £417, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Clement, is an ancient brick structure with a square embattled tower containing six bells. The register dates from 1680. The parochial charities produce about £181 per annum, of which £18 goes to a school. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. There is a National school for children of both sexes. Beaupré Hall, the ancient manor house, is an Elizabethan residence. C. W. Townley, Esq., is lord of the manor.

OUTWICK, a hmlt. in the par. of Breamore, co. Hants, 3 miles N. of Fordingbridge.

OUTWOOD, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Pilkington, par. of Prestwich-cum-Oldham, co. Lancaster, 5 miles N.W. of Manchester. There is a colliery, which employs part of the inhabitants, and others are engaged in the neighbouring cotton-mills.

OUVANE, a small river of the co. of Cork, Ireland, rises in the Sheehy mountains, and after a course of 11 miles falls into Bantry Bay.

OUZEL, a stream of the co. of Bucks, rises near Ivinghoe, and after a course of 20 miles joins the Ouse at Newport Pagnell.

OUZLEWELL-GREEN, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Lofthouse-with-Carlton, par. of Rothwell, West Riding co. York, 4 miles N. of Wakefield.

OVENDEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Halifax, wap. of Morley, West Riding co. York, 1½ mile N.W. of Halifax, its post town, and 7 miles S.W. of Bradford. The town, which is of large extent, but of straggling form, is situated on the road to Keighley and Craven, between the river Hebble and the Ovenden Brook. It chiefly consists of detached houses and scattered hamlets irregularly built. The tnshp., which is of large extent, containing about 5,295 acres, comprises the chplry. of Illingworth, the ecclesiastical district of Bradshaw, and the hmlts. of Leebank, Mixenden, Nursery Lane, Hebble Bridge, Wheatley, Holdsworth, and Moorside. A large portion of the inhabitants are employed in the woollen, worsted, and cotton mills, which are numerous and extensive, and a few in the weaving of damasks and lastings. The surface is varied, and at the commencement of the present century one-third was open common, but is now enclosed under an Act of Parliament passed in 1814. The tithes were commuted for land in 1814. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £130, in the patron. of the Vicar of Halifax. The church, which is situated at Illingworth, is dedicated to St. Mary, and has a square tower containing one bell. At Popples are almshouses for widows and spinsters upwards of fifty years of age. There is a free school, with an annuity of £25, for the instruction of thirty children, also a Church school and an infant school. There are several places of worship for the Dissenters in the neighbouring villages. The Earl of Scarborough is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

OVENS, a hmlt. in the bar. of East Muskerry, co. Cork, Ireland, 7 miles S.W. of Cork, on the river Bride.

OVER, a par. in the hund. of Papworth, co. Cambridge, 5 miles S.E. of St. Ives, its post town, 9 from Huntingdon, and 1 mile from the Swavesey station, on the Great Eastern railway. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on the river Ouse. A portion of the land is fenny, with pasture. The soil consists of a strong clay. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £108, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, has been thoroughly restored and the N. aisle rebuilt. On the W. door was carved a figure of the Virgin clothed with the sun. The parochial charities produce about £401 per annum, of which £366 is realised from town lands, and £20 goes to the school. There is a National school for both sexes, also British and Sunday schools. The Baptists and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. There is a townhall, which was rebuilt in 1849. E. Foster, Esq., is lord of the manor.

OVER, a par., market town, and nominal borough in the first div. of the hund. of Eddisbury, co. Chester, 5 miles S. of Northwich, and 16 E. of Chester. It is situated on the road from Middlewich to Chester, near the Winsford bridge over the river Weever, which separates this parish on the E. from that of Davenham, and is navigable for barges. The par. includes, besides the town of its own name, the chplries. of Low Oulton and Wettenhall. The town, called in ancient records "the borough," was chartered by Edward I., who granted to it the privilege of a market, held on Wednesday, which, having fallen into disuse, was restored in 1840. It consists chiefly of one long and irregularly-built street, in which are remains of several crosses. It has been governed from time immemorial by a mayor and jury, who are chosen at the court leet and baron of the lord of the manor, held in October. It has long been celebrated for its salt-works. In 1861 the population of the township was 3,774, and of the parish 3,454. The appropriation belongs to the Bishop of Chester, and the glebe consists of 24 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £200, having been augmented by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Chad, was rebuilt in the reign of Henry VIII., and contains some stained glass windows, and an altar-tomb supporting an effigy in brass to the memory of Hugh Starkey, founder of the church, and gentleman-usher to Henry VIII. The Independents have a place of worship. There is a free grammar school, founded in 1689 by Mrs. E. Venables, and endowed with land producing about £60 per annum. The school was removed to its present site in 1803, and is conducted on the National system. Fairs are held on the 15th May and 25th September.

OVER, a tythg. in the par. of Almondsbury, lower div. of the hund. of Langley, co. Gloucester, 2 miles S.W. of Almondsbury, and 5 N. by W. of Bristol.

OVER, a hmlt. in the par. of Churcham, lower div. of the hund. of Dudstone, co. Gloucester, 1 mile N.W. of Gloucester. It is situated at the conjunction of the Hereford canal with the river Severn, over which is a bridge of 150 feet span, erected in 1829.

OVERBERVIE, an ancient par. in the co. of Kincardine, Scotland, now joined to Glenbervie.

OVERBURY, a par. in the middle div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, co. Worcester, 5 miles N.E. of Tewkesbury. It is situated under Bredon Hill, and includes the chplries. of Alstone, Teddington, and Little Washbourne, and the hmlt. of Conderton. There are stone-quarries, malt kilns, and a paper mill. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1811. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. with the above curs., £450, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Faith, is an ancient structure, containing a monument to W. Dowdeswell, with an epitaph by Burke. There are chapels-of-ease at Alstone, Teddington, and Little Washbourne. Elizabeth Wood, in 1824, bequeathed £200, of which the interest is distributed to the poor.

OVER-CESTER, a hmlt. in the par. of Monk's Kirby, co. Warwick, 4 miles N. of Rugby. It is situated near the line of the Roman road Watling Street.

OVERCHURCH, a par. in the lower div. of Wirrall hund., co. Chester. See UPTON.

OVER CHURCH. See CHURCH, OVER, co. Warwick.

OVERCOMBE, a tythg. in the par. of Sherborne, co. Dorset, near Sherborne.

OVERLEY-WITH-ORGREAVE, a hmlt. in the par. of Alrewas, N. div. of the hund. of Offlow, co. Stafford, 5 miles N.E. of Lichfield.

OVERMEER, a small lake in the co. of Cumberland, 3 miles S.E. of Irby. It is situated under Caldbeck Fells, and is about half a mile long by a quarter broad.

OVERS, a hund. in the co. of Salop, contains the pars. of Bitterley, Burford, Greet, Milson, Neen-Sollars, and Silvington, comprising an area of 19,110 acres.

OVERSAY. See ORSAY, co. Argyle.

OVERSLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Arrow, Stratford div. of the hund. of Barlichway, co. Warwick, half a mile S.E. of Alcester, which place is partly encompassed by the river Arrow. The Warwickshire hounds meet in the neighbourhood. The union poorhouse is also situated here.

OVERSTONE, a par. in the hund. of Spelhoe, co. Northampton, 5 miles N.E. of Northampton, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The land is chiefly arable, with some woodland and plantations. The soil is a fine red loam. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £265. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a modern edifice, with an E. window of painted glass. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. A school has been erected at the expense of Lewis Loyd, Esq., who is lord of the manor.

OVERSTRAND, a par. in the hund. of North Erpingham, co. Norfolk, 2 miles S.E. of Cromer. Norwich is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the coast, and is chiefly agricultural. On the beach is a fishing station for the boats employed in the herring and lobster fisheries. The surface rises gradually from the shore, and is bounded on the S.W. by a range of hills. The soil is of a light sandy nature. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £80. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £75. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, is an ancient structure in a ruined condition, the nave being the only portion devoted to Divine service. It was erected on the site of an older one, which was destroyed by the sea in Richard II.'s time. The register dates from 1558. There is an endowed school for both sexes.

OVERTON, a par. in the hund. of Maylor, co. Flint, 7 miles from Wrexham, its post town, 5 N.W. of Ellesmere, and 5 from the Overton station on the Shrewsbury and Chester section of the Great Western railway. The village which is of small extent, is situated at the bridge over the river Dee. It is mentioned in Domesday Book as Ovreton, and was formerly held by Robert Fitzhugh, Robert de Crevecœur, the Stranges, and other distinguished families. It is a polling, petty sessions, and decayed market town, and unites with Flint in returning one member to parliament. The par. includes the hmlt. of Clog, Knolton, and Maesgwaylod. In the neighbourhood are traces of a castle built by Madoc ab Meredydd, Prince of Powis. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Bangor-Monachorum, in the dioc. of St. Asaph. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a cruciform structure. The churchyard contains some yew trees of great antiquity. The parochial charities produce about £34 per annum. There are several residences, including Gwernhaeled, situated in a park, with a camp and barrow, and the residence of Bryn-y-Pŷs, where the late Duke of Wellington passed his childhood. Annual fairs are held on the Monday prior to Holy Thursday, 11th June, 9th August, and 8th October.

OVERTON, a hund. in the co. of Hants, contains the pars. of Ashe, Deane, Laverstock, Overton, Steventon, and Sudley, comprising an area of 15,500 acres.

OVERTON, a par. in the above hund., co. Hants, 4 miles N.E. of Whitchurch. It is a station on the Yeovil and Exeter branch of the London and South-Western railway. It is situated on the Great Western road, near the head of the river Test. It is an extensive par., comprising, besides the town of its own name, the hmlts. of Polhampton, Quidhampton, and Southington. It is a prescriptive borough, and was formerly a market town. Prior to the passing of the Reform Bill it returned two members to parliament. There are numerous malthouses and a silk mill, giving employment to a number of the female inhabitants. The Whitchurch union poorhouse is situated in this parish. Overton is the kennelling place of the Vine hounds. The land is almost wholly arable, with about 600 acres of woodland. The tithes of Tadley have been commuted for a rent-charge of £229 12s. The living is a rect. and vic.* with the rect. of Tadley annexed, in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £320, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a low square tower surmounted by a shingled spire and containing five bells. The church was restored in 1853. The parochial charities produce about £14 per annum. There is an endowed National school. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. The Bishop of Winchester is lord of the manor. Fairs are held on 4th May, Whit-Monday, July 18th, and 22nd October. The one occurring on the 18th July is a very extensive sheep and lamb fair.

OVERTON, a par. in the hunds. of Elstub and Selkley, co. Wilts, 4 miles S.W. of Marlborough, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Kennet, which is here generally dry in summer. It is chiefly agricultural, but some of the females are engaged in making straw-plait. The par. includes the tnshps. of Overton West, Stowell West, Alton Priors, and the hmlt. of Lockeridge. The land is laid out in sheep farms. The living is a vic.* consolidated with that of Fyfield and the cur. of Alton Priors, in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £319. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone edifice, with a square pinnacled tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum.

OVERTON, or OVINGHAM, a par. partly in the wap. of Bulmer, and partly in the lib. of St. Peter's, North Riding co. York, 3 miles N. of York, its post town, and 2 S.W. of Shipton railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Ouse, and on the line of the Great Northern railway, which passes through the parish. Here was formerly a Roman station. The par. includes the tnshps. of Shipton and Skelton. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is of a mixed nature, but very productive. The living is a vic. with the perpet. cur.* of Shipton annexed, in the dioc. of York, val. £214. The church, dedicated to St. Cuthbert, has a belfry containing two bells. It was entirely rebuilt in 1855 on the site of the old one. It has a stained E. window. The register dates from 1593. The parochial charities produce about £50 per annum. A free school was founded in 1655 by Anne Middleton, at Shipton, at which the children of the parish are instructed.

OVERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Malpas, higher div. of the hund. of Broxton, co. Chester, 1½ mile N.W. of Malpas. The principal attraction in the neighbourhood is the ancient mansion of Overton Hall, which was formerly surrounded by a moat. S. Gregson, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

OVERTON, a vil. in the par. of Frodsham, second div. of the hund. of Eddisbury, co. Chester, half a mile S.E. of Frodsham. It is a suburb of Frodsham, and contains the parochial church.

OVERTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Port Eynon, co. Glamorgan, 12 miles W. by S. of Swansea.

OVERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Lancaster, hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 5 miles S.W. of Lancaster, its post town. It is situated on Morecambe Bay at the river Lune's mouth. The tnshp. comprises the hmlts. of Overton, Middleton, and Heaton-with-Oxcliffe. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £155, in the patron. of the Vicar of Lancaster. The church is an ancient structure with an open turret containing one bell. Overton was formerly a Roman settlement. It is joined with Sunderland to form a township.

OVERTON, a vil. in the par. of Cambusnethan, co. Lanark, Scotland, 5 miles E. of Hamilton, and 1 mile S.E. of the Wishaw station on the Caledonian railway.

OVERTON, a vil. in the par. of Abbey-of-Paisley, co. Renfrew, Scotland, adjoining Paisley. It is chiefly inhabited by colliers and weavers.

OVERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Stoddesden, co. Salop, 3 miles N.W. of Cleobury-Mortimer. It is situated on the river Rea.

OVERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Richard's Castle, hund. of Munslow, co. Salop, 2 miles S. of Ludlow.

OVERTON, or OVER BIDDULPH, a tnshp. in the par. of Biddulph, or Biddle, N. div. of the hund. of Pirehill, co. Stafford.

OVERTON, COLD. See COLD OVERTON, co. Leicester.

OVERTON-HEATH, an ext. par. place, in the hund. of Selkley, co. Wilts. It includes Clatford Park.

OVERTON-LONGVILLE. See ORTON-LONGVILLE, co. Hunts.

OVERTON-MARKET, a par. in the hund. of Alstoe, co. Rutland, 5¾ miles N.E. of Oakham, its post town, and 3 N. of the Ashwell station on the Syston and Peterborough section of the Midland railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on an eminence near the Melton Mowbray canal. It was formerly a market town, but is now an inconsiderable village. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The Cottesmore hounds meet in this neighbourhood. In the western part of the parish is a hill overlooking the vale of Catmore. The soil is a light loam alternating with clay. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1803. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £500. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, has a square tower containing three bells. The interior of the church has recently been restored. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum.

OVERTON WATERVILLE. See ORTON WATERVILLE, co. Hunts.

OVERTOWN, a tythg. in the par. of Wroughton, co. Wilts, 2 miles S. of Swindon. It is situated near the Wilts and Berks canal.

OVERY, a hmlt. in the par. of Dorchester, co. Oxford, 4 miles N.W. of Wallingford.

OVING, a par. in the hund. of Ashendon, co. Bucks, 6 miles N.W. of Aylesbury, its post town, and 1 mile W. of Whitchurch. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. A portion of the female inhabitants are employed in the making of lace. Baron Rothschild's hounds meet in this parish. There are remains of an ancient castle. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £350, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient stone structure, with tower containing a peal of six bells. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. A Sunday-school is held at the church. There is a place of worship for the Primitive Methodists. The right of lordship has been disputed upwards of half a century, and is still unsettled. Oving House, the principal residence, commands a prospect of the vale of Aylesbury.

OVING, a par. in the hund. of Box, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 3 miles E. of Chichester, its post town, and near the Drayton railway station. The village, which is of small extent and wholly agricultural, is situated on the Brighton railway. The par. is extensive, and comprises the tythgs. of Colworth and Portfield. The soil is light, but very fertile. The parish is intersected by the Arundel and Portsmouth canal. The tithes have been commuted for the following rent-charges—to the Precentor, £853 9s.; the Dean and Chapter of Chichester, £56 11s.; St. Mary Magdalene and St. James's Hospital, £30; and the vicar, £270. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £224, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedication unknown, is a cruciform structure, built of flint, with stone quoins and dressings to the windows. The whole edifice was thoroughly restored at the expense of Miss Wood in 1841. The tower, situated at the W. end of the building, is surmounted by a shingled spire. Miss Wood erected and endowed six almshouses and a school for both sexes in 1839. Shopwyke House is the principal residence.

OVINGDEAN, a par. in the hund. of Younsmere, rape of Lewes, co. Sussex, 2½ miles E. by S. of Brighton, its post town, and 1 mile N.W. of Rottingdean. The village, which is of small extent, is situated in a valley about 1 mile from the sea-coast, and is wholly agricultural. In the neighbourhood is a farm where Charles II. was concealed by Maunsell in 1651, prior to his escape to France. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £382, and the glebe comprises 1½ acre. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £355. The church is an ancient structure with a tower, and is supposed to have been formerly much larger than at present. The register dates from 1700.

OVINGHAM, a par. in the E. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, N.W. of Newcastle, 10 miles E. of Hexham, its post town, and a quarter of a mile N. of the Prudhoe railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the northern bank of the river Tyne, over which is a ferry. The par., which is extensive, comprises the tnshps. of Wylam, Welton, Spittle, Mickley, Prudhoe, Ovington, and 12 others. Ovingham was formerly a market town, and is still a place of considerable importance, containing an iron foundry, dyeworks, bleach-grounds, and a brewery. There are remains of a priory of Black Canons, founded as a cell to Hexham Abbey by one of the Umfravilles. Its revenue at the Dissolution was returned at £13 4*s.* 8*d.* The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture and in the coal mines. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £161. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a cruciform structure, with an ancient tower containing three bells. The church was thoroughly restored in 1857. The register dates from 1679. There is also a district church at Mickley, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £76. The parochial charities produce about £14 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. The Duke of Northumberland is lord of the manor.

OVINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Hinckford, co. Essex, 2 miles S.W. of Clare, its post town, and 7 E. of Haverhill. The village, which is of small extent and wholly agricultural, is situated near the river Stour. This place existed in the Confessor's time. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £207, and the glebe comprises 22 acres. The living is a rect.* with that of Tilbury and the cur. of Allbrights annexed, in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £547. The church, of which the dedication is unknown, is a small ancient edifice, situated on an eminence surrounded by trees.

OVINGTON, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Fawley, co. Hants, 2 miles S.W. of New Alresford, its post town, and 5½ N.E. of Winchester. The village, which is of small extent, is situated in a valley on the river Itchin, and is wholly agricultural. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1812. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £130, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is of great antiquity, and has a wooden tower containing four bells. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum. There is a National school. The Bishop of Winchester is lord of the manor.

OVINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Wayland, co. Norfolk, 1¼ mile N.E. of Watton, its post town, and 8 miles S.E. of Swaffham. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Wissey. The Romans had a camp here on the road to Caistor, at which place relics of great antiquity have been found. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The greater part of the land is arable, with some pasture and plantations. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £410, and the glebe comprises 23 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £415, in the patron. of the University of Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, is an ancient structure with a square tower.

OVINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Ovingham, E. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 2 miles N.E. of Stocksfield, 9 E. of Hexham, and 12 W. of Newcastle-upon-Tyne. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the northern bank of the river Tyne. Malting and brewing are extensively carried on. There is a parochial school for both sexes. Ovington Hall and Ovington Cottage are the principal residences.

OVINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Forcett, wap. of West Gilling, North Riding co. York, 3½ miles from the church at Forcett, and 5 S.E. of Barnard Castle. It is situated on the river Tees. There was formerly a Gilbertine priory cell, founded in King John's time by Alan-de-Wilton.

OVOCA, a river and vale of the co. of Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is formed by the confluence of the streams Avonmore and Avonbeg, at a spot celebrated by the poet Moore as the "Meeting of the Waters," 7 miles N.W. of Arklow. Some 4 miles farther on it joins the Darragh. At Newbridge is the Ovoca station, on the Dublin, Wicklow, and Wexford railway.

OWEL, or HOYLE, a lough in the co. of Westmeath, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Mullingar. It is about 3½ miles long by 2 broad, and serves as a reservoir for the Royal canal.

OWEN, a mountain of the Sheehy range, in the south-western div. of co. Cork, Ireland. It attains an altitude of 1,760 feet, and gives rise to the river Bandon.

OWENARREA, a small river of the co. of Mayo, Ireland, falling into Clew Bay.

OWENASCAL, or ANASCAUL, a post-office vil. in the bar. of Corkaguiney, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 8 miles E. of Dingle. There is a police station in the village, and petty sessions are held at intervals.

OWENASS, a small river of Queen's County, Ireland, rises in the Slievebloom mountains, and joins the Barrow near Mountmellick.

OWENAVARRAGH, a small river of the co. of Wexford, Ireland, rises near Oulart, and, after a course of 14 miles, falls into St. George's Channel at Courtown.

OWENBEG, two streams of this name in Ireland; one rises in the Clanruddery mountains, co. Kerry, and joins the river Feale at Wellesley Bridge, in co. Limerick; the other stream rises near Lough Easkey, in co. Sligo, and joins the river Owenmore near Colooney.

OWENCOCKER, a small river of the co. of Donegal, Ireland, rises under Benbane Mountain, and falls into Loughros Beg Bay.

OWENDALE, a tributary of the river Allua, the "strong Allo" of Spenser, which joins the Blackwater near Kanturk, in co. Cork.

OWENDUFF, a par. in the bar. of Shelbourne, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles S.E. of New Ross. Fethard is its post town. It is 4 miles long and the same in breadth. The surface, which lies along the Owenduff river, is boggy, and has a light soil. It is crossed by the road from Ballyhack to Enniscorthy. The living is an impropriate cur. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with Tintern and Clonmines, £92. The church is in ruins. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Tintern. There are some large bleach greens and a flour-mill.

OWENDUFF, a stream of the co. of Mayo, Ireland, has a course of about 12 miles, and falls into Tulloghaan Bay.

OWENDUGHER, a feeder of the river Dodder, co. Dublin, Ireland. It rises near Cruagh.

OWENEA, a stream of the co. of Donegal, Ireland, rises in Lough Ea, and after a course of 15 miles falls into Loughrosmore Bay near Ardara.

OWENGLEN, a stream of the co. of Galway, Ireland, rises in the Bennabeola mountains to Ardbear Haven, near Clifden.

OWEN-GLYNDWR, a demesne in the par. of Corwen, co. Merioneth, 10 miles N.E. of Bala. It is situated in the vale of the river Dee, called by the Welsh Glyndyvyrdwy, and contains Sychnant, where some trees mark the site of Owain Glyndwr's house.

OWEN-KILLEW, a river of the co. of Tyrone, Ireland, rises near Lissan, and after a course of 20 miles, in which it is swollen by the waters of several tributary streams, joins the Strule near Newtown Stewart.

OWENMORE, the name of several small rivers in Ireland. One rises near Lough Arrow, in co. Sligo, and after being joined by the rivers Arrow and Owenbeg, falls into Ballysadare Bay, near Collooney. A second rises near Lough Dahybaun, and after a course of 13 miles falls into Tullochan Bay, a sandy creek with from one to two fathoms water. A third stream rises in Lough Lugacolliwee, in co. Mayo, and joins the river Erriff near Killary harbour. A fourth rises in Lough Glenade, co. Leitrim, and joins the river Bonnet near Manor Hamilton, the united streams falling into Lough Gill.

OWENREAGH, two streams of this name in Ireland —one a feeder of the river Roe, co. Londonderry, the other a tributary of the Owen-Killew, co. Tyrone.

OWENROE, a tributary of the river Blackwater, co. Meath, Ireland.

OWER, a tythg. in the par. of Corfe Castle, Isle of Purbeck, co. Dorset, 2 miles from Corfe Castle, and 19 S.E. of Dorchester.

OWER, a tythg. in the par. of Eling, co. Hants, 3 miles S.W. of Romsey. It is in conjunction with Wade.

OWERMOIGNE, or OWER-MAYNE, a par. and lib. in the South Blandford div. of co. Dorset, 6 miles S.E. of Dorchester, its post town, and 2¼ S.W. of the Moreton railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The par. comprises the hmlts. of Galton and South-Down, and is bounded on the S. by the English Channel. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £358, and the glebe comprises 25 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £300. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a square embattled tower. The parochial charities produce about £33 per annum. An annual fair is held on 10th October for cattle.

OWERSBY, NORTH AND SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Walshcroft, co. Lincoln, 5 miles N.W. of Market Rasen, its post town, and 3 N.W. of the Usselby railway station. The parish, which is of large extent, is situated near the navigable river Ancholme, and is chiefly agricultural. The coach road from Boston to Hull passes through the village. Several substantial houses have been built in lieu of the old ones. The surface is in general level, lying at the foot of the North Wolds. The soil is clayey, but fertile. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £21 8*s.*, and the vicarial for £244 14*s., and the glebe comprises 33 acres. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Kirkby-Osgodby, in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £291. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, has a tower containing three bells. There is an endowed free school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. William Angerstein, Esq., is lord of the manor.

OWER SHOAL, a dangerous reef in the German Ocean. It lies outside the Leman Sand, off the coast of Norfolk, and is marked by a ship-light.

OWEY, an islet off the coast of co. Donegal, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Oranmore Island.

OWLERTON, a vil. in the par. of Ecclesfield, West Riding co. York, 4 miles N. of Sheffield.

OWLPEN, or OLDPEN, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Berkeley, co. Gloucester, 3½ miles E. of Dursley, its post town, and 5½ from the Berkeley Road railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. It is of ancient date, and came through the Owlpens to the Daunts, thence to the Stoughtons, an ancient Irish family. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £149 16*s.* The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Newington-Bagpath, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol. The church, which was rebuilt in 1830 at the cost of the incumbent, is a stone structure with a tower containing one bell. The interior contains several old brasses of the Daunt family. T. A. Stoughton, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

OWLSHAW, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Gisburn-Forest, par. of Gisburn, West Riding co. York, 9 miles S. of Settle, and 6 N.E. of Clitheroe. It is situated near the river Ribble, under Castle Haugh camp.

OWLSWICK, a hmlt. in the par. of Monk's Risborough, co. Bucks, 2 miles N.W. of Prince's Risborough. There was formerly a chapel-of-ease dedicated to St. Peter.

OWMBY, a par. in the E. div. of the wap. of Aslacoe, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 7 miles W. of Market Rasen, its post town, and 4 S.E. of Spittal. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £330, in the patron. of the Duchy of Lancaster. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient edifice. The register dates from 1700. There is a National school, also a place of worship for the Primitive Methodists. Colonel Dalton is lord of the manor.

OWMBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Searby, S. div. of the wap. of Yarborough, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4 miles N.W. of Caistor. It is in conjunction with Searby, but anciently formed a separate parish. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Searby, in the dioc. of Lincoln.

OWNEY AND ARRA, a bar. in the co. of Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is bounded by cos. Galway, Clare, and Limerick, and by the bar. of Ormond. It extends over an area of 89,671 acres, and contains the pars. of Burgesbeg, Castletownarra, Kilcomenty, Killoscully, Kilmastulla, Kilnarath, Kilvellane, Youghalarra, Templeachally, and parts of Abington and Monsea.

OWNEYBEG, a bar. in the co. of Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is bounded by co. Tipperary, and by the bars. of Clanwilliam and Coonagh. It contains the par. of Tuogh, and parts of Abington and Doon, comprising 27,211 acres.

OWNING, or BEAULIEU, a par. in the bar. of Iverk, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N.W. of Pilltown, its post town. It is 4 miles long by 2 broad, extending along the river Suir. The surface is mountainous but fertile. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with Fiddown, £830, in the patron. of the bishop. Ruins of the church are seen. Here are two day schools.

OWRAM, NORTH, or NORTHOWRAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Halifax, wap. of Morley, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.E. of Halifax, its post town. The village, which is of large extent, is situated on the Halifax and Bradford high road. The tnshp. includes Booth-Town, Shibden, Queen's Head, and five other villages. There are extensive collieries, stone quarries, and silk, worsted, and card manufactories, giving employment to a large number of the inhabitants. The land is principally in pasture. There is a mineral spring in the neighbourhood of Shibden-Dale. The soil is loamy, with a subsoil of clay upon stone. A church, dedicated to St. Thomas, with a spired tower, was erected at Hill-Top in 1861. At Booth-Town are some almshouses, which were founded in 1647 by Jeremiah Hall, M.D., also a school for children of both sexes. The Independents, Wesleyans, Baptists, Primitive Methodists, and New Connexion Methodists have each a place of worship.

OWRAM, SOUTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Halifax, wap. of Morley, West Riding co. York, 2 miles S. of North Owram, and 1½ mile S.E. of Halifax. It is situated near the river Aire and the line of the Manchester and Leeds railway. There are extensive slate and stone quarries at Cromwell Bottom. Two beds of coal lie below the stone, and are worked at several places in this township. The village, which is large, is situated on an eminence rising precipitously from the river Hebble, opposite to the town of Halifax. The principal seats are Ashday Hall and Ashgrove. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Halifax. The church, dedicated to St. Ann, was founded in the reign of Henry VIII. by John Lacey, but was rebuilt in 1819 at an expense of £2,200. It has a square embattled tower crowned with pinnacles. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. There is a National school, and a school founded in 1787 by Sir William Staines.

OWRE, an extensive common in the hund. of Cranborne, co. Dorset, 4 miles S.E. of Cranborne. It formed part of Cranborne Chase.

OWSLEBURY, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Fawley, co. Hants, 4 miles S. of Winchester, its post town, and 6 N. of Bishop's Waltham. The village is situated on the old road from Winchester to Bishop's Waltham, and is principally agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Colden-Common. The manor belongs to the Mildmays of Dogmersfield. The Hambledon hounds meet on Owlesbury Down. About two-thirds of the land is arable. The remainder meadow, pasture, and common. This parish, in conjunction with that of Twyford, formed one vicarage previously to 1832, at which period Owslebury was endowed by the late Mrs. Alice Long, of Marwell Hall, as a perpetual curacy. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £590 7*s.*, and the vicarial for £171 10*s.* The impropriation belongs to the Hospital of St. Cross. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £169. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a square tower containing three bells. It has recently been restored and enlarged. The register dates from 1678. There is also a district church at Colden-Common, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £130. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum, chiefly the bequest of Mrs. A. Long, who also endowed the National school with an annuity of £14. Marwell Hall is the principal seat.

OWSTHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Pocklington, Wilton-Beacon div. of the wap. of Harthill, East Riding co. York, 1½ mile N. by E. of Pocklington.

OWSTON, a par. in the W. div. of the wap. of Manley, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 3½ miles S.E. of Epworth, and 9 N. of Gainsborough. It is situated in the Isle of Ely, and extends along the W. bank of the river Trent, from Heckdyke Lane End, in the county of Nottingham, to the village of Althorpe, a distance of 9 miles. The par. comprises the tnshps. of Gunthorpe, Heckdyke, Melwood, Owston, and the flourishing market town and seaport of West Ferry. The soil is rich, and in a high state of cultivation. The manufacture of sacking and sailcloth is extensively carried on, and at West Ferry are a brewery, rope-walk, boat-building yard, and mills for corn and oil-cake. The appropriation belongs to the Archbishop of York, and the glebe comprises about 60 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £300, in the patron. of the Bishop of Chester. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, is a Gothic structure, with a tower containing six bells. It stands at the western extremity of the village, and has recently undergone considerable alterations and improvements. The E. window was filled with stained glass in 1836, representing full-length figures of the Saviour, St. Peter, and St. Paul. There is also a chapel-of-ease, recently erected at West Butterwick, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £300, in the patron. of the Vicar of Owston. The Wesleyans have a place of worship at Owston, and the Primitive and Reformed Methodists each one at West Ferry, where also the parochial school is situated. There are almshouses built and endowed by Miss Sandars.

OWSTON, a par. in the upper div. of the wap. of Osgoldcross, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N.W. of Doncaster, its post town, and 2 S. of the Askern railway station, on the Lancashire and Yorkshire line. The village, which is of small extent and wholly agricultural, is situated on the road from Doncaster to Selby. The par. includes the tnshps. of Owston and Skellow, and the hmlts. of Holme and Carcroft. In this neighbourhood is a meet for the Badsworth hounds. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £93. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient stone structure, situated on the N. side of the park. The interior contains monuments of the Adamses and Harrisons of Skellow. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a National school. Owston Hall, the principal residence, is an ancient mansion situated in a well-wooded park of 160 acres. The mansion, of late years, has undergone extensive alterations and improvements. P. B. D. Cooke, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

OWSTWICK, a tnshp. partly in the par. of Garton and partly in that of Roos, middle div. of the wap. of Holderness, East Riding co. York, 1½ mile from Roos, 8 miles N.W. of Patrington, and 12 E. by N. of Hull. The Holderness hounds meet here.

OWTHORNE, a par. in the S. and middle divs. of Holderness wap., East Riding co. York, 5 miles N.E. of Patrington, its post town, and 18 E. of Kingston. It adjoins the parish of Withernsea. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the coast, but has at various times sustained considerable damage from the encroachments of the sea. The par. comprises the tnshps. of South Frodingham, Runswell, and Waxholme. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The land is mostly arable, with a small proportion of pasture. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1806. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £282. The old church of St. Peter was destroyed by the sea during a storm in 1816. A new one was erected at Runswell, about 2 miles from the sea, and is dedicated to St. Mary. It is of yellow brick, and has a tower. There are National and Sunday schools. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. In 1844 the parsonage and two cottages were destroyed by the sea.

OWTHORPE, a par. in the S. div. of Bingham wap., co. Nottingham, 5 miles S.W. of Bingham, its post town, and 9 S.E. of Nottingham. The village, which is of small extent and wholly agricultural, is situated near the Grantham canal, and on the line of the ancient Fosse Way which passes to the W. The impropriation belongs to Sir H. Bromley, Bart. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £65. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, was built by Colonel J. Hutchinson, the parliamentary general in the great civil war of Charles I. It has a low square tower containing one bell. The church has tombs of the Hutchinson family. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum.

OXBOROUGH, or OXBURGH, a par. in the hund. of South Greenhoe, co. Norfolk, 3 miles N.E. of Stoke Ferry, its post town, and 12 from Brandon. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the banks of a small stream which flows into the river Wissey. In the Saxon times it belonged to Torchil the Dane, and was made a market town by grant of Edward I., but the market has long been discontinued. At Warren Hill are a camp and tumuli, where Roman and Saxon coins and other relics have been found. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. There is a portion of fen land. The soil is chiefly clay and loam. The living is a rect.* with the vic. of Foulden annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £516, in the patron. of Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, is built of flint and stone, with a square tower crowned with a lofty octagonal spire, and contains five bells. Attached to the S. aisle is a chantry, built in 1573. The church has an oak roof, several stained windows, a stone screen, and tombs of the Bedingfields of Oxborough Hall. The parochial charities produce about £100, besides a fuel allotment of 49 acres. There is a free school for both sexes. The Roman Catholics have a place of worship, erected in 1838 within the grounds of the hall, also a school. Oxborough Hall is of quadrangular form, measuring 118 feet by 92, with towers 80 feet in height. It is approached by a gateway, with a drawbridge over a deep and broad moat which surrounds the whole of the building. This mansion was erected by Sir Edmund Bedingfield in 1482, and was visited by Henry VII., of whose time it contains tapestry. It also contains portraits, on panel, by Vandyck, Holbein, and other celebrated artists; and several landscapes by Poussin. Sir Henry Bedingfield, Bart., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

OXCLIFFE, a hmlt. in the par. of Lancaster, hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 2 miles W. of Lancaster. It is situated on the river Lune, and is joined with Heaton to form a township.

OXCOMBE, a par. in the hund. of Hill, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 7 miles N. by E. of Horncastle, its post town, and 8 S. of Louth. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on the Wolds. There are a few cottages and a farm, but no village. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £217. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a tower containing one bell. David Briggs, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

OXCROFT, a hmlt. in the par. of Bolsover, co. Derby, 6 miles N.E. of Chesterfield.

OXENBOURNE, a tythg. in the par. of East Meon, co. Hunts, 3 miles W. of Petersfield. It is situated near Oxenbourne Down, under Butser Hill.

OXENDON, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Rothwell, co. Northampton, 14 miles N.W. of Northampton, its post town, and 2½ S.E. of Market Harborough. There is a joint station for Clipstone and Oxendon on the Stamford and Blisworth branch of the London and North-Western railway. The village, which is small and wholly agricultural, is situated on the main road from London to Manchester. It consists almost wholly of good grazing land. The soil is clayey. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1767. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £410. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient edifice, with a tower. The living was once held by Morton, the author of the "Natural History of Northamptonshire." The interior of the church contains effigies of Lady Gorges. There is a Sunday-school, also a place of worship for the Independents.

OXENDON, LITTLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Little Bowden, hund. of Rothwell, co. Northampton, 1 mile from Great Oxendon, and 2 miles S. by W. of Market Harborough. There was formerly a chapel-of-ease, but no traces of it now remain.

OXENFOORD CASTLE, a seat of the Earl of Stair, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 4 miles S.E. of Edinburgh. It is situated on the river South Tyne, and gives the inferior title of baron to the Earl of Stair.

OXENHALL, a par. in the hund. of Botloe, co. Gloucester, 2 miles N. of Newent, its post town, and 7 S. of Ledbury. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Gloucester and Hereford canal, at the tunnel, which is 6,576 feet in length. The Ellbrook stream flows through the village, and falls into the Leadon at Highleadon Court. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The land is divided betwixt woodland, pasture, arable, and meadow. The soil is chiefly a rich sandy loam. Apples and pears are grown in great perfection. There are several mineral springs, the waters of which resemble those of Cheltenham. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £440. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £80, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Anne, has a spired tower containing three bells. Miss Foley is lady of the manor and principal landowner. In this parish is a mound covered with trees called "The Danes' Mound."

OXENHOATH, a hmlt. in the par. of West Peckham, hund. of Littlefield, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 4 miles N.E. of Tonbridge. It formerly belonged to the Colepepers and Bartholomews.

OXENHOLME, a hmlt. in the par. of Kirby Kendal, co. Westmoreland, 1 mile E. of Kendal. It is the junction station of the Windermere and Lancashire and Carlisle railways.

OXENHOPE, FAR and NEAR, hmlts. in the chplry. of Haworth and par. of Bradford, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of Keighley. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the worsted-mills and in agriculture. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church is a modern structure.

OXENTON, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Tewkesbury, co. Gloucester, 2½ miles S.E. of Aschurch railway station, and 4½ S.E. of Tewkesbury, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Severn, and is wholly agricultural. The road between Evesham and Cheltenham passes through the parish. The impropriate tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1774, and the glebe comprises 23 acres in distant parishes. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £68. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient structure, with a square tower. It has lately been restored at the expense of the Earl of Coventry. The Earl of Ellenborough is lord of the manor.

OXENWOOD, a tythg. in the par. of Shalbourn, co. Berks, 6 miles S.W. of Hungerford.

OXFORD, a city and parliamentary borough, the seat of an episcopal see and one of the two principal English universities, stands on a gentle eminence near the junction of the river Isis, which is a branch of the Thames, with the Cherwell. It is the capital, assize, sessions, polling, and election town of the county of Oxfordshire, and returns to parliament four members, of whom two sit for the city and two for the university. The representation of the latter is a much-coveted distinction which is usually conferred upon eminent public men; hence it is generally styled the "blue ribbon of the House of Commons." There are two railway stations, belonging respectively to the London and Great Western and the London and North-Western companies. That on the former is on a branch line from Didcot, and is 63¼ miles, while that of the latter is 77¾ miles distant from London. The city, the extent of which is about 2 miles from E. to W. by about 1½ mile from N. to S., is situated in a sort of an amphitheatre surrounded on the W., S., and E. by well-wooded hills and fertile meadows, while to the N. it is flat and less thickly planted. It contains the following fifteen pars., viz. St. Aldate's (usually pronounced St. Old's), Binsey, St. Ebbe's, All Saints', St. Giles's, Holywell, St. Clement's, St. John's, St. Mary the Virgin, St. Michael's, St. Mary Magdalene's, St. Martin's, St. Peter-le-Bailey, St. Peter in the East, and St. Thomas. Each of these parishes has its own church, those of St. Thomas and St. Ebbe having each a district church; also St. Paul's at "Jericho," as that part of the city is called which lies near the New Clarendon and Worcester College, belongs to the former, and Trinity church, in the Blackfriars'-road, to the latter. There are six Dissenting places of worship, belonging to the Roman Catholics, Methodists, and Baptists, in the city.—The name of Oxford has been derived from the fact of its having been situated originally on a branch of the river which was fordable for oxen, and we are told that from this circumstance it was called by the ancient Britons Rhyd-ychen; and by Geoffrey of Monmouth, who flourished in the 12th century, and other early writers, it is hence termed the vadum bovum. Other authorities derive its name from the fact of a ford having existed at Oseney, a site lying about a quarter of a mile to the W. of the city, where there was an abbey founded by Robert D'Oyley in 1129, on an island formed by branches of the Isis. These latter writers assert that it is absurd to imagine that a ford for oxen only would have given a name to the city, but that a general ford might have done so; hence that the ford at Oseney, or Osney ford became gradually corrupted into Oxford. Whatever may have been the derivation of the word, it is certain that it existed in nearly its present form at a very early period, as the word Ornaforda appears on coins of King Alfred, and on those of William the Conqueror and William II., Oxneford and Oxeneford. In the Saxon chronicle Oxnaford is used, and in Domesday Book, Oxenefscyre, while Oxeneford constantly occurs in leases and legal instruments 200 years later. The earliest history of the city of Oxford is involved in much obscurity, and has given rise to a great deal of learned conjecture. It has been asserted that it was originally built by Memphries, King of the Britons, B.C. 1009, and that from him it was for some time called Caer-Memphries; that afterwards the name of Bellositum was given to it by the Romans on account of the beauty of its situation, and that it was for the same reason known in later times as the British Caer-pen-halgoed, which signifies a city placed on an eminence between two rivers, and surrounded with woods and groves. However this may be, Oxford is certainly noticed by Apion, who flourished A.D. 125, as one of the most eminent cities of Britain; and Cyprian, who was martyred A.D. 258, also mentions it in his index to the British cities. After this very little is heard of it till the time of Vortigern, A.D. 474. This prince is said to have made it a royal residence under the name of Caer-Vortigern, which title, however, it lost soon after, when it became subject to the power of the Saxons. After the death of Cadwallader, the last king of the Britons, in A.D. 689, and the conversion of the Saxons to Christianity, Oxford, by the end of the 7th century, appears to have been fixed upon as a place to be in some sort devoted to the cultivation of learning, and in 730 St. Frideswide's nunnery was founded by Didan, the Saxon, notably for the purpose of religious instruction. It is to this institution that the origin of the university may be traced, and the particulars connected with it will be treated of more fully hereafter. From the death of St. Frideswide, in 740, no circumstance worthy of note appears to have taken place in regard to the history of the city for about a century. The unsettled state of the kingdom, owing to the contests between the various monarchs of the Heptarchy and the incursions of the Danes rendered the materials for the history of this period very meagre and uncertain, and it is not till the reign of Alfred (849—901) that we obtain any authentic records of the city. It is stated that this king himself, with his three sons, resided in Oxford and founded the University; and there is no doubt that a mint existed there in his time. In 976 the city was burnt by the Danes, who were massacred there in 1002, but again set fire to it in 1009 and destroyed a great portion of it. It was, however, soon rebuilt, and in 1013 and 1015 the Saxons made it the place of assemblage for their national councils or parliaments. In 1016 Edmund Ironsides was murdered there; and in 1018 Canute held a council for the purpose of confirming the laws as promulgated by King Edward the Elder in 915. In 1022 and 1026 he held a fresh council, at which he enjoined the observance of the laws of King Edgar as set forth circa 965; and in 1036 another council was held here to settle the succession to the throne. The choice fell upon Harold Harefoot in opposition to Hardicanute, whose cause was espoused by Earl Godwin and the princes of West Saxony. Harold was accordingly crowned at Oxford, where he died in 1040, but was buried at Westminster. In 1069, Oxford having refused submission to William the Conqueror, was stormed by him and easily reduced to obedience. The king gave the greatest part of the city, which then contained 721 houses, to his favourite, Robert D'Oyley, and fearing lest the inhabitants should revolt, ordered him to build a castle on the W. side of the walls, and on the site of an old Saxon fortification. D'Oyley immediately complied with the commands of his royal master, and by 1071 the castle was completed. It occupied the site on which the county gaol and house of correction now stand. At the completion of the Domesday Survey in 1086 there were 775 houses in the city and 20 mural mansions, which were so called because their inhabitants were placed in them rent free by the king on the express condition of their keeping the walls in repair. The city was rated at £60. The burgesses had a common pasture ground outside the walls, lying to the N.W. of the city, and now known by the name of "Port Meadow," and 20 of them were to accompany the king whenever he went to war under a penalty of £20. In 1088 William Rufus held a council in Oxford, and the next king, Henry I., was, as Wood the historian asserts, educated there. Whether this is really the case or not, certain it is that this sovereign showed considerable favour to the city, and greatly improved and embellished it. He granted a charter to it, by which he placed the citizens upon the same footing with those of London in respect of all customs, laws, privileges, and liberties to be enjoyed by them; and in 1129 he built himself a palace called Beaumont Palace, which stood on a spot of ground now forming the junction of Beaumont and St. John streets, and was used as a royal residence as late as the reign of Edward II. This monarch, however, surrendered it to a body of Carmelite friars for a monastery, and the last fragment of it was removed in 1830, to make a passage for the W. side of St. John-street. In 1136 Stephen kept court in Oxford. He held a council for the purpose of restoring the laws of Edward the Confessor and remitting the Danegelt, which had hitherto been levied on the city. In 1142 he besieged the Empress Matilda, or Maud, in the castle so closely that she only escaped falling into his hands by crossing the Isis, which was frozen over, and going on foot through the snow to Abingdon, which is 6 miles off. There she procured a horse and arrived safely at Wallingford Castle, from whence she ultimately went to Normandy. In this reign the arrest of Roger, Bishop of Salisbury; Nigel, Bishop of Ely; and Alexander, Bishop of Lincoln, took place at Oxford. The first-named prelate was especially powerful, and his wealth and abilities, which had rendered him obnoxious to Stephen, led to those quarrels in which Oxford, which espoused the cause of the empress-queen, became involved. Henry II. (1154—1189) showed great favour to the city. He confirmed the charter granted to it by Henry I., and gave the mayor the privilege of attending upon the sovereign upon all festive occasions. Hence, up to the present day, the mayor of Oxford has the right of acting as under-butler at the coronation of any of the English monarchs. In this reign the University became known as a distinct feature of Oxford, and lectures upon Roman law and other subjects were given by teachers who established themselves there for the express purpose of receiving pupils. In this reign a guildhalla, or public hall, was built for the meetings of the burgesses, near the spot where Carfax church now stands. In 1157 Richard I. was born at Oxford. In 1160 Henry received the Welsh chiefs there, after having reduced their country to submission. In 1162 he issued from thence his decree against the "Publicans," who were a sect of the Waldenses; and in 1172 held a parliament for the purpose of settling what was to be done with Ireland, of which he afterwards made his youngest son, John, viceroy, under the title of "Lord of Ireland," with the design of ultimately making him king. In 1185 another parliament or council was held here; and in 1189, Richard, upon his accession to the throne, not only confirmed to the city all its ancient rights and privileges, but granted it several new ones, in gratitude for which the citizens contributed largely to his ransom when he was taken prisoner in Austria, on his return from the Holy Land in 1192. King John, who was also born at Oxford in 1166, held parliaments there in 1203 and 1207. In 1209 there are said to have been as many as 3,000 students there, but owing to a dispute with the townspeople they left and went to Cambridge and elsewhere. Henry III. (1216—1272) kept Christmas at Osney Abbey; and in 1222 Stephen Langton, Archbishop of Canterbury, summoned a synod here for reforming the clergy; and in 1225 two men were crucified, each for asserting that he was Jesus Christ; and two women were starved to death for pretending that they were respectively the Virgin Mary and Mary Magdalene. In 1240 another serious collision took place between the students and the townspeople, and many of the former again migrated to Cambridge. From this time to 1257 several councils were held, and in 1258 the Statutes of Oxford were passed by what is known as the "mad parliament." By these it was settled that all foreigners should quit the kingdom, and that 24 persons should be chosen, 12 by the king and 12 by the barons, to represent the people in the three parliaments which, by the sixth statute, were to be held annually. This is the first clear account we have of the sitting of a house of commons, and the general use of the word "parliament," although Coke, in his Institutes, asserts that this word was used as early as the reign of Edward the Confessor in 1041. During this reign Duns Scotus lectured, and Roger Bacon died at Oxford. In 1326 Isabella, the queen of Edward II., resided here while engaged in her war against the king and his favourites, the Spensers. During the reign of Edward III., who was educated at Oxford, and afterwards went to reside at Woodstock (where Edward the Black Prince was born in 1327), a most dreadful riot broke out between the scholars and the townspeople. It began on the feast of St. Scholastica, 10th February, 1354, at a tavern called the "Mermaid," which stood at a spot called "Pennyless," or "Butter-Bench," near the E. end of old Carfax church. The fighting and tumult lasted for three days, and some of the students were killed and others severely wounded. The consequence of this was that the citizens lost several of their privileges, and were debarred from the rights of the Church. In addition to this they were heavily fined, and enjoined to perform certain acts of penance annually to the University authorities, and it was not until 1825 that the statute enforcing these laws was finally repealed. In this reign the poet Chaucer flourished, and from his "Canterbury Pilgrims" we learn that Oxford was, even in his time, devoted to those studies for which she is so renowned. In Richard II.'s reign (1377—1399) John Wycliffe was master of Balliol College (1361). In 1399 preparations were made for a grand tournament at Oxford, at which the Earls of Huntingdon, Kent, Salisbury, and Rutland, with Sir Thomas Blount and others, intended to seize the king, Henry IV., and to restore Richard. Their plot, however, was discovered, and Sir Thomas Blount, Sir Bennet Shelley, and 18 others were executed in the Greenditch at Oxford in 1400, while the rebel lords and their accomplices suffered elsewhere. Henry V. was educated at Oxford, and in Henry VI.'s reign his son, Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester, gave a sum of money for building a portion of that renowned library which is now known as the "Bodleian." It acquired its present name from Sir Thomas Bodley, who was its most munificent patron, and endowed it both with lands and money in 1598, but in a letter written to the Duke of Gloucester by the University in 1445, he is styled its founder, and at his death in 1447 he left to it several MSS., and £100 for the completion of that portion of the building which he had begun. Cardinal Beaufort; John Kempe, Archbishop of York and Lord Chancellor; Thomas Kempe, Bishop of London; John Morton, Archbishop of Canterbury and Lord Chancellor, and other distinguished persons contributed to its enlargement and improvement; but before the end of the reign of Edward IV., in 1483, it had been so mismanaged and neglected, that, literally, not one single volume was left in it. In fact, it had become so thoroughly plundered that it was quite useless, and the University finding, in 1556, that the losses had never been replaced, and that the building still remained desolate and unavailable for all purposes of study, sold off the benches, bookcases, furniture, &c., and left merely the bare walls. In this state it remained till 1598, when Thomas Bodley, a fellow of Merton College, resolved to restore it. By contributions of books and money from himself and his friends, he secured it an endowment, and towards the end of 1602 it possessed upwards of 2,000 volumes, and was then again thrown open to students. In 1481 the city was visited by Edward IV., and in 1483 by Richard III., and by Prince Arthur in [illegible]. In 1498 Erasmus was resident there, and associated with Linnæus, Latimer, Sir Thomas More, and several of the most eminent men of the period. In 1510 it was visited by Henry VIII., and by Queen Katherine in 1518. In 1525 Christ Church was founded by Cardinal Wolsey, and in 1542 the diocese of Oxford was separated from that of Lincoln, and was formed by the king into a separate see, the seat of the episcopate, which at first was the church of the Abbey of Osney, having been removed to Oxford in 1545. At the dissolution of the monasteries Oxford suffered considerably, both in its influence and its revenues. In 1550 commissioners were appointed by Edward VI. to visit and reform the University, and a great many valuable books and MSS. were destroyed by them in their zeal to abolish everything which seemed to tend towards the weakening of the principles of the Reformers. In Mary's reign a commission was sent down to Oxford to re-establish Popish rites and observances there, and to dispute publicly with Archbishop Cranmer and bishops Latimer and Ridley upon various points of doctrine. The end of the matter was, that when these prelates refused to recant the Protestant opinions which they had professed, the convocation sentenced them to be burned. This sentence was accordingly carried out in 1555-6 in the modern Broad-street, which was then called Canditch, and a stone opposite the door of the lodgings of the Master of Balliol still marks the spot on which they suffered. An Eleanor cross, called the "Martyrs' Memorial," standing at the N. end of St. Mary Magdalene's church, and an appropriately decorated "martyrs' aisle," added to the church in 1841, now serve to commemorate the event. In 1564 Robert Dudley, the notorious Earl of Leicester, was made Chancellor of Oxford, and in 1566 his royal mistress, Elizabeth, visited the city. She was received at Carfax church, when a professor made a speech in Greek, and her Majesty replied in the same language. She remained in Oxford five days, hearing plays and attending public disputations on science, logic, and politics, and honoured the city again with her presence in 1592, when similar proceedings took place. In 1605 King James I. visited the city (accompanied by the queen and the Prince of Wales), and again went there in 1614. In this reign Prince Charles, the Prince Palatine, and the French and Spanish ambassadors were received there; and a full account of all the entertainments given at their receptions, and those of Elizabeth and James I., will be found in Nichols's "Progresses" of these two sovereigns. During the succeeding reign the Archbishop of Canterbury, as Chancellor of the University, received the king, the queen, the Elector Palatine and his brother, Prince Rupert, at an academial entertainment in 1636; and during the troublous times of this period the parliament often sat at Oxford, whilst at the commencement of the parliamentary war, Lord Say drove away Sir John Byron, and held the city for the parliament. After the battle of Edgehill, Charles I. seized it and made it his headquarters. Sir Thomas Fairfax afterwards reduced it by famine, and during the plague in 1665 the parliament and the law courts sat here. Again in 1681 a parliament sat here, but only for a few days. In 1687 James II. held a parliament in Oxford, and in the same year, in consequence of the disputes which arose with respect to the presidency of Magdalen College—the king having commanded the fellows to elect Dr. Parker, a Papist—his Majesty went in person to the University. The upshot of the matter was that the king's orders were executed, the college being filled with Roman Catholics. This state of things, however, was not allowed to continue long, and in the ensuing year the college was restored to its rights. In 1702 Queen Anne visited the University. In 1714 Dr. John Radcliffe left £40,000 to the University of Oxford; and a library and observatory, still called after his name, are among the notable objects of the city. In 1715 the cause of the Pretender was warmly espoused in many parts of the kingdom, and several persons, suspected of being favourable to him, were seized in Oxford by General Pepper, who had occupied it on behalf of the king. Towards the end of 1731 a valuable collection of MSS., written by Sir Henry Spelman, and others, upon political, ecclesiastical, and University questions, was added to the Bodleian. In 1768 the mayor and several members of the corporation of Oxford were sent to Newgate for malpractices at the election of the city members. In 1787 a very large and curious conduit, adorned with allegorical figures and inscriptions—which was built for the purpose of distributing through the town water from the Isis, and stood at Carfax (a word derived from quatuor facies, as it faced the four ways or roads which meet at this point)—was taken down for the enlargement and improvement of the High-street, and removed to Nuneham Park. On 2nd January, 1790, the Oxford canal was opened for the first time, and on 14th August, 1795, a very severe thunderstorm burst over the city, which injured the spire of St. Mary's Church, destroyed two private houses, and wounded many of the inhabitants. In 1799 the Duke of York visited the city, and after holding a review of the university and city volunteers, was made an honorary D.C.L., and was presented with the freedom of the city in a gold box. Similar honours were conferred upon the Emperor of Russia, the King of Prussia, the Prince Regent, and other distinguished personages, in 1814. Upon that occasion they were royally entertained by the University, and great rejoicings took place not only in Oxford, but throughout the kingdom, in consequence of the peace, which was proclaimed on 20th June in that year. In 1839 the Royal Agricultural Society of England held its show at Oxford, and in 1847 the British Association met there. In 1841 the city was visited by Queen Victoria; and in 1860 the Prince of Wales matriculated as a member of the University, and resided during his academical career at Frewen's Hall, in New Inn Hall-lane.—The city has four principal entrances: one from the E. by the coach road from London over the Magdalen Bridge; a second from the N. by Worcester and Birmingham roads along St. Giles's-street; another from the railway stations over Folly Bridge, which crosses the Isis on the southern side; and the fourth along what is termed the "Seven-bridge-road," on the western side of the city. The latter entrance is from the Bath road, and the name given to it arises from the fact that it consists of a causeway built along low-lying meadows, which are so intersected by the Isis, that its various branches have to be crossed by seven stone bridges in the space of 1 mile. Of these four entrances into the city the first-named is the most remarkable, and the view which it presents to the spectator is unsurpassed for beauty by that of any city in the world. Upon passing over Magdalen Bridge, a stone structure crossing the river Cherwell, we have on the right the tower of Magdalen College, and on the left the Botanic Gardens. From this point commences the High-street, a thoroughfare of which it has been justly remarked that "for variety and magnificence of public buildings no city in Europe can offer a competition with it." It continues in a graceful curve up to Carfax (or the City) Church, having on the right Queen's College, All Souls' College, St. Mary's (or the University) Church, and All Saints' Church, while on the left is University College, and the rest of the street both on the right and left is occupied with shops, dwelling-houses, and an old-established and well-known hotel called the "Mitre." The northern entrance into the city is also exceedingly fine, and leads along a wide street, having rows of trees planted on each side, past St. John's College; on the left the Taylor and Randolph buildings, a noble institution, founded for the cultivation of modern languages and the fine arts, and the Randolph Hotel, built in 1865 by a company in consequence of the Great Western railway having decided on making Oxford the site of their railway manufactory. Opposite to these are the back buildings of Balliol College, and in the centre of the street the Martyrs' Memorial and St. Mary Magdalene Church. Near the S. front of this church, and the tower of that of St. Michael's, formerly stood the celebrated Bocardo, the name given to the N. gate of the city. When the fortification fell down the room over the gateway was used as a prison, and here it was that Cranmer, Ridley, and Latimer were confined previous to their execution. From this point a street of shops and hotels, called Corn Market-street, runs southward to Carfax. Here it joins the High-street, which lies to its E., and Queen's-street, which runs W. Here these three streets are joined by St. Aldate's, still running S., and thus are formed the four ways, which, as has been already stated, give the name to Carfax. At the northern end of St. Aldate's, on the left-hand side proceeding from Corn Market-street, are the townhall and the post-office, and on the same side, at the southern end, stands the magnificent college of Christ Church, and nearly opposite to it St. Aldate's Church and Pembroke College. Returning to the N. end of Corn Market-street, a street called Broad-street runs eastward, having Balliol and Trinity Colleges on the left, and on the right a narrow street called Turl-street, which connects it with the High-street. In this latter street are Jesus College on the right and Exeter and Lincoln on the left, while at the corner of the street where it joins the High-street stands All Saints' Church on the left, and on the right the Mitre Hotel. Still proceeding along Broad-street, we have on the right, adjoining a portion of Exeter College, the Ashmolean Museum, the Sheldonian Theatre, and the Clarendon. Contiguous to this latter are the "Schools" and the Bodleian Library, having behind them a large square, with the circular building of the Radcliffe Library within it, while to the W. lies Brasenose College, to the E. part of All Souls', and to the S. St. Mary's Church and the High-street. At the back of All Souls' stands Magdalen Hall, and behind that again is New College-lane, leading to New College, the gardens of which extend to Holywell-street and the "Long Wall." From New College the lane bends southwards, and after passing the side of Queen's College and St. Edmund Hall, runs as Queen's-lane into High-street, having Logic-lane opposite to it. From the end of Broad-street, Park-street runs northwards, having Trinity and St. John's Gardens on the left and Wadham College on the right, while still further on, but standing back from the main road, is the University Museum. A street of private houses, called Holywell-street, runs from the King's Arms Hotel, at the S.E. corner of Park-street, and, continuing in a semicircular form as Long Wall, leads past the "Grove" of Magdalen College to the foot of the High-street, close to Magdalen College and bridges. Crossing the High-street, we have a walk leading to Christ Church Meadows and Merton Fields, while still further westward, a street called King-street leads from High-street into Merton-street. Here are situated St. Alban Hall, Merton College, with its celebrated chapel, which is also the parish church of St. John; while at the end of the street, and abutting upon the back of Christ Church, stands Corpus Christi College. From hence Oriel-street leads again northwards into the High-street, having Oriel College and St. Mary Hall on the right and Bear-lane on the left. This latter leads into Alfred-street, in which the Masonic Hall is situated, and Blue Boar-lane, which runs into St. Aldate's at the S. corner of the post-office. Again, going northwards along St. Aldate's, and crossing the High-street, the first street on the W. side of Corn Market is New Inn Hall street, which takes a sharp bend to the S. about midway. Between this bend and the church of St. Peter-le-Bailey, which stands at the S.W. extremity of the street, stands New Inn Hall, and close by are Frewen's Hall, already noticed as having been the residence of the Prince of Wales, and the buildings of the Union Society, or reading and debating rooms of the members of the University, which latter, however, are entered by a court leading from Corn Market-street. After passing the end of a narrow street, called George-street, we come to Gloucester-green, on which stands the city gaol, and beyond that is Beaumont-street, at the end of which stands Worcester College. The street which runs in front of Worcester College is called Worcester-street to the S., and runs down to the canal and the Seven-bridge-road, while to the N. it runs as Walton-place to the workhouse, the University printing-office, and St. Paul's Church. Hence a street running eastward leads into St. Giles's, close by the Radcliffe Infirmary and Observatory. All the colleges have their own halls, in which the members dine daily in common, and their own chapels, at which a certain number of attendances during the week is required from the members. At some of them, such as Christ Church, Exeter, St. John's, New College, and Magdalen, choral service is performed, and the two latter attract numerous visitors, not only from the excellence of the choirs and organs and the magnificence of their chapels, but also from the extent and beauty of their gardens and the general character of the colleges themselves. Exeter and Balliol Chapels also, which have been rebuilt within a few years, are remarkable for the splendour of their architecture and decorations, and are objects well worthy of being seen. The hall of Christ Church, the cathedral, which stands just behind it, and, in fact, the whole of this noble institution, should be visited by all who wish to see the "lions" of Oxford, as also should Christ Church walks and meadows, which lie close by the river. Here are moored the boats and barges belonging to the various colleges and members of the University, and during the spring and summer boat-races take place between picked crews from the various colleges. At these periods Christ Church walks and the side of the river opposite, down as far as Iffley, from whence the boats start, are crowded with men, each eager for the success of his own college; the stream is covered with skiffs, punts, and wherries, and various other kinds of boats; their occupants are clad in regular rowing costume; and the beauty of the spot, the excitement, in a word, the tout ensemble, makes this a scene which should be witnessed by all who wish to study the peculiarities of our English universities, as it is a sight which can never be seen elsewhere, and when once seen will not easily be forgotten. At the main entrance of Christ Church stands "Tom" Tower, so called from the great bell which it contains, and which tolls 101 times at nine o'clock every night during term time, to give notice to the undergraduates to return to their colleges, the gates being closed at that time. In the Sheldonian Theatre, in Broad-street, takes place annually the Encænia, or annual commemoration of the founders and benefactors of the University. The building was founded by Gilbert Sheldon, Archbishop of Canterbury, and was finished in 1669, under the superintendence of Sir Christopher Wren, and a part of it was originally occupied by the University printing-presses. Hence the books printed by the University bear upon them for nearly a century the imprimatur of e Typographia "Sheldoniana," or e Theatro Sheldoniano. In 1759 the last printing-press was removed, since which time the public meetings of the University, viz. the Comitia and the Encænia, have been held there, the latter being celebrated once a year, just before the commencement of the long vacation. The area is 80 feet by 70, and the building is capable of containing 4,000 persons. It has a dome 40 feet high from the roof, and the ceiling is represented open in imitation of the ancient Greek and Roman theatres. The interior consists of an area and galleries, with rostra for the recitation of the essays and poems to which the University prizes have been adjudged annually. These recitations take place at the commemoration, and then it is that honorary degrees are conferred on distinguished personages, and the theatre presents the imposing appearance to which reference has already been made. The vice-chancellor, doctors, proctors, noblemen, and all the high dignitaries of the University, in the full robes of their respective offices, occupy a semicircular row of seats at one end of the room, raised above the area, which is occupied by masters of arts and gentlemen introduced by them. The lower gallery is occupied entirely by ladies, and the upper by the undergraduates, who express their sentiments upon the leading topics and characters of the day, the appearance of the candidates for the honorary degrees, the ladies present, and a variety of other subjects, in shouts of approbation, or the reverse, which frequently impart a very noisy, and sometimes almost a riotous, complexion to a great portion of the proceedings. The commemoration is also celebrated by a procession of the boats, a promenade of the notabilities of the University in the "Broad Walk" of Christ Church Meadows, entertainments at the colleges, balls, and other festivities, which make the week one continued round of amusement and gaiety to those who are partaking of the hospitality of the University during that period. The public entrance into the theatre is from Broad-street, and in front of it is an iron railing, with pillars surmounted by busts, which are now much dilapidated, and are said to represent either the Cæsars or some of the sages of antiquity. To the S. of the theatre is the Bodleian Library, which was first opened for the use of the University on 8th November, 1602, on which day an annual visitation is made in commemoration of the event. The library contains several valuable portraits, among which are those of Sir Thomas Bodley, the founder, by Cornelius Jansen; one of Selden, by Mytens, and others. Here also are deposited the celebrated collection of 200 Greek MSS. collected by Giacomo Barocci, a Venetian nobleman, and presented in 1629 by William Herbert, third Earl of Pembroke, who was then Chancellor of the University; the celebrated Oppenheim Library, consisting of the most valuable Hebrew and Rabbinical printed books and MSS. ever brought together in one collection; the important Latin and English MSS. given by Sir Kenelm Digby; and the European and Oriental collection presented by Archbishop Laud, who was Chancellor of the University in 1631, and in 1636 founded the "Laudian Professorship of Arabic." Shortly after this a western wing was added to the original building for the purpose of receiving the valuable library of the celebrated John Selden, who was the representative of the University in the "Long Parliament." He died in 1654, and his executors presented his collection, of upwards of 8,000 volumes of MSS. and printed books, to the University. Since that time many valuable donations have been made to the Bodleian, such as the collection of early English plays and poetry, made by Malone and presented by Lord Sunderland; and those of Richard Gough, the celebrated antiquary; and of Francis Douce, the eminent connoisseur in various departments of art and science. All these, and many other treasures deposited there, make the Bodleian one of the most renowned libraries in the world, and scholars from all countries may be seen pursuing their labours amongst its ample and varied stores. All members of the University who have taken a degree are allowed to study here, but no books may be removed from the premises. Strangers and non-members of the university obtain access by a personal introduction to the keeper of the Bodleian, through an M.A. or some one who is personally known to the keeper, and who will vouch for the fitness of the person applying for admission. Under the Act of Parliament for securing copyright the Bodleian receives a copy of every printed work that is entered at Stationers' Hall, and the funds are kept up by small fees paid at matriculation, and upon taking the degree of B.A., besides a grant of £2,000 per annum for the purchase of various works in literature and art in this and other countries. The library contains upwards of 250,000 volumes, and is open, with some few specified exceptions, every week-day from 9 to 4, between Lady Day and Michaelmas, and from 10 to 3 from Michaelmas to Lady Day. Besides its literary treasures, the Bodleian contains also a picture-gallery, in which are portraits of the chief founders, benefactors, chancellors, and other notables of the University, and some curiosities, together with a collection of busts, casts, and architectural models. Adjoining the Bodleian are the "schools," one of which was originally devoted to each faculty or science taught in the University. In early times the quadrangle where the present building now stands was used as a garden and a pig-market; but, in 1554, the University obtained a grant of the site from the Dean and Chapter of Christ Church, and in 1612 the first stone of the present structure was laid. Inscriptions over the doors show the various branches of study to which the "schools" were respectively devoted, as medicine, anatomy, and natural philosophy on the S. side, civil law on the N., geometry, arithmetic, and metaphysics on the E., and so on. With the exception, however, of those devoted to medicine and natural philosophy, they are no longer appropriated to their original purposes, but have been partly absorbed into the Bodleian Library, while another portion is used as a gallery for the celebrated marbles presented to the University in 1677 by Henry Howard, Earl of Arundel and Surrey, and known as the "Arundel Marbles;" while at the N.E. corner are the rooms which are now called par excellence the "schools," in which the public examinations of the students are held for "little-go," moderations, and "great-go." The principal entrance to the schools is from Catherine-street, opposite to Magdalen Hall, under a groined archway with carved oak folding-doors. The arch is surmounted by a tower composed of the five orders of architecture, and containing four rooms or stories; the first and second of these form part of the Bodleian Library and picture-gallery; the third is the Archive Room, in which are deposited the muniments, registers, and various other public documents belonging to the University; while the fourth, which was originally designed as an observatory, is now used as a class-room by the reader in experimental philosophy. On the western side of the schools' quadrangle is the divinity school. This building, which was the basement story of the first, or Duke Humphrey's library, was commenced in 1427, and finished in 1480. It is a fine specimen of Gothic architecture, with a vaulted roof and pendants, and an exceedingly handsome entrance doorway. By the time of Edward VI. it had become so dilapidated that weeds and nettles grew in it, and a pound was erected close by its side. In 1625, however, it was repaired so far as to be available for the sittings of the House of Commons—the House of Lords sitting in the picture-gallery, while the Privy Council met at Christ Church, when the court was driven from London in consequence of the plague. During the Civil War it was used as a granary, and at the end of the 17th century it was restored to its present state, under the direction of Sir Christopher Wren, who opened the door on the N. side, both to add to the effect and give greater facilities for the entrance into the theatre. The school is now used for the recitation of the exercises prescribed by the University for the degrees of B.D. and D.D., and is bisected by a carved rail, the upper part being reserved for the examiners and disputants, and the lower for the audience. At the W. end of the divinity school is the Convocation House, which was built in 1639, and forms the basement story to the Selden portion of the Bodleian. Its name indicates its use, and the principal public business of the University is carried on here. Here, also, degrees are conferred upon those who have "got through the schools," or, in other words, passed their examinations, and in the vestibule adjoining the vice-chancellor matriculates newly-admitted students, and gentlemen are robed before going in to take their degrees, and to give their votes at certain elections which sometimes are held in the Convocation House. On these occasions the vice-chancellor and the proctors occupy seats at the upper end of the room, where also are seats for heads of houses and doctors, and the side benches are reserved for masters of arts and the general public. Upon the occasion of conferring degrees, when a candidate's name is proposed the proctors walk once up and down the room, one on each side. Should any one wish to stop the degree, they do so by pulling at a certain part of the proctor's gown as he is passing, and from this the word "plucking" has been applied to the refusal of a "testamur," or certificate of having passed, to those who have failed to satisfy the examiners in the public schools. To the N. of the schools, at the corner of Broad-street and Catherine-street, and directly opposite to the S. end of Park-street, are the Clarendon Buildings, which are so called from having been founded out of the money raised by the sale of Lord Clarendon's "History of the Rebellion," the copyright of which was vested in the University by the author's son in the reign of Queen Anne. The "Clarendon" was finished in 1713, from the designs of Sir John Vanbrugh, and was used as the University printing-office till 1830, when, owing to the want of sufficient space to meet the increasing demand for books issued by the University, the business of the office was removed to the present premises, opposite St. Paul's Church, and near Worcester College. The N. side of this building—the frontage of which is 250 feet, the wings being 288 feet long by 33 wide—is devoted to the printing of classical and miscellaneous works issued under the authority of a certain number of heads of houses and professors chosen by convocation, under the name of the "delegates of the press," while the S. side is reserved exclusively for the printing of Bibles and prayer-books. A printed list of the works printed at the "Clarendon," as the University printing-house is still styled (although the original building is now used for other purposes), is given in the Oxford University Calendar, and will be found to comprise very valuable editions of grammars, lexicons, Greek and Latin classics, the Scriptures, the Fathers of the Church, ecclesiastical history and biography, and various other subjects which have been deemed worthy of a place among the standard literature of the country. Besides this the University documents, such as the examination papers, class lists, public notices, &c., are printed at the Clarendon, and all works printed for the University since 1863, and those only, have the words e Typographeo Clarendoniano, or "at the Clarendon Press," in the imprint, whereas from 1829 up to 1863 the imprint was e Typographeo Academico, or "at the University Press." The old Clarendon building now contains offices for the use of the registrar of the University; the "delegates" room, in which the meetings of the Hebdomadal Council and of delegacies take place; the vice-chancellor's justice-room; public lecture-rooms; rooms for the professor of experimental philosophy, and the readers in mineralogy and geology; and in the basement some rooms appropriated to the police, and an office for the inspector of weights and measures. Besides these apartments there are some others in the western portion of the building, which are used as showrooms for a geological and mineralogical museum, which was presented to the Ashmolean museum in 1800 and 1832. The latter-named building, however, being found too small to receive it, it was transferred to its present site, where it may be seen every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, from 10 till 4 o'clock. The Ashmolean Museum stands to the W. of the Clarendon, being separated from it by the theatre. It owes its origin to Elias Ashmole, who presented to the university his own medals, coins, books, and MSS., together with a collection of natural curiosities bequeathed to him by John Tradescant and his son in 1662. For the reception of these the present building was erected, at the expense of the University, in 1683, under the superintendence of Sir C. Wren. It contains, amongst other things, the library of William Lily, the celebrated astrologer, the MSS. of Sir W. Dugdale, Antony-à-Wood, and others, besides a collection of coins, medals, antiquities, minerals, shells, specimens of natural history, casts, models, and original portraits and pictures. In the building there are also some rooms used as lecture-rooms by the professor of chemistry, and a laboratory for the use of himself and his classes. The Radcliffe library, which lies to the rear of the schools, is now used as a reading-room. It was completed in 1747, in accordance with the will of its founder, John Radcliffe, M.D., Fellow of Lincoln College, who left his property to trustees for charitable purposes. He directed them, however, first to accumulate £40,000 for the purchase of this site and the erection of his library, and he left £100 per annum for the maintenance of the fabric, and £150 per annum as a stipend for the librarian. Since the opening of the University museum the trustees have allowed the books upon natural science to be removed to that institution, but the other volumes remain, and the library is regarded as a sort of branch of the Bodleian. The structure is circular in form, and a spacious dome rising from its centre gives it quite a distinctive feature among all the other public buildings of Oxford. It has a rustic basement 100 feet in diameter, and the ascent to the library is by a spiral stone staircase. Over the entrance is a portrait (said to be the only original one of him) of the founder, by Sir Godfrey Kneller, and round the room is a gallery supported by Ionic pilasters. It contains casts of celebrated ancient busts and statues, the "Corsi" marbles, several modern casts, busts, statues, and models, and from the outer balustrade surrounding the library a panoramic view of the city can be obtained. Besides this library, Dr. Radcliffe's bequests founded the observatory and the infirmary, and he left to University College, of which he was once a member, large sums for repairs and new buildings, whilst he also left £600 per annum for two "travelling fellowships"—which number, however, has since been increased by the University Commissioners, under the Act of 1854, to three, each of the annual value of £200, and tenable for three years. Dr. Radcliffe also gave the painted window at the E. end of University College Chapel, £200 to be equally divided in restoring parts of All Saints' Church and Peckwater Quadrangle in Christ Church, and the asylum on Headington Hill, which lies over Magdalen Bridge, about a mile to the N.E. of the city, has been, with the sanction of his trustees, so much benefited by the funds left by him for charitable objects that the committee have given it the name of the Radcliffe Asylum. The University Museum was commenced in 1855, and by 1860 was so far completed that the British Association for the advancement of Science held its first meeting there in the June of that year. It is ornamented with elaborate iron-work and decorative sculpture, both within and without: the latter has been liberally presented to it by various benefactors —the Queen having given the statues of five eminent philosophers which stand in the area, the gentlemen of the city of Oxford having erected the statue of the late Prince Consort which faces the entrance, and many private persons having contributed to its utility or ornamentation by placing in it works illustrative of science and art. The building contains lecture-rooms, work-rooms, laboratories (of which there is a spacious one for the use of students in chemistry at the south-western angle), a library and reading-room, and at the back a small observatory for the use of the classes of the professor of astronomy. The museum was designed for the promotion of the study of natural science, and in the area and corridors are placed various collections illustrative of the different subjects of education taught within its walls, such as models and instruments of experimental physics, a pathological series in the medical department, zoological and mineralogical specimens, a large collection of shells, and various other objects, a great part of which are arranged for exhibition, and are open to the inspection of students and visitors. It is in the charge of the keeper of the Ashmolean Museum, who has an official residence adjoining the S.E., and is open to members of the University from 10 a.m. till 4 p.m. in winter, and till 5 p.m. in summer. Visitors are not admitted till after 2 p.m., in order that the students may not be disturbed, and the library is open two evenings in each week during term time. There is no fee charged, either to members of the university or to strangers, for admission to view the collections. The "Taylor and Randolph Institution" is so called from its founders. Sir Robert Taylor, Kt., was a sculptor and architect of some eminence, who in 1788 bequeathed the bulk of his property, after accumulating for a certain period, for the purpose of "erecting a proper edifice and establishing a foundation for the teaching and improving in the European languages." In 1760 Dr. Francis Randolph, principal of St. Alban's Hall, left money for "erecting a building for the reception of the Pomfret statues belonging to the university of Oxford, and for paintings, engravings, and other curiosities which may occasionally be left to that learned body." The union of these bequests and a grant from the funds of the University resulted in the erection of the present building, at the corner of Beaumont and St. Giles's streets, and close by the Martyrs' Memorial. It was commenced in 1841, and completed in 1845, from the designs of Professor Cockerell, D.C.L. Its entire extent is 240 feet by 102, and to give elevation to it the whole of it is raised upon a terrace, by which a light and spacious crypt, or basement, is obtained. Although the building is of the Palladian or Italian school in its disposition, its order is Ionic, and its details and ornamentation are taken from the temple of Apollo Epicurius, at Basso, near Phigalea, in Arcadia. The pediment of the portico is surmounted by a figure of Apollo, and on the side of each wing, facing the fore court, are four attached Ionic columns, with entablatures and vases, while at the entrance to the Taylor Institute, in St. Giles's-street, are four sculptured figures emblematical of the four European continental languages of Germany, France, Italy, and Spain, and having engraved at their bases the names of the most celebrated literary characters of the countries which they respectively represent. The centre portico opens into the principal sculpture-gallery, an apartment 90 feet by 28, and containing casts from celebrated antique statues (such as the Laocoön, the Torso Belvidere, the Florentine Boar, the Nine Muses, &c.) and busts, together with a portion of the collection of marbles presented by the Countess of Pomfret. Leading from this room and forming a wing to it is the "Chantrey Gallery," measuring 180 feet by 28, and containing the original models for the principal works of the late eminent English sculptor, Sir Francis Chantrey, and the remainder of the Pomfret marbles. Upstairs are the Raffaelle and Angelo gallery, containing about 190 original drawings by the former artist, and about 87 by the latter, the whole having been purchased by subscription for £7,000. The picture-gallery is 96 feet long by 28 wide, and 28 feet high. It contains copies of Raffaelle's cartoons, his "School of Athens," and other paintings and portraits, and a considerable number of modern busts, models, and statues. In the Taylor Institution there is a library, which is open between 11 a.m. and 5 p.m., except during the long vacation, when it is closed at 4 p.m. All members of the University have free access to it, and resident graduates may take out of it books for perusal in their own rooms. There are also lying on the table the leading newspapers and periodicals of Germany, France, Italy, and Spain. The Randolph galleries are open every day to members of the University and persons introduced by them, without any fee, between the hours of 11 a.m. and 4 p.m., except for a few weeks during the long vacation for the purpose of cleaning. On Thursdays they are thrown open to the public without any restriction, no introduction whatever being required. The Botanical Gardens, which now occupy a site used in ancient times as a Jewish burial-ground, are entered by a gateway designed by Inigo Jones. Outside the walls on the left is the porter's lodge, and near it the professor's official residence and some lecture-rooms, in which there is a valuable library of rare works upon botany and natural history. The gardens are well supplied with British and foreign plants, flowers, and shrubs, have commodious conservatories, greenhouses, and hothouses, and as they are constantly receiving additions by subscriptions and donations, will eventually rank among the first in England. All the various public institutions which have just been described are under the care and superintendence of delegates, curators, librarians, and other officers appointed by the governing bodies of the University, and paid either out of the university or by special bequests left for the purpose by their founders and benefactors, and some have professorships attached to them, whose duty it is to lecture upon and illustrate the objects committed to their charge.

The UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD is a corporation holding its title and privileges under an Act passed 13 Elizabeth, and confirmed by several acts up to the present reign. It is governed by official persons chosen out of its own body, acting together under the title of the "chancellor, masters, and scholars, of the University of Oxford," and having a common seal. The chancellor is the chief officer of the University. He is always a person of distinction, is elected for life, and is non-resident. He appoints a high steward, whose duties, however, are now merely nominal, as they consist in trying grave criminal cases, such as felony, treason, &c., committed by the members of the University. The next in rank is the vice-chancellor. This functionary is chosen from among the heads of the colleges every year, and he it is who presides over the meetings, and transacts the actual business of the University, except on some special occasions, when the chancellor himself presides. To assist him in his duties he appoints four pro-vice-chancellors, and, according to a certain rota established in 1859, two proctors are chosen annually from the colleges and halls to maintain discipline among the undergraduates. The proctors are ex-officio magistrates, and each of them appoints two pro-proctors, whose duties are similar to their own. The University marshal acts under the directions of the proctors, and has under him certain attendants, who are termed by the students "bull-dogs." The marshal and the "bull-dogs" frequently walk behind the proctors as they are perambulating the streets, which they do at certain periods of the day, and at and after 9 o'clock in the evening, for the purpose of seeing that no irregularities are taking place. These lower functionaries are employed in case of any resistance being made to the authority of the proctors to arrest the offending parties, who are punished in various ways, according to their positions and the nature of their offence; members of the University being confined to their colleges, fined, set to do impositions, rusticated, or expelled; and loose and disorderly persons, not being members of the University, being locked up and imprisoned for various periods. Almost all causes, whether criminal, civil, or spiritual, in which members of the University, resident in it, or its precincts, are concerned, are tried in the chancellor's court, which is held every Friday, during term, in the apodyterium of the convocation house. The vice-chancellor sits as presiding judge, and the two proctors are assessors. As these latter named officials, however, have so many other duties to perform, and are not usually skilled in law, the vice-chancellor appoints some bachelor or doctor of civil law to assist him as assessor, and to act as judge in his absence. Appeals may be made from this court, first to the House of Congregation, next to the House of Convocation (from which delegates are chosen annually for the express purpose of hearing appeals), and if these three bodies disagree, finally to the Queen in Chancery. Besides these officers, there is a registrar and two "proctors ad lites," who are appointed by the vice-chancellor to practise in the court. There are various other officers, such as the public orator, the registrar, the bedells, the delegates of the press, of privileges, of accounts, and of estates, &c., detailed lists of whose duties and names are to be found in the "Oxford University Calendar," which is printed annually, and contains an account of all the principal matters relating to the University and its government. The whole of the actual corporate business of the university is transacted in two assemblies, called respectively the House of Congregation and the House of Convocation. The former consists of doctors of every faculty resident in the University, the heads of the colleges and halls, professors, public lecturers, and examiners, the masters of the schools, and resident regent masters of arts. The House of Congregation, however, as thus constituted, now exercises its functions almost exclusively to the granting of degrees, for in 1854 an Act of Parliament added a new House of Congregation, consisting of certain resident official persons, without any restrictions as to number. A register of the members is made and published by the vice-chancellor annually on or before the 25th September. The House of Convocation consists of all the same members as the House of Congregation, with the addition of non-regent masters of arts, i.e., of persons who have been admitted to regency, and still keep their names on the books, and pay the fees, but are not resident at the University. The two representatives of the university, or "burgesses," as they are properly styled, are chosen by the vice-chancellor, the doctors, the regent and non-regent masters of arts in convocation, and non-resident members are allowed to vote by means of papers forwarded to them at their residences, which when they have been duly filled up and attested by a magistrate, are returned to the committees of the respective candidates. There is another body connected with the management of the University, styled the Hebdomadal Council. This consists of some members ex officio, and some elected by the congregation. The business of this board is to deliberate on all matters connected with the University, such as its rights, privileges, the maintenance of the statutes, customs, and discipline; in a word, to discuss every measure which may affect the University, before such measure is laid before the whole academical body in convocation. Thus the hebdomadal council has the initiative in all University legislation, as, without its sanction, no measure whatever can be submitted to convocation. The control of the market, which lies nearly at the W. end of the High-street, close to the Mitre hotel, with Market-street separating it from Jesus College in the rear, was granted to the Chancellor by Edward III. in 1355. The supervision of weights and measures, and the general regulations of the market are now entrusted to two "clerks of the market," who are appointed annually, one by the chancellor, the other by the vice-chancellor. They must be either principals of halls, masters of arts, or bachelors of divinity, medicine, or law. These gentlemen, however, do not generally act themselves, but appoint a deputy clerk to inspect the corn returns, the provisions sent to market, and to manage the other duties of the office. There is a market every day.

The University embraces 19 colleges and 5 halls. These latter are not corporate bodies, they have no endowments, and all their property is held in trust for them by the University. In early times the number of halls was very large, as they were originally lodging houses in which the students took up their abode, elected their own principal, and removed from one to another at their pleasure. Of such houses, or halls, there are said once to have been as many as 300; but the colleges, by offering greater advantages, attracted most of the students to them, and gradually occupied the sites of the halls, so that by the reign of Elizabeth only eight remained open, and three of these subsequently became colleges. By a statute made in 1855 any member of convocation above the age of 28 was entitled, under certain conditions, to open a private hall for the reception of students, who are admissible to all the privileges of the University. Of such halls, which are subject to all the University statutes, there is at present only one, which is called "Charsley's Hall," from the name of its licensed master. It is situated in St. Giles's. The ancient halls, which were originally called also inns, hostels, and courts, were rude buildings covered with thatch, and were known by very extraordinary names, such as "ale," "beef," "physic," pill," "pittance," and many other similar sobriquets. Some few of the disused halls still remain, as Frewen's Hall, already mentioned, and Kettle Hall, in Broad-street. But about the middle of the 11th century a great improvement commenced in all the buildings designed for the reception of students, and from that time down to the middle of the 13th century the halls afforded them better accommodation, and attracted a greater number of residents. The commencement, however, of the collegiate system, and of the recognition of Oxford as a regularly organised university, commenced with the establishment of University College. There is indeed a legend which asserts that this college was founded by Alfred the Great in 872, but its authenticated foundation took place in 1249, when William of Durham died and bequeathed a sum of money for its establishment. The first purchase was made in accordance with his will in 1253, when a master and three fellows were appointed and paid out of the funds left by him for the purpose.—The next college in point of antiquity is Balliol, founded by John Balliol, of Bernard Castle, Durham and Dervorguilla his wife

(parents of John Baliol, King of Scotland), between 1263 and 1268. The S. front of the college is in a very dilapidated state, but a new chapel, which has been built as a memorial to Dr. Jenkyns, its late master, is highly ornamented in its interior decorations, and is one of the objects visited by those who wish to see all that is remarkable in Oxford.—Merton College was originally located at Malden, in Surrey, where it was founded in 1264 by Walter de Merton, Bishop of Rochester and Lord High Chancellor of England, and transferred by him to Oxford in 1274. One of the smaller quadrangles of this college, in which the library stands, is said to be the most perfect specimen of an ancient quadrangle in Oxford. The chapel is worthy of inspection, and contains eight finely toned bells, a handsome E. window and ceiling, some ancient tapestry, and some good stained glass.—Exeter College was founded by Walter de Stapledon, Bishop of Exeter, and Lord High Treasurer of England, who removed to it his scholars, who up to this time were at Hart Hall. In 1404 Edmund Stafford, Bishop of Exeter, added 12 fellowships, and obtained leave to give the college its present name. The chapel, which has been recently erected, a very fine building, and beautifully decorated, is another object which should by no means be passed over by visitors.—Oriel College was founded by Edward II. in 1326, at the suggestion of Adam de Brome, his almoner, who was also Rector of St. Mary's, where his tomb still remains in the Lady chapel, on the N. side of the church, in that part which is called "Adam de Brome's chapel," from the fact of his having been buried there. The original building stood between the W. side, or Oriel-street, and the High-street, where a portion of the original crypt now remains, and was called St. Mary's College, having been dedicated to the Virgin. The king framed new statutes for the society, and gave it the advowson of St. Mary's church, the piece of ground upon which St. Mary's Hall now stands; but it was not till the reign of Edward III. (who may almost be regarded as its second founder) that the college obtained the site upon which it now stands. The term "Oriel," as applied to this college, has given rise to some controversy among philologists. According to some it is derived from an eastern window which formed a recess in the interior. Others derive it from oriolum, a porch or entrance gate, while another opinion is that it comes from aul royal, a translation of aula regalis, which is the term applied to the college in some early deeds relating to it, in which it is described as being commonly known as the domus Beatæ Mariæ Virginis, Oxon. Collegii de Oryell, alias aulæ regalis. In consequence of its royal foundation the sovereign still continues the visitor of the college.—Queen's College derives its name from Philippa, queen of Edward III., who encouraged and assisted her confessor and chaplain, Robert de Eglesfield, who founded it in 1340. It occupies an area of 2,300 feet in length, by 220 in breadth, and its principal front is built in the style of the Luxembourg Palace. It has two spacious quadrangles divided by the chapel and the hall, both of which were erected from the designs of Sir C. Wren. The former is 100 feet long by 30 feet broad, and has some magnificent painted windows, while the latter is 60 feet long by 30 broad, and contains an ancient marble chimney-piece and several portraits. On Christmas Day an old English dinner is served up in the hall, when a boar's head is taken up to the high table in solemn procession, the bearers singing an old monkish song. The library of Queen's College is considered one of the finest in the University. It is 123 feet in length and 55 feet in height, and contains a collection of MSS., printed books, portraits, and stone carvings. Under it is a second, or "lower library," formed by enclosing the cloisters, and the two libraries together contain above 60,000 volumes, exclusive of the MSS.—New College was founded in 1380 by William of Wykeham, Bishop of Winchester and Lord High Chancellor of England (who also founded Winchester College), and it has served as the model for the foundation of all similar societies, both in Oxford and Cambridge, ever since. Previously to this time the six colleges which had been already established were little more than halls on a large scale, but upon the opening of New College, in 1386, on "14th April, being the vigil of Palm-Sunday, the first warden and fellows entered the college at 3 of the clock in the morning, and with solemn procession and litanies commended themselves and their studies to the care and protection of the Almighty." The chapel, hall, cloister, groined gateways, doors, and windows remain pretty nearly as they were when it was first built, except in the principal quadrangle and the garden court; the latter of which was finished in 1684, from designs, it is supposed, copied from the palace of Versailles, while the former had a third and an upper story added to it in 1675. The chapel lies on the left of the main quadrangle, and the choral services which take place there attract vast numbers of persons to hear them. The ante-chapel, which is 80 feet long by 35 broad, is supported down the middle by two staff-moulded pillars, and contains some very curious old monuments in brass and stone, some modern tablets and monuments in marble, and some ancient stained windows representing patriarchs, prophets, saints, and martyrs, placed here by the founder. The W. window was executed by Jervais in 1777, from cartoons by Sir Joshua Reynolds, and contains in the upper part stained-glass representing events in the life of Jesus, and in the lower, which is divided into seven compartments, allegorical figures of the four cardinal and three Christian virtues of Temperance, Fortitude, Justice, Prudence, Faith, Hope, and Charity. The Gothic screen over the organ loft is beautiful both in design and execution, and on each side of the organ (which is considered one of the finest in England) are the carved stalls of the warden and the sub-warden, while in front of the stalls, round the chapel, are placed the ancient carved-oak seats, which have been in use since the college was founded. The inner chapel contains some splendid painted windows, those on the left having been executed by Peckitt, of York, while those on the right are principally Flemish, and are said to have been painted from designs by Rubens' pupils. The communion-table, which is of dove-coloured marble, is 12 feet long by 3 broad, and stands upon a flight of marble steps extending the whole width of the chapel. Over it are compartments in marble, containing sculptures in alto relievo representing the Salutation, the Nativity, the Descent from the Cross, and the Resurrection, by Westmacott. Carved and sculptured canopies and pinnacles occupy the rest of the E. wall, and in the left-hand corner stands the richly ornamented silver-gilt crozier of the founder. Adjacent to the chapel are the cloisters, surrounding an area 130 feet long by 85 broad, and containing many curious old stone carvings, pillars, and monuments. N. of the cloisters is the tower, which was built on the site of one of the bastions of the city wall, not only as a belfry, but for purposes of defence in case of need, and having its wall 6 feet in thickness at the base. The hall is a spacious room, 78 feet by 35, and is adorned with some paintings (one by Annibal Carracci) and numerous portraits, while the canopied cornice at the upper end of the apartment, the screen of draperied panel-work at the bottom, and the wainscot and windows round it, are richly emblazoned and decorated with the arms and escutcheons of the founder and the various benefactors of the society. The library is on the E. side of the quadrangle, over the gateway which divides the old and new buildings. It consists of two rooms, 70 feet long by 22 broad, and contains some very fine printed books and MSS. The garden-court is separated by an iron gate and palisading, extending 130 feet in length from the gardens. These are surrounded by a terrace, well stocked with various shrubs, plants, and flowers, and studded with groups of trees. On the S. side is a bowling-green, now principally used for archery; and views are obtained from the gardens of St. Peter's Church, Magdalen Tower, and the remains of the old city wall, by which the college is partly surrounded.—Lincoln College was founded by Richard Fleming, Bishop of Lincoln, in 1427, and was greatly augmented by Thomas Scott, alias Rotheram, Bishop of Lincoln, afterwards Archbishop of York and Lord High Chancellor of England, who in 1479 added five fellowships, and gave a fresh body of statutes to the society.—All Souls' College was founded in 1437 by Henry Chichele, successively Bishop of St. David's and Archbishop of Canterbury. Its principal front is 194 feet in length, and has a tower gateway, with statues of the founder and of Henry VI. The first quadrangle is 124 feet long by 72 broad, and has in it an ingenious sun-dial contrived by Sir Christopher Wren. The chapel lies to the N. of the quadrangle, and is about 70 feet long by 30 broad. It contains some fine portraits and paintings by Sir James Thornhill, and over the communion-table is an altar-piece, executed at Rome by Raphael Mengs, the subject being the "Noli me tangere" in the garden. The roof is divided into compartments, carved and gilded, and much of the original work remains, many of the corbels, the angel-propped banner beams, the stalls, desks, and "misereres," in the choir, and various specimens of the ancient carving, being still in excellent preservation. The ante-chapel, which is of the same proportions as the chapel, contains several brasses and monuments, the principal one being the celebrated marble statue, by Bacon, of Sir William Blackstone, the first Vinerian Professor of Common Law in the University. The second quadrangle is 172 feet long by 155 broad, having the library on its N. side. This building occupies the whole side of the square, and is 30½ feet wide by 40 in height. In it stands a marble statue of Colonel Codrington, the founder of the library, and it contains a collection of upwards of 40,000 volumes, to which additions are constantly being made from funds which are in the hands of the society for the purpose of increasing and improving the library. The room is decorated with bronze vases, portraits, busts, pictures, and painted windows, and an original sketch by Mengs of the head of Jesus. There are also some portraits in the hall of eminent members of the college, and in the Buttery some curious specimens of ancient plate, and a remarkable arched and fretted roof.—Magdalen College was founded in 1457 by William Patten, Bishop of Winchester and Lord High Chancellor of England, who was born at Waynflete, in Lincolnshire, and is hence generally known as William of Waynflete. It stands on the site and lands of a dissolved hospital of St. John the Baptist, and, including its buildings (which occupy 11 acres), its grove, garden-walk, and other grounds adjacent, extends over an area of about 100 acres. The entrance to the college is by a Gothic gateway, erected in 1844 from a design by Pugin. The exterior is ornamented with richly canopied niches, containing figures of St. John Baptist, Mary Magdalene, and the founder; the arms of Henry VI., and those of the founder; a Latin inscription over the gate, and in the interior is a niche with the figure of the Virgin and Child, the whole gateway being surmounted by a handsomely designed cross. Opposite to the entrance is the W. window of the chapel, with a shallow porch, over which are niches containing figures of saints, &c., and on the right is a curious stone pulpit, from which the University sermon was formerly preached on St. John's Day. To the left of the entrance to the cloisters is a curious stained window composed of very small pieces of glass, and to the right the door of the chapel, which is one of the most beautiful in the University. Here, too, as well as at New College, the musical services are very fine, and attract a considerable number of visitors, who assemble not only to hear them, but to admire the various architectural beauties of the college, or to wander among its grounds. In the ante-chapel are two Corinthian pillars, some monuments, and windows containing painted glass, representing saints, benefactors of the college and University, and events in the life of Jesus. The great W. window, representing the Last Judgment, was originally painted after a design by Christopher Schwartz, and was repaired in 1740 at a cost of £800. The chapel (the choir of which has ten painted windows, and is paved with Dorsetshire marble) contains a communion-table, of the Corinthian order, standing on marble steps, and having as an altar-piece a picture of Christ bearing His Cross, brought from Vigo in 1702, and executed, in all probability, by Ribalta. Above the table is a stone carving of Christ appearing to Mary in the garden, and the space between this and the table is filled up by sculptured marble. On the left of the communion-table is a small chapel, which has been admirably restored, and contains an alabaster tomb of Richard Patten, the founder's father. Service is performed every day at 10 a.m. and 4 p.m., except on Sundays and holydays, when the morning service begins at 8. The organ is a remarkably fine instrument; and the large brass eagle, which serves as a lectern, was placed in the choir in 1633. The stone altar-screen and old oak seats and stalls are richly and appropriately carved. The cloisters surround the great quadrangle, the interior of which is adorned with grotesque figures and carvings of lions, pelicans, a hippopotamus, and other beasts, besides a lawyer, a schoolmaster, a divine, a physician, David conquering Goliath, &c. These are all explained in a MS. in the library as being symbolical of the arts, sciences, and virtues, which ought to be cultivated in a college, as well as of those pursuits and habits which are to be avoided. Thus the lion typifies courage, the pelican parental affection and care, the hyena represents fraud, the panther treachery, the griffin covetousness, the hippopotamus, which carries his cub upon his shoulders, signifies the tutors and fellows of the college, who support the junior members of the society in their passage through the troubled waters of an university career, and so on through the whole series, the meaning of each figure and group being duly set forth in the "Œdipus Magdalenensis," as the MS. above mentioned is styled. The hall contains some good portraits, and in the wainscot at the upper end are some curiously carved figures, illustrative of the history of St. Mary Magdalene. The new buildings lie through a narrow passage in the N. side of the cloisters. They were founded in 1733, are 300 feet in length, and consist of three stories of apartments or rooms for the members of the college. To the left of these buildings is the Grove (in which there are some fine elm trees and a herd of deer), which is bounded by the old second, or outer, city wall. To Magdalen College also belongs a much-frequented water-walk on the bank of the river Cherwell, the entrance to which is through an iron gate to the right of the new quadrangle. It is bordered by lofty trees, the foliage of which entirely overhang it, and make it a delightful retreat from the heat of the sun. A portion of it is termed "Addison's Walk," from the fact that that great writer, who was himself a member of the college, passed much of his time, and composed (it is said) many of his works here. Magdalen Tower, which is one of the most elegant structures in the University, was commenced in 1492 and completed about 1505. It is about 150 feet in height, and contains a peal of ten bells. On its summit a hymn, composed for the occasion, is sung by members of the choir at 5 o'clock on the morning of 1st May annually. This custom has its origin from the tradition that formerly a May-day requiem was performed each year for the soul of Henry VII., in commemoration of his visit to the college in 1488. Magdalen Bridge, which crosses the Cherwell, joins the High-street with the parish of St. Clement's. It is 526 feet in length, but is considered too narrow for its length. The roads beyond it diverge to the right and the left, the former leading to the villages of Cowley, Iffley, and Littlemore; the latter to Headington (from the hill of which a view of the surrounding country is obtained) and Marston, and some other small places.—Brasenose College (which, in its charter, is also styled "the King's Hall") was founded in 1509 by William Smith, Bishop of Lincoln, and Sir Richard Sutton, Kt., of Prestbury in Cheshire. It stands on a site which was in former times occupied by four of the ancient halls, and its name is said by some to be derived from brasinium, "a brewery," which is asserted to have stood near a hall built by Alfred the Great at the N.E. angle of the more modern building. Another derivation of the term is held to be a piece of brass in the shape of a nose, and having an iron ring through it so as to form a knocker, which was brought here by some students who removed from the university of Stamford to that of Oxford, temp. Edward III. Be this as it may, certain it is that the college gateway and boat both have a brass nose displayed upon them; and it is evident that the last-given derivation of their name is that generally accepted by the members of the society. The hall is on the S. side of the first quadrangle, and is embellished with some good portraits, a modern painted window, and a handsome chimney-piece. The library contains some fine busts, especially one of Lord Grenville, Chancellor of the University in 1809, by Nollekens, and the chapel has a Gothic roof ornamented with rich fan-tracery, a marble communion-table, with a very massive pair of silver-gilt candlesticks, given by Lord Ellesmere in 1677, a good brass eagle lectern, and an E. window of stained glass representing Jesus, and SS. Mary, Matthew, Luke, and John. In the ante-chapel are several monuments.—Corpus Christi College (or, as it is generally styled by members of the University, Corpus) was founded in 1516 by Richard Fox, Bishop of Winchester and Lord Privy Seal in the reign of Henry VIII. The entrance is by a vaulted gateway under a square tower, in front of which are three richly canopied but unoccupied niches. The quadrangle, in the centre of which is a curious cylindrical dial, erected in 1605, is 100 feet by 80, and opposite the entrance is a statue of the founder with his crozier and mitre, under a Gothic canopy. The hall, which lies on the left of the quadrangle, contains some fine carving, an ancient timber roof, and N. window, and some good portraits. The chapel is in the S.E. corner of the quadrangle, and has an arched and oak-panelled roof, with moulded ribs and carved bosses adorned with Christian emblems, and the arms of the founder in gold and colours. There is besides a cedar screen, having on it life-sized carved figures of the Evangelists, and the altar-piece is a painting of the Adoration, by Rubens, formerly belonging to the Prince of Condé, but presented, at a cost of £2,500, by Sir R. Worsley in 1804. The library extends in a line with the chapel along the whole S. front of the quadrangle. It possesses very valuable printed books and MSS., and two ancient portraits of the founder. The new buildings, generally called Turner's Buildings, from the fact of their having been erected by Thomas Turner, president of the college, in 1706, have a frontage of 119 feet, and in the centre of them is the entrance to the college garden. From hence may be obtained a good view of the meadows belonging to the college, bounded by the Broad Walk, and the cathedral, while on the terrace may be seen several remains of the old city walls. This college possesses the crozier of the founder, which is 6 feet long, made entirely of silver gilt, and most elaborately ornamented; his gold sacramental plate; a pix, and some very curious and valuable finger-rings, spoons, crucifixes, taubards, and other utensils and ornaments.—Christ Church College, the largest and most magnificent in the University, was founded by the celebrated Thomas Wolsey, Archbishop of York, in 1526, on the site of the priory of St. Frideswide, who died 19th October, 740. In her time a church, dedicated to St. Mary and All Saints, stood here. In 1012 the Saxon King Ethelred considerably enlarged the church and the religious houses attached to it, and the latter, during the following century, having fallen into the hands of some of the secular canons, they dispersed the nuns and seized the premises for themselves. They were, however, in their turn dispossessed by Guimand, or Wymand, chaplain to Henry I. He applied himself to cultivating the lands and increasing the revenues of the establishment, and this, and the quantity of presents and offerings brought to the shrine by pilgrims and devotees, made the foundation very rich and prosperous. Numerous valuable gifts and endowments were added till the time of Henry VIII., when Wolsey obtained leave from the monarch to found this college by applying the funds raised by the suppression of several smaller monasteries and priories for the purpose. In 1529 the king took possession of all the revenues belonging to the society; and in 1532, in consequence of certain restorations which he caused to be made in the college, he took the credit of its foundation to himself, and dedicated the building to the Holy Trinity, St. Mary, and St. Frideswide. In 1546 he determined to connect the see of Oxford with his lately endowed college, and removed the seat of the bishopric from Osney Abbey to St. Frideswide's, where he finally laid the foundation, as an establishment partly cathedral and partly academical, and since that time known as Christ Church. The front of this noble building is surmounted with turrets, bastions, and battlements, and is 400 feet in length. In the centre is an octagonal Gothic tower, called "Tom Gate and Tower," from the cupola containing the great bell, which was brought here from Osney. Upon entering, we find a quadrangle of 264 feet by 261, surrounded by a terrace walk, and having in the centre a small reservoir and fountain. The hall lies to the right of the quadrangle, and to the left is the dean's house, and in the farther corner on the same side a vaulted passage leading to Peckwater Quadrangle, so called from an ancient inn or hall kept by a person of that name. A passage in the centre of the right wing leads to the Common Room and the Anatomy School. the latter is in the "Chaplains' Quadrangle," to the S. of the cathedral, which is said to have formed one of the earliest existing portions of the foundation. It contains a museum, anatomical preparations, wax models, &c., and is used by the Reader in Anatomy for lecture and class rooms. The approach to the hall is by a wide stone staircase, with a stone balustrade on each side, and having a carved and vaulted stone roof of fan-work, supported on a single light pillar 80 feet high. The hall is a most noble apartment, 115 feet by 40, and being 50 feet high. The roof, which was executed in 1529, is of richly carved oak, with pendants decorated with 300 armorial devices of Henry VIII. and Wolsey. There are in it two Gothic chimney-pieces, and in a recess on the S. side a finely carved oriel window with a fret-work roof. There are on the walls 120 portraits of celebrated personages, who have been on the foundation, painted by the most distinguished painters from the time of Holbein up to the present day. The Common Room also is decorated with some fine portraits and engravings. On the left of a flight of steps at the bottom of the hall staircase is the cathedral, which, without doubt, formed a part of the original church of St. Frideswide's Priory. The choir, the dormitory, the Latin chapel, and the nave have each their own distinctive architectural and decorative features; and in the latter, on certain appointed days, the University sermon (which is ordinarily preached at St. Mary's) is preached here. The vice-chancellor's seat and the pulpit were both brought from Osney Abbey, and the whole of this sacred edifice abounds with ancient and modern monuments, carvings, stained glass, heraldic devices, and various ecclesiastical monuments, a detailed description of which would demand a volume, and which will be found amply treated of, for all occasional visitors, in the Oxford guide-books, and more fully and scientifically in those works which especially treat of English cathedrals. Choral service is performed in the choir at 10 a.m. and 4 p.m., and in the nave on Good Friday, Ascension Day, Christmas Day, and those occasions when the University sermon is preached at Christ Church. The cloisters exhibit the different dates at which they were erected, and contain specimens both of early Norman and Saxon architecture. The Chapter House, built about the 13th century, is of early English work, and contains a few good portraits. On the S. side of Peckwater Quadrangle is the library, which was commenced in 1716, and finished in 1761. It extends 161 feet, and the whole of the ground-floor forms a picture gallery, containing a most valuable collection of paintings by the most celebrated masters—especially those of the Italian school—and some good busts. This gallery is well worthy of inspection, and a catalogue of its treasures can be procured from the college porter. On the staircase, leading to the upper room, which is 142 feet long by 30 broad, and 37 high, is a marble statue of Locke, by Roubillac; and in the room itself is a very fine collection of rare books, MSS., and coins, bequeathed by Archbishop Wake, Canon Barton, Dr. Brown, Regius Professor of Hebrew, in 1780, and others; and some paintings and marble and bronze busts and figures. On turning to the right from the Library, and adjoining Peckwater on the E., is Canterbury Quadrangle and Gate, which were built in 1773. Canterbury Hall, which stood here, was founded by Archbishop Islip in 1363, as a nursery for the monks of Christ Church, Canterbury; but Henry VIII. transferred it to the college, and it is now devoted to the occupation of the undergraduate noblemen of the college. The way to Christ Church meadows and walks lies through the cloisters from the Chapter House. The Broadwalk is quite straight, a quarter of a mile in length, proportionately wide, and planted on each side with elms, which entirely over-arch it and form an arcade; while another walk which meets it at each end describes a circuit, and forms one of the banks of the Isis and Cherwell. There is also a path on the opposite side of the latter river, and ferry-boats are in attendance to convey passengers across.—Trinity College was founded by Sir Thomas Pope in 1554. Its original foundation, however, dates as far back as the time of Edward III., from whom it received an endowment, as it did subsequently from Richard II. and the priors of Durham, from whom it received the name of Durham College. Being, however, suppressed at the Reformation, in consequence of its connection with the Benedictines, it received a new set of statutes, and was dedicated by Sir Thomas Pope to the "Holy and Undivided Trinity." It was erected on the ruins of Durham College, and some of the old buildings still remain. The college has before it a spacious grass-plot, separated from Broad Street by a lofty iron palisading, with a gate in the centre. The entrance tower lies some distance from the street, and is approached by a gravel walk, leading by the grass-plot past one end of Balliol College Chapel. The first quadrangle has the President's house and the library on the E; the hall and the common room on the W.; and the chapel on the S. The second quadrangle was designed by Sir C. Wren, and opens to the college gardens on the E. side. The chapel has a cedar screen and altar-piece, carved by Grinling Gibbons; and on the ceiling is an Ascension, painted by a French artist. The hall has several portraits of benefactors; and the library, which is the oldest part of the college, contains some fine ancient stained glass in the windows, and a valuable collection of books and MSS. The gardens occupy an area of 4 acres, and are well laid out with trees and shrubs. At the lower end of the centre walk is an iron gate opening on to the road, which leads to the "Parks" nearly opposite to the entrance to Wadham College.—St. John's College was founded in 1555 by Sir Thomas White, Knt., Alderman of London, by whom a provision was made for the maintenance of an organist, 6 singing men, and 8 choristers, so that choral service is performed in the chapel. The original foundation was that of Bishop Chichele, by whom the college was made over in 1436 to the monks of St. Bernard, and hence was called St. Bernard's College. At the suppression it was dissolved in precisely the same manner and for the same cause as Trinity was, and consigned by Henry VIII. to his new foundation of Christ Church, from which society it was purchased by Sir T. White, and dedicated by him to St. John the Baptist. The tower gateway, which forms the entrance and the frontage, as well as many parts of the interior of the college, belong to Chichele's period; and the statue of St. Bernard still stands in its original niche. There are two quadrangles, in the first of which stand the hall, chapel, common rooms, and part of the president's house, and in the second, which was built by Inigo Jones, at the expense of Archbishop Laud, is the library. The Hall, which was once the refectory of the monks of St. Bernard, is a well-proportioned room, with an arched roof, a screen of Portland stone, a chimney-piece of variegated marble, and some good portraits. The chapel adjoins the hall, and has some good tracery work especially in the E. window; an open roof of carved oak, and some Caen stone-carving in the panelling at the back of the stalls, the corbels which support the roof and the canopy over the communion-table. The organ is in the inner, or mortuary chapel, which is entered by two arches, and contains several monuments to the memory of former presidents of the college. The remains of Archbishop Laud lie in a stone coffin at the E. end of the chapel, and in the ante-chapel are several ancient brasses of persons who are buried there. The library consists of two rooms, each above 100 feet long, and containing several valuable books and MSS. There are also some good portraits—some by celebrated masters—and a curious picture of Charles I., with the whole Book of Psalms written in the lines of the face and the hair. There is also a piece of tapestry here representing Jesus with the disciples at Emmaus, copied from a picture by Titian, and removed from the chapel, where it was once the altar-piece. In the inner library is Laud's crozier, and some other curiosities. On the E. and W. sides of the inner quadrangle are two light colonnades in the Grecian style of architecture, having over the columns busts representing the virtues. From this quadrangle a passage with a fan-tracery ceiling leads into the gardens or groves, as they are sometimes called. These ornamental grounds occupying an area of about 5 acres, abound with horse-chestnut and other large trees, and are the most extensive and tastefully-laid-out gardens in the University.—Jesus College (or "the Welsh College," as it is sometimes styled from the fact of a great proportion of its members belonging to the Principality) was founded by Queen Elizabeth in 1571, on the petition of Dr. Hugh Price, treasurer of St. David's. In 1621 Sir Eubule Thelwall procured a new charter and statutes, and Sir Leoline Jenkins, who was president from 1661 to 1673, and afterwards M.P. for the University, bequeathed lands and other property to the society, of such value that he was regarded almost as a second founder, and was buried in 1685 with great pomp in the college chapel, near the steps leading to the communion-table. The chapel is oak-wainscoted, and divided into three compartments by a screen and arch leading into a kind of chancel corresponding with the ante-chapel. The altar-piece is a copy of "St. Michael overcoming the Devil," by Guido, in the Capuchin convent at Rome, and measures 10 feet by 7. The library was built in 1677, and contains several rare books and MSS., among which is a valuable collection relating to Wales. The inner quadrangle is 90 feet by 70, and contains the bursary (in which is some valuable college plate, and a curious early picture of Queen Elizabeth) the fellows' common room, &c.; and there are two dial-plates, one of which looks into each of the two quadrangles.—Wadham College was founded in 1613 by Nicholas Wadham, of Merifield, in Somersetshire, and Dorothy his wife. The entrance is through a towered gateway, with a groined roof, into a quadrangle 130 feet square, and having the hall, chapel, and library directly opposite to it. The chapel has a Gothic ceiling, some good stained-glass windows, a richly-carved screen, and a brass eagle lectern. It is paved with marble. The E. window was painted by Bernard Van Linge in 1621, and represents various sculptural emblems typical of Christ in the upper compartments, while in the lower are portrayed the principal events of his life, the windows to the right and left containing figures of the Twelve Apostles. In the ante-chapel are some specimens of modern painted glass, and the monuments are numerous. The hall is 82 feet long by 35 broad, and 37 in height. It has an oak screen, a timber roof, an oriel window with some stained glass, and its walls are adorned with numerous portraits of benefactors and distinguished members of the college. The library, which is connected with the chapel by a cloister, is 55 feet by 30, and in the common room is a painting of "Christ at the Pool of Bethesda," executed by Dirk Van Delen in 1647, and some good portraits. Near the chapel, on the left, is the college garden, which, although not very extensive, is tastefully laid out.—PEMBROKE COLLEGE, which was originally Broadgate's Hall, was founded in 1624 by James I., at the expense of Thomas Tesdale, of Glympton, in Oxfordshire, and the Rev. Richard Wightwick, Rector of Ilsley, in Berkshire, and obtained its present name from William Herbert, Earl of Pembroke, who was chancellor of the university when it was founded. It consists of two small quadrangles, in the first of which is the hall, with the library over it, and in the second the chapel; but they present no remarkable features, either of architecture or decorative beauty.—WORCESTER COLLEGE, which is the latest-established collegiate society in the University, was originally Gloucester Hall, and was founded in 1714 by Sir Thomas Cookes, of Bentley, in Worcestershire. Although it is the most modern college in Oxford, it occupies the site of one of the earliest religious seminaries, for in 1283 John Giffard obtained a license from Edward I. to form an establishment of Benedictines here, for the purpose of instructing those of their order who might choose to reside there. After the suppression of the monasteries, temp. Henry VIII., when the see of Osney was removed to Oxford, it became the episcopal palace, until it was purchased in 1559 by Sir Thomas White, the founder of St. John's, and was then known as St. John the Baptist's Hall. It continued in a very flourishing condition till the time of the Rebellion, when it sunk into insignificance, and was ultimately made over to the trustees of Sir Thomas Cookes, who, in accordance with his intention, founded the present college. The ancient kitchen and buttery still remain, and many vestiges of the rooms of the Benedictines and other portions of the original architecture are still visible, and render the contrast between the old and new style of the buildings very striking. There is only one quadrangle, having the chapel, hall, and library on the E., and the gardens on the W. The chapel is 60 feet long by 30 broad, and has a richly-ornamented stucco roof and an altar-piece representing a Magdalen, supposed by some to be the work of Guido. The hall, which is 60 feet by 30, contains several portraits of benefactors and dignitaries of the college, and the library, which is 120 feet in length, possesses a valuable collection of books, among which may be mentioned some architectural works, with MS. notes, by Inigo Jones (of whom there is a bust near the window opposite the entrance), and several casts from ancient statues. In the lobby is a full-length portrait of the founder, and some good portraits and paintings are hung in the common room and the bursary. The gardens and water-walks beyond are of considerable extent and tastefully laid out, and are well adapted for the flower-shows and promenades which take place here at commemoration and upon other public occasions.—Of the halls, ST. MARY is the oldest. It was the parsonage-house of the rectors of St. Mary's Church till 1325, when Edward II. gave the church, with all its appurtenances, to Oriel College. That society converted it into a separate educational establishment in 1333, and temp. Edward IV. it was enlarged by the addition of Bedell Hall, which was contiguous to it. Since that time it has received constant enlargement and improvements in its building, the last having been effected by Dr. Hampden, formerly principal, who was raised to the see of Hereford in 1848.—MAGDALEN HALL was originally a school with a refectory and chambers, erected by Bishop Waynflete for students previous to their admission to Magdalen College, and was known as "St. Mary Magdalene Hall" as early as 1487. It was governed by one of the fellows of Magdalen till 1602, when it became an independent hall. It originally stood near the parent college, but in 1816 the president and fellows obtained an Act of Parliament which authorised them to remove it to its present site, which had formerly been occupied by Hart Hall, which in its turn was, in 1740, converted into Hertford College, but lapsed to the crown, 1805, in consequence of want of sufficient funds to carry it on. Magdalen Hall is more extensive than any other similar establishment in the University, and more nearly resembles a college, both in its arrangements and endowments. Magdalen Hall contains among its list of members the names of many who have become men of note, both in the University and in public life.—NEW INN HALL was formerly known as "Trillech's Inn," from the circumstance of its having belonged to John Trillech, Bishop of Hereford, in 1334. The site and premises were ultimately conveyed to William of Wykeham, who in 1392 gave them, with a messuage called Rose Hall, with a garden adjoining and three gardens on the W. side, to the warden and fellows of New College. In the time of the Civil War (1642—1646) this hall was used as a royal mint, to which the colleges and halls sent their plate to be melted down and coined for the use of the king. It was restored to the purposes of academical instruction by Dr. Cramer, who became principal in 1831, and erected at his own expense suitable apartments and offices for his own occupation and the use of students.—ST. ALBAN HALL owes its name to the fact of its site having been originally the property of Robertus de Sancte Albano, a burgher of Oxford, temp. King John, who, in 1230, conveyed the tenement he had built there to the nuns at Littlemore, near Oxford. On the dissolution of Littlemore Nunnery, it was given by Henry VIII. to his physician, Dr. John Owen, and by him it was afterwards conveyed to Sir John (afterwards Lord) Williams, of Thame, and Sir Thomas Gresham. By permission of Edward VI. they assigned it over, in 1547, to John Pollard and Robert Perrot, Esqs., and they finally transferred it to the warden and fellows of Merton College, by whom it was established as a separate academical hall. The front of the hall was built in 1600, chiefly from a legacy left for the purpose by Benedict Barnham, once a member of the house, and at the N.W. corner of the quadrangle is an ancient bell-tower, which is in itself very picturesque, but has received a modern addition, which imparts to it somewhat of a grotesque appearance.—ST. EDMUND'S HALL derives its name from Edmund le Riche, Archbishop of Canterbury, in 1233. He built that part of St. Peter's church (which lies close to the hall) called the Lady chapel, and after his death was canonised by Pope Innocent V. In 1269 it was purchased by the Canons of Osney, and soon after devoted by them to the purposes of education. At the dissolution of the monasteries it was granted by Henry VIII. to two citizens of Oxford, after which it came by purchase into the possession of William Denyse, Devenysh, or Dennyon, Provost of Queen's College, and was devised by him to that society in 1557. The chapel and the library, which is over the ante-chapel, were built by Stephen Penton, a principal of the hall, and the former was consecrated by Dr. Fell, Bishop of Oxford, in 1682.—The "Oxford University Calendar" contains a variety of useful information respecting all academical matters, such as an almanac with calendar of University ceremonies and other remarkable days, notices of prize subjects, professorships, terms, degrees, institutions, and fees, lists of professors, University officers, and members of the governing bodies and of the colleges, an alphabetical list of the members of the University, and various other matters, a knowledge of which is indispensable to any who may be about to enter the University, a fact which has obtained for it the sobriquet of the "freshman's Bible." There are several maps and guide-books published for the use of visitors, and many standard works descriptive of the city and university. Among these may be mentioned the celebrated "Athenæ and Fasti Oxonienses," by Antony à Wood, containing the lives, &c., of the most celebrated members of the University during the 16th and 17th centuries (Bliss's edition, 4 vols., 4to. London, 1813—1820); the Appendix to the "Fasti," carried down to 1778 by John Gutch, and printed at the Clarendon in 1790; Antony à Wood's "History and Antiquities of the Colleges and Halls in the University of Oxford," also edited by Gutch, and printed at the Clarendon in 1786; and Ingram's "Memorials of Oxford" (which contains engravings of the various colleges, halls, public institutions, and various objects of interest in the University and city), in 3 vols., 4to., published at Oxford in 1837.

OXFORD-ROAD, a station on the Manchester, Warrington, and Liverpool section of the London and North-Western railway, three quarters of a mile from Manchester.

OXFORDSHIRE, an inland co. of England, lying in the S. part of the island. It is situated between 51° 28′, and 52° 10′ N. lat., and between 0° 50′, and 1° 44′ W. long. It is bounded on the S. by Berkshire and the river Thames, on the E. by Buckinghamshire, on the N.E. by Northamptonshire and the river Cherwell, on the N.W. by Warwickshire, and on the W. by Gloucestershire. In form it approaches a quadrilateral figure, and extends in length about 50 miles from N. to S., and in breadth about 30 miles in its widest part. It is about 180 miles in circuit, and comprises an area of 756 square miles, or about 472,887 statute acres, inhabited by a population of 172,266, according to the census of 1861, against 170,459 in 1851, showing an increase of 1,827 in the decennial period. In the earliest period of our history this district belonged to the two Celtic nations, the Catyeuchlani and the Dobuni; of whom the former held the eastern, and the latter the western parts. The Dobuni were subject to the Catyeuchlani, and speedily submitted to the Romans on their arrival under Aulus Plotius, the Proprætor. Under the Roman dominion it was included in that division of the island which was named Flavia Cæsariensis. The whole county is intersected by ancient roads, many of which are of Roman origin. After the withdrawal of the Romans, the county became part of the kingdom of Mercia under the Saxons, who called it Oxenfordscyre. It contained many Danish settlements in various parts from the 9th to the 11th century. When the kingdom was divided in 1016 between Canute and Edmund Ironside, this county appears to have been included in Canute's share; and about this time two great councils, or assemblies of English and Danes, were held at Oxford. At the time of the Norman conquest, Oxfordshire was included in the earldom of Gurth, the brother of Harold. In the reign of Richard II., Robert de Vere, Earl of Oxford, was defeated at Radcot Bridge, near Bampton, by the insurgent nobles in 1387. A great conflict took place in the wars of the Roses in 1469, near Banbury, when the Earl of Pembroke, commander of the Yorkists, was defeated, and taken by the northern Lancastrians, under Robin of Redesdale. During the Great Rebellion, Oxfordshire was the scene of some of the severest struggles. The University, like that of Cambridge, took the king's side, and testified its devotion by giving up its plate for the royal service. Abingdon, in the adjoining county of Berkshire, was the headquarters of the Parliamentarians, from whence they frequently sallied forth and harassed the besieged city of Oxford.—The surface of this county is mostly level, or gently undulating. In the W. a long range of hills runs in a northerly direction from the left bank of the Evenlode to Chipping Norton, and thence eastward towards Deddington. On the S. the southern projection of the county is occupied by the Chiltern hills, extending across it from Buckinghamshire to Berkshire. Nettlebed Hill, 2 miles E. of Nuffield, rises to an elevation of 820 feet, while Nuffield Common is 757 feet high. Broom Hill, the most north-western point in the county, is 836 feet high. The Chiltern hills were formerly covered by a forest of beech-trees, which has to a large extent disappeared, and the surface thus cleared has been converted into arable land, or into extensive sheepwalks. Another range of hills lies to the E. of Oxford, between the Cherwell and the Thames, the highest of which, Shotover Hill, rises to an elevation of 599 feet, and commands an extensive prospect over the city and university of Oxford.—The principal rivers of this county are the Isis, the Cherwell, the Evenlode, the Thame, and the Windrush. The Isis enters Oxfordshire from Gloucestershire at Lechlade, where the navigation commences, vessels of 90 tons being able to reach this point. After a very sinuous course it passes Oxford, where it receives the Cherwell, and finally leaves the shire at Henley. The Cherwell, rising in Northamptonshire, enters the county near Claydon, about 9 miles from its source, and after flowing for 30 miles in a southerly direction past Banbury, reaches Oxford, where its waters unite with those of the Isis. This stream is not navigable, but it receives several small tributaries in its course, such as the Sorbrook, the Ray, and others. The Evenlode, rising in Worcestershire, flows for 22 miles in a south-easterly direction through Oxfordshire, and falls into the Isis near Ensham. The Thame has its source in Buckinghamshire, and enters this county near the town of Thame, and after skirting the border for some distance, flows through the county till it joins the Thames at Dorchester. The Windrush rises in the Cotswold Hills, and, entering Oxfordshire, passes by Witney and Burford, and finally falls into the Isis. The Oxford canal, the only one in the shire, enters it some distance N. of Banbury, and follows the valley of the Cherwell to Oxford, where it unites with the Isis. By means of this canal and the Isis, Oxfordshire possesses communication by water with every part of England.—The climate of this county, though generally considered healthy, is rather colder than other southern parts of England. The elevated land in the north-western part, near the Chiltern hills, is particularly bleak and exposed. The soil is various, but the greater part of the land is comparatively fertile. The stonebrash district, extending from the borders of Gloucestershire to the N. of Oxford and Witney, is inferior in fertility to the red loam district, being formed of sandstone and decomposed chalk. The low-lying lands in the river valleys are mostly covered with luxuriant herbage, and afford good pasture for large herds of cattle. A great portion of the soil is under cultivation as arable land, and produces large crops of turnips, wheat, beans, clover, and barley. The cows kept on the Oxfordshire farms are of various breeds, the Alderney and Devonshire being the most common. The breeds of sheep are chiefly the Southdown and Leicester, and crosses between these and the Cotswold.—Oxfordshire is divided for civil purposes into 14 hundreds, as follows—viz. Bampton, Banbury, Binfield, Bloxam, Central and East Bullingdon, Chadlington, Dorchester, Ewelme, Langtree, Lewknor, Pirton, Ploughley, Thame, Wootton, together with the city and liberties of Oxford. The county contains about 273 parishes, and forms the archdeaconry of Oxford, in the diocese of Canterbury, and has 11 market towns—viz. Oxford, the county town and seat of a university, Banbury, Woodstock, Bicester, Chipping Norton, Thame, Witney, Henley, Bampton, Burford, and Watlington. The county is divided into nine Poor-law Unions—viz. those of Bampton, Banbury, Bicester, Chipping Norton, Headington, Henley, Thame, Witney, and Woodstock. There are seven County-Court districts—Oxford, Banbury, Woodstock, Bicester, Chipping Norton, Thame, and Witney. Oxfordshire is in the home military district and the Oxford circuit. The assizes are held at Oxford, where the county gaol and house of correction stand. Quarter sessions are held at Oxford and Banbury. Three representatives are returned to parliament by the county, two by the University, two by the city of Oxford, and one by Woodstock. The county election takes place at Oxford. The local government is vested in a lord-lieutenant, and custos, high sheriff, about 40 deputy-lieutenants, and 160 magistrates. The University has separate jurisdiction over its own members, and also exercises a superiority over the city of Oxford, which has a separate court of quarter sessions.—Oxfordshire is not the seat of any important manufactures. Blankets are made at Witney, shag at Banbury, and gloves and polished steel at Woodstock. Some lace-making is also carried on by the country women. There is a large printing establishment at Oxford, a great number of erudite books being annually printed by the University press. The chief railway in this shire is the Great Western, which, leaving its main trunk at Didcot, passes through Oxford on its way to Birmingham. Lines are now open from Oxford to Evesham, Worcester, Droitwich, Kidderminster, Dudley, and Wolverhampton. The London and North-Western has a branch line from Bletchley to Oxford, and a line has been lately opened from Thame through Shotover Hill to Oxford, running into the Great Western a little below Iffley. The principal roads are the following—viz. the road which enters the county at Henley-upon-Thames, running through Bensington and Dorchester to Oxford, and thence, by Burford and Witney, into Gloucestershire; the road which enters the shire near Stoken church, and runs by Tetworth and Shotover to Oxford, and thence by Woodstock and Chipping Norton to Gloucestershire; and the road to Birmingham, which, entering Oxfordshire between Aylesbury and Bicester, runs through Bicester and Banbury into Warwickshire.—This county contains several ruins of castles and religious edifices of the Anglo-Norman period, though none of them are of any great extent. Scarcely any traces are now extant of Oxford and Banbury Castles beside the mounds on which the keeps formerly stood, while Dorchester Castle has totally vanished. Slight ruins of Bampton Castle still exist. Broughton Castle, near Banbury, is surrounded by a deep and wide moat, crossed by a bridge, supported upon two arches. Several other portions, beside the old tower over the gateway, are still standing, to which some later buildings have been added. Other castellated mansions are Castleton, near Chipping Norton, the High Lodge at Woodstock, Asthall, near Witney, and in Holton Park, between Oxford and Stoken Church. There is a kitchen at Stanton Harcourt, near Bampton, resembling the Abbots' kitchen at Glastonbury. Minster Lovel House, near Witney, still preserves some traces of its formerly extensive pile. The principal ancient roads were Icknield Street, which passed by Watlington to Goring, on the banks of the Thames; Akeman-street, which passed by Bicester, Woodstock, Witney, and Burford; a road, running from Dorchester northward to Alchester; another in a north-westerly direction from London to Alchester; and, lastly, one which crossed the Chiltern hills from Henley to Wallingford. Dorchester, on the Thames, was probably the Dorocina of Richard of Cirencester. Traces still exist of Roman camps near Chadlington and Kiddington, of which the latter is in excellent preservation. At Stonesfield, Steeple Aston, and elsewhere in this county, remains of tesselated pavements, &c., have been exhumed. There are several memorials of the Saxon and Danish periods in the earthworks and encampments traceable in different parts of the county. The works at Dyke Hill, near Dorchester, consist of a double entrenchment, three-quarters of a mile in length. The vallum of the camp at Knollbury Banks, near Chadlington, is very steep, and is composed of rubble stone, cemented and coated with turf. At Mongewell, on the Thames, below Wallingford, is a high ridgeway, extending in the direction of Nuffield, near which the bank becomes double, with a deep trench between. It is called Grime's Dyke, or popularly, Devil's Ditch. There are several barrows in Oxfordshire, chiefly on the north-western side. The most important monastic remains are traces of Ensham and Oseney Abbeys, the Nunnery of Godstow, where the Fair Rosamond, mistress of Henry II., was educated; Goring Nunnery, and the Priories of Gogges and Minster-Lovell. Oxfordshire is rich in examples of church architecture; as, for instance, Dorchester church, and Oxford cathedral, together with most of the college chapels at Oxford. Among the lesser churches, many of which are partly Norman, may be named those at Burford, Cassington, Chipping Norton, Cuddesden, Hanborough, Hardwicke, Henley, Heythrop, Idbury, Iffley, Mongewell, Great Tew, Thame, and Westwell. The seats of the nobility and gentry in this county are very numerous, of which the following are most deserving of attention:—Blenheim, the seat of the Duke of Marlborough; Shirburn Castle, of the Earl of Macclesfield; Cuddesden Palace, of the Bishop of Oxford; Ditchley Hall, of Viscount Dillon; Broughton Castle, of Lord Saye and Sele; and Stonor Park, of Lord Camoys.

OXHEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Watford, hund. of Cashio, or lib. of St. Alban's, co. Herts, 2 miles S. of Watford. It is situated on the river Colne, near the line of the North-Western railway. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Rochester. An earthen vessel containing several Roman seals was found here.

OXHILL, a par. in the Kington div. of the hund. of Kington, co. Warwick, 4 miles S.W. of Kington, its post town, and 5 N.E. of Shipston-on-Stour. The village, which is of small extent, and is wholly agricultural, is situated in a valley through which flows a branch of the river Stour. The Warwickshire hounds meet in the neighbourhood. The tithes were commuted for land and an annual money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1797. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £254. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is an ancient stone structure with a low square tower containing three bells. The chancel has recently been restored, and has a stained E. window. There is a free school, also a Sunday-school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship, with a mixed school adjoining.

OXMANTOWN, a manor in the par. of Grangegorman, bars. of Dublin and Coolock, co. Dublin, 1 mile N.W. of Dublin city. It gives the inferior title of baron to the Earl of Rosse.

OX MOUNTAINS, a range of hills in the bars. of Leyney and Tireragh, co. Sligo, Ireland.

OXNA, an island in the par. of Tingwall, Shetland Islands, coast of Scotland. It is situated in Scalloway Bay, about 2 miles N.W. of Burray Island, and 5 N.W. of Leswick. Between this island and Burray is a passage leading to the bay.

OXNAM, a par. in the district of Jedburgh, co. Roxburgh, Scotland. It extends in length about 10 miles from N.W. to S.E., with an extreme breadth of 5 miles, and is bounded on the S. by England, and on the other sides by the pars. of Jedburgh, Southdean, Crailing, and Hounam. The surface is undulating, and many of the hills are clothed with verdure to their summits, affording excellent sheepwalks. The soil of the arable lands, which comprises about 3,500 acres, is of good quality. Sandstone, limestone, and trap are the prevailing rocks. The village of Oxnam is about 3 miles S.E. of Jedburgh. It is situated at the head of the rivers Jed and Coquet, under the Cheviot hills. The parish is traversed by the Roman road Watling Street, and by the Oxnam rivulet, which flows 12 miles N. to the river Teviot, near Crailing. Trout and salmon, and all kinds of game, are abundant. Oxnam was formerly called Oxenham, and has traces of Plenderleith old chapel, and of Dolphiston, Mossburnford, and Crag Border towers or peels. This par. is in the presb. of Jedburgh and synod of Mirse and Teviotdale, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £248. The parish church was erected in 1758. There is a parochial school.

OXNEAD, a par. in the hund. of South Erpingham, co. Norfolk, 9 miles from Norwich, its post town, and 3 S.E. of Aylsham. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on the N. banks of the river Bure, and is wholly agricultural. On the site of the blanket factory, which has been removed, a corn-mill has been erected. There is no village, only a few detached houses. The living is a rect. annexed with the vic.* of Buxton to the rect. of Skeyton, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure with a square embattled tower, and surrounded by trees. It contains monuments to the Pastons, of which the principal is one to Clement Paston, who built the old hall in the reign of Elizabeth. A portion of this mansion is still remaining, but has been converted into a farmhouse. The charities consist of Paston's hospital or almshouses.

OXNEY, a hund. in the lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, contains the pars. of Ebony, Stone, and Wittersham, comprising an area of 8,380 acres. It is chiefly marshy, and forms an island between the river Rother and the Kent Ditch.

OXNEY, formerly a par. in the hund. of Cornilo, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 2 miles N. of St. Margaret at Cliffe, and 5 N.E. of Dover. It is a small parish, having no village. The chief part of the land consists of unenclosed corn fields. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £113 12s., and the glebe consists of 4 acres. The church has long been in ruins. Oxney Court is the principal residence.

OXNEYFIELD, a hmlt. in the par. of Darlington, S.E. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, 2 miles S.W. of Darlington. It is situated on the river Tyne, near Hellkettles pools.

OXNOP, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Muker and par. of Grinton, North Riding co. York, 2 miles S.E. of Muker. It is situated in the moorlands under Skunner Fell, and near the river Swale.

OXON, a tnshp in the par. of St. Chad, co. Salop, 2 miles N.W. of Shrewsbury. It is in conjunction with Shelton.

OXSCARS, a dangerous reef in the Frith of Forth, co. Fife, Scotland, 3 miles E. by S. of Inverkeithing. It is situated in deep water, and is marked by a beacon.

OXSHOT, a hmlt. in the par. of Stoke D'Abernon, second div. of Elmbridge hund., co. Surrey, 1½ mile N.E. of Stoke D'Abernon, and 3 miles N.W. of Leatherhead. It is situated in the vale of the river Mole. There is a National school for both sexes, founded in 1820 by H.R.H. the late Duchess of Kent.

OXSPRING, a tnshp. in the par. of Penistone, wap. of Staincross, West Riding co. York, 1½ mile S.E. of Penistone. It contains the hmlts. of Roughbirchworth, Claysgreen, and Storrs. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. There are places of worship for the Independents and Wesleyans. G. W. B. Bosville, Esq., is lord of the manor.

OXTED, a par. in the first div. of the hund. of Tandridge, co. Surrey, 3 miles N.E. of Godstone, its post town, and 10 S.E. of Croydon. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. There is a brewery. Near two-thirds of the land is arable, the remainder meadow, pasture, and woodland, with about 47 acres of hop grounds. In the neighbourhood are numerous ponds. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £770, and the glebe comprises about 36 acres of land. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £624. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a square embattled tower and turret containing five bells. It was much damaged by fire in 1719, but has been repaired, and a new gallery put up on the S. side in 1838. The chancel contains two brasses of the 14th century. The parochial charities produce about £33 per annum. There are National and infant schools. An evening school for adults was erected at Hall Hill in 1837, at a cost of £400. The Baptists have a place of worship. Charles Legh Hoskins Master, Esq., and Edward Kelsey, Esq., are lords of the manor. At Barrow Green, in this parish, is a very large barrow.

OXTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Woodchurch, lower div. of the hund. of Wirrall, co. Chester, 2 miles W. of Birkenhead, its post town, and 7 N.E. of Great Neston. It is an increasing and prosperous village. A great portion of the houses are inhabited by Liverpool merchants. The soil is of a sandy nature. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £220, in the patron. of the Rector of Woodchurch. The church, dedicated to St. Saviour, is a modern stone edifice, with one bell. It contains two stained-glass windows. There is a National school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school. The Presbyterians have a place of worship. The Earl of Shrewsbury is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

OXTON, a par. in the S. div. of the wap. of Thurgarton, co. Nottingham, 5 miles S.W. of Southwell, its post town, and 5 N.W. of Lowdham railway station. The village, which is large, lies in an open vale on the south-eastern border of Sherwood Forest, but is said never to have been comprised within its limits. The parish is watered by the small river Dove, a branch of the river Trent. There are three burrows in the neighbourhood, one of which is 53 feet in diameter, and was explored in 1789. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in framework knitting and lace making, but the greater part in agriculture. The soil is chiefly a strong clay. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £170, and the prebendal farm pays £6 per annum to the vicar. The impropriation constitutes the endowment of two prebends, prima et secunda, in the collegiate church of Southwell. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £300, in the patron. of the Bishop of Ripon. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient stone edifice with a low tower containing four bells. It was restored and enlarged in 1841, at the cost of £700. The parochial charities produce about £34 per annum, of which £26 goes to Mrs. Sherbrooke's school for the free education of thirty children, and the remainder to the poor. There are places of worship for the Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists. Oxton Hall, the principal residence, is the seat of H. Sherbrooke, Esq., who is lord of the manor.

OXTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Tadcaster, York Ainsty, co. York, 1½ mile E. of Tadcaster, and 8 miles S.W. of York. It is situated near the bridge over the river Wharfe.

OXTON, a vil. in the par. of Channelkirk, co. Berwick, Scotland, 4½ miles N.W. of Lauder.

OXWICH, or OXWICK, a par. in the hund. of Swansea, co. Glamorgan, 11 miles S.W. of Swansea, its post town, and 2 from Penrice. The village, which is of small extent, is situated in Gower under Cefn-Bryn. On the coast is Oxwich Point, and at the W. angle of Oxwich Bay are the ruins of the six-storied tower which once formed part of the stronghold built by Sir R. Mansel, of Margam, in the 15th century. Here are also the ruins of Penrice Castle, and the modern mansion of C. R. Talbot, Esq., M.P. A short distance from the bay are the ruins of Pennarth Castle, built shortly after the conquest of Gowerland. The ruins consist of two round towers and portions of an embattled wall, being all that now remains. At Paviland are two limestone caves, in which were found many stalactites, fossil animal bones, and rare plants. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the shell fishery. In the middle of the bay, which has from three to ten fathoms of water, is an islet called St. Kit's Knoll. The living is a rect. with that of Nicholaston annexed, val. £224, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church, dedicated to St. Illtyd, is situated on the edge of the bay. It contains an altar tomb to Sir Rice Mansell, the founder of the castle mentioned above. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum.

OXWICK-CUM-PATTESLEY, a par. in the hund. of Launditch, co. Norfolk, 4 miles S.W. of Fakenham, its post town. This parish is joined to that of Pattesley, which is about 1 mile distant to the S. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. Two-thirds of the land is arable, the remainder pasture and meadow, and 35 acres of woodland. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £224, and the glebe comprises 35 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £234. The church has long been in ruins.

OYNE, or EEN, a par. in the district of Gariock, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 6 miles N.W. of Inverury and 25 from Aberdeen. It is a station on the Great North of Scotland railway. The par. is about 6 miles from S. to N., with an extreme breadth of 3½ miles. It is bounded by the pars. of Insch, Culsalmond, Rayne, Chapel-of-Garoich, Monymuck Keig, and Premnay. The surface is of a hilly nature, including a large portion of the Bennochie mountains, which extend across the parish betwixt the rivers Gadie and Don. It attains an altitude of 1,677 feet above sea level at Mother-Top, one of the six rounded summits. The arable land lies N. of the Bennochie mountains, and is of a rich and fertile character. Granite is the prevailing rock. It is watered by the rivers Don, Urie, Gadie, and Shevock, and is traversed across its northern district by the Great North of Scotland railway. On the N. skirt of Bennochie Mountain are ruins of Harthill Castle, which belonged to the Leith family. The par. is in the presb. of Gariock and synod of Aberdeen. The minister has a stipend of £161. The parish church was erected in 1807. There are a Free church and a parochial school. Pittodrie House and Tillyfour House are the principal residences.

OYNE, or INAGH, a small river of the co. of Clare, Ireland, rises under Slievecallan Mountain, and falls into Liscannor Bay, about 3 miles W. of Ennistimon.

OYSTER, a hmlt. in the bars. of Kinsale and Kinalea, co. Cork, Ireland, 3 miles E. of Kinsale harbour. It is situated on the coast, and has a small haven, off which lie two dangerous reefs called the Great and Little Sovereign rocks.

OYSTER HILLS, a low range of hills in the co. of Herts, near St. Alban's. On the summit is a camp formed by the Roman general Ostorius.

OYSTER ISLAND, an islet in the par. of Killaspicbrowne, bar. of Carbery, co. Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. It is situated in Sligo Bay, 3 miles N.W. of Sligo. It is nearly a mile long, and has a beacon and two fixed lights, put up in 1837, to guide vessels entering the harbour, which has four fathoms of water.

OYSTERMOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Swansea, co. Glamorgan, 4 miles S.W. of Swansea, its post town, and 10 from Llanelly. The village is situated on the Bristol Channel. It is a bathing place, and has considerably increased of late years. The par. contains the vils. of Mumbles, Newton, and Norton. Seated on an eminence, backed up by a huge cliff of limestone, are the ruins of Oystermouth Castle, which was founded by Henry Beaumont, or Richard de Granville, in the 11th century. A portion of the ruins have been restored at the expense of the Duke of Beaufort. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the lime-works and oyster fisheries. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David, val. £85. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has an embattled tower. The interior of the church contains a tomb to Bowdler, editor of the "Family Shakespeare." The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. There is a place of worship for the Independents. A tram rail is constructed to Swansea. Oystermouth being situated under a lofty limestone rock, the direct rays of the sun are excluded for three months out of the year.

OZENDIKE, a tnshp. in the par. of Rythor, lower div. of the wap. of Barkstone-Ash, West Riding co. York, 7 miles N.W. of Selby, on the river Wharfe.

OZENGELL, a tythg. in the par. of St. Lawrence, Isle of Thanet, and lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, near Ramsgate.

OZLEWORTH, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Berkeley, co. Gloucester, 5 miles E. of Charfield, 5 W. of Tetbury, and 3½ E. by S. of Wotton-under-Edge, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The soil is of a clayey and loamy nature, upon a subsoil of oolite. From the higher grounds a view is commanded of the cities of Bath and Bristol. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £116 10*s., and the glebe comprises 23 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £109. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient cruciform structure, with an octagonal tower containing one bell. Newark Park, the principal residence, formerly belonged to a monastery, and was restored in Edward VI.'s time with the stones which formed Kingswood Abbey. Lewis Clutterbuck, Esq., is lord of the manor.

P.

PABAY, an island in the par. of Strath, co. Inverness, Scotland, 3 miles N.E. of Broadford. It is situated on the E. side of Skye.

PABBA, an island in the par. of Barra, co. Inverness, Scotland, 4 miles S. of Watersay. It is situated in Pabba Sound. Its extent is about 2½ miles from E. to W., and 1½ mile from N. to S. Its surface is rocky and barren.

PABBAY, an island in the par. of Harris, Western Islands, coast of Scotland, 3 miles W. of Cape Difficulty. It is a small rocky island, about 3 miles in length by one broad, situated in Harris Sound, on the S. side of Lewis Island.

PABBAY, an island in the par. of Uig, co. Inverness, Scotland, 4 miles N.E. of Gallen Head. It is situated in Loch Bernera, on the W. side of Lewis Island.

PACKINGTON, a par. chiefly in the hund. of West Goscote, co. Leicester, but partly in the hund. of Repton, co. Derby, 1½ mile S.E. of Ashby-de-la-Zouch, its post town, and 17 miles N.W. of Leicester. The village, which is of large extent, and chiefly agricultural, was formerly a market town. The par. comprises the chplry. of Snibston. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the collieries. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £258. The church, dedicated to the Holy Rood, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing four bells. The church has been restored at different periods. There is also a chapel-of-ease at Snibston. The parochial charities produce about £59 per annum. There are a free school, and a National school for children of both sexes. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a place of worship. Packington House is the principal residence.

PACKINGTON, a hmlt. and lib. in the par. of Weeford, S. div. of Offlow hund., co. Stafford, 1½ mile N.W. of Weeford, and 3½ miles N.W. of Tamworth.

PACKINGTON-MAGNA, a par. in the Solihull div. of the hund. of Hemlingford, co. Warwick, 8 miles W. by N. of Coventry, its post town, and 2 from the Hampton Junction station of the London and North-Western railway. It is situated on the river Blyth, and is wholly agricultural. There is a quarry of red sandstone. Packington Hall, the seat of the Earl of Aylesford, is situated in a park embellished with wood and water. There is no village, only a few straggling farmhouses. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £180, and the vicarial for £240. The glebe contains 46 acres valued at £70 per annum. The living is a vic.* with the rect. of Little Packington annexed, in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £212 and £66 respectively. The church, dedicated to St. James, was rebuilt in 1789 after the model of the temple at Pæstum. It is situated in the park, and contains two bells. The parochial charities produce about £21 per annum. There is a small school, which is partly endowed. The Earl of Aylesford is lord of the manor.

PACKINGTON-PARVA, a par. in the Solihull div. of the hund. of Hemlingford, co. Warwick, 1 mile W. of Packington Magna, and 9 miles W. by N. of Coventry, its post town. It is a small village, having no high road or traffic through it. The parish is intersected by the river Blyth. The tithes were commuted for land and corn-rents under an Enclosure Act in 1818. The living is a rect.* annexed to the vic. of Packington-Magna, in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £66. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is an ancient structure, with a square wooden tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum, of which 10*s.* is Shakspeare's bequest for the poor. The Earl of Stamford is lord of the manor.

PACKWOOD, a par. in the Warwick div. of the hund. of Kington, co. Warwick, 4¾ miles N.E. of Henley-in-Arden, its post town, and 3 S. of the Knowle railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the Stratford canal, and is wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £318 10*s., and the glebe comprises 30 acres. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £174. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is an ancient edifice. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. Packwood House, the principal residence, is said to have been originally built in the 14th century, and has in the gardens some trees planted at the time of the Crusades. P. Wykeham Martin, Esq., is lord of the manor.

PADANARUM, a vil. in the par. of Kerriemuir, co. Forfar, Scotland, 1 mile S.E. of Kerriemuir.

PADBURY, a par. in the hund. and parliamentary borough of Buckingham, co. Bucks, 2¼ miles S. by E.

of Buckingham, its post town, and 4 N.W. of Winslow. The village, which is of small extent and chiefly agricultural, is situated near the bridge over the river Ouse. A portion of the female inhabitants is engaged in lace-making. The road from Buckingham to London passes through the village. About half the parish is leasehold, under All Souls' College, Oxford. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1795. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £100. The church, dedicated to St. Matthew, is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing six bells. The church was restored and repewed in 1830. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum, realised chiefly from Church lands. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans, Independents, and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. A statute fair for hiring farm servants is held on the 13th of October.

PADDINGTON, a par. and suburban district of London, in the Holborn div. of the hund. of Ossulstone, and borough of Marylebone, co. Middlesex, 3 miles W. by N. of St. Paul's. It is the terminus of the Great Western railway, and the junction station of the Metropolitan line, which, like the Great Western, is constructed on the broad gauge, so that trains can run through from the one line to the other. Here is also the basin of the Paddington canal, with extensive wharves and warehouses on its banks, and which communicates with all the principal canals in the kingdom, and by means of the Regent's canal joins the Thames at Limehouse. The par., which lies between the Edgware and Uxbridge roads, comprises the populous suburban districts of Bayswater, Maida Hill, Westbourne Green, and Craven Hill, and is divided into the following ecclesiastical districts,—All Saints', Christ Church, Holy Trinity, St. John's, St. Mary's, and St. Saviour's. It contains an area of 1,220 acres, with a population in 1861 of 75,784. In the Saxon times it appears to have been a small agricultural village, and was given by King Edgar to the Abbey of Westminster, and at the Dissolution it was appropriated by Henry VIII. towards the endowment of the then newly founded bishopric of Westminster, since the abolition of which, in the reign of Edward VI., it has belonged to the see of London, under which it is leased to the Thystlewaites of Southwick, for less than one-fourth of its present rental. The town consists principally of numerous modern streets and squares, built on a very large scale, including Cambridge, Connaught, Gloucester, Hyde Park, Oxford, and Sussex squares. It is partially paved and lighted with gas, and is well supplied with water from the West Middlesex waterworks. Amongst the principal public buildings are the terminus of the Great Western railway; St. Mary's Hospital, built in 1850 by Hopper, at a cost of over £30,000; a dispensary, savings-bank, union poorhouse, and Cockerell's almshouses, besides the places of worship mentioned below. It is within the jurisdiction of the magistrates acting for the metropolis, and under the superintendence of the metropolitan police. The parish church, which was formerly a chapel-of-ease to St. Margaret's, Westminster, was originally founded by Sir Joseph Sheldon, lessee of the manor, about the year 1700. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of London, val. £1,200, in the patron. of the bishop. The present church, dedicated to St. James, occupies the site of a more ancient one on the green, and was rebuilt by Wapshott in 1791 for £6,000. It is a substantial building of brick, with a Doric portico on the S. side, and a cupola, and has the tombs of John Marquis of Lansdowne, Mrs. Siddons, Dr. Geddes, the Biblical translator, Bryan, author of the "Dictionary of Painters," and other celebrities. In the old church of St. James, Hogarth was married to Thornhill's daughter. In addition to the parish church are the following district churches—St. John's, St. Michael's, St. Mary's with St. Philip's, Holy Trinity, All Saints', Christ Church, St. Saviour's, St. Mary Magdalene's, St. Stephen's with St. Luke's and St. Thomas's, and St. Matthew's, Bayswater, the livings of which are all perpet. curs., varying in val. from £1,000 to £150. St. John's church, in Southwick Crescent, was erected in 1831 at a cost of near £9,000, and has a campanile turret, and a stained window. Holy Trinity church, situated in Westbourne Terrace, was built by T. Cundy, and has a crocketed spire. The other churches are all modern. There are places of worship for Baptists, Wesleyans, Roman Catholics, and other Dissenting congregations; also National and other schools. The parochial charities, arising chiefly from land and tenements, amount to about £350. See LONDON.

PADDINGTON, a vil. in the par. and city of Manchester, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, about 1 mile from Manchester, of which it is a suburb. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £300, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately.

PADDINGTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Dorking, co. Surrey, 3 miles W. by S. of Dorking. It is situated on a small stream, a feeder of the river Wey.

PADDLESWORTH, a par. in the hund of Loningborough, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 4 miles N.W. of the Folkestone railway station, and 3 from Hythe, its post town. It is small, having no village, but only a few scattered houses. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £90. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* and rect. of Lyminge, in the dioc. of Canterbury. The church, dedicated to St. Oswald, is a small ancient edifice. The parochial charities consist of a share with Lyminge. David Brice, Esq., is lord of the manor.

PADDLESWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Larkfield, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 4 miles N.W. of Maidstone, 6 S.W. of Rochester, and 1 mile W. of Snodland, to which par. it is joined. The living is a rect., united at an early period to that of Snodland. There is no church, and the inhabitants have attended at that of Snodland since the reign of Elizabeth. A rent-charge of £8 10*s.* is paid to the impropriator.

PADDOCK BOWER, an islet in Loch Leven, co. Kinross, Scotland.

PADDOCKS, THE, an ext. par. place in the wap. of Corringham, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln.

PADDOCK-WITH-MARSH, a tnshp. in the par. of Huddersfield, upper div. of the wap. of Agbrigg, West Riding co. York, ½ mile W. of Huddersfield, of which it is a populous suburb. The inhabitants are employed in the woollen manufacture, which is extensively carried on. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Huddersfield. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a square embattled tower, and was erected in 1830 at a cost of £2,500 by grant from the Parliamentary Commissioners. There is a National school and several Dissenting places of worship in the township.

PADDOCK-WOOD, in the weald of Kent, 6 miles E. by S. of Tonbridge. It is a junction station on the South-Eastern Railway, where the branch line to Maidstone turns off. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £235.

PADESWOOD, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Leeswood, par. of Mold, co. Flint, 3 miles S.E. of Mold. It is a station on the Mold branch of the Chester and Holyhead railway.

PADFIELD, a tnshp. in the par. of Glossop, hund. of High Peak, co. Derby, 1½ mile N.W. of Glossop, and 9 miles N. by W. of Chapel-en-le-Frith. It is situated on the Manchester and Sheffield railway. There are paper mills, cloth, thread, and cotton-yarn works, which together employ the chief portion of the inhabitants.

PADGATE, a vil. in the par. of Warrington, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 2 miles from Warrington. It is situated near the river Mersey and the Lankey and Bridgwater canals, and has been recently formed into a separate ecclesiastical district. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £120, in the patron. of the Rector of Warrington. The church is a modern structure.

PADIHAM, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Whalley, higher div. of the hund. of Blackburn, co.

Lancaster, 3 miles N.W. of Burnley, its post town, and 1½ mile from the Rosgrove railway station, on the E. section of the Lancashire and Yorkshire line. The village, which is large, is situated on the banks of the river Calder, and on the road from Burnley to Clitheroe. A large portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the cotton mills. There are collieries and stone-quarries. The land is chiefly in pasture. The soil is of a heavy clay, with a subsoil of shale. The Leeds and Liverpool canal passes through the chapelry. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £131. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing six bells. The chancel has a painted window. The church was enlarged in 1777, and again in 1822. The register dates from Queen Elizabeth's time. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum. There are a British and two National schools for both sexes, the latter endowed with an annuity of £30. The Baptists, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship, with Sunday-schools attached. The Duke of Buccleuch is lord of the manor. An annual fair is held on the 12th of August for pedlery, and cattle fairs in May and September.

PADLEY, NETHER, a hmlt. in the par. of Hope, hund. of High Peak, co. Derby, 6 miles N.E. of Bakewell, and 2½ N.E. of Stoney-Middleton. It is situated on the river Derwent.

PADNALL HALL, an ancient seat in Hainault Forest, co. Essex, 2 miles W. of Romford.

PADSIDE, a hmlt. in the par. of Hampsthwaite, lower div. of the wap. of Claro, West Riding co. York, 8 miles W. of Ripley. It is situated near the river Washburn, and is in conjunction with Thornthwaite. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship.

PADSTOW, a par., seaport, post, and market town in the hund. of Pyder, co. Cornwall, 6 miles W. of Wadebridge, 8 N. of St. Columb, and 14 W. by N. of Bodmin. It is situated near the coast of the Bristol Channel, at the mouth of the river Camel, the entrance to the harbour being about 2 miles distant to the E. It is a coastguard station and petty sessions town, and was formerly called Lodenek, Aldestowe, and Petroestowe, this last being named after St. Petroc, who founded a monastery here in the early part of the 6th century. It was visited by King Athelstane in his progress through Cornwall in 932, and was burnt by the Danes in 981, when the priory was removed to Bodmin. In the reign of Edward III. the town provided vessels for the siege of Calais. The town was incorporated in the 25th year of the reign of Queen Elizabeth; but about the middle of the 17th century, the municipal rights having lapsed by desuetude, the borough was placed under the county magistrates. The streets are roughly paved, and the town is plentifully supplied with water. The population of the parish in 1861 was 2,489. There are many well-built houses and shops, roofed with blue slate, also a library institution. Ship-building is carried on to a considerable extent. A large coasting trade is done in coals, malt, and corn; also a large and increasing trade with America and the Baltic. Previously to the 16th century, the harbour was considered one of the finest on the western coast of England; but from the accumulation of sand it became almost choked up. At the commencement of the present century considerable improvements were made, and the piers were reconstructed in 1854, so as to take a greater depth of water within them. The land is principally arable, including the cultivated vale to the E. of the town; but in the immediate vicinity, nature assumes a severity and boldness of character seldom met with in the S. of England. The cliffs are of black granite, presenting curious specimens of geological formation. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £202. The church, dedicated to St. Petroc, is an ancient stone structure, erected at different periods, with a tower containing six bells. The church has several painted windows, a font, and curious pulpit, and an old brass, bearing date 1421; it has been recently restored at the expense of Miss Brune. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £245. The parochial charities produce about £80 per annum, distributed yearly to the poor not receiving parochial aid. There is a National school for both sexes, beside another school for girls and infants, which is entirely supported by the Brune family. The Wesleyans, Baptists, and Bible Christians have each a place of worship, with Sunday-school in connection with each. The old parochial festivities of Christmas and May-day are attended with many singular customs, traditionally connected with the early history of the place. To the N.W. of the town are the grounds of Padstow Place, the old seat of the Prideaux family, to whom the manor was given at the dissolution of Bodmin Priory, and of which family was the learned Dr. Humphrey Prideaux, Dean of Norwich, born here in 1648. On the S. side of the town are the plantations Saunders Hill, commanding a varied prospect. Of the eight religious houses once existing here, two within the town and six within the parish, but few traces now remain. Market day is on Saturday, chiefly for meat and provisions. Fairs are held on the 18th April and 21st September.

PADWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Theale, co. Berks, 9 miles S.W. of Reading, its post town. It is a small straggling village, situated on the southern part of the county, near the river Kennet. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The Hungerford branch of the Great Western railway passes through the village, and the Kennet and Avon canal at its northern extremity. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £250. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £240. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient structure. The chancel, which is apsidal, is separated from the nave by a Norman arch. The parochial charities produce about £17 per annum. Padworth House, the principal residence, is situated a short distance from the village. It has armorial bearings in the windows, and was formerly the seat of the Fosters. Darby Griffiths, Esq., is lord of the manor. There are traces of an ancient earthwork, called Gryme's Bank, supposed to be of Saxon origin.

PAGEFOLD, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Bashall Eaves, par. of Milton, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.W. of Clitheroe. It is situated near the Lancashire border.

PAGE STREET, a hmlt. in the par. of Edgware, co. Middlesex, 1 mile E. of Edgware. The principal residence is Copt Hall, the seat of the Nicholls family.

PAGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Aldwick, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 7 miles S. by E. of Chichester, its post town, and 4 S.W. of Bognor. The village, which is considerable, is situated near Pagham harbour, an estuary about a mile wide, formed by an irruption of the sea, in the beginning of the 17th century. The parish is bounded on the S. by the English Channel, and is chiefly agricultural. It comprises the tythgs. of Aldwick, South Mundham, and Nytimber; and the hmlts. of Lagness and Rose Green. Along the coast are many modern marine villas, commanding extensive views. The soil is generally a strong loam, producing heavy wheat crops. The manor at the time of the Domesday Survey belonged to the Archbishops of Canterbury, who had a palace here, but was given by Cranmer to Henry VIII. The foundations and moat of the palace, once the favourite seat of Thomas-à-Becket, may still be seen at a short distance from the church. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £300, in the patron. of the Archbishop of Canterbury. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket, is a cruciform structure, with a tower at the N.W. end of the W. front, surmounted with a shingled spire, enlarged in the reign of Henry III., and to a great extent rebuilt in 1837. It has an E. window, ornamented with columns, mouldings, and filled with ancient stained glass, containing representations of the Nativity, the Adoration of the Magi, and the Circumcision. There is a National school for children of both sexes.

PAGHILL, a tnshp. in the par. of Paul, S. div. of Holderness wap., East Riding co. York, 2 miles S.E. of Hedon. It is situated near the river Humber, and on the cliffs is a lighthouse, 36 feet high, put up in 1836.

PAGLESHAM, or PAKLESHAM, a par. in the hund. of Rochford, co. Essex, 5 miles N.E. of Rochford, its post town, and 9 N.E. of Southend. The village, which is of small extent, is situated between the rivers Crouch and Bromhill, and is chiefly agricultural. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the native oyster-fishery, and large quantities of oysters are exported to France. The par. includes the western portion of Wallisea island. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £560, and the glebe comprises 18 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £521, in the patron. of the Bishop of Peterborough. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a tower containing three bells. The charities produce about £27 per annum. There is a National school; also a rectory-house, recently erected. The manor was given by Ingulf to Westminster Abbey in 1066.

PAIGNTON, a par. and market town in the hund. of Haytor, co. Devon, 6 miles E. of Totnes, its post town, and 2¾ N.E. of Torquay. It is a station on the Torquay branch of the South Devon railway. It is a watering-place, situated on the coast of Torbay, at its western extremity, and small vessels can approach within half a mile of the town. The par., which is extensive, comprises the hmlts. of Preston, Fernham, Goodrington, Yalberton, Collaton-Kirkham, and Blagdon. The manor was formerly held in demesne by the bishops of Exeter, who had a seat here, some fragments of which are still to be seen. The town, of late years, has greatly improved, and now contains many good shops, a reading-room, and commodious lodging-houses. In 1848 a pier was constructed at an outlay of £5,000, for the loading and unloading of small vessels of 150 tons. It is a coastguard station. Petty sessions are held on the first Thursday in every month, at the Crown and Anchor hotel. The Torquay and Dartmouth turnpike trust meets at the same place on the second Thursday in every month. Paignton is celebrated for the salubrity of its air, and is a favourite resort for invalids. The neighbourhood abounds in extensive orchards, from which its far-famed cider is produced; cabbages are also grown to great perfection. Bathing-machines are to be had on the beach. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Marldon annexed, in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £665. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient stone edifice, with a square tower containing a clock and six bells. It has a carved stone pulpit, a screen of tabernacle work, and several monuments. The parochial charities produce about £110 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes; also two other endowed schools, one with an annuity of £20, and the other £4. The Independents, Reformed Wesleyans, Baptists, and Plymouth Brethren, have each a place of worship. There are Sunday and day schools for the Independents. Among the principal residences are Barkham, Primley, Parkfield, Steartfield House, and Red Cliff Tower. J. G. J. Templer, Esq., is lord of the manor. A market for cattle and sheep is held every third Monday in each month. An annual fair is held on Whit-Tuesday.

PAILTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Monks-Kirby, Kirby div. of Knightlow hund., co. Warwick, 1 mile S.E. of Monks-Kirby, and 5 miles N.W. of Rugby.

PAINESTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Lower Duleek, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Slane, its post town. This par. is about 3 miles long by 1½ mile in extreme breadth, and contains the vil. of Yellowfurze. The surface, which extends along the bank of the river Boyne, consists of a good soil, and is intersected by the road from Navan to Drogheda. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with another, £425, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church, which is an ancient structure, was repaired and enlarged in 1823 by aid of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Black-Lion. There is a day school. Dollardstown and Beauparc are the principal residences. The former belongs to the Meredyth family. Stone is quarried here, and copper has been found.

PAINESTOWN, a par. partly in the bar. and co. of Carlow, and partly in the bar. of Kilkea, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N. of Carlow, its post town. The par. is 2 miles long, and 1½ mile broad. The surface extends along the left bank of the river Barrow. The soil is indifferent, though well cultivated. It is traversed by the road from Carlow to Athy. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. £21, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1834. Oak-Park and New-Garden House are the chief residences.

PAINLEY HILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Leigh, co. Stafford, 3 miles S.W. of Cheadle. It is situated on a branch of the river Trent.

PAINSCASTLE, a hund. in the co. of Radnor, contains the pars. of Boughrood, Bryngwyn, Clyro, Llanbedr-Painscastle, Llandewyfach, Llandilo-Graban, Llanstephan, Llowes, Michaelchurch, Newchurch, and part of Glasbury.

PAINSCASTLE-LLANBEDR. See LLANBEDR, co. Radnor.

PAINSFORD, a chplry. in the par. of Ashprington, hund. of Coleridge, co. Devon, 3 miles S.E. of Totnes. It is situated on the river Hareborne, a tributary of the Dart. The chapel, which was dedicated to St. David, has long been in ruins. There is a mineral spring.

PAINSHAW, or PENSHER, a district par. and tnshp. in the par. of Houghton-le-Spring, N. div. of Easington ward, co. Durham, 9 miles from Durham, its post town, and 3 N.E. of Houghton-le-Spring. It is a station on the Durham Junction branch of the North-Eastern railway. The village, which is large, is situated on the river Wear. The par. includes the tnshps. of Pensher, Offerton, South Biddick, Bourn-Moor, part of Newbottle, and the hmlt. of Shiney-Row. On Pensher Hill, a short distance from the village, is a monument, erected to the late Earl of Durham in 1844. There are extensive stone-quarries, collieries, and iron-works. The soil is principally clay. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £380, in the patron. of the Bishop of Manchester. The church has a tower containing one bell and a clock. The register dates from 1754. There is a school, chiefly supported by the Marchioness of Londonderry. The Wesleyans and Wesleyan Reformers have each a place of worship. There are news and reading-rooms in the village. The Earl of Durham is lord of the manor.

PAINSHILL, a park in the second div. of the hund. of Copthorne, co. Surrey, 4 miles N.W. of Leatherhead, and 14 N.E. of Guildford. It is situated about 3 miles from the 14th arched bridge over the river Mole, and was the seat of the late Earl of Carhampton. The grounds were laid out by the Hon. C. Hamilton, and include a forest of pines.

PAINSTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Kirby-under-Dale, in the East Riding co. York, 6 miles N. of Pocklington.

PAINSWICK, a par., post, and market town in the hund. of Bisley, co. Gloucester, 3½ miles N.E. of Stroud railway station, and 6 S.E. of Gloucester. It is situated near the line of the Bristol and Birmingham railway, and the high roads from Cheltenham to Bath, and from Stroud to Gloucester, pass through it. The par. contains, besides the town of its own name, the tythgs. of Edge, Spoonbed, Shepscomb, Stroud End, and the hmlt. of Slad. The manor is mentioned in Domesday-Book as Wiche, among the possessions of Roger de Lacy, and the prefix to its name came from Pain Fitz-John, one of its subsequent proprietors. It afterwards became the property of the Kingstons and Jerninghams. It is governed by constables and tythingmen, chosen annually at the court-leet of the lord of the manor. The town, which stands on the declivity of Spoonbed Hill, is well built, and presents an uniform and substantial appearance, the houses being chiefly built of white stone, the produce of the neighbouring quarries. On the summit of Spoonbed Hill is Kimsbury Roman encampment, with a double entrenchment, and at the foot runs a branch of the Stroud river. From the heights above the town an extensive view of the Severn valley is obtained. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the manufacture of woollen cloth, although comparatively on the decline. There are quarries of freestone and weather-stone in the vicinity. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture, besides 680 acres of woodland. In the reign of Edward VI., Sir Anthony Kingston, their knight-marshal, being lord of the manor of Painswick, caused a gallows to be erected on Shepscomb Green, in this parish, for the execution of insurgents, and gave three plots of land in his lordship, since called "Gallows' lands," for the purpose of keeping in readiness a gallows, two ladders and halters, besides a field held by the tythingman of Shepscomb for the time being, as hangman, and still known by the appellation of "Hangman's acre." The impropriate tithes belong to the landowners. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £449. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is chiefly remarkable for the incongruous combination of the Grecian and English styles. It has a tower surmounted by a lofty spire, and containing a peal of twelve bells. The church contains tombs of the Jerninghams, to whom the manor belonged in the reign of Elizabeth, and an altar-piece. There are also district churches at Shepscomb and Slad, the livings of both which are perpet. curs.,* val. £135 and £130 each. The parochial charities produce about £66 per annum. There is a grammar-school, founded in 1724, by Giles Smith, and known as the Painswick commercial, mathematical, and classical school, with an endowment of £60 per annum; also the united, National, and free, and a British school, which last belongs to the Dissenters. The Independents, Baptists, Primitive Methodists, and the Society of Friends have each a place of worship. Painswick House and Painswick Grove are the principal residences. C. T. Croome, Esq., is lord of the manor. Market day is on Tuesday. Fairs are held on Tuesday in Whitsun week, and on the 19th of September, chiefly for cattle and sheep; and a large market on the first Tuesday after All Saints' Day (old style) for sheep, but this last is now much reduced.

PAISLEY, a market and important manufacturing town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the upper ward co. Renfrew, Scotland, 3 miles S.S.W. of Renfrew, and 7 W. by S. of Glasgow. It is the junction station of the Glasgow and South-Western and Glasgow and Greenock railways; there is also a short line of 3 miles connecting the town with the steamboat pier on the bank of the Clyde, a little above the mouth of the Cart. The port of Paisley is only a river port, and ranks as a creek to the port of Glasgow. A considerable traffic is carried on by means of the river Cart, which was rendered navigable at the close of the last century, and has recently been deepened and improved, so that vessels of 180 tons can now ascend to the town, where ship-building is carried on. The Glasgow, Paisley, and Ardrossan canal connects the town with Glasgow by water, and a short canal, opened in 1839, affords direct access to the Forth and Clyde canal by vessels from Paisley; yet all these improvements have failed to render Paisley a port of any considerable consequence, and are now partially superseded by the several lines of railway, which afford more ready access to all parts of the kingdom. Though Paisley has only become a place of much importance in modern times, it is of very ancient date, and is generally supposed to occupy the site of the Roman station Vanduaria, or Vanduara, mentioned by Ptolemy. About the end of the 17th century a large Roman camp was distinctly traceable, and one of the principal streets in the town is still called Causewayside, probably in allusion to the Roman causeway, which branched from the great Clydesdale road at Glasgow, and passing the Clyde at a ford which existed till 1772, went across the country to Paisley. This place appears to have been the farthest Roman station to the W., though traces of roads, coins, and other antiquities have been found farther inland. After the departure of the Romans the town, however, appears to have been entirely swept away, for in the grant made by King Malcolm IV., in 1157, to Walter Fitz-Alan, High-Steward of Scotland, confirming a previous grant of this district by King David, no mention is made of any village or monastery. At this time the district was designated Passeleth, which subsequently was spelled Passelay and Paslay, and in the 18th century took its present form of Paisley. The priory, afterwards so famous, is said to have been founded in 1163 by the above-named Walter on the eastern bank of the Cart, and in 1219 Pope Honorius raised it into an abbey. Under the protection of the monastery there arose a small town on the opposite bank of the Cart, inhabited chiefly by the retainers and "kindly tenants" of the monks, to whom it belonged. In 1488 the town was erected into a free burgh of barony by James IV., but for several centuries appears to have made but little progress, as its population at the close of the 17th century was only 2,200. It had, however, even at this time, a considerable trade with the Highlands, which it supplied with coal and lime in exchange for timber, slates, and fish, and shortly afterwards the manufactures of linen and muslin were introduced with great success. At this time the town lay solely on the W. bank of the river, and consisted merely of one principal street, with a few straggling lanes branching off to the right and left. It is now the fifth town of Scotland in population and commercial importance, and is the political capital of the upper ward of Renfrewshire. Though Renfrew is the county town, Paisley has long been the seat of the sheriffs' courts, and is increasing rapidly in importance and population. —The present town occupies an advantageous site on either bank of the White Cart, about three miles above the confluence of the United White and Black Cart with the Clyde, and at the point where the Glasgow and South-Western and Glasgow and Greenock railways fork from their common main-trunk line. It consists of an old and a new town, the former lying on the W., or left bank, and the latter on the E., or right bank, of the Cart, but connected by three stone bridges, each of two arches, and the railway viaduct which crosses the river between the Sneddon and Old bridges, the former being that nearest the harbour. The old town of Paisley is situated on and around the gentle ridge of hills westward of the Cart, occupying an area of about 1 square mile, and commanding a panoramic view of the vicinity, including the Gleniffer braes, celebrated in the poems of Tannahill, and the western environs of Glasgow, with the rich Strath of Clyde and the spurs of the Grampians in the distance. The main streets are broad and well edificed, but the houses are less handsome than those either of Edinburgh or Glasgow. The High-street, running from E. to W. for about 2 miles, forms part of the road from Glasgow to Beith, and is crossed at right angles by another line of streets forming part of the road from Inchinnan to Neilston. But the most spacious streets are George and Forbes' streets, which are both modern; intermediate between these streets are numerous winding and narrow thoroughfares, forming part of the original town, mainly lined by rows of low, thatched dwellings, sometimes closely packed together, and at other times interspersed with gardens and plots of open ground. The new town is built upon a regular plan, occupying a level site on the opposite or eastern bank of the river, where were formerly the monastic gardens. It was commenced in 1779 by James Earl of Abercorn, the chief heritor, and comprises numerous uniform streets designated from the trades of the inhabitants, as Cotton, Gauze, Muslin, and Thread streets. Adjoining both the old and new towns are extensive suburbs, chiefly inhabited by the working population. The suburbs of the old town are Charleston, Dovesland, and Lylesland, on the S.; Ferguslie, Maxwelton, and Millerston on the W.; Seedhill, on the same side of the river as the new town, but forming part of the original burgh, besides the suburbs of the new town, Croft, Smith-hills, Wallneuk, and Williamsburgh. The principal public buildings are the county hall, situated near the centre of the town, on the western bank of the Cart, between the Old and Sneddon bridges. It was built in 1818 at the cost of near £30,000, assessed on the county, and faces the old market-place, where stood the original court-house, the steeple of which is still standing. Its general form is quadrangular, and its style of architecture castellated, with projecting hexagonal turrets on its front, presenting an unpleasing appearance externally, though £10,000 has recently been expended in enlarging and improving the pile. It comprises a court-house, council-chamber, assembly-hall, and different public offices on one side, and the common gaol, bridewell, prison chapel, and domestic offices on the other. Near the county hall, and in the same style of architecture, is the railway station. The coffee and reading rooms, also adjoining the market-place, have Ionic pilasters in front, and in the entrance-hall the bust of Professor Wilson, by Fillan. In a different part of the town, near the High Church, is the Neilson Institution, built in the form of a Greek cross and surmounted by a dome, visible from nearly all parts of the town. The house where Professor Wilson, the eminent moral philosopher, was born, is in High-street, and that of the poet Tannahill in Castle-street, but the house of Alexander Wilson, in the suburb of Seedhill, has recently been demolished. There are an Athenæum, instituted in 1847, a literary association in 1850, a mechanics' institute, with library and baths, founded in 1847, a public library, established in 1802, and containing near 11,000 volumes, a young men's Christian association, the Renfrewshire Agricultural Society, Merchants' Society, instituted in 1725, two savings-banks, branch offices of the Bank of Scotland, the British Linen Company's Bank, the Union Bank, the Western Bank, and the City of Glasgow Bank, also the office of the British Guarantee Association, fifty insurance agencies, and nine trades' societies, besides numerous religious and charitable associations. The number of houses, according to the census of 1861, within the borough was 2,592, inhabited by 10,351 separate families, comprising 47,406 individuals.—The prosperity of the town has been greatly influenced, at various periods, by the success or decline of its staple manufactures, which have, perhaps, been more varied in character, and subject to greater vicissitudes, than those of any other manufacturing town in the United Kingdom. In 1707 the principal articles made in the town were coarse linen and chequered linen cloths, to which succeeded chequered linen handkerchiefs and striped muslins, called bengals. Afterwards fabrics of a lighter texture were introduced, such as lawns—plain, striped, and richly figured—and sewing-thread. The former of these manufactures had increased at the end of the last century to the value of £165,000 yearly, and the latter to about £60,000; but the former is now extinct, and the latter has been exchanged for cotton-thread, which, before the cotton famine, employed 10 factories and 2,000 persons, the thread made being valued at £250,000 yearly. About the middle of the 18th century the manufacture of silk gauze was also introduced, and prosecuted with such vigour that in a short time it surpassed Spitalfields in the richness and variety of its silk goods, which were estimated at the value of £350,000 yearly, and were largely exported to Paris and other continental cities. Towards the close of the last century the silk manufacture partially declined, but revived again in 1819, and is still very considerable, supplying nearly all the silk gauzes used in England not imported from France. Muslins were until recently extensively manufactured here, but the trade has been transferred to Glasgow, and the manufactures of crape dresses and damask and embroidered shawls, in imitation of those brought from China, introduced in its stead. The staple manufactures are now shawls of silk, cotton, silk and cotton mixed, and Cashmere shawls of fine wool, imported expressly from Germany and Australia, also chenille and Canton crape shawls, handkerchiefs, woollen plaids, scarfs, tartan cloths, embroidered carpets, and similar kinds of the finest woollen fabrics. There are besides a silk-throwing mill, several cotton mills, extensive dye-works, bleachfields, and printing mills, also iron and brass foundries, machine works, a yard at which iron river-steamers are built, timber yards, flour-mills, two large soap-works, a tannery, several breweries and distilleries. Handloom weaving, formerly so extensively practised, has recently been almost superseded by the power-loom, which change has thrown great numbers of weavers out of employ, insomuch that in 1840 one-third of the entire population are said to have been dependent on public charity; but these changes and depressions of trade rather indicate the variations of fashion than any permanent declension of the manufactures of Paisley.—The town is governed by a provost and 15 councillors, of whom 4 are bailies. It returns one member to the imperial parliament, and had in 1855 a constituency of 1,186. It is well paved, lighted by gas, and has an abundant supply of pure water from the Stanley-braes water-works, which cost £60,000, and are under the management of the town council.—The ancient boundaries of the original burgh were far more limited than the present parliamentary and municipal boundaries, which include 6 square miles, comprising the 3 town pars. called High church, Middle church, and Low church, or St. George's, besides a large agricultural district forming the par. of Abbey Paisley [which see]. These pars., together with 8 others in the same county, constitute the presb. of Paisley, in the synod of Glasgow and Ayr. There are likewise a Free Church presb. of Paisley, with 15 congregations, an United Presbyterian presb. of Paisley and Greenock, with 28 congregations, and a Reformed Presbyterian presb. of Paisley, with 8 congregations. The Abbey par. of Paisley has continued since 1641 to be a collegiate charge in two divs., the stipend of the first minister being £376, and of the second £363, and the unappropriated teinds £1,615 17*s.* 10*d.* The other pars., designated the High, Middle, and Low (or St. George's) churches, are all single charges, the stipends of each being £230, payable out of the burgh funds, and all in the gift of the town council. There are likewise within the burgh limits a quoad sacra parochial charge attached to the Gaelic church, but without defined limits, a chapel-of-ease charge of the Martyrs' church, and missionary charges of the North and South churches. Of all the ecclesiastical edifices in Paisley the most interesting object is the Abbey church, which was repaired in the last century, and is now used as the parish church of the Abbey parish. This was originally built in 1163, but was burnt by the English in 1307. On its ruins a larger structure was raised, but the greater part of the existing buildings was designed by Abbot Thomas Tarver, in the middle of the 15th century, and completed by his successor Abbot George Shaw, who died in 1499. The church, which when entire appears to have been built in the form of a Latin cross, consisted of a nave, a tower and steeple, a choir, and a northern transept with the chapel popularly known as "the sounding aisle," or more correctly St. Mirren's. The entire edifice was 265 feet in length externally, and the nave 93 feet by 60 in breadth, the transept internally measured 92½ feet by 35, with a choir 124 feet by 32. The steeple as well as the choir has disappeared, and the transept is only an interesting ruin. The main body, however, consisting of a nave and two aisles, separated from it by ten clustered columns, still remains, and forms the present parish church. Adjoining the nave on the S. side is a quadrangle called the cloister court, from which is an entrance into the Sounding Aisle, 48 feet long by 24 broad, so-called from its powerful echo, and containing an ancient tomb surmounted by the recumbent figure of a woman, said to represent Marjory, daughter of Robert Bruce, wife of the founder of the abbey and mother of Robert II. The great extent of the ancient abbey—once the richest, except Kelso, in all Scotland—can be traced by the remains of its foundations, anciently surrounded with an enclosure of above a mile in circuit, laid out partly in orchards and gardens, and partly as a deer-park, but now built over and comprehended within the new town. The other churches of the Establishment are substantial and commodious buildings, but none of them distinguished for architectural beauty. There are besides six places of worship belonging to the Free Church, and the like number to the United Presbyterian communion, including several spacious structures, also a Reformed Presbyterian church, an Episcopalian chapel called Trinity Chapel, in St. James-street, a Wesleyan chapel in New-street, three Independent chapels, two Baptist chapels, an Unitarian meeting-house, a tabernacle of the New Jerusalemites, and two Roman Catholic chapels, besides several other temporary or provisional places of worship. The scholastic establishments of Paisley include the Neilson educational institution, already referred to, Hutchison's school, the government school of design, a grammar school, which has produced a series of distinguished classical scholars, the town English school, besides infant, ragged, industrial, parochial, denominational, and various other schools. The principal charitable institutions are the town's hospital, lunatic asylum, dispensary, house of recovery, or infirmary, also a society for the education of the deaf and dumb, a widow and orphans', a female benevolent, and various other societies. At present there are two poorhouses —one for the Abbey parish and the other for the three town parishes.—Justices of the peace courts are held every Friday, and ordinary sheriffs' courts three times a week, on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday during session, also a commissary court and sheriff small-debt court on every Thursday. The police of the town is under the control of a board of 18 commissioners for the burgh, 6 for the suburbs, and the bailiff and sheriff-substitute ex-officiis. There are four weekly newspapers connected with or published in the town—viz. the Glasgow Saturday Post and Paisley and Renfrewshire Reformer, the Paisley Herald, and the Independent, all published on Saturday, and the Paisley Journal on Thursday, besides several local and periodical publications of less note.—The new cemetery is situated at a short distance from the town, to the W. of the Neilson institution, and was opened in 1845, comprising about 23 acres of diversified ground, intersected by a hill and laid out in walks and shrubberies by the curator of the botanic gardens at Glasgow.—Many men eminent in philosophy and literature have been born in or associated with this town—as Andrew Knox, minister of Paisley, and subsequently bishop of Raphoe, a relative of the illustrious John Knox, the Reformer; Patrick Anderson, Archbishop of St. Andrew's; Robert Boyd, successively principal of the universities of Edinburgh and Glasgow; Robert Millar, author of the "History of the Propagation of Christianity;" Robert Findlay, professor of theology; John Wilson, the eminent professor of moral philosophy in the university of Edinburgh; James Wilson, the distinguished naturalist; Alexander Wilson, the ornithologist and poet; John Wilson, the geologist; Dr. Robert Watt, editor of the "Bibliotheca Britannica;" Fillan and Henning, the eminent critics; R. A. Smith, the composer; John Thomson, professor of medicine in the university of Edinburgh; Robert Tannahill, the poet, and author of many of the most popular Scotch songs; also William Finlay, King, and Kennedy, poets of less note.—Thursday is market day. There are four annual fairs, each of three days' continuance, commencing severally on the third Thursdays in February and May, and on the second Thursdays in August and November. Races take place in August at St. James's fair, on a course half a mile from the town, on the road to Greenock.

PAKEFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Mutford, co. Suffolk, 2 miles S.W. of Lowestoft, its post town, and 9 from Beccles. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the coast of the North Sea, close to Kirkley. The chief part of the village lies on one side of the London and Yarmouth road, which separates it from Lowestoft. On the cliffs is a fixed light, erected in 1832; it is 68 feet in height, and is visible at a distance of 9 miles. On account of the roughness of this part of the coast the Suffolk Humane Society have always a lifeboat in readiness. The encroachments of the sea have considerably reduced the extent of this parish. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the fisheries. The glebe consists of about 15 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £186. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a thatched roof and square embattled tower containing four bells. The interior of the church contains an old font and two brasses, one of which is to Folcard, a priest, bearing date 1400. The register dates from 1680. The parochial charities produce about £31 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes; also a meeting-house for the Society of Friends. Lord Boston is lord of the manor.

PAKENHAM, a par. in the hund. of Thedwestry, co. Suffolk, 5 miles N.E. of Bury St. Edmund's, its post town, and 1½ mile N. of Thurston railway station. The village, which is large, is chiefly agricultural. At Redcastle farm a Roman pavement was discovered. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £281. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £78 per annum. There is a National school, also an infant school. New House is the principal residence.

PAKENHAM HALL, the seat of the Earl of Longford, co. Westmeath, Ireland, near Castle Pollard.

PAKENHILL, a tythg. in the par. of Stroud, co. Gloucester, 2 miles from Stroud.

PALANCE-GATE, an ext. par. place in the par. of Northwood, Isle of Wight, co. Hants, 2 miles N. of Newport.

PALATINE, a hmlt., and the site of a post office, in the par. of Urglin, in the bar. and co. of Carlow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Carlow. It was formerly a Protestant German settlement. There is a police station. A fair is held on the 26th March.

PALDIE, or PALDIEKIRK, a vil. in the par. of Fordoun, co. Kincardine, Scotland. It is situated near Fordoun, and was formerly a parish. It derives its name from St. Palladius. Fairs are held on the first Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday in July (old style).

PALGRAVE, a hmlt. in the par. of Sporle, hund. of South Greenhoe, co. Norfolk, 3 miles N.E. of Swaffham. There was formerly a chapel-of-ease, but the hamlet now contains only two farms and several cottages. Land was assigned to the poor in lieu of rates under an Enclosure Act in 1804.

PALGRAVE, a par. in the hund. of Hartismere, co. Suffolk, 1 mile S. of Diss, its railway station and post town, and 4 miles N.W. of Eye. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road from Botesdale to Diss, near the river Waveney, and is wholly agricultural. There was formerly a chapel, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, and belonging to Bury Abbey. The S. part of the parish is traversed by the road from London to Norwich by way of Bury. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £440, and the glebe comprises 4 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £440. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient edifice, with a square tower containing six bells. The interior of the church contains tombs of Thomas Martin, the antiquary, and of the Harrison family. The register dates from 1560. The parochial charities produce about £62 per annum, realised from the town estates. There is a free school, also an infant school. Sir E. C. Kerrison, Bart., M.P., is lord of the manor.

PALKILL WATER, a feeder of the river Cree, rises in co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland, and joins the Cree near Newton Stewart.

PALLANT, a par. in the City of Chichester, co. Sussex. See CHICHESTER.

PALLAS, a lough in the par. of Ballyboy, King's County, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Tullamore. On its banks are the ruins of an ancient castle.

PALLAS, a hmlt. in the par. of Killosolan, in the bar. of Kilconnell, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland,

2 miles from Castleblakeney. A monastery formerly stood here, founded by the Birminghams.

PALLAS, or PALLICE, a hmlt. in the par. of Forgney, in the bar. of Abbeyshruel, co. Longford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 1 mile from Ballymahon. It is celebrated as being the birthplace of Oliver Goldsmith PALLAS, a demesne in the bar. of Longford, co. Galway, Ireland, 5 miles N.W. of Portumna, and 34 S.E. of Galway. It is situated near the river Shannon, not far from Loch Derg, and belongs to the Nugent family.

PALLAS, or PALLASGREAN, a post-office vil. in the par. of Greane, in the bar. of Coonagh, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 14 miles S.E. of Limerick, and 128 from Dublin. It is a station on the Waterford and Limerick branch of the Great Southern and Western railway. It is situated in a hilly district, and has a church, a police station, and a dispensary, which last is in the Tipperary Poor-law Union. Petty sessions are held at intervals. Pallas House is the principal seat in the vicinity. Fairs are held on the 1st January, 10th March, 10th May, and 24th November.

PALLASKENRY, a small post and market town in the par. of Chapel Russell, in the bar. of Kenry, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 11 miles W. of Limerick, and 132 from Dublin. It is situated 1 mile S. of the river Shannon, on the road from Limerick to Askeaton. It contains a church, Roman Catholic chapel, chief police station, and a dispensary, which last is in the Rathkeale Poor-law Union. Petty sessions are held in the town. The demesne of Castletown is in the vicinity. There are ruins of a castle, formerly of the O'Donovans. The manufacture of linen is carried on to a small extent. Market day is Thursday. A fair is held on the 15th August.

PALLEG, a parcel in the par. of Ystradgunlais, co. Brecon, 20 miles S.W. of Brecknock. It contains Cwmygied and Ystrad.

PALLENSWICK. See STANBROOK, co. Middlesex.

PALLINGHAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Kirdford, hund. of Rotherbridge, rape of Arundel, co. Sussex, 3 miles N.E. of Petworth. It is situated near the Arun and Wye navigation.

PALLING-NEAR-THE-SEA, a par. in the hund. of Happing, co. Norfolk, 4 miles E. by N. of Stalham, its post town, and 12 from North Walsham. The parish is situated on the E. coast of the county. The village is of small extent, and chiefly agricultural. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the fisheries. It is a coastguard station, and has about 12 boats belonging to the creek. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £162 14*s.*, and the vicarial for £93 6*s.* An Enclosure Act was obtained in 1812. The living is a vic. annexed to the rect. of Waxham, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is an ancient structure, with a low embattled tower. The register dates from 1763. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. There is a free school for both sexes, principally supported by H. J. Conyers, Esq., of Copt Hall, Essex, who is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

PALLINGTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Affpuddle, hund. of Hundredsbarrow, co. Dorset, 6 miles E. of Dorchester.

PALLION, a hmlt. in the par. of Monk Wearmouth, co. Durham, 2 miles N.W. of Sunderland. It is a station on the Sunderland, Durham, and Bishop Auckland section of the North-Eastern railway.

PALMER'S GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Edmonton, co. Middlesex, 2 miles W. of Edmonton.

PALMERSTON, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Uppercross, co. Dublin, prov. Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles W. of Dublin. The par. is 2½ miles long, and its greatest breadth is 1 mile. It contains part of the town of Chapel-Izod. The surface, which lies along the S. side of the river Liffey, comprises the most fertile portion of that valley. The road from Dublin to Connaught intersects the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Chapel-Izod, £226, in the patron. of the archbishop. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, and two or three daily schools. Palmerston House is a seat of the Earl of Donoughmore, and Riversdale that of Colonel Sir E. Campbell, Bart. There is a police station in the village. Several branches of manufacture are carried on, including iron, lead, copper, and dye works; also print, corn, and cotton-mills. A hospital for lepers formerly stood here. The Temple family formerly took the title of viscount from this place. A fair is held on the 21st August.

PALMERSTOWN, a par. in the bar. of West Balrothery, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Kilsallaghan. Swords is its post town. It is 2½ miles long, and its extreme breadth is 1 mile. The surface consists entirely of good soil, and is crossed by the road from Garristown to Dublin. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Clonmethan, £494, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is in ruins. Jordanstown is the principal residence. Building-stone is obtained here.

PALMERSTOWN, a seat of the Earl of Mayo, co. Kildare, near Naas, Ireland. It is situated near the Grand Canal.

PALMERSTOWN, a hmlt. in the par. of Templemurray, in the bar. of Tirawley, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 2 miles W.N.W. of Killala. It is a poor little place, and takes its name from the Palmer family, who own the greater part of the surrounding district. Palmerstown House, the seat of Sir W. H. Palmer, Bart., of Kenure Park, was destroyed by fire in 1798.

PALMSTEAD, a hmlt. in the par. of Upper Hardres, hund. of Bridge, and lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 4 miles S. of Canterbury.

PALNACHIE, a vil. in the par. of Buittle, co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 4 miles S.E. of Douglas Castle, of which place it is the port. It is situated on the river Urr, and, as a substitute for a harbour, has a temporary wooden wharf, which will accommodate 6 vessels. Its depth is about 18 feet water at spring tides. A considerable trade is carried on with the S.W. of England, and the Frith of Clyde ports.

PALNURE, a hmlt. in the par. of Kirkmabreck, co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 3 miles S.E. of Newton Stewart. It is a station on the Portpatrick railway. It is situated near the bridge over the river Cree.

PAMBER, a par. in the lower half div. of Basingstoke hund., co. Hants, 5 miles N.W. of Basingstoke, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The Vine hounds meet at Pamber Forest. The impropriate tithes, belonging to the Provost and Fellows of Queen's College, Oxford, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £270. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, in the patron. of Queen's College, Oxford. There is no parish church, but the inhabitants frequent the ancient chapel of the Benedictine priory, formerly a cell to the Abbey of Cerasy, in Normandy. This chapel, upon the suppression of alien priories in England, was given by Henry VI. to Eton College, and afterwards by Edward IV. to the hospital of St. Julien, at Southampton; and eventually became the property of the Provost and Fellows of Queen's College, Oxford, who have expended upwards of £2,000 on its restoration. It is dedicated to SS. Mary and John, and with its ivy-mantled tower and chancel, forms a rare specimen of antiquity. The interior has an effigy in carved oak of a Knight Templar.

PAMINGTON, a tythg. in the par. of Ashchurch, lower div. of the hund. of Tewkesbury, co. Gloucester, half a mile S.E. of Ashchurch, and 2½ miles E. of Tewkesbury. It is situated on a branch of the river Severn.

PAMPHILL, a tythg. in the manor of Kingston Lacy, co. Dorset, 2 miles N.W. of Wimborne-Minster. Coins of Gallienus, and other Roman relics, were discovered here in 1736.

PAMPISFORD, or PAMPSWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Chilford, co. Cambridge, 7½ miles S. by E. of Cambridge, its post town, and 1 mile E. of Whittlesford station on the Cambridge section of the Great Eastern railway. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The soil is of a gravelly nature, with a subsoil of chalk and gravel. The land is almost wholly arable, except about 150 acres of pasture. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1799. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £85. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, has a spired tower containing four bells. It is situated in the centre of the village. The parochial charities produce about £35 per annum. There is a commodious school, which was built at the expense of W. P. Hammond, Esq.

PANBOROUGH, a hmlt. in the par. of Wedmore, hund. of Bempstone, co. Somerset, 5 miles W. of Wells.

PANBRIDE, a par. in the district of Dundee, co. Forfar, Scotland, 5 miles S.W. of Arbroath. It contains, besides the vil. of its own name, the vils. of Muirdrum, West Haven, and East Haven, also the hmlts. of Gallowlaw and Newtown-Panbride. The parish is bounded on the S.E. by the German Ocean, and on the other sides by the parishes of Barry Monikie, Carmylie, Arbirlot, and St. Vigeans. It extends in length about 5 miles from S.E. to N.W., with a breadth of about 2 miles. The surface is moderately even, but rises towards the N. A large portion of the land is in a state of cultivation. The soil of the arable part consists of a clayey loam, but that towards the N. is moorish, and towards the coast sandy. The coast is flat and rocky, but has two open harbours at the East and West Havens, where small vessels can discharge their cargoes in mild weather. Limestone and sandstone occur, both of which are worked. The parish is traversed by the Dundee and Arbroath railway, which has stations at East Haven and Carnoustie, and is watered by two or three streams. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the fisheries. This par. is in the presb. of Arbroath and synod of Angus and Mearns, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £231. The church is a cruciform structure, erected in 1851. There are, besides a Free church, a parochial school and library, and several other schools. In the northern part of the parish stands the house of Panmure, with its enclosures and plantations; and near the house are vaults and foundations of the old castle of Panmure, the seat of the Maules.

PANCRAS, a hmlt. in the par. of Old Cleeve, co. Somerset, 2 miles S.W. of Watchet.

PANCRAS, ST., a par. and extensive suburban district of London, in the Holborn div. of the hund. of Ossulstone and borough of Marylebone, co. Middlesex, 2½ miles N.W. of St. Paul's. It contains the Euston-square terminus of the London and North-Western railway; the King's-cross terminus of the Great Northern; the new terminus of the Midland Counties railway, now in course of construction; the Chalk-farm junction station of the North London, West London Extension, and London and North-Western lines; also the several stations on the North London and Metropolitan lines. This important par. comprises 2,600 acres, lying between Maiden-lane, Tavistock-square, Regent's-park, Primrose-hill, and Caen-wood, and includes the populous hmlts. of Camden, Kentish, and Somers' towns, King's-cross, and parts of Haverstock-hill and Highgate. The parish is traversed by the several lines of railway mentioned above, and by the Regent's-park canal, on the banks of which are numerous wharves and storehouses. Few places exhibit in a more striking manner the extraordinary increase which, within the last century, and particularly during the last twenty-five years, has taken place in the numerous districts bordering on the metropolis. In 1251 this parish contained 40 houses, but it subsequently declined, and in 1565 contained only 60 inhabitants, being described by a contemporary writer as "a remote and isolated spot, the resort of roages, vagabondes, and thieves;" it now has a population of more than 200,000, and in the magnificence of its streets and public buildings rivals the best districts of the metropolis. Amongst other fashionable neighbourhoods may be mentioned Argyll, Brunswick, Camden, Euston, Fitzroy, Gordon, Harrington, Mecklenburgh, Oakley, Regent, Tavistock squares; Burton, Gloucester, and Mornington crescents; Chester, Cumberland, and Gloucester terraces, facing the Regent's-park; the last are adorned with alto-relievos and statues. At the N.W. extremity of the park, which is partly within this parish, are the gardens of the Zoological Society, laid out in walks and shrubberies, and containing various buildings for the interesting and extensive collection of wild animals, birds, reptiles, and insects, many of which have become acclimatised and bred in the gardens. At the eastern side of the park are the Diorama, now turned into a chapel, built in 1823 at a cost of £9,000; the Colosseum, built by Decimus Burton in 1827, after the model of the Pantheon at Rome, with a massive and boldly projecting portico of six columns, of the Doric order, supporting a cornice and triangular pediment. This last-named building, designed for the exhibition of the panorama of London, taken by Hornor and E. Paris in 1822 from the top of St. Paul's Cathedral, is 400 feet in circumference, and is surmounted by a spacious and well-proportioned dome crowned with a parapet; adjoining the main building are the Swiss cottage, lake, and falls, gallery of cartoons, &c. On the same side of the park is St. Katherine's Hospital, first founded in 1148, on the site of St. Katherine's Docks, by Queen Maud, but removed to its present site in 1826; also the cavalry barracks in Albany-street, built of brick, and occupying an area of 8½ acres, with stabling for 400 horses, a riding-school, infirmary, magazine, and exercise ground. About a quarter of a mile to the S.E. of the Regent's-park, at the lower end of Gower-street, stands University College, founded in 1825 by Lord Brougham and others; the building, which is still incomplete, consists of one side of a quadrangle, 400 feet in length, with a Grecian portico of 10 columns in the centre, designed by Wilkins: it comprises a hall, 90 feet by 45; library, 120 feet by 50, containing 30,000 volumes, of which 10,000 are in Chinese; a museum, 120 feet by 50, now occupied by the junior school; an anatomical room and laboratory, 95 feet by 28; 4 lecture-rooms, 65 feet by 50; besides other offices. In the rotunda under the dome are exhibited above 100 casts of Flaxman's works, Westmacott's, "Locke," and other art treasures. Opposite the college stands the University College Hospital, originally founded in 1834, but enlarged in 1846 by the addition of a N. wing, built by Ainger. The total cost of the buildings and fittings was about £150,000, and the hospital has an income of about £5,000. In connection with the London University is University Hall, in Gordon-square, built in 1850 by Donaldson: it has four Flaherty scholarships of £50, besides other prizes. Further to the E., between Brunswick and Mecklenburgh squares, stands the Foundling Hospital, founded by Captain Coram in 1739, under royal charter of George II., "for the maintenance and instruction of deserted infants." These premises consist of a spacious chapel, which occupies the centre of a block of brick building designed by T. Jacobson in 1742, with two wings containing dormitories, school-rooms, and the apartments of the managers of the institution, which is supported by an endowment of £12,000 per annum, arising from funded property, besides other small sums given for admission to the chapel, the children's work, and subscriptions. The chapel is decorated with an altar-piece painted by West, and the organ was presented by Handel, who performed here his "Messiah," and presented the proceeds to the charity; also portraits of the founder, Dr. Mead, Charles II., views of Bethlehem, Chelsea, Christ's, and Greenwich hospitals, and Hogarth's famous "March to Finchley." Other public buildings are the Welsh School, in Gray's-inn-lane, built of brick in 1715, and containing portraits and several Welsh manuscripts; the Free Hospital, in the Gray's-inn-road, founded in 1828 by Dr. Marsden, and supported by an income of £5,000; the Prince of Wales's Theatre, a plain building, in Tottenham-street; the Veterinary College, in College-street, Camden-town; the Imperial Gas-works; Metropolitan Association model lodging-houses, in St. Pancras-road; the Governesses' Institution, in the Prince of Wales's-road; the Female Adult Orphan Home, in the Regent's-park, founded in 1818 for 70 daughters of officers and clergymen, and supported by an income of £2,000; the St. Pancras and Strand Union poor-houses; Weston House Lunatic Asylum; the Orphan Working school, Haverstock-hill; the terminus of the Great Northern railway, at King's-cross, built in 1849 on the site of the Smallpox Hospital, which was then removed to Holloway; the terminus of the North-Western railway, at Euston-square, with its massive gateway and great hall, designed by T. Handwick, and decorated with basso-relievos by J. Thomas; also the goods station of the North-Western railway at Chalk-farm, including an extensive brick structure surmounted by a glass dome.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of London, val. £1,025, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, who usually appoint one of the canons. The new parochial church in Euston-square was built in 1822 by the Inwoods, at a cost of £76,679. It is formed after the model of the Temple of Erectheus at Athens, with a tower or steeple of three receding stages 165 feet high, resembling the Temple of the Winds, and is entered under a portico of six fluted Ionic columns, supporting an entablature and cornice surmounted by a triangular pediment. At the E. end of the structure are two projecting wings, forming the vestry and registry, the roofs supported on caryatides, after the fashion of the Pandrosium. The interior is decorated, the altar-piece having six verd antique columns of Scagliola marble from the Temple of Minerva, and the pulpit, carved out of the stump of the famous Fairlop oak, which was blown down in 1820. The old parish church, in the St. Pancras-road, now a district church, is an ancient structure of stone and flint, built originally in the 12th century, but so changed by subsequent alterations and repairs that it retains few vestiges of its original character. It has a new N. tower, and was completely restored in 1848, under the direction of A. Gough, when the original altar-stone, Roman bricks, and other antiquities were found. In the churchyard are many tombs of eminent foreigners, and of literary and artistic celebrities. Numerous new churches have been built in various parts of the parish, which is now cut up into ecclesiastical districts, as St. Jude's, in the Gray's-inn-road; St. Matthew's, Bedford-town; St. James's, in the Hampstead-road; St. Mark's, in the Albert-road; Christ Church, in the Regent's-park; All Saints', in Gordon-square; St. John the Evangelist, in Charlotte-street; St. Ann's, Highgate-rise; St. Martin, Kentish-town; besides various others of more recent erection, and several proprietary chapels, as Fitzroy, Gray's-inn-lane, Percy, and Woburn chapels. The Roman Catholics and the several Protestant Dissenting churches have places of worship, the most pretentious of which is the Irvingite Cathedral, or so-called Catholic Apostolic church, in Gordon-square. There are numerous schools and charitable institutions, only a few of which require separate mention, as the St. Pancras charity school for girls, in the Hampstead-road; the Russell school of industry; the Roman Catholic grammar school, held in the old vestry room; and the collegiate school, for middle-class education, nearly opposite the "Southampton Arms," and in front of which is the site selected for the proposed Cobden memorial. The names of many eminent men are associated with St. Pancras, as having been born, lived, or buried within this parish. Besides its own burial-grounds, St. Pancras contained the cemeteries of St. James's, Piccadilly; St. Giles's-in-the-Fields; St. Andrew's, Holborn; St. George's, Bloomsbury; and St. George the Martyr; but these are now closed under the Extramural Interment Act, and the cemetery for the parish itself is removed to Finchley. In this parish are also Bagnigge Wells, formerly celebrated for its chalybeate waters, St. Chad's Well, and St. Pancras Wells. St. Pancras forms a union of itself, under the new Poor-law Act, and is a superintendent registry district, with St. Katherine's, but exclusive of Highgate. It is comprised within the Bloomsbury new county-court district.

PANCRASWEEK, or WYKE ST. PANCRAS, a par. in the hund. of Black Torrington, co. Devon, 3 miles N.W. of Holsworthy, its post town, and 5 from Stratton, in Cornwall. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Bude canal, near the river Tamar. It is wholly agricultural. At Lana, in this parish, is the site of an ancient chapel. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Bradworthy, in the dioc. of Exeter. The church, dedicated to St. Pancras, has a lofty tower containing five bells. There is a Sunday-school belonging to the Wesleyans, who have a place of worship.

PANDY, a vil. in the tnshp. of Cynllwyd, co. Merioneth, 4 miles S.W. of Bala.

PANDY, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanvihangel-Crucorney, co. Monmouth, 6 N. by E. of Abergavenny. It is a station on the Worcester, Hereford, and Abergavenny section of the West Midland railway. It is situated under the mountain of Skirridfawr, which attains an elevation of near 1,500 feet, on a branch of the river Monnow.

PANFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Hinckford, co. Essex, 2 miles N. by W. of Braintree, its railway station and post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Pant, a tributary of the Blackwater, and is wholly agricultural. Panfield was given by Waleran Fitz-Ralph to the Abbey of St. Stephen, at Caen, in Normandy, which had a Benedictine cell here before 1250. Upon the suppression of alien priories it became parcel of the possessions of the prior and convent of Canterbury, and at the Dissolution was granted to Sir Giles Capel. The greater part of the land is arable, with some pasture and wood. The soil is generally a strong loam, resting upon a substratum of clay. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £500, and the glebe comprises 7 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £500. The church, dedicated to SS. Mary and Christopher, has a small spired tower containing three bells. In the windows are some remains of ancient stained glass. Panfield Hall, the principal residence, has a quadrangular tower; it was erected in 1546, but has been subsequently modernised by frequent alterations and repairs.

PANGBOURN, a par. and post town in the hund. of Reading, co. Berks, 5½ miles W. by N. of Reading, and 11 from Wallingford. It is a station on the Great Western railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the banks of the Thames. The manor formerly belonged to Brigham, Bishop of Salisbury, who gave it to the monastery of Reading in 1230. In 1671 it became the property of John Breedon Esq. A fine trout stream, called the Pang, here falls into the Thames on the E., giving name to the village The surface is hilly and well wooded. The land is chiefly in tillage, with a small proportion of pasture and woodland. The soil is in general a sharp gravel and chalk, but fertile in the neighbourhood of the village. The line of the Great Western railway intersects the parish. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £609, and the glebe comprises 3 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £430. The church is dedicated to St. James the Great. The interior contains a chalk monument of singular appearance to Sir John Davis, to whom the manor formerly belonged. The parochial charities produce about £51 per annum, including the endowment of Breedon's school. The Independents have a place of worship. De la Bere House, Shooter's Hill House, Pangbourn Lodge, and Rosewood Cottage are the principal residences. E. A. Breedon, Esq., is lord of the manor. Many Roman antiquities were discovered here in October, 1838.

PANGWERN, a tnshp. in the par. of Pennant, co. Montgomery, 9 miles N.W. of Llanfyllin.

PANHOPE, a small harbour on the E. side of Flotta Island, Orkney Islands, coast of Scotland. It lies to the S. of Scalpa Floe.

PANMURE, a demesne, in the par. of Panbride, co. Forfar, Scotland, 5 miles S.W. of Arbroath. It is situated near the coast, which is low and rocky, and belonged to Lord Panmure, of Panmure House, who took the title of baron from the old castle of the Maules, now in ruins.

PANNAL, a par. in the lower div. of the wap. of Claro, West Riding co. York. 3 miles S. of Harrogate, and 4 S.W. of Knaresborough. Tadcaster is its post town. It is a station on the Leeds and Thirsk section of the North-Eastern railway. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on a branch of the river Nidd. The par. includes a portion of the hmlts. of Low Harrogate and Beckwith. About two-thirds of the land are meadow and pasture, and the remainder good arable and plantations. The soil is productive, with a subsoil of rock. The surface is undulating, and the scenery varied. On the summit of Harlow Hill is an observatory 100 feet high, erected in 1830 by John Thompson, but accessible to the public upon a small payment. The principal seats are Pannal Hall, Moor Park, and Beckwith House, the last situated in a wooded demesne. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £318. The church, dedicated to St. Robert of Knaresborough, is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing three bells. The nave was rebuilt in 1772. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a district church at Low Harrogate, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £120. There is a school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have two places of worship. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor.

PANNANICH, a vil. in the par. of Glenmuick, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 3 miles E. of Ballater. It is situated on the right bank of the river Dee, and is famed for a mineral spa discovered about 1760, and useful in scorbutic complaints.

PANN, GREAT and LITTLE, two small hmlts. on Pann Down, Isle of Wight, co. Hants, 1 mile E. by S. of Newport.

PANSHANGER, a demesne in the hund. and co. of Herts, 2 miles W. of Hertford. It is situated in a well-wooded park on the banks of the small river Maran, which here joins the Lea, and is the seat of Earl Cowper. In the park is an oak 19 feet in girth, and in the mansion the "Madonna" by Raphael.

PANT, a tnshp. in the par. of Llysfaen, co. Denbigh, formerly in Carnarvon, 7 miles E. of Conway.

PANT, a feeder of the Blackwater, rises about 3 miles to the S.E. of Saffron Walden, in Essex.

PANT, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanymynech, hund. of Upper Oswestry, co. Salop, 5 miles S. of Oswestry. It is a station on the Cambrian railway. It is situated near the river Vyrnwy, and the Montgomery canal.

PANT, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Dowlais, par. of Merthyr-Tydfil, co. Glamorgan, 2 miles N.E. of Merthyr-Tydfil. It is a station on the Merthyr and Brecon railway.

PANTARFON, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanfynydd, co. Carmarthen, 6 miles N.W. of Llandilofawr.

PANTEAGUE, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Usk, co. Monmouth, 2 miles S.E. of Pontypool, its post town, and 4 W. by S. of Usk. It is a petty sessions town and place of considerable importance. The Brecon and Monmouth canal passes about 1½ mile W. of the parish, which is traversed by the road from Pontypool to Newport. The surface is in parts bold and mountainous, and diversified with extensive lakes. About a third of the land is in meadow and pasture, another third mountain pasture and common, and the remainder divided between arable and woodland. The soil is chiefly clay and loam. There are extensive iron mines, collieries, and stone-quarries. Many of the inhabitants are employed at the iron furnaces and forges, and in the tin-plate mills. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £331, and the glebe comprises about 34 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £351. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to St. Mary. There are besides two chapels-of-ease, one at Pont-y-Moile, formerly a meeting-house belonging to the Society of Friends, and the other at Pen-yr-hoel, built by the late patron. The Independents and Calvinistic Methodists have each a place of worship.

PANTON, a par in the E. div. of the wap. of Wraggoe, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 3½ miles N.E. of Wragby, its post town, and 7 E. of the Wickenby railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on a branch of the river Langworth, and is wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £416, and the glebe contains about 24 acres. The living is a rect.* annexed to the vic.* of Wragby, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. The register dates from 1736.

PANTRY-GREEN, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Worsbrough, par. of Darfield, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S. of Barnsley. It is situated near the Dearne and Dove branch canal. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the neighbouring collieries.

PANTYDWR, a hmlt. in the hund. of Llanidloes, co. Montgomery, 7 miles from Llanidloes, and the same distance from Rhayader. It is a station on the Llanidloes and Brecon section of the Mid Wales railway. It is situated near the confluence of the rivers Clywedogn and Severn, under Plinlimmon.

PANT-Y-FFRYDLAS, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanllechid, co. Carnarvon, 3 miles S.E. of Bangor.

PANT-Y-GROES, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Dogwell's, co. Pembroke, near Cardigan.

PANT-Y-MANNS, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangerniew, co. Denbigh, 7 miles N.E. of Llanrwst.

PANTYMWYN, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Gwernafield and par. of Mold, co. Flint, 2 miles from Mold.

PANTYRID, a vil. in the par. of Llandyfodog, co. Glamorgan, 6 miles N.E. of Bridgend.

PANXWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Walsham, co. Norfolk, 5 miles N. of the Brundall railway station, and 4½ W. by N. of Acle, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. There are a corn-mill and a malting establishment. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £152, and the glebe contains 32 acres. The living is a discharged rect. annexed to the vic.* of Woodbastwick, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, having been in ruins for upwards of two centuries, was partially restored in 1847, when the old tower was strengthened, and a nave added, giving accommodation for 120 persons.

PAPA, the name of several small islands of the Shetland and Orkney groups, coast of Scotland. See SHETLAND and ORKNEY.

PAPCASTLE-WITH-GOAT, a tnshp. in the par. of Bridekirk, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 1 mile N.W. of Cockermouth. It is situated on an eminence below the river Derwent, which is here crossed by a stone bridge, connecting this township with that of Cockermouth. The village occupies the site of the Roman Derventio, mentioned by Antonine, and of which station there are traces, comprising coins of Claudius, Hadrian, pavement and other relics of antiquity. The castle at the time of the Norman conquest became the property of Waltheof, Lord of Allerdale, and was dismantled, that its materials might be used in the erection of Cockermouth Castle. Mrs. Dykes is lady of the manor.

PAPERHAUGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Rothbury, W. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 2 miles S.E. of Rothbury. It is situated on the river Coquet, and on the new road from Rothbury to Weldon and Morpeth. The soil consists of a light loam upon a subsoil of gravel. The Duke of Northumberland is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

PAPLAY, an ancient par. in the district of Mainland, Orkney, Isles of Orkney and Shetland, coast of Scotland. It is in conjunction with Holm.

PAPPLEWICK, a par. in the N. div. of Broxtow wap., co. Nottingham, 9 miles N. of Nottingham, its post town, and 1 mile from the railway station at Linby. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the eastern bank of the river Leen, and is wholly agricultural. In the neighbourhood is Robinson's mill, in which Watt constructed his first steam engine. A considerable cotton trade was formerly carried on, but is now extinct. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £91. The church, dedicated to St. James, has a tower containing three bells. There is a stained window. The church was rebuilt in 1795. Papplewick Hall was erected by the Hon. F. Montague, in 1786. Near the lodge is a cave called Robin Hood's Stable, hewn out of the solid rock. The park originally formed a portion of the estate of Newstead Priory adjoining, but was sold by Lord Byron to Mr. Montague. Andrew Montague, Esq., is lord of the manor. An annual sheep fair is held on the last Tuesday in August.

PAPS MOUNTAINS, a range of hills in the south-eastern div. of the co. of Kerry, Ireland. They extend along the bank of the river Flesk, and attain an altitude of near 2,300 feet.

PAPWORTH, a hund. in the co. of Cambridge, contains the pars. of Boxworth, Conington, Elsworth, Fen-Drayton, Graveley, Knapwell, Over, Papworth St. Everard, Swavesey, Willingham, and part of Papworth St. Agnes, comprising an area of 26,230 acres.

PAPWORTH ST. AGNES, a par. partly in the above hund., co. Cambridge, and partly in the hund. of Toseland, co. Huntingdon, 4 miles S.E. of Huntingdon, and 8 N.E. of St. Neot's railway station. St. Ives is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, and wholly agricultural, is situated on the line of the ancient Ermine Street, near the old N. road. There is a mineral spring of saline chalybeate properties, which at one time was in great repute. The greater part of the surface consists of a wooded valley, sheltered on all sides by hills, which rise to the height of 100 feet. About one-fourth of the land is in grass, and the remainder arable, except a small portion of plantation. The soil is chiefly clay and loam. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £293, and the glebe contains 70 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £300. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is situated in Cambridgeshire, and was entirely rebuilt in the last century. The manor belonged to a family of the name of Russell, in King John's time, and subsequently came to the Papworth and Mallory families, and finally became the property of Arthur Sperling, Esq., the present owner. The old Manor House exhibits many traces of its ancient magnificence, especially in its fretted ceilings and substantial masonry.

PAPWORTH ST. EVERARD, a par. in the hund. of Papworth, co. Cambridge, 1 mile S. of Papworth St. Agnes, and 3 miles N. by W. of Caxton. St. Ives is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The surface is undulating, and well wooded with oak timber. The land is chiefly arable, with a small proportion of pasture and woodland. The soil is clayey. The old N. road to Huntingdon passes through the parish. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £187 10*s., and the glebe contains 23½ acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £173, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to St. Peter, and was once larger than at present. The register dates from 1695. There is a school for both sexes. Papworth Hall is the principal residence.

PARACOMBE, a par. in the hund. of Sherwill, co. Devon, 5 miles S.W. of Lynton, and 10 N.E. of Barnstaple, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated among the hills, and on the high road from Lynton to Barnstaple. The par., which comprises the hmlts. of Paracombe, Mill, Heale, and Rowley, is wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £240, and the glebe comprises 56 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £259. The church is an ancient stone edifice with a tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. L. St. Albyn, Esq., is lord of the manor. There are vestiges of an ancient fortification.

PARADISE, a hmlt. in the pars. of High-Ham and Huish Episcopi, co. Somerset, near Langport.

PARADISE, a demesne of the Duke of Devonshire, in the par. and hund. of Eastbourne, rape of Pevensey, co. Sussex, 1 mile from Eastbourne, and 6 miles S. of Hailsham. It is situated near the coast and Beachy Head.

PARADISE, a seat in the par. of Stoke Newington, hund. of Ossulstone, co. Middlesex, 3 miles N. by F of St. Paul's. It is situated near the New River, in the borough of Finsbury, and long belonged to the Crawshays.

PARADISE, a ward in the par. of St. Margaret, borough of King's Lynn, co. Norfolk.

PARBOLD, a tnshp. in the par. of Eccleston, hund. of Leyland, co. Lancaster, 6 miles N.E. of Ormskirk, its post town, and 2 N.W. of Apley Bridge. It is situated near the Leeds and Liverpool canal, and is chiefly agricultural. There is a view from Parbold Hill of the Isle of Man and of the mountains of Wales and Cumberland. There is an excellent stone quarry in the neighbourhood. The soil consists of a clayey loam, with a subsoil of marl. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £137, in the patron. of the Rector of Eccleston. Douglas church is so named from its approximation to a small river of that name, a feeder of the Yarrow.

PARBROOK, a hmlt. in the par. of West Bradley, co. Somerset, 5 miles N.W. of Castle-Cary.

PARCEL-CANOL, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanbadarn-Fawr, hund. of Genewr Glynn, co. Cardigan. It is situated near Aberystwith and the river Rheidol.

PARDSEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Dean, ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 4 miles S. by W. of Cockermouth. It is joined with Ullock and Dean-Scales.

PARHAM, a par. in the hund. of Plomesgate, co. Suffolk, 2½ miles S.E. of Framlingham, and 7 N. by E. of Woodbridge. It is a station on the East Suffolk section of the Great Eastern railway. Wickham Market is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, and chiefly agricultural, is situated on the river Aldo. Parham formerly belonged to the Uffords, Earls of Suffolk, from whom it came to the Lords Willoughby, of Parham, who had an Elizabethan mansion here, called Parham Hall, now converted into a farmhouse. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £168, and the vicarial for £176 13*s.* The living is a vic.* annexed to that of Hacheston, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £299. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a square tower, built by William de Ufford, Earl of Suffolk, in the 14th century. It contains a carved screen and painted E. window. The register dates from 1538. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum. There is a parochial school for both sexes. The poet Crabbe resided for many years at Parham Lodge.

PARHAM, a par. in the hund. of West Easwrith, rape of Arundel, co. Sussex, 1¼ mile W. of Storrington, its post town, 8 miles S.E. of Petworth, and 5 S.W. of Pulborough railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. There was formerly a cell to the Abbey of Glastonbury. Mr. Napper's hounds meet here. The greater part of the land is meadow, pasture, and woodland. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £130, and the glebe contains 18 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £148. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, with a spired tower containing one bell. The church was repaired and the tower added in 1800. It contains a singular leaden font. Parham House, the principal residence, is of the 16th century, situated in a well-wooded park, stocked with deer. The interior comprises a large hall, a gallery 150 feet in length, in which are many choice paintings, and ancient armour and weapons.

PAR-HARBOUR, a vil. in the par. of St. Blazey, co. Cornwall, 4 miles S.W. of Lostwithiel, and 5 N.E. of St. Austle. It is a subport to Fowey. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the fisheries, but some in the neighbouring tin and copper-mines. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church is small.

PARK, a hmlt. in the par. of Tolpuddle, co. Dorset, 7 miles N.E. of Dorchester.

PARK, a tnshp. in the par. of Cerrig-y-Druidion, co. Denbigh, 12 miles S.W. of Ruthin.

PARK, a hmlt. in the par. of Eglwys-Ilan, hund. of Caerphilly, co. Glamorgan, 3 miles W. of Caerphilly. It is situated under Cefn Hill.

PARK, a hmlt. in the par. of Tewkesbury, co. Gloucester, 2 miles from Tewkesbury. It is joined with Southwick to form a township.

PARK, a grieveship in the par. of Allendale, S. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 4 miles N.W. of Allendale.

PARK, a ward in the par. of St. Stephen, hund. of Cashio, or lib. of St. Alban's, co. Herts, 2½ miles S. of St. Alban's.

PARK, the name of several railway stations; one on the line of the Great Eastern near Tottenham, another on the Manchester and Leeds section of the London and North-Western, 2½ miles from Manchester, and a third on the Aberdeen and Aboyne section of the Deeside railway, 2 miles from Crathes; also the Park Bridge station on the Oldham and Guide Bridge Junction railway, between Oldham and Guide Bridge.

PARK, a hmlt. in the bar. of Lower Iveagh, co. Down, Ireland, 3 miles from Guilford.

PARK, a vil. in the par. of Upper Cumber, in the bar. of Tirkeeran, co. Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 9 miles S.E. of Londonderry. It is situated under Sawel, one of the Sperrin range.

PARK, a hmlt. in the par. of Orton, E. ward, co. Westmoreland, 7 miles S.W. of Appleby. It is situated on a feeder of the river Lime, under Orton Scar Beacon.

PARK-END, a tnshp. in the par. of Audley, N. div. of the hund. of Pirehill, co. Stafford, 4 miles N.W. of Newcastle-under-Lyme.

PARK FARM, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Hulme Park, co. Northumberland, near Alnwick.

PARK-GATE, a hmlt. in the par. of Fylingdales, North Riding co. York, 5 miles S.E. of Whitby.

PARKGATE, a hmlt. in the par. of Newdigate, second div. of the hund. of Copthorne, co. Surrey, 1 mile N. of Newdigate.

PARKGATE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Leighton, and par. of Neston, co. Chester, 12 miles N.W. of Chester. It is a small watering-place, fronting the estuary of the Dee, over which is a ferry to Flint. A sandbank has been formed within the present century, which prevents vessels of burden from approaching the quay.

PARKGATE, a post-office vil. in the par. of Donegore, bar. of Upper Antrim, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 5 miles E. of Antrim. It stands on the road from Antrim to Ballyclare. Here is a police station, where petty sessions are held at intervals. Fairs are held on 7th February, May, and August, and on 4th November.

PARKHAM, a par. in the hund. of Shebbear, co. Devon, 6 miles S.W. of Bideford, its railway station and post town. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on the small river Yeo. It is bounded on the N. by Barnstaple Bay and the Bristol Channel. The par. comprises Broad Parkham, Goldworthy, and 6 other hmlts. The soil is various, and includes about 4,000 acres of beach, the sand of which is used as manure. It has an extensive view, embracing the Welsh coast, Lundy Island, and Bideford Bar. Lime is extensively burned. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £635. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient stone structure with a tower containing six bells. It has several stained windows, and has recently been restored. There is a free school for both sexes, with a small endowment. The Bible Christians and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. The trustees of the late Lord Rolle are the lords of the manor. A cherry fair is held on Milbury-Moor.

PARKHEAD, a vil. in the par. of Barony, co. Lanark, Scotland. It is a small suburb of Glasgow, situated on the road from thence to Edinburgh. The inhabitants are principally engaged in weaving.

PARKHEAD, a vil. in the par. of Bothwell, co. Lanark, Scotland. It is connected with East Bellshill and Low Orbiston.

PARKHILL, a vil. in the par. of Kilmuir Easter, co. Ross, Scotland, 5 miles S. of Tain, on the W. side of Cromarty Frith. It is a station on the Inverness and Perth and Inverness and Aberdeen Junction railway.

PARKHILL, a hmlt. in the par. of New Machar, district of Aberdeen, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 4 miles N.W. of Aberdeen. It is a station on the Formartine and Buchan section of the Great North of Scotland railway. It is situated near the river Don.

PARKHILL, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Idle and par. of Calverley, West Riding co. York, 3 miles N.E. of Bradford. It is situated near the river Aire, and the Leeds and Liverpool canal.

PARKHOLD, a tnshp. in the par. of Ledbury, hund. of Radlow, co. Hereford, near Ledbury.

PARK-HOUSE, an ext. par. place in the upper half div. of Andover hund., co. Hants, 9 miles W. of Andover.

PARKHOUSES, a vil. in the tnshp. of Morpeth Castle, par. of Morpeth, co. Northumberland, near Morpeth, within which borough it is situated, and 14 miles N. by W. of Newcastle.

PARKHURST FOREST, an ext. par. lib. adjoining the par. of Carisbrooke, Isle of Wight, co. Hants, 1 mile N.W. of Newport. It is mentioned in Domesday Survey as Alvington and Parco Regis, and was once covered with wood, but is now principally enclosed. Here are situated the Albany barracks, built in 1779, with accommodation for 3,000 men, the union workhouse for the Isle of Wight, a lunatic asylum, and a large government reformatory prison on the separate system.

PARK-LEYS, an ext. par. place in the N. div. of Thurgarton wap., co. Nottingham.

PARK-MILL, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Clayton, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N. of Penistone.

PARK-NOOK, a hmlt. in the par. of Ranton, co. Stafford, 4 miles W. of Stafford.

PARK-QUARTER, a tnshp. in the par. of Stanhope, N.W. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, 3 miles W. of Stanhope. It is situated on the river Wear.

PARKS, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Hatfield, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of Thorne.

PARKSIDE, a station on the Manchester and Liverpool section of the London and North-Western railway, 1 mile E. of Newton. Near this spot Huskisson, the statesman, was killed at the opening of the railway in 1830.

PARKSTONE, a tythg. in the par. of Canford-Magna, hund. of Cogdean, co. Dorset, 2 miles N.E. of Poole, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £150. The church was erected in 1832.

PARK-STREET, a station on the St. Alban's branch of the London and North-Western railway, 2 miles from St. Alban's.

PARK VILLAGE, EAST AND WEST, a small suburb of London, situated in the Regent's Park, co. Middlesex, 3 miles N.W. of St. Paul's.

PARK WELLS, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Builth, co. Brecon, 1 mile from Builth. It is situated near the river Irvon, a feeder of the Wye, and is celebrated for its medicinal springs, of a chalybeate, saline, and sulphureous nature close to each other.

PARLEY, a tythg. in the par. of Christchurch, co. Hants, 5 miles N.W. of Christchurch.

PARLEY, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Cranborne, co. Dorset, 6 miles S.E. of Wimborne-Minster, its post town, and 6 N.W. of Christchurch. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the borders of Hampshire, and is watered by the river Stour. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. A large part of the land is in heath. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £250, and the glebe contains 20 acres, besides £44 payable to the Rector of Lydlinch. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £195. The church is of considerable antiquity. The Independents have a place of worship. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum.

PARLINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Aberford, lower div. of the wap. of Skyrack, West Riding co. York, 5 miles S.W. of Tadcaster, and 6 S. of Wetherby. The tnshp. includes part of the town of Aberford. The principal residence is Parlington Hall, an ancient mansion situated in a wooded park.

PARME, a tnshp. in the par. of Middlewich, hund. of Northwich, co. Chester, 2½ miles S.E. of Middlewich.

PARNDON, or PARRINGDON, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Harlow, co. Essex, 3½ miles S.W. of Harlow, its post town, and 2½ S.W. of the Roydon railway station. The village, which is small and ancient, is wholly agricultural. There was formerly a priory, founded by Roger de Parringdon, which was removed in 1180 to Little Maldon. The soil is fertile, and in a high state of cultivation. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £598, partly in the patron. of St. Thomas's Hospital. The church has a spired tower. There is a National school.

PARNDON, or PARRINGDON, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Harlow, co. Essex, 1 mile from Burnt Mill railway station, and 2½ miles W. by S. of Harlow, its post town. The par., which is of small extent, is situated on the Cambridge section of the Great Eastern railway, near the river Stort. It is wholly agricultural, consisting of a few scattered farmhouses. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £215. The church is an ancient structure dedicated to St. James, and situated near the river Stort.

PARR, a tnshp. in the par. of Prescot, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 1 mile S.E. of St. Helen's, its post town, 3 S.W. of Newton-in-Mackerfield, and 5 E. of Prescot. The tnshp., which is situated near the Runcorn railway and Sankey canal, comprises the hmlts. of Parr Stocks, Parr Flatts, Ashton Green and Blackbrook. There are several collieries, copper works, and extensive alkali works, which give employment to a large number of the inhabitants. The colliers employed by one proprietor collected among themselves no less a sum than £50 towards the erection of the church. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £150, in the patron. of the Incumbent of St. Helen's. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is modern. There are National and infant schools, also a school for the Roman Catholics, and a Sunday-school for the Wesleyans.

PARRET, or PERROTT, a river rising on the borders of Dorsetshire and Somersetshire, and falling into the Bristol Channel at Stert Point, near Burnham lighthouse. It is navigable to its junction with the Yeo.

PARSONAGE, a tythg. in the par. of Kingsclere, co. Hants, near Kingsclere.

PARSON-DROVE, a chplry. in the par. of Leverington, hund. of Wisbeach, Isle of Ely, co. Cambridge, 5 miles S.W. of Wisbeach, its post town, and 3 S.W. of Leverington. The village, which is considerable, is situated at a short distance from the river Nene. The land is fenny, and in part common, but most of the waste lands have been recently enclosed under an Act obtained in 1841. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £271. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing five bells. The register dates from 1651.

PARSON'S GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Fulham, co. Middlesex, 6 miles S.W. of St. Paul's. It is situated near the bridge over the Thames. Several eminent persons have resided here, as Lord Bacon, Richardson, and Addison.

PARSONSTOWN, or BIRR, a post and market town in the par. of Birr, in the bar. of Ballybritt, King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 20 miles S.W. of Tullamore, and 81 from Dublin. It is a station on the Great Southern and Western railway. It is situated at the junction of the Birr and Little Brosna rivers, and presents an imposing appearance. The town originated in an abbey called Biorra, which was founded here in the 6th century by St. Brendan. It was formerly part of the territory of the O'Carrols, but was joined to King's County by James I., and granted to Sir W. Parsons, who held it against the O'Carrols in 1642, but surrendered it again in 1643. It was taken and retaken in 1650 and 1688, but was ultimately restored to the Parsons family after the battle of the Boyne. It is now famous as being the residence of the Earl of Rosse, of Birr Castle, whose celebrated telescope may be seen here. Part of the old castle of the O'Carrols is incorporated with the modern residence. The manufacture of glass and woollen goods is carried on to some extent. The Parsonstown Poor-law Union comprises 21 electoral divisions in King's County and Tipperary. Parsonstown is the most important town in the county, and contains a church, several chapels, a bridewell, sessions house, statue of the Duke of Cumberland, two branch banks, savings-bank, dispensary, fever hospital, barracks, and reading rooms. It is a chief police station, excise town, and headquarters of the county militia. Quarter and petty sessions are held in the town. One newspaper, the King's County Chronicle, is published here. The church and Roman Catholic chapel are both attractive buildings. Market days are Tuesday and Saturday. Fairs are held on the 11th February, 5th May, 25th August, and 10th December.

PARSONSTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Ferrard, co. Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N.W. of Clogher. Dunleer is its post town. It is about a mile in length by three-quarters of a mile in breadth. The soil is of various quality, but well cultivated. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. with Dunany £116.

PARTEEN, a vil. in the par. of St. Patrick's, in the bar. of Lower Bunratty, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles N.E. of Limerick. It is situated on the right bank of the river Shannon, and contains a church and Roman Catholic chapel. There are several seats in the locality.

PARTICK, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of Govan, co. Lanark, Scotland, 2 miles N.W. of Glasgow. It is situated at the confluence of the rivers Kelvin and Clyde, and is celebrated for its extensive flour-mills, given to the Glasgow Bakers' Incorporation by the Regent Murray. There are also a cotton factory, print and bleach works, an extensive saw-mill, and shipbuilding yard. The older part of the town is irregularly built, but the modern portion contains several regular and spacious streets. There is a branch of the City of Glasgow Bank, also a savings-bank. This par. is in the presb. of Glasgow and synod of Glasgow and Ayr, and in the patron. of subscribers. The church is a convenient edifice. There are a Free church, two United Presbyterian churches, also a place of worship for the Wesleyans. There are numerous schools and institutions.

PARTICLES, a par. in the bar. of Coshlea, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Kilfinnane. Kilmallock is its post town. It contains the vil. of Glenasheen. The soil is good. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Limerick, and is appropriate to the dean and chapter. It takes its name from once having been jointly held by the Abbeys of Manister-Nenagh, Kilmallock, Buttevant, and Adare. Sunville is the neighbouring seat.

PARTINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bowden, hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 4 miles N.W. of Altrincham, and 9 from Warrington. The village, which is small, is situated on the navigable river Irwell, a branch of the Mersey. There is an extensive paper-mill, a millboard manufactory, and two tan-yards, which give employment to a large number of hands. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. The Earl of Stamford and Warrington is lord of the manor and principal landowner PARTNEY, a par. in the Wold div. of the wap. of Candleshoe, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 2 miles N. of Spilsby, its post town, and 4 W. of the Burgh railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated in a valley in the Wolds. It is scattered along the river Steeping and on the Louth and London road. It was formerly a market town, and is still celebrated for its sheep and cattle fairs. There are brick-kilns, and brewing and matting are carried on to some extent. The historian Bede mentions a religious establishment at this place, presided over by the Abbess Edelhild; but no traces of it are now remaining; there was also a hospital dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene in the reign of Henry I. About two-thirds of the land are in pasture and meadow. The surface is undulating, and the soil a sandy loam. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £210, and the glebe contains about 6 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £211. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has a lofty tower containing three bells. The register dates from 1699. The parochial charities produce about £14 per annum, besides poor's gardens. There is a National school for both sexes, built in 1858. There are places of worship for the Baptists, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists. Lord Willoughby d'Eresby is lord of the manor. Annual cattle fairs are held on the 1st and 25th of August, 18th and 19th September, 18th October; and a cheese fair on the 19th October.

PARTON, a par. in the co. of Kirkcudbright, Scotland. It comprises a vil. of the same name, also that of Corsock. It extends about 7 miles in length from W. to E., with an extreme breadth of about 5 miles. It is bounded by the pars. of Balmaclellan, Kirkpatrick, Durham, Crossmichael, Balmaghie, and Kells. The surface is hilly; but no part attains any great attitude. From Cruchie-Height, which lies to the W., there is a prospect over the valleys of the Ken and Dee. In the N. it is traversed for about 4 miles by Mochrum-fell, an extensive ridge. A great portion of the land is in pasture. The soil of the arable parts is chiefly of a light character; the surface is diversified by seven or eight small lochs abounding with fish. The parish is traversed along its western border by the road from Castle-Douglas to Ayr, and along its north-eastern border by the road from New Galloway to Dumfries. The village of Parton is about 6 miles N.W. of Castle-Douglas. It is situated between Loch Ken and the river Urr, and is a station on the Portpatrick section of the Glasgow and South-Western railway. In the vicinity are a cairn 120 yards in circumference, several Druidical stones, also two moot hills 120 and 240 yards round. This par. is in the presb of Kirkcudbright, and synod of Galloway. The minister has a stipend of £253. The parish church was erected in 1834. There are two parochial schools. At Corsock there is a Free church of recent erection. A mineral spring exists on Little Mochrum farm.

PARTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Moresby, ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 1½ mile N.E. of Whitehaven. It is a station on the Whitehaven Junction railway. It is a small fishing village, situated on the coast, with a harbour for small craft. The pier was washed away in 1795. There are extensive engineering and boiler works, employing a large portion of the inhabitants. A tunnel has been cut through Redness Point in continuation of a line of railway from the neighbouring coal works to Whitehaven. There is a free grammar school, erected and endowed by J. Williamson in 1818. In 1837 a girls' school of industry and infant school were erected at the expense of Miss Mary Robinson.

PARTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Thursby, ward and co. of Cumberland, 2 miles N.E. of Wigton. It is situated on the river Wampool. It is joined with Micklethwaite to form a township.

PARTON-CRAIG, an ancient par. of the co. of Fife, Scotland, now joined to Ferryport-on-Craig.

PARTRIDGE GREEN, a station on the Steyning and Henfield branch of the London, Brighton, and South Coast railway.

PARTRISHOW, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Crickhowell, co. Brecon, 5 miles N.E. of Crickhowell, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Usk. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Llanbedr, in the dioc. of St. David. The church, dedicated to St. Ishow, is a decayed edifice, situated in a secluded spot among the mountains. It has a rood loft. In the valley below the church is a bridge over the Gwryney, called Pont-yr-Esgob, or Bishop's Bridge, from which Baldwyn is said to have preached the Crusade.

PARTRY, a vil. in the par. of Ballyovey, bar. of Carra, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles N.W. of Ballinrobe. It is situated on the road from thence to Castlebar, between Loughs Carra and Mask. It has a dispensary, which is within the Ballinrobe Poor-law Union.

PARWICH, a par. in the hund. of Wirksworth, co. Derby, 7 miles N.E. of Ashborne, its post town, and 6 S.W. of Winster. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Peak Forest railway. In the neighbourhood are traces of an encampment of Roman origin, many relics of that description having been found on its site. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The impropriation belongs to the Dean of Lincoln. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £108. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure. The parochial charities produce about £91 per annum, of which £8 goes to the support of a school. There are National and infant schools. William Evans, Esq., is lord of the manor.

PARWYD, a cove in Aberdaron Bay, co. Carnarvon. It is celebrated for its steep cliffs, which in many places rise 600 feet above the sea.

PARYS, a rich copper mine in the mountain of the same name, in the par. of Amlwch, hund. of Twrcelyn, co. Anglesey, 15 miles N.W. of Beaumaris. The copper mine, which belongs to the Marquis of Anglesey, was at one time much richer than at present, producing 70,000 tons of copper ore, worth a quarter of a million, a year.

PASSAGE, a post-office vil. and small seaport in the par. of Kill St. Nicholas, in the bar. of Gualtiere, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles S.E. of Waterford. It is conveniently situated at the mouth of the river Suir. The village is of small importance. It has a commodious pier, and is a sub-port to Waterford. There is a police station and a Roman Catholic chapel. Perkin Warbeck embarked here in 1497, and in 1649 it was taken by the Parliamentarians. Fairs are held on 6th May, 12th June, 8th September, and 12th November.

PASSAGE, a vil. in the bar. of Kinsale, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 1 mile from Kinsale, and 14 miles S. of Cork. It is situated at the river Bandon's mouth, near Kinsale harbour.

PASSAGE, EAST, a hmlt. in the bar. of Barrymore, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It is situated on the E. side of Cork harbour, near Queenstown.

PASSAGE, NEW and OLD, two points on the Severn, co. Gloucester, about 3 miles S.E. of Chepstow.

PASSAGE, WEST, a post and market town in the pars. of Marmullane and Monkstown, in the bar. of Kerricurrihy, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles S.E. of Cork. It is a station on the Cork and Passage line of railway. This little seaport is situated on the W. side of the mouth of the river Lee, near Great Island, with which and Queenstown communication is maintained by means of a ferry. The town consists of one principal street, running for some distance along the coast, and sending off several smaller thoroughfares. It contains a church, Roman Catholic and Wesleyan chapels, and a parish school. A brisk coasting trade is carried on, and shipbuilding is a prominent branch of trade. Here is a police station, and petty sessions are held at intervals.

PASSENHAM, or PASHAM, a par. in the hund. of Cleley, co. Northampton, 1¼ mile S.W. of Stony Stratford, its post town. The village, which is of ancient date, is situated on the river Ouse, and is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlts. of Denshanger, Puxley, and Old Stratford. It is mentioned in the Saxon Chronicle as the place where the army of Edward the Elder lay whilst he was fortifying Towcester against the Danes. This parish is divided from the county of Buckingham by the river Ouse, and is traversed by the Buckingham canal. At Shrob Lodge, in this parish, lived the well-known antiquary, Browne Willis. A large portion of Whittle-Wood Forest encroaches on this parish. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1772. The living is a rect. with the cur. of Denshanger annexed, in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £650. The church, dedicated to St. Guthlake, is an ancient stone structure, with a square tower containing five bells. The church is clothed in ivy, and in the interior is a monument to Sir Robert Banastre, Kt., bearing date 1649. The whole of the edifice was restored in 1626. The parochial charities produce about £52 per annum, of which £3 goes to a school. There is a village school for both sexes.

PASS-IF-YOU-CAN, a hmlt. in the par. of Rathconnel, in the bars. of Moyashel and Magheradernon, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Mullingar, on the road to Collinstown.

PASTON, a par. in the hund. of Tunstead, co. Norfolk, 4 miles N.E. of North Walsham, its post town, and 9 from Cromer. The village, which is small and straggling, is situated on the coast, and is wholly agricultural. It is included in the Tunstead and Happing incorporation. To the W. of the village is Stow Hill, a lofty ridge, which separates this parish from that of Mundesley. The land is almost wholly arable. The impropriation belongs to the landowners. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £121. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, has a tower containing five bells. The interior contains monuments to the Paston family, one of which is a recumbent effigy of Lady Catherine Paston, in white marble, elaborately sculptured. The register dates from 1536. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum, bequeathed by the Pastons of Paston Hall, now in ruins, of which family letters of great historic interest have been published.

PASTON, a par. in the lib. of Peterborough, co. Northampton, 2½ miles N. by W. of Peterborough, its post town. It has a station at Walton on the Midland railway. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The par. comprises the hmlts. of Gunthorpe, Werrington, and Walton. Certain tithes were commuted for land and a money payment, in 1803, under an Enclosure Act; and under the recent Commutation Act a rent-charge of £140 is paid to the bishop, and a similar sum to the rector. The glebe contains 64 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £644, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a spired tower. The parochial charities produce about £42 per annum, of which £20 goes to Mountsteven's almshouses on Paston Green, with an additional £2 by Sir Charles Clarke, Bart., M.D. There is a chapel-of-ease at Werrington, at which place are situated the National schools, for the better convenience of the inhabitants, also a place of worship for the Wesleyans. The Bishop of Peterborough and Charles Cole, Esq., are lords of the manor.

PASTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirk-Newton, W. div. of Glendale ward, co. Northumberland, 4 miles W. of Kirk-Newton, and 9 N.W. of Wooler. The township, which is of large extent, is situated on the river Beamont, and near the borders of Scotland. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The soil is light but fertile. Lord Elcho's hounds meet here. Haerlaw double-ditched camp is in this neighbourhood.

PASTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Diddlebury, co. Salop, 7 miles N. of Ludlow.

PASTROW, LOWER, a hund. in the Kingsclere div. of the co. of Hants. It contains the pars. of Coombe, Crux-Easton, Faccombe, and Woodcutt, comprising an area of 7,640 acres.

PASTROW, UPPER, a hund. in the Andover div. of the co. of Hants. It contains the pars. of Hurstbourn-Tarrant, Linkenholt, Tangley, and Vernham Green, comprising an area of 11,760 acres.

PASTURES-NORTH, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Sawley, West Riding co. York, 4 miles N. of Ripley.

PATCHAM, a par. in the hund. of Dean, rape of Lewes, co. Sussex, 3 miles N. by W. of Brighton, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the verge of the South Downs, and near the Brighton railway tunnel, half a mile in length. It is a meet for the Brighton hounds. The par. comprises the hmlts. of Mouscomb and Withdean. The soil consists of chalk. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The road from London to Brighton traverses the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £153. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a square embattled tower. There is a National school, of recent erection. Patcham Place, the principal residence, is an ancient mansion, situated in well-wooded grounds, through which the London and Brighton railway passes. Within the parish is Hollingsbury encampment, where a celt, and other antiquities in bronze, were found in 1827. The Earl of Abergavenny is lord of the manor.

PATCHENHAM. See PATTERSHAM, co. Surrey.

PATCHING, a par. and hund. in the rape of Bramber, co. Sussex, 4½ miles S.E. of Arundel, its post town, and 2½ N.E. of Angmering railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the high road to Littlehampton, and is chiefly agricultural. The surface is hilly and the soil of various quality. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £200, in the patron. of the Archbishop of Canterbury. The church was formerly much larger than at present. It was beautified in 1835 by Sir Richard Hunter, Bart., and further restored in 1856 by Sir John Kirkland. In the chancel are several tablets to the Hunter family. The register dates from 1598.

PATCHWAY, a tythg. in the par. of Aldmondsbury, lower div. of the hund. of Langley, co. Gloucester, 6 miles N. by E. of Bristol. It is a station on the Bristol and South Wales Union railway. In conjunction with Hempton it forms a township.

PATELEY-BRIDGE, a parochial chplry. and market town in the tnshp. of Bishopside, par. and lib. of Ripon, West Riding co. York, 12 miles W. by S. of Ripon, and 28 W. by N. of York. It is the terminus of the Nidd Valley branch of the North-Eastern railway. The town, which is situated on the slope of a hill, forms one continuous street, declining steeply towards the northern bank of the river Nidd. It contains a mechanics' institute, with reading-room and library attached. It had a market granted by Edward II. in 1324, but first rose into importance in connection with the adjacent lead mines, which, though now partially exhausted, were formerly worked to a very great extent. Since the decline of mining operations, flax spinning-mills and brewing have been successfully established. In the vicinity are quarries of excellent freestone, from which a great quantity of flags and landing stones are obtained. The land in the vicinity is chiefly used for grazing purposes. The extensive tract of common, known as the High and Low Bishopside Moor, has recently been enclosed under the superintendence of G. H. Strafford, Esq., and will afford much employment to the labouring population. It is a polling-place for the West Riding, and the head of a Poor-law Union, comprising eleven townships. It is also the seat of a superintendent registry district, but is included in the Ripon new county-court district. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £300, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a square tower containing one bell. It was erected in 1827 by a grant of £2,000 from the Parliamentary Commissioners, and the like sum raised by local subscriptions. The old church of St. Cuthbert has just been restored for a burial chapel. The register commences in 1552. There are places of worship for Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists. There is an endowed free school for boys, called Rake's school from the site of ground on which it stands, also a Sunday-school, which is held at the church. At Stump Cross, in this township, a series of extensive caverns, lined with stalactites and stalagmites, were discovered in 1860, at the depth of 9 fathoms, and are described as having the appearance of a palace of jewels, from the great variety of colour and brilliancy of the crystals. Market day is Saturday, there being a good show of sheep and cattle every fortnight. Fairs are held on Easter and Whitsun eves, May 11th, September 17th, Monday after October 10th, and on Christmas Eve.

PATER, or PEMBROKE DOCK, a district par. and fortified dock-yard in Milford Haven, and within the parliamentary borough of Milford, 2 miles N.W. of Pembroke. It is the terminus of the Pembroke and Tenby railway. The village is situated opposite New Milford, on the S. side of Milford Haven, and has risen into importance since the decline of Milford. Here are situated the barracks, Hobb's Point jetty, lately purchased by Government, and extensive slips for shipbuilding. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £300, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church is a modern structure, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist.

PATH-FOOT, a ext. par. place in the tnshp. of Felton, co. Northumberland, 9 miles N. of Morpeth.

PATHHEAD, a burgh of barony in the district of Kirkcaldy, co. Fife, Scotland, 1 mile W. of Dysart. It is situated chiefly on the slope of a hill looking towards the Frith of Forth. It extends nearly to the town of Kirkcaldy, with which town it shares in commercial prosperity. It is divided into three districts, viz. Pathhead, Gallatown, and Saint Clairtown. There are several cotton mills, where dowlas, ticks, checks, and other goods are manufactured to a considerable extent. The places of worship comprise a chapel-of-ease and two free churches. There is an endowed school.

PATHHEAD, a vil. in the par. of Crichton, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 4 miles S.E. of Dalkeith. It is situated on the river Tyne, and on the road from Edinburgh to Lauder. The village is neatly built. The dell of the Tyne is here crossed by a bridge of five arches, each 50 feet span and 80 feet in height. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the collieries. There are a Free church, also a police station, bank, school, and a circulating library.

PATHHEAD, a vil. in the par. of New Cumnock, co. Ayr, Scotland, 67 miles from Edinburgh. It is in conjunction with the vils. of New Cumnock, and Afton Bridgend.

PATHHEAD, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of Dysart, district of Kirkcaldy, co. Fife, Scotland, 14 miles S. of Cupar. It is situated near the Frith of Forth.

PATHLOW, a vil. in the par. of Aston-Cantlow, co. Warwick, 3 miles N.W. of Stratford-on-Avon.

PATIEMUIR, a vil. in the par. of Dunfermline, co. Fife, Scotland, 3 miles from Dunfermline.

PATMARSH, a tnshp. in the par. of Worfield, co. Salop, 3 miles N. of Bridgnorth.

PATMER, a hmlt. partly in the par. of Albury, hund. of Edwinstree, and partly in the par. of Bishop's-Stortford, hund. of Braughin, co. Herts, half a mile from Bishop's-Stortford. It belongs to the Bishop of London, who holds courts leet and baron, at which a constable and other officers are annually chosen.

PATNA, a vil. in the par. of Straiton, co. Ayr, Scotland, 4 miles N.W. of Dalmellington. It is a station on the Ayr and Dalmellington railway. It is situated on the river Doon, and on the road from Ayr to Dumfries. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the coal and ironstone works. There are an United Presbyterian church, and a chapel-of-ease.

PATNACK, a feeder of the river Shee, rises in the par. of Kirkmichael, co. Aberdeen, Scotland.

PATNEY, a par. in the hund. of Elstub, co. Wilts, 6 miles S.E. of Devizes, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Avon, and is wholly agricultural. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1778. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £225, in the patron. of the Bishop of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. Swithin, is an ancient edifice, with a wooden spired tower containing three bells. There is a National school. Lord Radnor is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

PATRICK, KIRK. See KIRK-PATRICK, Isle of Man.

PATRICK'S BRIDGE, ST., a stone causeway in the S. of co. Wexford, Ireland, near Ballyteigue Point.

PATRICK'S ISLAND, ST., an islet near the Skerries, co. Dublin, Ireland.

PATRICK'S ROCK, ST., a par. in the bar. of Middlethird, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It comprises part of Cashel, which see.

PATRICK, ST., a par. in the bars. of Bunratty and Clanwilliam, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles N. of Limerick, within which city it is included. The par. is situated on the river Shannon, and includes Ardnacrusha and Kilcane. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. £293, in the patron. of the bishop. See LIMERICK CITY.

PATRICK, ST., a par. in the bar. of Shillelogher, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 1 mile S. of Kilkenny.

PATRICKSWELL, ST., a post-office vil. in the pars. of Kilkeedy, Killonahan, and Mungrett, in the bar. of Pubblebrien, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Limerick, and 124 from Dublin. It is a station on the Great Southern and Western railway. It is situated on an affluent of the river Maigue, and on the road from Limerick to Tralee. It is a long and straggling village, containing a police station and a dispensary, which last is within the Limerick poor-law union. Petty sessions are held in the village. There are several seats in the vicinity. The well which gives name to the place is said to have been dedicated to St. Patrick. Fairs are held on 26th February, 28th May, 16th June, 14th and 20th October, and 18th December.

PATRICROFT, a hmlt. in the hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 4 miles W. of Manchester. It is a station on the Manchester section of the London and North-Western railway. One of the collieries in this neighbourhood is reckoned the deepest in the county.

PATRINGTON, a par., post, and market town in the S. div. of the wap. of Holderness, East Riding co. York, 14 miles S.E. of Hull, and 50 S.E. of York. It is a station on the Hull and Holderness railway. It is situated near a creek at the mouth of the river Humber, and was formerly a port of considerable importance, but the haven, which is a mile distant from the town, has become almost silted up. It occupies the site of a Roman station, which Camden took to be the Prætorium of Antonine, and the point where the Roman road leading from the great Picts' wall terminates. The parish is of considerable extent, comprising 3,500 acres, of which two-thirds are arable, and the remainder pasture, except 40 acres of woodland. It was for a long time held by the Archbishops of York, but after the Norman conquest it became a distinct manor. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture, and a considerable trade is done in coals, lime, &c., which are imported from the West Riding. There are steam flour-mills, malting-houses, and breweries; and to the W. of the town are extensive flax-mills, with gas-works on the premises. About a mile from the market-place is a navigable branch of the Humber, which communicates with the town of Havenside. The streets are partially paved and lighted with gas from works belonging to the Provincial Gaslight and Coke Company. The petty sessions are held every alternate Saturday. The Poor-law Union comprises 26 parishes, or townships. The union workhouse is a large building, with a school-room adjoining, where the board of guardians meet every alternate Saturday. Manor courts are held twice annually. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1766. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £628, in the patron. of Clare Hall, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Patrick, is a cruciform structure, with a spired tower, 190 feet in height, and contains a clock and five bells. The spire was restored in 1810, and the church in 1856. The charities consist of a hospital, founded by Miss Linsdall, of Winstead, in 1843, for four poor widows, who receive 4*s.* per week, besides several other small charities by different donors. There is a school for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. Ruston House is the principal residence. There is a subscription library. An agricultural show is held yearly. William Marshall, Esq., is lord of the manor. Market day is Saturday, principally for corn. Fairs are held on the 28th March, 18th July, and 6th December, for cloth, shoes, and pedlery.

PATRIXBOURNE, a par. in the hund. of Bridge, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 3 miles S.E. of Canterbury, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Little Stour, and is wholly agricultural. It was formerly held by Bishop Odo, at the time of the Domesday Survey, and subsequently by John de Pratis, who founded a priory of Augustine canons here in 1200, as a cell to Beaulieu Abbey, in Normandy. In 1400 it was made subject to the priory of Merton, in Surrey, and at the Dissolution passed, with Merton Abbey, to the Says, and through them and others to the Cheyneys. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The land is partly in hop grounds. The soil is a rich loam, alternated with gravel and chalk. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £876, and the vicarial for £395 16*s.* The glebe comprises 48 acres. The impropriation belongs to the Dowager Marchioness Conyngham. The living is a vic.* annexed to that of Bridge, in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £350. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a spired tower. It has several stained windows, a carved altar-piece, and tombs of the Taylors, Dennes, &c.; also a white marble monument to the late Marquis of Conyngham. There is a school at Bifrons. The Marquis of Conyngham is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

PATSHULL, or PATTESHULL, a par. in the S. div. of Seisdon hund., co. Stafford, 5¼ miles S.E. of Shiffnal, and 8 W. of Wolverhampton, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The surface, which is level, is varied by two lakes, called Patshull and Snowdon Pools. The land is in general fertile. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1799. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £80. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was built by Sir John Astley, and is situated in the park. The interior of the church contains effigies of the Astley family. There is a school for both sexes. Patshull Hall, the seat of the Earl of Dartmouth, is situated in a well-wooded park, watered by an extensive lake, which has an artificial cascade 30 feet in height.

PATTERDALE-WITH-HARTSOP, a chplry. in the par. of Barton, W. ward, co. Westmoreland, 7 miles N.E. of Ambleside. Penrith is its post town. It is situated at the head of Ulleswater, under Helvellyn and Fair Head. The chplry. contains Deepdale. It was given to Rob. de Lancaster in 1247. There are quarries of blue slate, and several productive silver and lead mines. The surface is intersected by numerous rills from the mountains, and by others flowing from the three tarns, Brotherwater, Hayswater, and Angle Tarn. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £106. The church, dedicated to St. Patrick, contains a pulpit above 200 years old. The churchyard contains an old yew-tree, and a holy well. Patterdale Hall is the principal residence. There is a small school, with an endowment of £5 per annum.

PATTERSHAM, or PATCHENHAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Leatherhead, second div. of the hund. of Copthorpe, co. Surrey, 1 mile N.W. of Leatherhead.

PATTERSLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Oxwick, in the hund. of Launditch, co. Norfolk, 4 miles S. by W. of Fakenham. This place, formerly a parish, comprises only 320 acres. A modus of eight guineas is paid in lieu of tithes. The living is a sinecure rect.* annexed to the vic.* of Mattishall, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church has long been in ruins.

PATTINGHAM, a par., partly in the hund. of Seisdon, co. Stafford, and partly in that of Stoddesden, co. Salop, 6 miles W. of Wolverhampton, its post town. The village is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the tnshps. of Nurton and Rudge. A gold torque 4 feet in length, and weighing 3 lbs. 2 oz., was found here in 1700, and another piece in 1780. The surface is hilly. The soil is of a mixed nature, but in general fertile, producing good barley crops. There are brick and tile kilns. The vicarial tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £342. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £342. The church, dedicated to St. Chad, is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing six bells. The S. aisle has a fine window. The churchyard contains a cross of great antiquity. The register dates from 1559. The church has recently been thoroughly restored, at the expense of the Earl of Dartmouth, who is lord of the manor. The parochial charities produce about £86 per annum, of which £15 goes to a free school, and £69 is realised from Church and poor's land. There is a National school for both sexes; also an infant school, the latter supported at the expense of the Countess of Dartmouth.

PATTISHALL, or PATESHULL, a par. in the hund. of Towcester, co. Northampton, 4¼ miles N.W. of Towcester, its post town, and 5 W. of the Blisworth station on the London and North-Western railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Roman way, Watling Street, near the Grand Junction canal. It is chiefly agricultural. The par. comprises the hmlts. of Ascote, Dalscote, Eastcote, and part of Foster's Booth. The living is a vic. in two parts, called Upper and Lower, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church, dedicated to the Holy Cross, has a tower containing a clock and five bells. The parochial charities produce about £200 per annum, £20 of which goes to the support of two aged widows, £20 for the apprenticing of two boys, and the remainder to the poor, in fuel, &c. There is a free school, partially endowed by Thomas Young in 1684. The Baptists and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. Chief Justices Simon and Martin de Pateshull, Bishop Hugh de Pateshull, and Dean Steward, were born in this parish. The Earl of Pomfret is lord of the manor.

PATTISWICK, or PATESWICK, a par. in the Witham div. of the hund. of Lexden, co. Essex, 2 miles N.W. of Coggeshall, its post town, and 4 E. of Braintree. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Blackwater, and is wholly agricultural. This parish was formerly a hamlet of Feering. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £244, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, is an ancient edifice with a shingled spire, situated on the village green. It has been thoroughly restored. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a National school. The Bishop of Rochester is lord of the manor.

PATTON, a tnshp. in the par. and ward of Kendal, co. Westmoreland, 4 miles N.E. of Kendal railway station. There are a corn-mill and malt-kilns in the neighbourhood. Shaw End is the principal residence.

PAUL, a par in the hund. of Penrith, co. Cornwall, 2⅔ miles S.W. of Penzance, its post town. The parish, which is of large extent and very populous, is situated on the coast near Mount's Bay, and derives its name from a Cornishman called Paul-de-Leon. The village was burnt by the Spaniards in 1593. The par. includes the villages of Mousehole and Newlyn. There is a mineral spring of excellent quality in the neighbourhood. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the pilchard and mackerel fisheries. The soil consists of a rich loam, with a subsoil of killas and granite. A tin mine, called Wheal Gaths, is worked at Ballogas, and a tin smelting-house was erected at Trereife. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £485, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St

Paul, is an ancient stone structure with a square embattled tower containing three bells. There are tombs of the Godolphins, Pendarves, and other ancient families. There is also a district church, dedicated to St. Peter, at Newlyn, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £130, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The Independents, Baptists, and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. An almshouse for twelve poor persons was founded here in 1709 by Captain Stephen Hutchins, who endowed it with land now producing £100 per annum. At Kerris are remains of a Druidical temple, called the Roundago, near which, in 1723, was discovered a vault containing an urn of the finest red clay filled with small brass coins.

PAUL, or PAGHILL, a par. in the S. div. of the wap. of Holderness, East Riding co. York, 2½ miles S.W. of Hedon, its post town, and 5 S.E. of Hull. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Humber. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the fisheries and in agriculture. The par. includes the tnshps. of Paul and Thorngumbald. Near the river are the ruins of a fort, built by the Royalists at the siege of Hull in 1642. There is a lighthouse, forty feet in height, which serves as a telegraph station, erected in 1836. The parish formerly contained an extensive dockyard, in which several ships of the line, including the Anson, of 74 guns, were built in 1812; but the yard is now deserted. This place is celebrated for its shrimps. The soil is chiefly of warp and strong clay. Nearly two-thirds of the land is arable, the remainder meadow. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1811. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Thorngumbald annexed, in the dioc. of York, val. £200. The church, dedicated to SS. Mary and Andrew, is an ancient cruciform structure with a tower containing one bell. It is situated on an eminence at a short distance from the village, and was restored and repewed in 1822. The parochial charities are of small amount. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. All that remains of the mansion of Paul Holme is an old brick tower, and a farmhouse erected from a portion of its ruins. High Paul House is situated on an eminence commanding a prospect of the Humber. Anthony Bannister, Esq., is lord of the manor.

PAULERSPURY, or PAUL'S BURY, a par. in the hund. of Cleley, co. Northampton, 3 miles S. by E. of Towcester, its post town. The village, which is extensive, is situated on the Roman way, Watling Street. The par. includes the small hmlt. of Heathencote. A portion of the female inhabitants are engaged in the making of pillow lace. Many Roman coins of Constantine, Maximian, and other emperors have been found near the line of the Roman road. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. in the king's books £24 4*s.* 2*d.*, in the patron. of New College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. James, is a commodious stone structure with a tower containing a clock and five bells. The interior of the church contains two piscinas in good condition, a curious ancient font, an effigy of a Throckmorton, and tombs of the first Lord Bathurst's father, and of the Sheddons. The parochial charities produce about £44 per annum, of which £11 goes to the National school. Dr. E. Bernard, a learned astronomer and Savilian professor at Oxford, was born here in 1638. George Sheddon, Esq., is lord of the manor.

PAULSTOWN, a vil. in the pars. of Shankill and Kilmacahill, in the bar. of Gowran, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N. of Gowran. It is situated on the road from Kilkenny to Carlow, and contains a police station and a Roman Catholic chapel. Paulstown House is one of several residences in the vicinity. Here are ruins of a castle and of a church, and traces of an abbey.

PAULTON, a par. in the hund. of Chewton, co. Somerset, 12 miles S.E. of Bristol, its post town, and 10 S.W. of Bath. It is a large and prosperous village, situated between the high roads from Bristol and Bath to Wells. There are several good shops, also a Literary and Scientific Institution and a savings-bank. A large portion of the inhabitants are employed in the collieries, stone-quarries, and lime-works, and in the Paulton iron-foundry; malting is also carried on to some extent. Paulton is celebrated for its production of butter and cheese. The soil is of a loamy nature, on a subsoil of limestone rock. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £75, and the glebe comprises five acres. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £172, in the patron. of the Vicar of Chewton Mendip. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, has a square tower, containing a clock and five bells. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There are National and infant schools for both sexes, also a Sunday-school, held in the National school-house. The Wesleyans have also a school, in which a Sunday-school is also held. There are places of worship for the Wesleyans, Wesleyan Reformers, Primitive Methodists, and Baptists. Mrs. L. Carter is lady of the manor.

PAULTON PARK, a demesne in the hund. of King's-Somburn, co. Hants, 3 miles S.W. of Romsey, and 10 N.W. of Southampton. The grounds were laid out by Browne.

PAUNTLEY, a par. in the hund. of Botloe, co. Gloucester, 2½ miles N. by E. of Newent, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Leadon, and is wholly agricultural. The surface is diversified with hill and dale. It is a custom on Twelfth Night eve for the labourers to light a dozen fires in a cornfield and drink success to the harvest. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £450. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £80, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, is an ancient structure with a Norman doorway. There are mineral springs, the water of which somewhat resembles in its properties those of Cheltenham.

PAVENHAM, or PAVINGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Willey, co. Bedford, 6 miles N.W. of Bedford, its post town. It is a small village, situated on the river Ouse, and is wholly agricultural. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1769. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £200. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a spired tower containing five bells. There is a National school, which is supported by Joseph Tucker, Esq. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Pavenham Bury, the principal residence, is situated in the midst of wooded grounds. Crewe Alston, Esq., is lord of the manor.

PAVILAND, a hmlt. in the par. of Penmaen, co. Glamorgan, 10 miles S.W. of Swansea. It is situated by the sea-coast, and has traces of a British camp. There are two limestone caves in the cliffs, in which bones of various extinct animals were discovered by Dr. Buckland in 1823.

PAVILION, THE, a demesne in the par. of Melrose, district of Castle Melrose, co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 1 mile N.W. of Melrose, and 11 miles N.W. of Jedburgh. It is the seat of Lord Somerville, and is situated under the Eildon Hills, at the point where the river Allan joins the Tweed.

PAWLETT, a par. in the hund. of North Petherton, co. Somerset, 4 miles N. of Bridgwater, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the navigable river Parret, and near the line of the Bristol railway. It is chiefly agricultural. It gives name to the Paulets of Amport, Marquises of Winchester. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £200, and the vicarial for £349 10*s.* The glebe comprises 9 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £264. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient stone edifice with a square tower, containing a clock and five bells. The register dates from 1667. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Lord De Mauley is lord of the manor and sole landowner. Annual fairs are held on the last Mondays in August and October.

PAXFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Blockley, co. Gloucester, formerly in Worcester, 2 miles S.E. of Chipping-Campden, and 4 N.W. of Moreton-in-the-Marsh.

PAXTON, a vil. in the par. of Hutton, co. Berwick, Scotland, 4 miles W. of Berwick. It is situated on the river Whitadder, near the suspension-bridge across the Tweed. Paxton House is the principal residence. There is a parochial school.

PAXTON, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Toseland, co. Huntingdon, 3 miles N.E. of St. Neot's, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the main road to Godmanchester, and is wholly agricultural. The soil consists of clay and gravel. The surface is hilly between the village and St. Neot's. The meadows are subject to inundation from the river Ouse, which separates this parish on the W. from that of Little Paxton. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1811. The glebe comprises 97 acres in this parish, and 60 in Little Paxton. The living is a vic.* with the curs. of Little Paxton and Toseland annexed, in the dioc. of Ely, val. £231, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Lincoln. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is an ancient structure containing sedilia and piscina. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. There is a Sunday-school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

PAXTON, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Toseland, co. Huntingdon, 2 miles N. of St. Neot's, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Great North road and on the river Ouse. There are a flour-mill and extensive paper-mills, giving employment to the chief portion of the inhabitants. The soil consists of clay and gravel, and the surface is level. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1812. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Great Paxton, in the dioc. of Ely. The church, dedicated to St. James, has a square tower. The parochial charities produce about £36 per annum, realised from town lands. There is an endowed free school. Paxton Hall and Paxton Place are the principal residences.

PAYHEMBURY, or PEHEMBURY, a par. in the hund. of Hayridge, co. Devon, 4 miles S. of Ottery, its post town, and 5½ W. of Honiton. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near Hembury Fort, and is wholly agricultural. The prospect from the Roman encampment of Hembury Fort is extensive. The soil is of a sandy nature. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £150, and the vicarial for £137; the glebe comprises 81 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £186. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing six bells. The interior of the church contains a screen and several monuments and brasses. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum. J. Venn, Esq., is lord of the manor. At Leyhill is an old mansion with a chapel.

PAYTHORNE, a tnshp. in the par. of Gisburn, W. div. of the wap. of Staincliff, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.W. of the parish church at Gisburn, and 8 S. of Settle. It is situated on the river Ribble, and is chiefly the property of Lord Ribblesdale.

PAYTOE, a hmlt. in the par. of Leintwardine, hund. of Wigmore, co. Hereford, 2 miles from the parish church of Leintwardine, and 6 S.W. of Ludlow. It forms, in conjunction with Adforton, a tnshp.

PEAK, a hmlt. in the par. of East Meon, hund. of Meon-Stoke, co. Hants, 5 miles N.E. of Bishop's Waltham, and 10 W. by S. of Petersfield. It is joined with Westbury to form a tythg.

PEAK-FOREST, an ext. par. lib. in the hund. of High Peak, co. Derby, 4 miles S.E. of Chapel-en-le-Frith, and 3 N.W. of Tideswell. The village, which is of small extent, is situated in the Peak, a ridge of limestone rocks at the head of the river Derwent. Peak-Forest was anciently called Peaclond by the Saxons, and De-Alto-Pecco by the Normans. It comprised the pars. of Castleton, Chapel-en-le-Frith, Glossop, Hope, and Mottram (which see), also the peaks of Kinder-Scout, 1,800 feet in height, Mam Tor, 1,751 feet, the Devil's Cave, &c. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the stone quarries. The impropriation belongs to the Duke of Devonshire. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £153. The church is dedicated to King Charles the Martyr. There is a free school for both sexes, which is entirely supported by the Duke of Devonshire, who is the lord of the manor.

PEAK HILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Cowbit, co. Lincoln, 4 miles S.E. of Spalding. It is situated near the river Welland.

PEAKIRK, a par. in the lib. of Peterborough, co. Northampton, 3 miles S.E. of Market-Deeping, its post town, and 7½ N.W. of Peterborough. It is a station on the Great Northern railway. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the navigable river Welland, and is wholly agricultural. The surface is level, and is chiefly used for grazing. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £600. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Glinton annexed, in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £625, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Pega, is an ancient structure with a spired tower containing two bells. There are remains of a cell, said to have been founded by St. Pega in 714, and now called the Hermitage, also traces of a monastery founded by Edmund Atheling, and twice destroyed by the Danes. At Boro Fen, about 3 miles distant, are traces of a Danish encampment.

PEALS, a tnshp. in the par. of Alwinton, W. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 8 miles N.W. of Rothbury. It is situated on the river Coquet.

PEART, a tythg. in the par. of Laverton, co. Somerset, 4 miles N. of Frome.

PEAS BRIDGE, a causeway over the Peas Ravine, built of stone in 1786, to command the pass. It is 123 feet high, 300 long, and 16 wide.

PEASEMORE, a par. in the hund. of Faircross, co. Berks, 4 miles S.W. of East Ilsley, its post town, and 6 N.W. of Newbury. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The surface is hilly, but the soil fertile, consisting generally of a rich loam. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £663 10*s., and the glebe comprises 65 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £800. The church has a tower surmounted by a spire and containing five bells. The church, with the exception of the tower, was rebuilt in 1842. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a free school. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship. C. Eyre, Esq., is lord of the manor.

PEASENHALL, a par. in the hund. of Blything, co. Suffolk, 7 miles N.E. of Framlingham, and 2½ W. by N. of Yoxford, its post town. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the river Badenham, and is chiefly agricultural. The extensive Suffolk drill manufactory of Smyth and Sons is in this parish. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £432 11*s.*, the vicarial for £9 15*s., and those of the incumbent for £120. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Sibton, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The parochial charities produce about £54 per annum, realised from church lands. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a place of worship.

PEASLEY CROSS, a station on the Ormskirk, St. Helen's, and Widnes railway, in the par. of Prescot, co. Lancaster, three-quarters of a mile from St. Helen's, and 3 miles N.E. of Prescot.

PEASMARSH, a par. in the hund. of Goldspur, rape of Hastings, co. Sussex, 3½ miles N.W. of Rye. Staplehurst is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road from London to Rye, and is wholly agricultural. The land is partly in hop-grounds. The surface is undulating, and the river

Rother bounds the parish on the N. Good building stone is quarried. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £714. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £261, in the patron. of Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is surmounted by a spire, and of great antiquity. It is situated in the midst of a wooded park, about a mile from the village, and has recently been restored. There is a National school for both sexes of recent erection. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. "The Place" is the principal residence. William Pattison, the poet, was born here in 1706.

PEATIE, a vil. in the par. of Kethins, co. Forfar, Scotland, 11 miles N.W. of Dundee.

PEATLING MAGNA, a par. in the hund. of Guthlaxton, co. Leicester, 7 miles N. by E. of Lutterworth, its post town, and 2½ S.E. of the Countesthorpe station, on the Midland railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Soar, and is wholly agricultural. There is a large portion of excellent grazing land. The glebe comprises 48 acres. The living is a vic. annexed to the rect.* of Willoughby-Waterless, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure with a spired tower containing four bells. There is a Sunday-school, which is well attended. J. R. Swindell, Esq., is lord of the manor.

PEATLING PARVA, a par. in the hund. of Guthlaxton, co. Leicester, 4½ miles N.E. of Lutterworth, its post town, and 10 N.E. of Market-Harborough. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. There are some mineral springs, of a mild chalybeate nature, once in much repute. The surface is elevated, but not hilly. The soil is a mixture of clay and loam. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £158. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a square embattled tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £30 per annum, the produce of the poors' land given in 1665. Little Peatling Hall is the principal residence. T. F. Cook, Esq., is lord of the manor.

PEATON, a tnshp. in the par. of Diddlebury, hund. of Munslow, co. Salop.

PEBIDIAWKE, a deanery in the archdeac. and dioc. of St. David's.

PEBMARSH, a par. in the hund. of Hinckford, co. Essex, 3½ miles N.E. of Halstead, its post town, and 6 S. of Sudbury. It is a small ancient village, situated on a branch of the river Colne, and is chiefly agricultural. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the silk mills. The straw bonnet and lint manufactures are likewise carried on. The soil is of a heavy nature, but fertile. The land is chiefly arable, with a considerable proportion of woodland and gardens. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £583, and there are 26½ acres of glebe. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £450. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient structure with an embattled tower containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. There is a free school for both sexes, also an infant school supported by voluntary contributions. C. W. G. Puller, Esq., is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

PEBSBURY, a hmlt. in the par. of Huish Episcopi, co. Somerset, near Langport.

PEBWORTH, a par. in the upper div. of Kiftsgate hund., co. Gloucester, 5½ miles N. by W. of Chipping-Campden, its post town, and 2 from Honeybourne railway station, on the Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton line. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Broad Marston. There are several mineral springs of excellent quality, resembling the Cheltenham waters. The surface is partially hilly, and the soil a stony rich clay. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £98. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a tower containing four bells. W. B. Shekel, Esq., is lord of the manor.

PECKFORTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bunbury, first div. of the hund. of Eddisbury, co. Chester, 2 miles S.W. of Bunbury, 6 N.W. of Chester, and 4 S. by W. of Tarporley, its post town. The principal attraction of the neighbourhood is Peckforton Castle, a red sandstone building erected in 1850. It is situated on an eminence commanding a view of the surrounding country. In this township is Horseley Bath, a mineral spring formerly in much esteem. The living is a cur. annexed to the perpet. cur.* of Bunbury, in the dioc. of Chester. Divine service is held in the chapel adjoining the castle. A school for both sexes is held in the entrance lodge to the castle. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship.

PECKHAM, a hmlt. and suburban district in the par. of Camberwell, E. div. of the hund. of Brixton, co. Surrey, 3½ miles S. by E. of St. Paul's, London. Until a few years ago it was an inconsiderable village, forming one principal street, but has recently become a suburb of London, containing 28,135 inhabitants, besides 8,154 within the ecclesiastical district of St. Mary Magdalene. It includes Peckham New Town, near the Surrey canal, where Nell Gwynne once had a house, and Peckham Rye, a country spot towards Forest Hill, containing many villas and well-built houses. Here are situated the Nunhead cemetery, the City Union poorhouse, Peckham House lunatic asylum for City paupers, the Licensed Victuallers' asylum, built in 1826 on 6 acres of ground, at a cost of £25,000, and at New Cross the Royal Naval school, built in 1835 for the education of 200 sons of officers. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £300. The district church was built in 1842, at a cost of £4,323, defrayed by the Church Commissioners; but there are five other churches and proprietary episcopal chapels, also places of worship for Baptists, Independents, and Wesleyans. There are National, Lancastrian, and infant schools.

PECKHAM, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Twyford, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 6 miles N.E. of Tunbridge, its post town, and 2½ W. of the railway station at Wateringbury, on the Maidstone branch of the South-Eastern line. It is situated near the river Medway, which is navigable to Tunbridge, and has a large wharf here. Tanning and seed-crushing mills afford employment to a considerable number of the inhabitants. There are four distinct hamlets in this parish. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £540, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure, with a tower and spire containing a peal of six bells. The church has been recently restored and new windows added. The district church of the Holy Trinity is a modern edifice, with turret for two bells, situated near the centre of the parish, val. £300, in the patron. of the vicar. The register commences in 1558. The Wesleyans and Calvinistic Methodists have each a chapel. There are National schools for boys and girls, also an infant school. A small row of almshouses has been built by T. H. Boorman, Esq.

PECKHAM, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Littlefield, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 8 miles S.W. of Maidstone, its post town, 6 N.E. of Tunbridge, and 4 W. of the Wateringbury railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Medway, and is chiefly agricultural. There is a paper mill in the neighbourhood. Part of the land is cultivated in hops and fruit, and there is a considerable tract of woodland. The appropriation belongs to the Dean and Chapter of Rochester. There are 14 acres of glebe in this parish, and a farm of 20 acres in that of Tudeley. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £177, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Rochester. The church, dedicated to St. Dunstan, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing three bells. The interor of the church contains monuments of the Colepepers. The register dates from 1560. Hamptons and Oxenhoath are the principal residences. The latter was formerly the seat of Judge Colepeper, who founded a preceptory of the Knights Hospitallers here in 1408.

The Baroness Le Despencer is lady of the manor. A fair is held on Whit Tuesday.

PECKLETON, a par. in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 6 miles N.E. of Hinckley, its post town, and 3 S.W. of Desford railway station. This place was called in ancient writings indifferently Pecklington, Pechlden, and Peycelton. It is a small village situated near Leicester Forest, and is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Tooley Park, with the ext. par. places of Bassett House and Knoll House, and a portion of the disafforested chase of Leicester, of which last, by an Act of Enclosure in 1771, 109 acres were allotted to this parish tithe free. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £474. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a low embattled and pinnacled tower, surmounted by a crocketed spire, and containing six bells. The E. window contains some fragments of ancient stained glass, and in the chancel are effigies of the Motons, who formerly held the manor. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. Peckleton House is the principal residence. Lady Noel Byron is lady of the manor.

PEDDER'S WAY, the name given to the Roman or British road from Ixworth, in Suffolk, to Hunstanton on the Wash.

PEDLINGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Saltwood, hund. of Hayne, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, near Hythe.

PEDMORE, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Halfshire, co. Worcester, 1½ mile S.E. of Stourbridge, its railway station and post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated under the Clent hills, and is chiefly agricultural. Pedmore, in the year 1699, was given to the blue-coat school of Stourbridge by Thomas Foley, Esq., the founder of that institution. Stone is quarried, and some of the inhabitants are employed in nail making. The Oxford, Worcester, Wolverhampton, and Stourbridge railway passes through the village, as does also the road leading from Stourbridge to Bromsgrove. The land is chiefly arable, and well adapted for barley and turnips. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £407, in the patron. of Old Swinford Hospital. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, nearly clothed in ivy. The Feoffees of Old Swinford are lords of the manor.

PEDWARDINE, a hmlt. in the par. of Brampton-Bryann, hund. of Wigmore, co. Hereford, 4½ miles N.E. of Presteign. It is joined with Boresford to form a tnshp. Here was once a castle belonging to the family of Hay, barons of Pedwardine and earls of Kinnoul.

PEDWELL, a hmlt. in the par. of Ashcott, co. Somerset, 7 miles E. of Bridgwater.

PEEBLES, a par., post and market town, an ancient royal burgh, and the capital of the co. of Peebles, Scotland, 6 miles N.W. of Innerleithen, and 22 S. of Edinburgh by road, or 27 by railway. It is a station on the North British and Caledonian railways, both of which have branch lines to this point. The parish, which is of large extent, being 10 miles in length from N. to S., and 6 miles in extreme breadth, lies principally in Peeblesshire, but has a small part in Selkirkshire. It is bounded by the parishes of Eddlestone, Innerleithen, Lyne, Manor, Stobo, Traquair, and Yarrow. It includes part of the vale of the Tweed, which is fertile, comprising upwards of 3,000 acres under tillage, but the greater part of the parish is occupied by hilly ridges and isolated eminences, which, though in general less mountainous than the hills of most other parishes of Peeblesshire, are nevertheless only suitable for pastoral grounds. About 8,000 sheep and many herds of black cattle are pastured on these hills, and about 1,800 acres are under natural wood or plantation. The town of Peebles, which contains a population of 2,682, is situated on the N. bank of the Tweed, which is here joined by the Eddlestone river. It was in early times a seat of the Scottish kings, and had a royal castle and chapel. In 1260 Alexander III. erected here the Cross church and Trinity Friars monastery in honour of St. Nicholaus, of which but few traces remain. In 1296 the bailiffs and burgesses swore fealty to Edward I. of England at Berwick, who ten years afterwards, as lord paramount, granted the town, with its mills and pertinents, to Aylmer de Valence and his heirs. In 1334 Edward Baliol conveyed it to Edward III. of England, to be held in perpetuity as part of the purchase money of a dependent crown. In 1357 it was made a royal burgh by David II., and sent two members to parliament. James I. is said to have composed here "Peblis to the Play," on the occasion of witnessing the festival of Beltane, or "the fire of Baal," which was anciently celebrated with great pomp, but is now obsolete. In 1546, the English, under the command of the Earl of Hertford, reduced the town to ashes, but spared its churches and its cross, and in 1604 it was accidentally burnt. In 1585 the Protestant lords passed through it in their march against the Earl of Arran at Stirling. In 1745 a detachment of the troops of Prince Charles Stuart encamped a day at Peebles on their way southwards. In the great French war the citizens were eminently loyal, and mustered no fewer than 820 effective volunteers and yeomanry out of an available population of only 8,800. Previous to the passing of the Reform Act it contributed to send one member with Selkirk to parliament, but now participates in returning one member for the county of Peebles. It consists of the new and old towns separated by the Eddlestone river, but connected by two bridges, one a stone erection of a single arch, and the other a timber bridge for foot passengers only. The New Town occupies the peninsula formed by the Tweed and Eddlestone, and comprises two main streets, the High-street, running from near the bowling green at the extremity of the peninsula to the place where the ancient town cross stood, and Northgate-street, running nearly parallel with the Eddlestone. These streets are connected by several narrow and subordinate thoroughfares, with a promenade and playground called Tweed-green, where the burgh school stands, facing the river to the S. The old town is of small extent, consisting almost entirely of a single street of very ancient thatched houses, built on the declivity of a ridge, and running down towards the bank of the Tweed, which is here crossed by two bridges, the one a structure of unknown antiquity, consisting of five arches in the main channel of the river, with three side arches to assist in carrying off a flood, and which was widened in 1835, so as to admit of two carriages passing each other, and the other an iron bridge, constructed in 1818, for foot passengers only. The old walls, which formerly surrounded the new town on all sides, except where it was washed by the Tweed, have been removed, as also have the old castle and the cross, similar to that at Edinburgh, which last once adorned the High-street; but there are still several venerable structures remaining, as Dean's House, the town residence of the noble family of March, and the natal residence of the last Duke of Queensbury, with its curious castellated front and "pepper-box" turret, admitting ingress only by an arched passage leading through the back courtyard. This mansion is immortalised as the scene of the incident which forms the subject of Sir Walter Scott's ballad of "The Maid of Neidpath," and Campbell's "Earl March gazed on his dying child." There are also remains of the famous church of the Holy Cross, at the E. end of the town, being one of the four churches in Scotland called ministeries, and at the W. end of the town ruins of St. Andrew's church, occupying the site of the pristine parish church of Peebles; and in the New Town, near the site of the old cross, the holy well of St. Mungo, which still affords a copious supply of water. The principal public buildings are the county hall and gaol, a stone structure in the Elizabethan style of architecture, erected in 1844, the burgh schools, the "Tontine" inn, in the High-street, a savings-bank, three commercial banks, branches of the Linen Company's, the Union and the City of Glasgow banks, a literary and scientific institution, Freemasons' lodge, library and reading rooms, besides 15 insurance agencies, horticultural and agricultural societies, a widow and orphan's friend society, a curling club, and several other institutions. It has a public trust water company and gas works. One monthly newspaper, the Peebles Advertiser, is published in the town, which has recently become a summer retreat for wealthy families from Edinburgh and Dundee.—A considerable number of the inhabitants were formerly engaged in the cloth and cotton manufactures, but these have recently declined. There is some business still done in the fabrication of plaiding, flannel, and coarse woollen, also in waulking and dyeing, for which there are extensive mills on the Eddlestone water, and in stocking weaving and leather dressing. The corn mills on the Tweed, alluded to in Dr. Pennecuick's verses, were recently destroyed by fire, and a woollen factory now occupies the site.—Peebles is governed, under a charter of James VI., by a provost, two bailies, town clerk, and twelve councillors. The corporation revenue in 1860 was £552, and the municipal constituency 97.—The par. is the seat of a presb. in the synod of Lothian and Tweeddale. The minister's stipend is £327 12*s.* 9*d.*, besides a glebe valued at £24. The parish church stands in the town facing the High-street. It is a substantial structure with a massive steeple, erected in 1784. There are a Free church, two United Presbyterian churches, an Episcopalian chapel, and a Roman Catholic chapel. The principal schools are the burgh school, a grammar school, Free Church school, two girls' schools, and two private academies.—The Earl of Wemyss takes from this place the title of viscount.—Market day is Tuesday, chiefly for corn and meal. Fairs are held on the second Tuesdays in January and October, the first Tuesday in March, second Wednesday in May, Tuesday after 18th July, Tuesday before 24th August, and on the Tuesdays before 12th September and 12th December.

PEEBLESSHIRE, or TWEEDDALE, an inland co. in the south-eastern div. of Scotland. It is bounded on the N. and N.E. by Edinburghshire, on the E. by Berwickshire, on the S.E. by Selkirkshire, on the S.W. by Dumfriesshire, and on the W. by Lanarkshire. The outline of the country is irregularly triangular; the sides fronting the N.E., the S.E., and the W. are marked partly by watercourses and partly by ranges of round-topped hills. Its circuit is about 110 miles, and its extreme length—from Annanhead Hill, in the N.E., to the southern boundary of Eddlestone parish—is 30 miles, with an extreme breadth from E. to W. of 22 miles, but its average breadth does not exceed 13 miles. Its area is about 354 square miles, or 226,488 acres, of which only one-seventh part has been brought into cultivation, the remainder being moorland and moss. In very early times it was a seat of the Gadeni, and was then covered with extensive woods, subsequently known as the forests of Leithen, Traquair, and part of the Great Ettrick forest. On its subjugation by the Romans it was included in the province of Valentia, and has still traces of three Roman camps, one on the E. bank of the Lyne, near Lyne-church, one at Upper-Whitefield in Linton, and one in Manor. The Watling Street which traverses Clydesdale appears to have been carried within half a mile of the western extremity of Tweeddale, at a point where there is a natural passage from the Clyde to the Tweed, but not to have entered the county. After the departure of the Romans it formed part of the Strathclyde kingdom, but was encroached upon in the 9th century by the Scoto-Irish on the W. and by the Saxons on the E., who drove many of the original inhabitants to seek shelter in Wales. It subsequently became part of the Saxon kingdom of Northumbria, and was annexed in 974 to the kingdom of Scotland. The Scoto-Saxons, who were the last race to assume the mastery in Tweeddale, appear from their dialect to have immigrated, not from the W., like the inhabitants of the adjoining county of Dumfriesshire, but from the E. of England, like the people of Roxburgh and Selkirk.—Previous to the felling of the natural woods, this county appears to have been much warmer, and to have supported a population almost equal to that which belongs to it at present. Even so early as the reign of David I. we find it parcelled out between the parks of nobles, the granges of monks, and the manors of barons, and at that time must have been embellished with their mansions, churches, mills, kilns, and brewhouses; but after it became shire ground, towards the close of the 13th century, it was, like the surrounding country, stripped of its thick natural forests, which previously had effectually sheltered the cultivated lands from the erosion of the hoar-frost and the blast of the withering winds, which now swept unopposed across its barren heaths and moss. Although the soil of by far the greater part of the county never was, and never will be, turned up by the plough, yet it is capable of vast improvement as a pastoral county, chiefly by the judicious extension of plantations and the adaptation of soils, which processes have been steadily going on since the latter part of the last century. The lowest ground in the county is in the narrow vale of the Tweed, but this lies near 500 feet above sea-level, and is nowhere more than 3 miles broad, while in most parts of its course the mountains rise abruptly from the river's banks, so that the extent of arable land is necessarily but small. The remainder of the county is one series of mountain ridges, almost impenetrable on the N. and S., but in general of symmetrical outline, and covered with verdure to the summits, affording excellent sheep pasture. On the high grounds peat moss is found in almost every hollow and patch of level, varying in thickness from 4 to 20 feet, and in its natural state is always swampy, but when improved by subsoil ploughing it becomes workable, and even sometimes fertile. Some of the principal summits in the S. and S.W. are the Hart Fells, rising 2,790 feet above the sea, and forming the nucleus of the great mountain ranges which constitute the southern Highlands, and in which the Tweed and Annan take their rise. Dollar Law, another lofty summit, rises 2,790 feet, and Broad Law 2,740 feet: even along the northern and western boundaries many of the summits attain an elevation of 2,000 feet. The prevailing rocks are clay slate and greywacke slate or whinstone, with Old Red sandstone in the N., and carboniferous limestone and coal in the N.E. A great variety of clays overlie the carboniferous formation, including fire clay, fuller's earth, red and yellow ochres, alum slate, &c. In the same district also occur red and white freestone, which is quarried for building and for paving flags, compact limestone sufficiently hard to take the polish of white ornamental marble, ironstone, galena or lead-ore, native loadstone, silver in combination with lead, and traces of gold, which last was formerly found in considerable quantities in the parish of Megget. A fine blue slate is quarried at Stobo, and lime and coal are worked near Linton, but none of the other minerals to any considerable extent.—The chief mineral springs are those of Heaven-aqua, in the parish of Linton, and the celebrated spa of Innerleithen, which last, in its medicinal properties, nearly resembles the waters of Harrogate. Multitudes of small streams occasionally swollen into mountain torrents, run between the hills to the Lyne, Eddlestone, Leithen, Manor, Quair, and other branches of the Tweed, which majestic river rises in Tweeds-muir about 1,500 feet above the level of the sea, and traverses the whole length of the county, in the segment of a circle, from the extreme S.W. corner, through the centre, and so to the eastern angle, over a distance of above 41 miles. The land everywhere rises from this great line of drainage in a series of shelving, but quite irregularly disposed, ridges towards the boundaries, being cleft at intervals by narrow gorges, or glens, through which the minor streams wind their way to the main channel. The small valleys or hollows amongst the mountains, scooped out by the action of the rivers, are occasionally fertile and well cultivated. Most of the arable farms are consequently small, comprising from 40 to 100 acres, and none exceeding 200 acres. The sheep farms, on the contrary, which comprehend the whole of the upland districts, are of large extent, averaging from 800 to 4,000 acres. The farms are generally let on leases running from 14 to 19 years, and occasionally for 50 years; as on the late Duke of Queensberry's property, which has been vastly improved by giving the tenant a permanent interest in the reclamation of the soil. In 1855 the whole surface of the county was distributed among eighty-eight landed proprietors, twenty-four of whom had a Scotch valuation not exceeding £50, and only seven a valuation exceeding £5,000. According to the old Scotch valuation of 1674, this rental was £51,937, but according to the new Valuation Act as ascertained in 1855, it was £79,484. In the same year the number of occupiers of land paying a rent of £10, or above, was 314, and the aggregate number of acres cultivated by them was 36,436. The staple industry is sheep-farming, there being no fewer than 115,000 sheep, and 61,000 lambs kept, chiefly of the Cheviot and black-faced breeds. There were also in 1855, the year of the Highland and Agricultural Society's Report, 2,581 milch cows, 1,735 calves, and 3,037 other bovine cattle, besides horses and pigs. Poultry are only reared in such numbers as can find food for themselves about the farm; and pigeons do not thrive. Rabbits are found wild in the sandy parts of the parish of Linton, and wild game on the moors, but not in abundance. A few salmon and trout are caught. —The climate is sharp, but bracing; and although the average rain-fall is less than on either the E. or W. coasts, the number of rainy and snowy days is greater. The spring months have often a prevalence of cold easterly winds, and the winter is very severe, the thermometer occasionally registering 14° below zero. Considerable damage is also done to vegetation by the frigid mist, or hoar frost, which frequently occurs at the latter end of August, or beginning of September, before the crops are ready for harvesting.—The manufactures of Peebles are almost confined to the towns of Peebles and Inverleithen (which see). The whole commerce consists in the export of agricultural produce, and the importation of such small amount of goods as are required for local consumption.—The population slightly declined in the decennial period between 1831 and 1841, but recovered itself in 1851, when it amounted to 10,738, and in 1861 had increased to 11,408. The number of inhabited houses in the same period advanced from 1,796 in 1851, to 1,979 in 1861. The only royal burgh in the county is Peebles, the capital, and which, in conjunction with the rest of the county, returns one member to parliament. The parliamentary constituency in 1860 was 427. The principal villages are Innerleithen, Linton, Carlops, Skirling, Broughton, Drummelzier, and Eddlestone, besides about eighteen hamlets. It is joined with Lothian in giving name to the first synod on the General Assembly's list. Its parochial charges comprise twelve parishes in the presbytery of Peebles, and two in the presbytery of Biggar. Parts of the parishes of Peebles and Innerleithen are within the limits of the adjoining county of Selkirk. Peeblesshire is governed by a lord-lieutenant, vice-lieutenant, convener, sheriff, sheriff's substitute, and eight deputy-lieutenants. The sheriff's court is held at Peebles every Tuesday and Thursday, and the sheriff's small-debts court every Friday.—Owing to the impenetrable nature of this mountainous country, the roads are comparatively few in proportion to its extent, but no fewer than eight diverge from the capital, or its immediate vicinity, and in general follow the courses of the principal rivers. The main lines are the two roads from Edinburgh, one by way of Eddlestone and Pennycuick, which traverses the whole length of the county, following the valleys of the Dead-burn, Lyne, and the Upper Tweed, the other by way of Biggar, which only intersects the north-western portion of the county, and another main line of road from Glasgow and Kelso, which crosses the county in an opposite direction, following the valleys of the Forth, Lyne, and the Lower Tweed; also roads to Innerleithen and Dryhope Tower, on St. Mary's Loch, in Yarrow; but the part of the county on the right bank of the Tweed is nearly in its primitive state, having only footpaths and mule-tracks, wholly impassable for wheeled carriages. Two lines of railway enter the county, the North British, which follows the vale of the Eddlestone to Peebles, and so to Innerleithen, where it terminates, and a branch of the Caledonian, which branches off at Symington, and passes through Biggar to Peebles.—A few of the nobility have seats in this county; among which are Darnhall, Lord Elibank; Haystown and Kingsmeadows, of Hay, Bart.; Stobo Castle and Whim, of Montgomery, Bart.; Castle-Craig and Skirling, of Carmichael, Bart.; Dalwick, of Naesmyth, Bart.; besides others of the local gentry.

PEEL, or HOLM TOWN, a town and small seaport in the par. of St. Germain, Isle of Man, 12 miles W. of Douglas. It is situated on a spacious bay on the western coast of the island. The town, which was once of more importance than at present, is an irregularly built place stretching along the shore. It contains a small church dedicated to St. Peter. The commerce has declined, and the harbour and pier are now utterly neglected. There is, however, a prolific fishery in the bay, chiefly of red cod and herrings, and in the neighbourhood slate is quarried. About a hundred yards N. of the town, and divided from it by a narrow channel which is very shallow at low water, is a small rocky island, on which stand Peel Castle and two ruined churches; the one dedicated to St. Germain, the first bishop of the island, was built in 1245, and has at the eastern end a dungeon formerly used as the ecclesiastical prison; the other church was dedicated to St. Patrick, and has, nearly adjoining it, the bishop's palace, the lord's mansion, and the armoury. The ruined walls of the old castle are flanked by towers said to have been built at the commencement of the 16th century by Thomas Earl of Derby, and enclose an area of about 2 acres. In this castle was confined Eleanor Cobham, wife of Humphrey Duke of Glouecster, Lord Protector in the minority of Henry VI., who had been convicted of conspiring against the government, and practising the arts of sorcery, and whose spirit in the form of the "Moddey Doo," or spectre hound, is asserted by the ignorant still to haunt the ruins. About 3 miles eastward of the town is the Tynwald Hill, an artificial mound, the summit of which is approached by a flight of steps fronting the ancient chapel of St. John the Baptist, which was rebuilt about 1800, but is only used on the 5th July, the day of the promulgation of the local enactments or insular laws, hence called the Acts of Tynwald. Below the summit of the hill are three circular seats for the different orders or classes of the people, and above was anciently placed the chair of state for the governor of the island, and here Sir John Stanley, as king and lord of Man in 1417, assembled the whole body of the people to witness the first promulgation of the laws.

PEELE, a tnshp. in the par. of Tarvin, second div. of the hund. of Eddisbury, co. Chester, 5 miles N.E. of Chester. It forms, in conjunction with Horton, a township. The old mansion of the Whitleys, visited by James II., is now converted into a farmhouse.

PEEL FELL, a summit of the Cheviots, on the Scottish border, between the counties of Roxburgh and Northumberland.

PEEL HATCH, a hmlt. in the par. of Hillingdon, co. Middlesex, 1 mile S.E. of Uxbridge.

PEERSTON-JAGLIN. See PURSTON-JAGLIN, co. York.

PEFFER, several small streams of this name in cos. Ross and Haddington.

PEGSWOOD, or PEGSWORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Bothal, E. div. of Morpeth ward, co. Northumberland, 2 miles N.E. of Morpeth. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Wansbeck. The Morpeth Banks Colliery Company is in this township.

PEGWELL, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Lawrence, Isle of Thanet and lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 1 mile S.W. of Ramsgate. It is a coastguard station on Pegwell Bay, and celebrated for its lobsters and shrimps, the latter being potted by the inhabitants to a great extent. Pegwell Cottage is the principal residence, and was formerly the seat of Counsellor Garrow.

PEIRSTOUN, an ancient par. in the co. of Ayr, Scotland, now joined to Dreghorn.

PELDON, or PELTINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Winstree, co. Essex, 7½ miles S. by W. of Colchester, its post town. The village, which is small but of ancient date, is situated on the road to Maldon. The parish is chiefly agricultural, and is bounded on the S.E. by Mersea Channel. The soil is fertile, being a strong loam, and is well cultivated. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £575, and the glebe consists of 24½ acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £504. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, has a stone tower. The whole of the edifice has been thoroughly restored. The register dates from 1724. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum. There is a National school.

PELHAM, BRENT, FURNEUX, and STOCKING. See BRENT PELHAM, FURNEUX PELHAM, and STOCKING PELHAM, co. Herts.

PELHAM PILLAR, a column to the memory of Lord Yarborough, near Brocklesby, in Lincolnshire.

PELHAM'S LANDS, an ext. par. place in the wap. of Kirton, parts of Holland, co. Lincoln, near Fossdyke.

PELLON and MOUNT-PELLON, vils. in the tnshps. of Ovenden and Halifax, par. of Halifax, West Riding co. York, near Halifax.

PELSALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Wolverhampton, S. div. of the hund. of Offlow, co. Stafford, 3 miles N. of Walsall, its post town. It is a station on the South Staffordshire railway. The village is situated on the Wyrley and Essington canal. A large portion of the inhabitants are employed in the mines and collieries, and some in the making of nails. There is an extensive iron and brass foundry at Pelsall Wood. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £150, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, with an endowment of £20 per annum. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The Duke of Sutherland is lord of the manor, which once belonged to Robert de Corbeuil, a Norman baron, who accompanied William the Conqueror to England.

PELTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Chester-le-Street, middle div. of Chester ward, co. Durham, 2 miles N.W. of Chester-le-Street, and 7 N. of Durham. It is a station on the North-Eastern railway. The village is situated on rising ground. A large portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the collieries. The soil is of a light nature, with a mixture of sand and loam. The tnshp. includes the hmlt. of Pelton-Fell. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £300, in the patron. of the Incumbent of Chester-le-Street. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, erected in 1842, has a small spired tower, with one bell. It has some stained windows. There are two National schools for both sexes, at which Sunday-schools are also held. The Wesleyans have a place of worship at Pelton-Fell, in which a Sunday-school is held. Charles Joliffe, Esq., is lord of the manor.

PELYN, a seat in the par. of Lostwithiel, co. Cornwall, 1 mile S.W. of Lostwithiel, and 22 miles S.W. of Launceston. It is situated in the valley of the river Fowey, and has near it St. Chad's summerhouse.

PELYNT, or PLYNT, a par. in the hund. of West, co. Cornwall, 9 miles S. of Liskeard, its post town, and 22 E. of Plymouth. The village, which is small, is chiefly agricultural. It is mentioned in Domesday Book as Plewent, and was then held by Robert, Earl of Mortaigne. There are numerous barrows in the parish. The soil is of a mixed nature, with a subsoil of slate. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £400, and the vicarial for £235. The glebe comprises 50 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £240. The church, dedicated to St. Nunn, has a tower containing four bells. The church has a curious monument to Francis Buller, also one to the Achym family, bearing date 1586. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is held. The executors of General J. F. Buller are lords of the manor. At Trelawney, in this parish, are remains of a castellated mansion built by Lord Bonville in the 15th century.

PEMBERS-OAK, a hmlt. in the par. of Kington, hund. of Huntington, co. Hereford, 2 miles S.W. of Kington. It is joined with Crickward and Lilwall to form a township.

PEMBERTON, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Wigan, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 2½ miles W. of Wigan, its post town. It is a station on the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. The tnshp. comprises the hmlts. of New Town, Smithy Brook, Robin Lane End, Goose-Green, Kit-Green, Marsh-Green, and Lamberhead-Green. There are several collieries, stone-quarries, brick-kilns, and cotton-mills, which give employment to the chief portion of the inhabitants. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £300, in the patron. of the Rector of Wigan. The church, dedicated to St. John, has a tower containing one bell. It was built in 1832. The parochial charities produce about £14 per annum, of which £7 goes to a school. There are three schools for both sexes, respectively situated at Lamberhead Green, Goose Green, and Marsh Green. Hawkeley Hall, now a farmhouse, is a timber building of great antiquity.

PEMBREY, a par. in the hund. of Carnwallon, co. Carmarthen, 5 miles W. of Llanelly, its post town. It is a station on the South Wales railway. It is situated on the Kidwelly canal, under Pembrey Hill, and is a subport to Llanelly. Near the entrance of the river Burry is a fixed light, 35 feet in height, and visible for 9 miles. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the collieries and ironworks. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Llandury annexed, in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £69. The church is dedicated to St. Illtyd. The interior contains a tomb to the Empress Josephine's niece, who was shipwrecked here in 1828. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. Inside Cefn Sidan is a pier 1,200 feet in length, with above 12 feet of water. A short distance from it is the Burry harbour, constructed in 1825.

PEMBRIDGE, a par. in the hund. of Stretford, co. Hereford, 7½ miles W. of Leominster, its post town, 6½ from Kington, and 15 N. by W. of Hereford. It is a station on the Leominster and Kington branch of the West Midland railway. The village, which is large, is situated on the river Arrow, and is chiefly agricultural. The par. comprises the hmlts. of Marston and Weston. It was formerly a borough and market town under a grant of Henry I. It anciently belonged to the Mortimers, and gave name to the Brydges, ancestors of the late Duke of Buckingham. The land is partly in hop grounds. The soil is of an alluvial and clayey nature, upon a subsoil of Old Red sandstone. Courts leet and baron are held annually. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £975, in the patron. of Corpus Christi College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone structure, with a detached wooden steeple containing a clock and three bells. The parochial charities produce about £180 per annum, including the endowment of the Free school for both sexes, founded and endowed in 1650 by William Carpenter. Here are Trafford's almshouses for six aged females, which building was finished and endowed according to his will by his relict Alice in 1686. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. The Rev. F. Evans and J. K. Smithies, Esq., are lords of the manor. Annual fairs for hiring servants and for sale of live stock are held on the 13th of May and 22nd November.

PEMBROKE, a par., market and seaport town, municipal and parliamentary borough, forming a county of itself, but locally in the hund. of Castlemartin, co. Pembrokeshire, South Wales, 248 miles W. of London, or 292 by railway. It is a station on the Tenby and Pembroke Dock railway. It was originally the county town, but its commerce and importance have been transferred to Haverfordwest. It derives its name from Penfro peninsula, which extends for two miles N. of the town, between it and the main channel of Milford Haven. It was founded in 1092 by Arnulph de Montgomery, who built the castle on an almost impregnable rock surrounded by water at high tides on three sides. In the reign of Henry I. the fortress came into the hands of Gilbert Strongbow, who rebuilt the greater part of the fortifications, and added new works. In 1648 it was taken after a determined and lengthened resistance by Cromwell through the treachery of one of the garrison. The three Royalist commanders, Colonels Laugharne, Powell, and Poyer, on the surrender of the castle, were condemned to draw lots, one of which was left blank. The fatal lot fell to Colonel Poyer, who was shot by order of Cromwell. The descendants of this gallant, but unfortunate, officer are still living in the county. The castle is now to a great extent in ruins, which are well preserved. They bear in every part evident marks of the siege and battering which they underwent in the Great Rebellion. The keep is still standing entire, of a circular form, about 75 feet high, and 163 feet in circumference at the base, and the walls are 14 feet thick. A dilapidated winding staircase in the thickness of the wall still leads by a perilous ascent to the summit, from whence a varied and extensive prospect is gained over the adjoining country. A small room near the chapel is still pointed out as the chamber where Henry Tudor, afterwards Henry VII., was born. Underneath the keep is a spacious cavern called the Wogan, formerly connected with the interior of the castle by a wooden staircase. It has a large arched exit on the shore of the creek which runs up from the main channel of Milford Haven, by which the garrison used to receive supplies by water. This cave is said to be connected by a subterranean passage with Tenby Castle, 10 miles distant, but no one has hitherto explored it.—The town was first chartered by Strongbow, and under the Reform Bill returns one member to the imperial parliament with the contributory boroughs of Milford, Tenby, and Wiston. The population of the municipal borough in 1851 was 10,107, which had increased in 1861 to 15,077, and the number of inhabited houses was 2,144, while the parliamentary borough in 1861 contained 21,773 inhabitants. It is divided under the Municipal Act into two wards, and governed by a mayor, 6 aldermen, and 18 councillors with the style of "mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses of the town and borough of Pembroke."—The town stands on very hilly and irregular ground, and is nearly surrounded by two branches of a creek, which run up about 3 miles from Milford Haven. It consists chiefly of one long, narrow, and irregularly-built street, running nearly E. and W., ascending gradually towards the castle at the W. end. It is badly paved, and very insufficiently lighted with gas. The only public building is the townhall, built over the entrance to the market, in which county courts, &c., are held.—There is very little trade of any kind, but small vessels laden with anthracite coal can come up at spring tides to a small quay below the castle on the N. side.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £500. There are three churches, dedicated to SS. Michael, Mary, and Nicholas. St. Michael's, situated in the E. end of the town, an ancient building in the Norman style, of a cruciform shape, with a tower, has lately been rebuilt, with the exception of the tower, in a very inferior style. St. Mary's, in the centre of the town, is of the pointed order, with a large square tower. St. Nicholas, at the W. end, was given in 1098 by Arnulph de Montgomery to St. Martin's Abbey at Sayes in Normandy, and thus became the priory church of Monkton Priory. It was originally of great extent, formed of an admixture of the Saxon and Pointed orders. The nave has a vaulted stone roof. The pointed arch which formerly led to the chancel now forms the back of the altar. The chancel is in a very dilapidated state, without a roof, and desecrated by being used as a fives court by the inhabitants of Monkton. There are remains of five large stone windows, a canopied recess, and two sedilia. Parallel to this, on the N. side, is a building of similar dimensions, also in ruins. The prior's mansion, a little to the W. of the church, now converted into a farmhouse, is ascended by stone steps, at the foot of which are remains of very singular pillars. Two chapels were appended to this priory, that dedicated to Deiniol has a tower; the other, named Crag-Maharn, is in ruins. There are National and Sunday schools, and a new British school. There are places of worship for Wesleyans and New Connexion Methodists, Independents and Baptists. Pembroke gives title of earl to the Herbert family.—Saturday is market day. Fairs are held on the 12th April, 4th May, Trinity Monday, 10th July, 10th October, and 30th November.

PEMBROKE DOCK. See PATER, co. Pembroke.

PEMBROKE HALL, an ext. par. lib. in the co. of Cambridge. See CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY.

PEMBROKESHIRE, a maritime co., forming the extreme W. of South Wales, is bounded on the N.E. by the river Teifi and Cardiganshire, on the E. by Carmarthenshire, on the S. by the Bristol Channel, on the W. by St. George's Channel, and on the N. by Cardigan Bay. It lies between 51° 36′ and 52° 7′ N. latitude, and 4° 30′ and 5° 20′ W. longitude. The length from Strumble Head on the N. coast to St. Gowan's Head on the S. is about 30 miles; while in breadth, from St. Anne's Head to Amroth, the distance is about 25 miles; and its area comprises 401,691 statute acres. It is about 145 miles in circuit, 100 of which are coast. The population of Pembrokeshire, according to the census of 1861 is 96,093, having increased 1,953 since the census of 1851, when it was 94,140. The number of inhabited houses was 18,832, and of uninhabited 1,172. At the time of the Roman invasion, Pembrokeshire formed part of the territory of the Demetæ, or Dyfed, and was called Pen-fro, or Corner-land, by the Welsh. It was included by the Romans in the division Britannica Secunda. It was subject to ravages by the Danes at the close of the 10th century, who have left several traces of their occupation of this part of South Wales in the numerous Danish raths and trenches along the whole of the coast-line. Pembrokeshire was subdued by the Normans under Martin de Tours in 1069, and again in the reign of Henry I., according to the famous Welsh historian, Giraldus Cambrensis, by Arnulf de Montgomery, who built the first castle of Pembroke of stakes and turf. On the same authority we also learn that a colony of Flemings were invited over by Henry I., who, "being fond of giving to others what he had no right to bestow," settled them in the peninsula of land W. of Pembroke, now known as the hundred of Castlemartin; their descendants still retain much of their nationality, and this district is hence still termed "Little England beyond Wales." This county afterwards came into the hands of Strongbow, and was subsequently possessed by the Clares, Marshalls, Valences, Hastings, and Herberts. Richard II. landed at Milford on his return from Ireland in 1399; and Henry Tudor, Earl of Richmond, afterwards Henry VII., disembarked at Dale, near the entrance to Milford Haven, in 1485, and marched thence towards Shrewsbury. Pembrokeshire, during the Great Rebellion, was the scene of many hotly contested struggles between the Royalist and Parliamentarian forces in various parts of the shire.—The surface is generally undulating; and from Cardigan Bay in the N., to the Bristol Channel in the S., is a constant succession of small hills and valleys, running from E. to W., and presenting exactly the appearance of lofty waves suddenly solidified. The climate is mild, and almost tropical in the S.; but in the northern parts cold and moist. Storms of lightning and thunder very rarely break over the county; but as they approach from the Atlantic, they divide into two portions, one of which goes up the Bristol, and the other the Irish Channel. The S.W. winds blow with such violence here during the greater portion of the year, that no trees can stand the violence of the blast, and consequently there is an almost total absence of timber, except in sheltered situations; and the want of it gives a naked, barren appearance to many parts where the soil is extremely good. The soils are various, principally a dark grey loam, improved by lime and shell sand. In the S. district the Old Red sandstone and limestone formations form a soil, producing excellent crops; the rocky country from St. David's to Fishguard is well adapted for growing barley; but the quality of land in the coal district, near Landshipping, and the slatey ridges of the Precelly mountains is very inferior. The method of farming has been much improved of late years through the influence of the late Earl Cawdor and other opulent landholders, who have established farmers' clubs and agricultural societies. The chief breed of cattle is the black Castlemartins, called from the hundred of that name, which fatten fast, and yield great quantities of milk. The old Castlemartin breed, which was of an iron-grey colour, has now almost totally disappeared. Several English landlords have of late years introduced large quantities of Hereford and Alderney stock on their farms; but the Castlemartin blacks are universally adhered to by the native farmers. Pigs are bred in large quantities; but generally of a very ugly native type, with long ears covering the eyes, and long thin legs. Many of the old farm buildings and cottages are built entirely of mud; and in some instances the hedge of the field forms the back wall of a farmhouse.—Pembrokeshire being surrounded on three sides by the sea, and intersected by the great estuary of Milford Haven, has few rivers of any size or length. The river Teifi, which forms the N.E. boundary, runs into the Irish Channel, between Cardigan Head and Cardigan Island; the mouth is blocked by a dangerous bar. The Cleddau, or Cleddy, has two branches, of which the eastern rises in the Precelly mountains; while the western, having its source in the north-western part of the shire, runs past Haverfordwest, from whence it is navigable for small coal sloops and the like, and after forming a junction with the stream of the E. Cleddau, about 5 miles below Haverfordwest, falls into Milford Haven, a little way above Pembroke Dock or Pater. The other rivers are the Nevern, in the N., which empties itself into the bay of Newport; the Gwain, at Fishguard; and the Solva, flowing into St. Bride's Bay, where it forms a small port.—The stratified rocks to the N. of Haverfordwest are composed of shales, slates, and grit; while in the vicinity of Pembroke the older rocks are surmounted by the Silurian slates, Old Red sandstone, and carboniferous limestone and coal measures. The whole of the northern surface is traversed by veins of trap, which shows itself in masses at St. David's Head, Ramsay Island, and elsewhere. The carboniferous limestone dips below the millstone grit, and the coal district runs from E. to W., across the centre of the county, gradually narrowing as it approaches St. Bride's Bay. The coal is anthracite, or culm, as it is called by the natives, which being mixed with slime from the sea shore, is made up into oblong balls, and when placed in a wet state on the fire emits no smoke, but a bluish vapour. The southern coast, exposed to the full force of the Atlantic storms—there being no land whatever between this part and America—presents a truly wild and inhospitable appearance: the carboniferous limestone forming precipitous cliffs from 200 to 300 feet high. They are almost everywhere abrupt and full of fractures and contortions. There are frequent funnel-shaped cavities and fissures, to which the sea has access. Of these, the most remarkable is Bosherton Mere, near St. Gowan's Head, the most southern point of Pembrokeshire. The only hills of any size or importance are the Precelly Mountains, separating Pembrokeshire from Cardiganshire, which are of Lower Silurian slate, and extend about 10 miles in length, from near Fishguard to the borders of Carmarthenshire. Their highest summit, Cwm Cerwyn, attains an elevation of 1,754 feet above the sea; while the highest point in the S., Bolton Beacon, is 327 feet.—This shire is divided into 7 hundreds —Castlemartin, Dewisland, Dungleddy, Kemess, Kilgerran, Narberth, and Roose, containing 143 parishes, besides parts of 5 others, and 4 extra parochial places, one city—St. David's—and 175 villages. There are 7 market towns—viz. Haverfordwest, the county, assizes and sessions town, Pembroke, Narberth, Milford, Tenby, Fishguard, and Newport, of which the first three are heads of Poor-law Unions, and of new County Court and superintendent registry districts. The county returns three members to Parliament: one for the shire, one for Haverfordwest, St. David's, Fishguard, and Narberth, and one for Pembroke, Tenby, Milford, and Wiston. It is governed by a lord-lieutenant, high-sheriff, and sixty-five magistrates, is in the South Wales circuit, and home military district, and constitutes the archdeaconry of St. David's, in that diocese, in the province of Canterbury.—There are no manufactures of any particular importance in the county. Two-thirds of the population are employed in agricultural pursuits, the rest in the coal mines, or limestone and slate quarries. Of the ancient Roman roads, the Via Julia came by Carmarthen to Ambleston, or Castle Flemish, and St. David's; and here the Sarn Helen from the N. joined it. The principal common roads are the coach road from London to Pembroke; the road from Carmarthen to Haverfordwest, St. David's, Fishguard, and Newport; the road from Pembroke to Tenby, and from Tenby northwards through Narberth. There is a tramway from the coal mines at Kingsmoor to the sea at Saundersfoot. The South Wales railway enters the county near Whitland, and runs past Haverfordwest to Neyland, or Milford Haven, its terminus. A narrow gauge line runs from Pembroke Dock, or Pater, through Pembroke to Tenby, and another line is being made from Tenby to join the South Wales line at Whitland.—Pembrokeshire abounds in interesting specimens of antiquity, in the shape of ruined castles, camps, and cromlechs. There are remains of British and other camps at Rudbaxton, Summerton, Castle Coning, Poyntz, Gawnfawr, and Castell Hafod; of cromlechs and Druidical stones at Llanstinnan, Trefine, Treslanog, Trehowel, Llechydrybed, and Pentre Evan; of the abbey at St. Dogmaels, the preceptory at Slebech, and the priory at Pill; of episcopal palaces at Llamphey, or Llanfydd, and Llanheidan; of old castles at Pembroke, Eastington, Carew, Manorbier, Kilgerran, Narberth, Haverfordwest, Amroth, Roche, Newport, Tenby, Wiston, Benton, and Llanhyfer.—St. Dubritius was born at Fishguard; Asser, the friend of Alfred at St. David's; Giraldus de Barri, better known as Giraldus Cambrensis, the famous historian and preacher of the Crusades, at Manorbier; and the scene of part of Shakspeare's Cymbeline is laid in "a mountainous country near Milford Haven." The chief seats are Stackpole, Earl Cawdor; Dale Castle, Lloyd Philipps; Picton, Rev. J. H. A. Philipps; Orielton, M. A. Saurin, Esq.; Williamston, J. H. Scourfield, Esq., M.P.; Slebech, Baron de Rutzen; Brownslade, Mirehouse, Esq.; Boulston, R. T. Acland, Esq.; Cresselly, Lady C. Allen; Lawrenny, G. Lort Phillipps, M.P., and many others.

PEMBROKESTOWN, a hmlt. in the par. of Lismakill, in the bar. of Middlethird, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Waterford. The principal residence is Pembrokestown House, and near it are the ruins of Loughdeheen castle, also a cromlech.

PEMBRYN, or PENBRYN, a par. in the hund. of Troedyraur, co. Cardigan, 9 miles from Cardigan, its post town, and 7 N.W. of Newcastle-in-Emlyn. It is situated on Cardigan Bay, and contains the British camps of Castel Nadolig and Castel Pwntan. There is a small bathing village at Traeth Saith. The living is a vic. with the curs. of Bettws-Evan and Brongwyn, in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £300, in the patron of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure, in which is an old font, and near it an inscription. There is a place of worship for the Methodists. Coins and tumuli have been found in the neighbourhood.

PEMBUALLT, a hmlt. in the par. of Llangammarch, hund. of Builth, co. Brecon, 8 miles S.W. of Builth. It is situated on the river Irvon.

PEMBURY, a par. in the hund. of Washlingstone, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 4 miles S.E. of Tunbridge, its post town, and 3 N.E. of the Wells. The village, which is large, is wholly agricultural. The land is partly in common and wood, with some hop grounds. The Tunbridge union poor-house is in this parish. The living is a vic. with the cur. of Trinity annexed, in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £353. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, with a modern gallery, and contains several tombs and the brass of a woman. Its distance from the populated part of the parish is about 1½ mile, in consequence of which a new church has been erected in the southern part of the parish on a site presented by the Marquis of Camden. This church, likewise dedicated to St. Peter, has a tower crowned with a spire. The parochial charities produce about £70 per annum, part of which goes to the vicar, and part to the almshouses for six blind persons. There is a National school. Kennards and Grovehurst are the principal residences. The Marquis of Camden is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

PENALLT. See PENNAL, co. Merioneth.

PENALLT, a parcel in the par. of Llangattock, hund. of Crickhowell, co. Brecon. It is situated under a hill near Crickhowell, on the river Usk.

PENALLY, a par. in the hund. of Castlemartin, co. Pembroke, 2 miles S.W. of Tenby, its post town, and 9 from Pembroke. It is a small village, situated on the coast near Gilton Head. It formerly belonged to the Barrys and Bowens of Trellwyn. The Pembroke and Tenby line of railway passes through the parish, and has a station near the village. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £77, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a cruciform structure, embosomed in trees, and contains an altar-tomb to William de Raynoor, of the 13th century. In the churchyard is an ancient cross.

PENALTH, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Ragland, co. Monmouth, 1½ mile S.E. of Monmouth, its post town, and 12 miles from Chepstow. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Wye. The living is endowed with the rectorial tithes. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Trelleck, in the dioc. of Llandaff. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum.

PENANLLIW, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanwychyllyn, co. Merioneth, 4 miles S.W. of Bala.

PENANT, a tnshp. in the par. of Llandrillo, co. Merioneth, 5 miles S.W. of Corwen.

PENARRAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanwychyllyn, co. Merioneth, 4 miles S.W. of Bala.

PENARTH, a par. in the hund. of Dinas Powis, co. Glamorgan, 3 miles S. of Cardiff, its post town, and 6 from Cowbridge. It is situated on the Bristol Channel, and is a sub-port to Swansea. It has the ruins of a chantry to Llandough priory. There is a good anchorage for vessels in the Roads. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Lavernock, in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £136. The church is dedicated to St. Augustine.

PENARTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfair Caereinion, co. Montgomery, 3 miles from Llanfair.

PENARTH, a hund. in the co. of Cardigan, contains the pars. of Caron-ys-Clawdd, Llanbadarn-Odwyn, Llanddewi-brefi, Llangeitho, and Nantcwnlle.

PENARTH. See PENNARD, co. Glamorgan.

PENBEDW, a tnshp. in the par. of Nannerch, hund. of Ruthin, co. Denbigh, 6 miles N.W. of Mold. It is situated near Moel-Arther, a strong British post. The estate of Penbedw was granted to the Mostyn family by Henry VIII. Penbedw Hall is the principal residence; within the grounds are a Druidical circle and several tumuli. The house was formerly noted for its ancient library.

PENBIDDLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanvihangel-Crucorney, upper div. of Skenfreth hund., co. Monmouth, 6 miles N.E. of Abergavenny.

PENBOYR, a par. in the hund. of Elvet, co. Carmarthen, 4 miles S.E. of Newcastle-in-Emlyn, its post town, and 11 from Carmarthen. It is situated near the river Teivi and the Sarn Helen Roman way. There are several tumuli in the neighbourhood, and many coins have been found. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Trinity annexed, in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £325. The church is dedicated to St. Llawddog. Near the church is a Roman camp.

PENBRYN. See PEMBRYN, co. Cardigan.

PENCADAIR, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanfihangel-Ar-Arth, co. Carmarthen, 11 miles N. of Carmarthen. It was at this place Rhys-ab-Gruffydd made peace with Henry II. in 1163.

PENCADER, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandyssil, co. Cardigan, 8 miles E. of Newcastle-in-Emlyn. It is a station on the Carmarthen and Cardigan railway.

PEN-CADER-FAWR, the highest summit of the Black mountains, co. Brecon. It rises to the height of 2,550 feet.

PENCAITLAND, a par. in the co. of Haddington, Scotland. It comprises the vils. of Easter Pencaitland, Wester Pencaitland, and Newton. It extends in length about 4 miles from N.E. to S.W., with a breadth of 3 miles, and is bounded by the pars. of Gladsmuir, Salton, Ormiston, and Tranent. The surface is moderately flat, and is well cultivated. The soil, although of a wet and clayey nature, has of late years been greatly improved. Coal, lime, and freestone are profitably worked. The villages of Easter and Wester Pencaitland are connected by an ancient stone bridge of 3 arches, which spans the river Tyne near the centre of the parish. There are mineral springs in the neighbourhood. The parish is traversed by the road from Tranent to Lauder. This par. is in the presb. of Haddington and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale. The minister has a stipend of £316. The parish church is commodious. There are a Free church and a parochial school, besides other schools. Pencaitland House and Winton House are the principal residences; the latter was erected in 1619, and was the seat of the earls of Winton.

PENCARREG, a par. in the hund. of Cathinog, co. Carmarthen, 4 miles S.W. of Lampeter, its post town, and 18 from Carmarthen. It is situated on the river Teifi, under Mynydd Hill. The parish is of large extent. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David, val. £126. The church is dedicated to St. Patrick. A fair is held on the 11th October.

PENCLAWDD, a district par. in the par. of Llanrhidian, hund. of Swansea, co. Glamorgan, 10 miles W. of Swansea. It is situated near the river Burry in Gower. The living is a perpet. cur. with Llanrhidian.

PENCOED, a hmlt. in the par. of Coychurch, hund. of Newcastle, co. Glamorgan, 2 miles E. of Bridgend, and 5 from Cowbridge. It is a station on the South Wales railway.

PENCOED, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanwyddelan, co. Montgomery, 6 miles S. of Llanfair.

PENCOED, an ancient castle in Went Wood, co. Monmouth, 4 miles S.E. of Caerleon, now in ruins.

PENCOMBE, a par. in the hund. of Broxash, co. Hereford, 4 miles W. of Bromyard, its post town, and 6 W. of Dinmon railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Marstone-Stannett. The land is partly in hop grounds. The soil is of a clayey nature, with a subsoil partly of stone. A court-leet is held every three years at the court-house. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £600. The church is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing three bells. The tower was rebuilt in 1840. There is also a district church at Marstone-Stannett, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £85. There is a day school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school. It has long been the custom of this parish for the lord of the manor to claim a pair of gilt spurs on the death of the mayor of Hereford while in office. John Arkwright, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

PENCOYD, a par. in the upper div. of Wormelow hund., co. Hereford, 5 miles N.W. of Ross, its post town and railway station, and 9 S. of Hereford. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Ross and Hereford road, and within 1½ mile to the N.W. of the river Wye. The population are wholly agricultural. The soil is of a sandy nature, with a subsoil of sandstone and rock. The rectorial tithes, belonging to the Dean and Chapter of Hereford, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £68, besides about 14 acres of rectorial glebe. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Marstow, in the dioc.

of Hereford. The church, dedicated to St. Denis, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing three bells. The church is in a ruinous condition, and out of the S. side of the tower, about half way up, is a sycamore tree growing, and on its summit an elder tree. The churchyard contains a yew tree. The parochial charities produce about 10*s.* per annum. There are a day and a free school for both sexes. Sir Hungerford Hoskins, Bart., is lord of the manor.

PENCRAIG, a hmlt. in the par. of Goodrich, lower div. of the hund. of Wormelow, co. Hereford, 5 miles S.W. of Ross. It is situated near the bridge over the river Wye. The principal residence is Pencraig Court.

PENCWM and PENDDAILWYN, hmlts. in the par. of Llangwnnor, co. Carmarthen. 1½ mile E. of Carmarthen. It is situated near the river Towy.

PENDDOL, a vil. in the par. of Llan-dy-friog, co. Cardigan, 2 miles E. by N. of Newcastle-in-Emlyn. It is situated on the river Teify.

PENDEEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Madron, hund. of Penwith, co. Cornwall, 7 miles N.W. of Penzance. It is a coastguard station on Portherras Cove, in Mount's Bay. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £170. Borlase, the county historian, was born here.

PENDEFORD, a prebend in the par. of Tettenhall Regis, S. div. of Seisdon hund., co. Stafford, 4 miles N.W. of Wolverhampton.

PENDENNIS, a castle in the par. and borough of Falmouth, co. Cornwall, 1 mile E. of Falmouth. It is situated on a rock 300 feet high at the extreme W. of the entrance to Falmouth harbour, opposite St. Mawe's Castle. It consists of works about a mile in diameter, including barracks, batteries, magazines, and storehouses. It was originally built by Henry VIII., and enlarged by Elizabeth. During the parliamentary war it was garrisoned for Charles I. by Arundel, of Trerice, but was given up to Fairfax after a siege in July, 1646, being the last castle, except Ragland, which held out for the king. The remains of Fairfax's lines of circumvallation are still in existence.

PENDERRY, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Llangafelach, co. Glamorgan, 4 miles N. of Swansea.

PENDERYN, UPPER AND LOWER, a par. in the hund. of Devynnock, co. Brecon, 8 miles N.W. of Merthyr Tydfil, and 16 from Brecon, its post town. It is situated between the rivers Taff and Hepste, and contains Crawshay's Hirwaen iron works. On the common Rys-ap-Tewdwr was killed. A tram rail runs down to Aberdare. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £235. The church is dedicated to St. Cynog. A short distance from Craig-y-Dinas is the Hepste fall.

PENDINE, or PENDYN, a par. in the hund. of Derllys, co. Carmarthen, 5 miles S.W. of Laugharne, its post town, and 10 from Narberth. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on Carmarthen Bay. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Llandawke, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church is an ancient structure. The tithes were commuted in 1839.

PENDLEBURY, a tnshp. in the par. of Eccles, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 4 miles N.W. of Manchester, its post town. It is a prosperous village, situated on the Bolton and Bury canal. There are several collieries, besides cotton and bed-tick manufactories, which give employment to a large number of the inhabitants. There is a railway tunnel underneath the village connecting Patricroft with the Clifton junction. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £200. The church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, was erected in 1843. There is also the perpet. cur. of Christ Church, val. £219, in the patron. of the bishop. There is an endowed National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The principal residence is Agecroft Hall, supposed to have been built before the time of Richard II., and in the chapel is a stained window with the royal arms, presented by John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, to the Langley family, who then resided here, and in which Cardinal Langley was born PENDLE HILL, a limestone ridge in the par. of Whalley, co. Lancaster, 3 miles N.E. of Clitheroe, and 20 S.E. of Lancaster. It attains an altitude of 1,803 feet, and is crowned on the top by Malkin Tower, from which a view is obtained as far as the Isle of Man to the W., and the hills of Yorkshire to the E.. Its slopes were anciently covered with forest, but are now a bleak moorland.

PENDLETON, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Eccles, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 3 miles from Manchester, its post town, and 7½ N. of Bolton. It is a station on the western section of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. The village, which is considerable, may be considered a suburb of Manchester. It is situated on the main road from Manchester to Bolton. A large portion of the inhabitants are employed in the collieries and cotton mills, and some in the dyeing, printing, and bleaching establishments. Adjacent to the village are many villas. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £344, in the patron. of the Vicar of Eccles. The church, erected in 1831, is dedicated to St. John. There is also a chapel-of-ease, dedicated to St. Thomas. The charities produce £4 per annum. The Independents, Wesleyans, and New Connexion Methodists have places of worship.

PENDLETON, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Whalley, higher div. of Blackburn hund., co. Lancaster, 2 miles S. of Clitheroe. The township, which is of irregular form, is situated near the rivers Calder and Ribble, under Pendle Hill, which is 1,803 feet in height. The tnshp. includes a large portion of the vil. of Sabden Bridge, at which place the greater part of the inhabitants reside, and are employed at an extensive calico-printing establishment. The soil consists of clay and a light loam, with a rocky subsoil. The Manchester and Bolton railway passes through the township. The Duke of Buccleuch is lord of the manor.

PENDOCK, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, co. Worcester, 8 miles S.E. of Ledbury, its post town, and 6 W. of Tewkesbury. The village, which is of small extent and chiefly agricultural, is situated on the road from Tewkesbury to Ledbury. Pendock formerly belonged to Worcester Abbey. The scenery includes the Malvern Hills. About two-thirds of the land are arable, and the remainder meadow and pasture. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £280. The church is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. There is a Sunday-school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

PENDOMER, a par. in the hund. of Houndsborough, co. Somerset, 4 miles S. by W. of Yeovil, its post town, and 2 N.E. of the Sutton Bingham railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The soil consists of loam and clay, upon a subsoil of clay. Building-stone is quarried. At this place the Britons were defeated by the West Saxons in 659, and pursued as far as Petherton. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £177, and the glebe comprises 77 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £231. The church is of considerable antiquity, and contains a monument to a Knight Templar in chain armour. The register dates from 1658. W. H. Helyar, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

PENDOYLAN, a par. in the hund. of Cowbridge, co. Glamorgan, 8 miles W. of Cardiff, its post town. It is situated on the river Ely, and contains the vil. of Rhydodridge. There are mineral springs in the neighbourhood, and limestone is abundant. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £112, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Cadog. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum.

PENDRAGON CASTLE, a border fortress in the par. of Kirkby Stephen, East ward, co. Westmoreland, 10 miles S.E. of Appleby. It was situated in Mallerstang Forest, on the river Eden, and took its name from Uter Pendragon, the friend of Merlin. It was for several generations the seat of the Viponts, but was burnt by the Scots in 1341, and finally demolished in 1685.

PENEGOS, a par. in the hund. of Machynlleth, co. Montgomery, 1 mile W. of Machynlleth, its post town, and 16 miles from Llanidloes. It is situated among the hills on the river Dulas, and contains the tnshps. of Isycoed and Uwchycoed. There are mineral springs, lead mines, and woollen-mills, the latter employing a large number of hands. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £250, in the patron. of the Bishop of Llandaff. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to St. Cadvarch. R. Wilson, the painter, was born here in 1714. Llywarch Hên, the bard, resided at Dolguog.

PENFRO, a tnshp. in the par. of Caerhun, co. Carnarvon, 4 miles S. of Conway.

PENFRON-CHILL, a tnshp. in the par. of Llannefydd, co. Denbigh, 5 miles N.W. of Denbigh.

PENGAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Gelli-Gaer, co. Glamorgan, 6 miles N. of Caerphilly. It is a station on the Rhymney railway. It is situated near the river Rumney.

PENGARN, a vil. in the tnshp. of Tyr-y-Mynach, co. Cardigan, 3 miles N.E. of Aberystwith.

PENGERSWICK, a hmlt. in the par. of Wendron, hund. of Kerrier, co. Cornwall, 3 miles W. of Helston, and 16 S.W. of Truro. It is situated on Sydney Cove, and has the tower of an old seat of the Godolphins.

PENGE-WITH-ANERLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Battersea, E. div. of the hund. of Brixton, co. Surrey, 7 miles S. of St. Paul's. It has stations on the Croydon section of the Brighton and South Coast, and on the London, Chatham, and Dover lines of railway, the former at Penge Bridges, and the latter at Penge Lane. It contains King William IV.'s naval asylum for pursers' widows; also the watermen's almshouses, with St. John's chapel adjoining, erected by Round and Nash in 1850 at an outlay of £5,000; also the Anerley workhouse school for 600 children of the parish of Chelsea and other parishes—the grounds extend over 7 acres, including a farm and kitchen garden. There are many new villas in the neighbourhood. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £250. The church, which is a modern structure, is styled Christ Church.

PENGORNISIOG, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanfaelog, co. Anglesea, 3 miles N. of Aberffraw.

PENGRUGIA, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Ewe, co. Cornwall, 3 miles S.W. of St. Austle.

PENGWERN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangollen, hund. of Chirk, co. Denbigh, 2 miles from Llangollen, and 19 S.E. of Denbigh. It is situated near the bridge over the river Dee. In the neighbourhood are traces of a ruined seat of the Trevors and Mostyns.

PENGWERN, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Asaph, co. Flint, 2 miles N.W. of St. Asaph. It is situated on the river Clwydd.

PENHOW, a par. in the lower div. of Caldicott hund., co. Monmouth, 7 miles N.E. of Newport, its post town, and 6 E. by S. of Caerleon. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on Prat-Pill, in Wentwood. There are some ruins of St. Maur, or Seymour's Castle, at a farm in the neighbourhood. About a third of the parish is woodland, and the remainder arable and pasture. The surface is undulating, and the soil calcareous. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £194. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist.

PENHURST, a par. in the hund. of Netherfield, rape of Hastings, co. Sussex, 4 miles N.W. of Battle, its post town, and 1½ mile E. of Ashburnham. The village is small and wholly agricultural. Ironsand and ironstone are abundant, and there was formerly an extensive furnace. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £125 15*s., and there are 50 acres of glebe. The living is a rect. annexed to the vic. of Ashburnham, in the dioc. of Chichester. The church is an ancient structure with a square pointed tower at the W. end, containing one bell. The Earl of Ashburnham is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

PENIARTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanegryn, co. Merioneth, 4 miles N.E. of Towyn. It is situated on the river Disynwy, and includes the hmlt. of Llwyn.

PENIARTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Meifod, co Montgomery, 3 miles S. of Llanfyllin. It is situated near the river Vyrnwy, and abounds in slate and lead.

PENIARTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Conway, hund. of Isaf, co. Carnarvon, half a mile S.E. of Conway. It is situated on the shore of the estuary of the Conway.

PENICUICK. See PENNYCUICK, co. Edinburgh, Scotland.

PENIELHEUGH, a hill on Lilliard's Edge, in the district of Jedburgh, co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 4 miles N.W. of Jedburgh. On the top is a pillar to the late Duke of Wellington, 100 feet high, erected by the late Marquis of Lothian at a cost of £2,000. At Ancrum Moor, immediately adjoining, the English were defeated in 1545 by the Regent Arran and Scott of Buccleuch.

PENISARWAIN, a hmlt. in the par. of Llan-ddeiniolen, co. Carnarvon, 4 miles S. of Bangor.

PENISTONE, or PENISTON, a par. and market town in the wap. of Staincross, West Riding co. York, 4½ miles from Wortley, 13 S.E. of Huddersfield, its post town, and 8 W. by S. of Barnsley. It is a station on the Manchester and Sheffield railway. It is situated on the S. bank of the river Don, and on the Sheffield and Halifax turnpike road. The par., which is very extensive, comprises the tnshps. of Penistone, Denby, Gunthwaite, Hunshelf, Ingbirchworth, Oxspring, Langsett, and Thurlestone. Penistone is a union and polling town, and formerly had an extensive woollen trade, which is now extinct, and the cloth hall converted into shops. The two streets of which the town consists cross each other at right angles, and contain several good houses. Many of the working population are employed in the collieries and in the cutting of flagstones, which are quarried to a considerable extent, and of which large quantities are sent to London. There is a large portion of moorland, and about 100 acres of woodland and plantations. The soil is chiefly clay, but tolerably fertile. The land is distributed between arable and pasture, the latter being in the proportion of two-thirds. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £147. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient stone structure with a lofty square embattled tower, containing a clock and six bells. The parochial charities produce about £226 per annum. There are a grammar school for boys, and a National school for girls; the former is endowed with an annuity of £140, and the latter £20 per annum. There is a Friends' meeting-house, and places of worship for the Wesleyans and Independents. Sanderson, the blind professor, was born here in 1682. The viaduct of the Sheffield railway, which crosses the estate of Water-Hall, consists of 29 arches, 76 feet in height. F. W. S. V. Wentworth, Esq., is lord of the manor. Agricultural and horticultural shows are held in August for the exhibition of stock and vegetables. Market day is Thursday, chiefly for cattle and moorland sheep. Fairs are held on the Thursday prior to the 28th February, the last Thursday in March, Thursday preceding the 12th of May, and the Thursday following the 12th October—the last being famed for its horned sheep. A statute fair for the hiring of servants is held on the Tuesday following the first Saturday in November.

PENK, a feeder of the Trent, rises near Norbury, co. Stafford.

PENKELLY, a hund. in the co. of Brecon, contains the pars. of Cantreff, Llandefailog-Tre-Graig, Llangasty-Tallylyn, Llanhamlach, Llansaintffraed, Llanthetty, Llanvigan, Llanvillo, Llanvrynach, Llanywern, Talachddû, Vainor, and part of Llanthen.

PENKELLY, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanvigan, hund. of Penkelly, co. Brecon, 4 miles S.E. of Brecknock. There are traces of a castle, which formerly belonged to the Mortimers, Despencers, Devereuxs, and other influential families.

PENKETH, a tnshp. in the par. of Prescott, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 3 miles W. of Warrington, its post town. It is a station on the Warrington, Runcorn, and St. Helen's railway. The village is situated near the Sankey canal and Fidlers' Ferry, on the river

Mersey. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. There is a brewery. The Friends have a school in the neighbourhood.

PENKHULL, a tnshp. in the par. of Stoke-upon-Trent, N. div. of the hund. of Pirehill, co. Stafford, 1 mile S.E. of Newcastle-under-Lyme. This large village, which covers the heights above Stoke, was one of the earliest seats of the earthenware manufacture. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £151. The church is a modern structure. It is joined with Boothen to form a township.

PENKRIDGE, a par. in the E. and W. divs. of the hund. of Cuttlestone, co. Stafford, 6 miles S. of Stafford, and 9¾ from Wolverhampton. It has two stations on the London and North-Western railway. It is situated on the river Penk, from which it takes its name; and on the Staffordshire and Worcestershire canal. It is supposed by Camden to have been the ancient Pennocrucium on the Roman way, Watling Street. The town, which from its low situation is subject to frequent inundations, consists principally of two streets. It is now a polling, petty sessions, and decayed market town. The petty sessions are held every alternate Monday at the "Littleton Arms." There is a savings-bank and iron-works, and two bridges, the one called the Bull Bridge, of recent construction, and the other about half a mile higher up the river, called the Cuttlestone Bridge. The town, which is chiefly agricultural, is well built. The market, which was formerly held on Tuesday, is now disused. The land is in a high state of cultivation. A new principle of scientific agriculture has been tried here, with highly satisfactory results, and cattle are bred to the highest perfection. The par. comprises 12 libs., with the chplries. of Coppenhall, Dunston, and Stretton, and the hmlt. of Congreve. The church was made collegiate by King John, and given by him to the see of Dublin, the archbishop of which was dean, under whom were thirteen prebendaries, whose joint revenues at the Reformation were valued at £106 15*s.* 1*d.* The impropriation belongs to Lord Hatherton. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £300. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing eight bells. The interior of the church contains a decorated E. window, with tracery and monuments of the Littleton family, one of which bears date 1630. It was repaired in 1831. In addition to the parish church, there are district churches at Coppenhall, Dunston, and Stretton, the livings of which are all perpet. curs., varying in val. from £86 to £67. There is a National school for both sexes, endowed with an annuity of £36 per annum, which sum has been added to by Lord Hatherton. There are places of worship for the Wesleyans, Plymouth Brethren, and Primitive Methodists; the chapel of the latter is situated at Whiston. Rodbaston Hall is situated on an eminence about 2 miles S. of the town. The Poor-law Union of Penkridge comprises 21 parishes or townships. Lord Hatherton is lord of the manor. Annual fairs are held on the 30th April, 2nd September, and 10th October.

PENLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Ellesmere, hund. of Maylor, co. Flint, 4 miles N. of Ellesmere, its post town, and 9 from Wem. The village is small. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £105, in the patron. of the Vicar of Ellesmere. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. At Penley Hall is a meet for the Wynnstay hounds.

PENLLECH, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Commitmaen, co. Carnarvon, 10 miles W. of Pwllheli, its post town, and 7 from Nevin. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the coast, near the rocks of Porth-Penllech. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Llaniestyn, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

PENLLINE, a par. in the hund. of Ogmore, co. Glamorgan, 1 mile N.W. of Cowbridge, its post town, and 5 miles from Bridgend. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. In the neighbourhood are the ruins of St. Donat's Castle, built by Sir W. Stradling, whose family occupied it for six centuries. The gateway is carved with curious medallion circles. The portion of the building which is still inhabited is situated on a hill, and commands a view over the Channel. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Llanfrinach, in the dioc. of Llandaff. The church, dedicated to St. Brynach, is an ancient structure, situated in a wooded dingle, which runs down to the shore. The church contains the mortuary chapel of the Stradlings, to which family it has panel paintings of the 16th century; also a tomb to Sir Thomas Stradling, the last of his race, bearing date 1738. The churchyard contains a cross.

PENLLYN, a hund. in the co. of Merioneth, contains the pars. of Llandderfel, Llanfawr, Llangower, Llannwychyllyn, and Llanykil. It gives name, with Edernion, to a deanery in the archdeac. of Montgomery, and dioc. of St. Asaph.

PENMACHNO, a par. in the hund. of Nant Conway, co. Carnarvon, 6 miles S. of Llanrwst, its post town, and 15 from Bala. The village is situated on the river Machno, at the head of the Conway stream, near Llyn Conway. There are some slate quarries, and a portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the flannel trade. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £180. The church is dedicated to St. Tyddwd. The parochial charities produce about £120 per annum, of which £70 goes to Lloyd's school and almshouses. Annual fairs are held on 17th April, 18th August, and 20th October.

PENMAEN, a par. in the hund. of Swansea, co. Glamorgan, 3 miles from Penrice, and 10 S.W. of Swansea, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated at the foot of Cefn-y-Bryn, one of the loftiest mountains in South Wales, on which is a large cromlech, called the "Stone of Skelty," or "King Arthur's Stone." The par. includes the vil. of Paviland. From Oxwich Point, about 2½ miles distant, is a view of Oxwich Bay, with its shores, caverns, and promontories. In the vicinity are Penrice, or Pen-Rhys, and Oxwich Castles, the former built under the towers of the ancient fortress of the same name, and the latter a ruin of the 16th century, with a Gothic window. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £210.

PENMAEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfawr, co. Merioneth, 1 mile N.E. of Bala.

PENMAEN, or PENMAEN-MAWR, a mountain and hmlt. in the par. of Llanfairfechan, hund. of Uchaf, co. Carnarvon, 5 miles E. of Bangor, and the same from Conway. It is a station on the Chester and Holyhead railway, which here passes through the Penmaen-Mawr tunnel of 660 feet, and is protected in part of its course by a sea-wall, and afterwards enters another tunnel of 1,215 feet, called the Penmaen-rhôs tunnel. The mountain, which rises to the height of 1,540 feet above the level of the sea, is a huge mass of rugged limestone rock projecting into the sea, and has on its summit the Braich-y-Dinas British camp, and its slopes are covered with a variety of rare plants. Previous to 1772, it was only traversed by a narrow zigzag pathway, which formed an impediment in former journeyings between Chester and Ireland, but in that year a coach-road was constructed by Sylvester, which was subsequently improved by Telford in 1827.

PENMAIN, a chplry. in the par. of Mynyddyslwyn, lower div. of the hund. of Wentllooge, co. Monmouth, 10 miles N.W. of Newport, its post town. The village, which is considerable, is situated in the midst of a mountainous country. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the collieries, and some in weaving. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church is dedicated to St. Tyder.

PENMAIN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llysfaen, co. Denbigh, formerly in Carnarvon, 2 miles W. of Abergele, and 7 E. of Conway. It is situated near the coast.

PENMARK, a par. in the hund. of Dinas-Powis, co. Glamorgan, 6 miles from Cowbridge, its post town, and 9 S.W. of Cardiff. The par. contains the vils. of Aberthaw, Burton, Cwm, and six others. There are two castles, built by Gilbert de Humfrevile, one now in ruins having been destroyed by Owain Glyndwr, and the other, called Penmon Castle, now the property of the Jones family. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £224, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Gloucester. The church, dedicated to St. Mark, is an ancient structure. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. There is a place of worship for the Methodists. The tithes were commuted in 1840. An annual fair is held on the 15th April.

PENMON, a par. in the hund. of Tindaethwy, co. Anglesey, 3 miles N. of Beaumaris, its post town, and 6 from Bangor. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the coast opposite Puffin Island. There are remains of a priory, founded in the 6th century by Enion Frenhin. On Ynys Seiriol, or Puffin Island, are similar ruins, probably the original site of the aforementioned priory. There are some mill-stone quarries in the neighbourhood. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Llanvaes, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church, dedicated to St. Seiriol, is an ancient cruciform structure, and formerly belonged to the priory. The N. transept was rebuilt in 1854. The interior of the church contains an ancient font, a holy well, and monuments to the Bulkeleys of Penmon Park. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. On a bank opposite the church is the ancient pigeon-house, with a curious domical roof of Henry VIII.'s time; also a British figured cross, 10 feet in height, on the hills above and near it Hugh Lupus's Castell of Aber Lleinog.

PENMORFA, a par. in the hund. of Evionydd, co. Carnarvon, 2 miles N.W. of Tremadoc, its post town, and 4 from Criccieth. The village is situated on the Criccieth road, under Hebog Hill, near Traeth Mawr. There is a Druid circle in the neighbourhood. The geology of the country round is interesting, as affording typical sections of the earlier rocks. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Dôlbenmaen annexed, in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £300, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Beuno. The interior contains a tomb of Sir J. Owen, of Clenenney, who was taken prisoner at the battle of Llandegâi by the Parliamentarians under General Mytton. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum. There are two places of worship for the Calvinistic Methodists. Fairs are held on the 6th March, 14th May, 20th August, 25th September, and 12th November.

PENMYARTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanfihangel Cwmdû, co. Brecon, 3 miles W. of Crickhowell. It is situated on the Rhiangoll, a branch of the Usk, here crossed by a three-arched bridge, and near the line of the Roman road Via Julia. The church, which was built by the late Sir J. Bailey as a family mausoleum, stands on the bank of the river, just above the bridge. The principal seat is Glanusk Park, a modern Elizabethan mansion belonging to the Bailey family, and surrounded by a park.

PENMYNYDD, a par. in the hund. of Tindaethwy, co. Anglesey, 4 miles W. of Beaumaris, its post town, and 4 from Llangefni. The village is situated on an eminence at the head of the valley of the Braint. At a farm near Plas-Penmynydd are the remains of the Tydyrs or Twdwrs mansion, where Owen Tudor, the husband of Catherine of France, widow of Henry V. and Queen Dowager of England, was born in 1385. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £86, in the patron. of the prebend thereof. The church, dedicated to St. Credivael, is a structure of the 15th century. The nave chapel contains an alabaster monument to the Tudor family, said to have been removed from Llanvaes Abbey. Her Majesty gave £50 towards the removal of this monument, which was getting mutilated as the parishioners had a practice of breaking off small portions of it for medicinal uses. The parochial charities produce about £69 per annum, of which £63 goes to Roger's almshouses. A fair is held on Easter-Monday.

PENN, a par. in the hund. of Burnham, co. Bucks, 4 miles S.W. of Amersham, its post town, and 3 N.W. of Beaconsfield. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on an eminence, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is heavy, with a subsoil of chalk and flint. The par. includes the hmlts. of Knocklock's-Green, Forty-Green, and Penn Street. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £371 12s., and the vicarial for £338 13s., and the glebe comprises 42 acres The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £247. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is an ancient structure, with a lofty tower, from which may be seen seven counties. It contains monuments and brasses to the Penn, Rok, and Curzon families. There is also a district church at Penn-Street, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £143. The parochial charities produce about £137 per annum, part of which goes to Curzon's school. There are National, infant, and girls' working schools. The Baptists and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. Penn House, the principal residence, is of great antiquity. Earl Howe is lord of the manor.

PENN, a par. in the N. div. of Seisdon hund., co. Stafford, 2 miles S.W. of Wolverhampton, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the Stafford and Birmingham canal, and is chiefly agricultural. A small portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the manufactures of iron safes, nails, locks, &c. The par. comprises the tnshps. of Upper and Lower Penn. A manorial court is annually held for Penn-Wood common. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £226, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Bartholomew. The register dates from 1570. There is also the district church of St. Philip's, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £90. The parochial charities produce about £162 per annum, of which £115 goes to Wynn's free school, and £39 to Sedgwick's almshouses. The Duke of Sutherland is lord of the manor.

PENNAL, or PENALT, UPPER AND LOWER, a par. in the hund. of Estimaner, co. Merioneth, 3 miles W. of Machynlleth, its post town, and 8 from Towyn. It is situated on the river Dyfi, and under Arran-y-Gessel Hill. The village, which is considerable, is a petty sessions town. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the woollen mills. The surface is rugged and barren, and is traversed by the Roman way Sarn Helen. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £75, in the patron. of the Bishop of Llandaff. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is partly constructed of Roman bricks. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans. Roman coins have been found near the ancient camp called Cefn Caer.

PENNAN, a vil. in the par. of Aberdour, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 2 miles W. of Aberdour. It formerly had a harbour, which is now destroyed. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the fisheries.

PENNANT, a tnshp. in the par. of Eglwysfach, co. Denbigh, 4 miles N. of Llanrwst.

PENNANT, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanymowddwg, co. Merioneth, 4 miles N.E. of Dinas Mowddwy.

PENNANT, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanbrynmair, co. Montgomery, 9 miles N.W. of Llanidloes. It contains the cascade of Ffrwdd Fawr, which has a perpendicular descent of 130 feet. There is also another waterfall at the head of the Twymyn.

PENNANT, a tnshp. in the par. of Beguildy, co. Radnor, 4 miles N.W. of Knighton. It is situated on the river Teme.

PENNANT, or PENNANT MELANGELL, a par. in the hund. of Llanfillin, co. Montgomery, 9 miles N.W. of Llanfillin, its post town, and 13 from Bala. It is situated at the head of the rivers Tanat, near Moel Dimmor. The par. contains the tnshps. of Cornorion, Cwmllech, Dwyffrwd, Garthgelynen, and Pangwern. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £185, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Monocella, is built on the site of an older one. It has, at the western end, a very primitive tower, and the nave is divided from the chancel by a wooden screen. The chancel contains some specimens of carved woodwork, illustrative of the history of St. Monocella, who founded a cell near here. There is also a district church at Penybont, the living of which is a perpet. cur. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum.

PENNARD, or PENARTH, a par. in the hund. of Swansea, co. Glamorgan, 6 miles S.W. of Swansea, its post town, and 12 from Llanelly. It is situated on a creek of the Bristol Channel, and is a coastguard station. There are ruins of Pennard Castle, consisting of a gateway and two round towers. The ruins are difficult of access on account of being surrounded by quicksands, with which the whole neighbourhood abounds. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £79. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a modern structure, situated to the E. of the village. There are slight traces of the old church, which has become entombed in the sand.

PENNARD, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Whitstone, co. Somerset, 4 miles N.W. of Castle Cary station, on the Wilts and Somerset railway, and 5 S. of Shepton Mallet, its post town. It is situated on the Bath and Exeter road, and contains the hmlts. of Stone, Parbrook, and Huxham. The village, which is small, is chiefly agricultural. The parish is bounded on the E. by the old Roman Fosse Way. The appropriation belongs to the Bishop of Bath and Wells. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. with the cur. of West Bradley annexed, £190, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure with a tower containing a clock and five bells. It contains a Norman font and several stained-glass windows, also an altar screen and monuments of the Martins and Napiers. The parochial charities produce about £35 per annum. The Wesleyans have two chapels. There are parochial and Sunday schools. Edward B. Napier, Esq., is lord of the manor.

PENNARD, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Glaston-Twelve-Hides, co. Somerset, 6 miles from Shepton-Mallet, its post town, and 1 mile from the Pennard station on the Wilts and Somerset railway. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on the Glastonbury and Shepton-Mallet turnpike road. The par. comprises the hmlts. of East Street, South Town, and Sticklinch. The soil consists of sandy loam with a clay subsoil. A cheese which was made for her Majesty in this parish weighed 11 cwt. The appropriate tithes, which belong to the Bishop of Bath and Wells, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £310, besides an acre of glebe. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £102, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has a square tower containing a clock and five bells. The parochial charities produce about £29 per annum. There are National schools for both sexes, also a Sunday-school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The Earl of Sandwich is lord of the manor. An annual fair is held on the first Monday in August.

PENNENDEN HEATH, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Maidstone, co. Kent, adjoining Maidstone. It was here that the meeting between William the Conqueror and Bishop Odo took place in 1076. The county meetings are held here.

PENNERSAUGH, an ancient par. now in conjunction with that of Middlebie, co. Dumfries, Scotland. It is situated on the eastern bank of the river Muir.

PENNGOWAN, an ancient par. in the co. of Argyle, Scotland, now joined to Torosay.

PENNIGANT, a hill in the West Riding co. York, 6 miles N. by W. of Settle. It is 2,270 feet high, and is remarkable for two caverns from which streams issue.

PENNINGHAM, or PENNINGHAME, a par. in the co. of Wigtown, Scotland. It comprises the post town of Newton-Stewart. The par. extends about 15 miles in length from S.E. to N.W., with an extreme breadth of 6¼. It is bounded by the cos. of Ayr, Kirkcudbright, the head of Wigtown Bay, and by the pars. of Wigtown, Kirkinner, and Kirkcowan. The surface in the S.E., comprising part of the Moss of Cree, is even, but elsewhere it is hilly and moorish. A large part of the land has been reclaimed, and, although chiefly in pasture, there are some spots in an excellent state of cultivation. Large portions of the uncultivated parts appear capable of improvement with but little trouble. There are several springs, one of which possesses medicinal properties. In the northern division are numerous lakes, some of which are well stocked with fish. The village of Penningham is about 4 miles N.W. of Wigtown, and is situated between the rivers Cree and Bladenoch. The parish is crossed westward by the great coach road between Dumfries and Portpatrick. This par. is in the presb. of Wigtown and synod of Galloway. The minister has a stipend of £280. The parish church was erected in 1840. There are an United Presbyterian church, a Reformed Presbyterian church, and a Free church, but the last is situated at Minnigoff. There are a parochial school and other schools. Penningham House is situated near the ruins of Castle Stewart, about 3 miles N.W. of Newton Stewart.

PENNINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Lonsdale North of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 1½ mile W. of Ulverston, its post town, and 3 miles N.E. of Dalton. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the iron-ore mines at Lindale Moor and Carkettle. The soil is of a sandy and marly nature, with a gravelly subsoil. Above a third of the parish was formerly in common, but was enclosed under an Act obtained in 1821. Blue slate is abundant. The impropriation belongs to the Arabic Professorship in the University of Oxford. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £204, in the patron. of the Duchy of Lancaster. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a tower containing two bells. It was rebuilt in 1825 at an outlay of £550. The register dates from 1623. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum, which goes to Fell's school. There is a parochial school for both sexes. Lord Muncaster is lord of the manor.

PENNINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Leigh, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 1 mile S. of Leigh, part of which town is situated within this tnshp. The village, which is very considerable, is situated on the Bolton and Kenyon branch of the London and North Western railway. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the cotton-mills. The neighbourhood abounds in coal and lime of a superior quality. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £200, in the patron. of trustees. The church is a modern structure. There are places of worship for the Wesleyans and Swedenborgians. There is a National school.

PENNINGTON, a vil. and ecclesiastical district in the par. of Milford, hund. of Ringwood, co. Hants, 4 miles S.W. of Lymington. The village, which is considerable, is situated near Hurst Castle, on the coast of the English Channel. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £100. The church, dedicated to St. Mark, was erected in 1839.

PENNON, a hmlt. in the par. of Llancarvan, co. Glamorgan, 5 miles S.E. of Cowbridge.

PENNY BRIDGE, a hmlt. in the hund. of Lonsdale, co. Lancaster, 4 miles N.E. of Ulverstone. It is situated at the confluence of the rivers Crake and Leven.

PENNYCOMEQUICK, a hmlt. in the par. of Ennereily, bar. of Arklow, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles N.N.E. of Arklow. It is situated on the coast, near a rivulet of the same name. The ruins of the parish are in the vicinity.

PENNY-CROSS, or WESTON PEVERELL, a chplry. in the par. of St. Andrew, hund. of Roborough, co. Devon, adjoining Plymouth, of which it is a suburb.

PENNYCROSS, a demesne on the S. side of the Isle of Mull, co. Argyle, Scotland. It is situated on the shore of Loch Scriden, and was anciently the seat of the Beatons.

PENNYCUICK, or PENICUICK, a par. and burgh of barony in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland, 9 miles N.E. of Linton, and 10 S. of Edinburgh. The Peebles railway has stations at Penicuick and Leadburn. This par., which is 10 miles in length from S.E. to N.W., and 5 broad, contains, besides the post-office vil. of its own name, the vils. of Howgate and Kirkhill. It consists of the greater part of the old parish of Pennycuick, with the whole of the ancient parish of Mount Lothian, lying to the S.E. It is bounded by Peeblesshire, and by the pars. of Collington, Currie, Glencross, Kirknewton, and Lasswade, from which it is separated on the southern and western borders by the North Esk, and on the south-eastern by the South Esk. The north-western part of the parish is wholly occupied by the Pentland hills, which at the highest summits attain an elevation of about 1,600 feet, but the south-western part is more genial, and includes the Glen of the North Esk. The surface is chiefly moorland, with moss and mountain pasture, but a considerable portion has recently been reclaimed. About 8,400 acres are in tillage, 1,000 under wood, and the remaining 11,600 mountain, pasture, or waste. The rocks are chiefly clay, porphyry, sandstone, and limestone, in some places overlaid with diluvial deposits. Coal abounds, but is not extensively worked, being much intermixed with trap veins, except at Brunstane colliery; iron ore also occurs in beds and veins, and traces of lead are met with. There are numerous springs, some possessing medicinal or petrifying properties. Sir George Clerk, Bart., of Penicuick House, is chief heritor, but there are three other principal and nine smaller landowners in the parish.—The village, anciently spelled Penicok, or Pen-y-coc, signifying "the Cuckoo's hill," stands on the left bank of the river North Esk, and on the direct road from Edinburgh to Dumfries. It consists mainly of one principal street, running in a north-easterly direction, with a small suburb on the other side of the river in the parish of Lasswade. It is well built, containing many spacious modern houses and good shops. It has a branch office of the Edinburgh and Glasgow banks, a station of the Edinburgh county police, savings-bank, library, gasworks, and several friendly societies. The large building situated to the N. of the village was erected at the close of the last century by government for cavalry barracks, but was converted in 1831 into an iron foundry. The inhabitants are partly engaged in the paper, gunpowder, and saw mills, and some in the collieries and stone-quarries, besides weavers. In the grounds of Valleyfield, marking the spot where upwards of 300 French prisoners of war were interred, is a monument with the inscription, "Grata quies patriæ, sed et omnis terra sepulchrum." The parish is traversed by three principal lines of road to Dumfries, Peebles, and Biggar, and for a short distance by the Peebles railway. —This par. is in the presb. of Dalkeith, in the synod of Lothian and Tweeddale. The minister has a stipend of £158 6*s.* 8*d.*, besides a glebe valued at £16. The church, situated in the village of Pennycuick, was built in 1771. It is a Grecian structure, with a tetrastyle portico of the Doric order, bearing the Hebrew inscription "Bethel" and surmounted by a stone cross. There are also a Free church, an United Presbyterian church at Howgate, erected in 1856, another Presbyterian church, situated at Bridgend, and about seven non-parochial schools. The principal seat is Pennycuick House, a mansion with Grecian portico of eight columns, built in 1761 by Sir J. Clerk, Bart., and surrounded by a wooded park. It contains Ossian's Hall, with a ceiling painted by Runciman, a good library, many paintings, and a museum of Roman and miscellaneous antiquities, including the buff coat worn by Graham of Claverhouse, Viscount Dundee, at the battle of Killiecrankie, where he received his death wound. In the grounds are various objects of interest, including a model of the celebrated Roman temple on the Carron, called Arthur's Oven, an obelisk raised by Sir James Clerk to the memory of Allan Ramsay, the scene of whose "Gentle Shepherd" is laid at "Habbie Howe," in this neighbourhood; the old tower of Terregles, the original seat of the ancient proprietor of the parish; and on the margin of the Esk the subterranean passage called Hurlycave, about 147 feet long and 7 high, with a cell in the middle cut out of the solid rock in 1742. Newhall, another seat on the Monksburn, near the Howe and Harbour Craig, is scarcely of less interest. There are numerous ruins, as Ravensnook, once the seat of Oliver Sinclair, brother to the laird of Roslin, who was taken prisoner at the battle of Solway-Moss; Brunstane, the old seat of the Crichtons, built in 1568, but now an extensive ruin; Logan House, once a hunting seat of the Scottish kings in Glencorse, near Houlet's House, where the match between the hounds of the royal Bruce and those of Sinclair of Roslin occurred; and on the summit of the pass over the Pentland hills, on Cross Sword Point, is the stump of an ancient cross. Fairs are held on the third Friday in March and the first Friday in October.

PENNY-POUND, a barren spot on Sedgmoor, co. Somerset, 4 miles S.E. of Bridgwater. It is situated near Weston Zoyland, at the place where Sir Thomas Fairfax encamped after the battle of Langport in 1645, and where the adherents of James II., under the Earl of Feversham, defeated the Duke of Monmouth in 1685.

PENNYSMERK, a hmlt. in the district of Holderness, East Riding co. York. It was situated under Spurn Head, but has been overwhelmed by the sea.

PENPERGURN, a hmlt. in the par. of Abergavenny, co. Monmouth, 2½ miles from Abergavenny, and 15 W. of Monmouth. It is a station on the West Midland section of the Great Western railway.

PENPONT, a par. in the district of Nithsdale, co. Dumfries, Scotland. It comprises a vil. of the same name. The par. extends in length about 14 miles from S.E. to N.W., with a breadth of about 3 miles. It is bounded on the W. by the co. of Kirkcudbright, and on other sides by the pars. of Lanquhar, Durisdeer, Morton, Keir, and Tynron. The surface, which is hilly, attains its greatest altitude at Cairnkinna, which rises 2,086 feet above sea-level. Near to the Cairnkinna mountain is the craig of Glenquhargen, which rises perpendicularly 1,000 feet, and is considered one of the greatest natural wonders of Scotland. There is a considerable extent of mountain pasture, but many spots are in an excellent state of cultivation. Plantations abound in various parts of the parish. White and red sandstone are abundant, and whinstone is quarried to some extent. There are also traces of lead and coal. The numerous brooks are well stocked with salmon, trout, and other fish. The southern border of the parish is traversed by the road from Thornhill to Minniehive, and a short distance to the S.E. are the Thornhill and Carron-bridge railway stations. The village of Penpont is about 2 miles S.W. of Thornhill, and 15 N. of Dumfries. It is situated on the rivers Nith and Skarr, the latter river being crossed by a modern bridge built on the site of a more ancient one which was removed in 1801. The village consists of three parts, distinguished as Penpont-Proper, Townhead-of Penpont, and Briarbush. At the confluence of Parkburn with the Neith are traces of Tibber's Castle, which was taken from the English by Sir William Wallace. In the neighbourhood are a Roman causeway, two moats, an obelisk, several cairns, &c. This par. is the seat of a presb. in the synod of Dumfries. The minister has a stipend of £256. The parish church was erected in 1782, and stands within the village of Penpont. There are also a Free church, and a Reformed Presbyterian church, also an United Presbyterian church at Burnhead. There are two parochial schools and two other schools.

PEN-PONT, or CAPEL BETTWS. See BETTWS PEN-PONT.

PENPOUL, HIGHER, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Veep. co. Cornwall, 4 miles S.E. of Lostwithiel, and 9 S.W. of Liskeard. It is situated at the confluence of the rivers Trebant and Fowey.

PENRAELT, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangelynin, co. Carnarvon, 2 miles S.W. of Conway.

PENRHIN COCH, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Trefeirig, par. of Llanbadarn-Fawr, co. Cardigan, 3 miles from Aberystwith.

PENRHOS, a par. in the hund. of Gafflogian, co. Carnarvon, 3 miles from Pwllheli, its post town, and 5 N.W. of Llandilofawr. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the coast. Mr. Williams's hounds meet here. The living is a cur. annexed to the perpet. cur. of Abereirch, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church is dedicated to St. Cyncoyl. The tithes were commuted in 1840.

PENRHOS, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanfynydd, co. Carmarthen, 4 miles N.W. of Llandilofawr.

PENRHOS, the seat of Lord Stanley of Alderley, in the par. of Holyhead, co. Anglesea, 2 miles S.E. of Holyhead.

PENRHOS, a hmlt. in the par. of Kington, hund. of Huntington, co. Hereford, 1 mile E. of Kington, and 17 miles N.W. of Hereford. It is situated on the river Arrow under Bradnor Hill.

PENRHOS, a hmlt. in the hund. of Llanfyllin, co. Montgomery, 6 miles S.E. of Llanfyllin. It is situated on the Severn, and belongs to the Gores of Penrhôs Hall.

PENRHOSE, a parcel in the par. of Ystradgunlais, co. Brecon, 8 miles N.E. of Neath.

PENRHOSLLIGWY, or PENRHOS LLUGWY, a par. in the hund. of Twrcelyn, co. Anglesey, 4 miles N.E. of Llanerchymedd, its post town, and 6 from Amlwch. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near Red Wharf Bay and Ynys-Gadern. There are some marble works in the neighbourhood. It is in contemplation to erect a column on the rocks overlooking the bay, and about 1½ mile to the N.E. of the church, in memory of those who perished in the wreck of the Royal Charter. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £75. In the church, which is dedicated to St. Michael, are some ancient tombs. In the churchyard, as well as in the neighbouring churchyard of Llanallgo, are interred the remains of a large number of persons who lost their lives in the wreck of the Royal Charter steam clipper on the rocks of Moelfre in 1859. The parochial charities produce about £93 per annum, part of which goes towards apprenticing children. L. Morris, the antiquary, and author of "Celtic Remains," was born here in 1702. Near Moelfre is a cromlech standing on seven supports.

PENRHYDD. See PENRITH, co. Pembroke.

PENRHYLOG, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Ceulan-y-Maes-Mawr, par. of Llanfihangel-Geneur-Glynn, co. Cardigan, 5 miles N.E. of Aberystwith. It is situated on a branch of the river Lery.

PEN-RHYN. See PORT PENRHYN, co. Carnarvon.

PEN-RHYN, a tythg. in the par. of Aberffraw, co. Anglesea, 16 miles S.W. of Beaumaris. It is situated on Carnarvon Bay, near the river Ffraw's mouth.

PENRHYN CASTLE, a demesne in the hund. of Uwchgorfai, co. Carnarvon, 1 mile E. of Bangor, and 9 miles N.E. of Carnarvon. This mansion, which is now the seat of the Hon. Colonel Pennant, M.P., is situated on an eminence embowered in trees near the river Ogwen, at the northern mouth of the Menai Strait, and is surrounded by a park 7 miles in circumference, fenced round with slate. The present edifice was built for the late Lord Penrhyn by S. Wyatt, after designs by Hopper, in the Norman castellated style, with towers and turrets, on the site of the ancient seat of the Griffydds, once the palace of King Roderic Malwynog. It is built of Mona marble, and is said to have cost no less a sum than half a million, and took fourteen years in building. At a distance its massive grandeur produces an imposing aspect, but on a nearer approach, and after entering within its walls, the effect is far less agreeable. The interior is embellished with painted glass, sculptured chimney-pieces, oak carving, and panelling. In one of the rooms is a bedstead entirely formed of slate, and amongst the antiquities a hirlas, or drinking-horn, of Piers Gruffydd, who fought under Drake against the Spanish Armada. From several spots within the park a panorama is obtained, embracing in the distance the Menai Bridge and the heights of Snowdon.

PENRICE, or PEN RHYS, a par. in the hund. of Swansea, co. Glamorgan, 11 miles S.W. of Swansea, its post town, and 14 from Llanelly. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near Oxwich Bay, under Cefn-Bryn cromlech. In the neighbourhood are Pilton-Green and the ruins of the Earl of Warwick's Castle, which came to the Penrices and Mansels. Penrice was formerly a market town, and the old market-place still exists, but the market has long since been discontinued. Near the village is an ancient entrenchment. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £53. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a cruciform structure, and has been restored. Penrice Castle is the principal residence, and within its grounds are the ruins of the old castle mentioned above, from which a view of the sea is obtained.

PENRITH, or PENRHYDD, a par. in the hund. of Kilgerran, co. Pembroke, 7 miles from Cardigan, its post town, and the same distance S.W. of Newcastle-in-Emlyn. The village, which is of small extent, is situated under Vrenin Vaur mountain. The par. includes the chplry. of Castellan. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £100. The church is dedicated to St. Cristiolus.

PENRITH, or PERITH, a par., post and market town, in the ward of Leath, co. Cumberland, 17 miles S. by E. of Carlisle, and 283 N. by W. of London. It is a station on the Lancaster and Carlisle railway. It is situated in a fertile vale enclosed by hills of varied elevation, and is watered by three small rivers, the Eamont, the Lowther, and the Petteril, and at the junction of the main roads from London and Lancashire to Glasgow. The par. includes the hmlts. of Carleton, Plumptree Head, and Eamont Bridge. Its name is supposed to be of British origin, signifying "the red hill or summit," descriptive of the red freestone with which the town is built. About 5 miles to the N.W. of the present town is Old Penrith, occupying the site of the Roman station Bremetenracum, on the line of the ancient Watling Street. At the time of the Norman conquest the honour of Penrith was a royal franchise, but it was subsequently ceded to Alexander III., King of Scotland, on condition of his surrendering his claim to the counties of Cumberland, Northumberland, and Westmoreland. Upon the defection of John Baliol it was seized by Edward I., and given to Anthony Beck, Bishop of Durham, to which see it remained attached for some time. In the reigns of Edward III. and Richard II. it suffered severely from the ravages of the Scots, and in that of Elizabeth by the plague, which swept away upwards of 2,000 inhabitants of the town and parish. In 1696, having reverted to the crown, it was granted to William Bentinck, Earl of Portland, and was sold by his heirs in 1783 to the late Duke of Devonshire.—The town, which is well built, paved, and lighted with gas, consisted formerly of one long street. Since the opening of the Lancaster and Carlisle railway, it has greatly increased in its population and in its trade; so much so as to be considered the most prosperous town in the northern counties. There is now also a railway to Keswick, and a junction of the Eden Valley railway with the Lancaster and Carlisle. It is under the jurisdiction of the county magistrates, and is a polling-place for the county elections. The houses are for the most part built of freestone, but covered with plaster and roofed with slate. In the town are two banks, a savings-bank, house of correction built in 1826, union poorhouse, mechanics' institute, baths and washhouses, an assembly room occasionally used as a theatre, newsrooms, and a subscription library. To the N. of the town is a racecourse with a grand stand.—The staple trade of the town is in agricultural produce, which has become very important, while the manufacture of cotton has declined. Since the opening of the railway and the introduction of artificial manure, a great portion of the moorland has been converted into a high state of cultivation, realising excellent crops of potatoes, &c., which, by means of the railway, are exported in large quantities. There are also iron foundries, saw-mills, breweries, and quarries of red freestone, slate, and limestone. In the neighbourhood of the town are the ruins of Brougham Castle, which was built by the Nevilles and restored by Richard Duke of Gloucester; it was originally erected as a protection from the incursions of the Scots, and was once the seat of the Countess of Pembroke, but was dismantled at the close of the great Civil War, and part of the materials sold. About 2 miles from the town, and on the S. bank of the river Eamont, is a circular entrenchment, where King Arthur is said to have entertained his Knights of the Round Table; and on Beacon Hill is a square stone tower, erected in 1719, and commanding a view of the surrounding country. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £200, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, was given by Henry I. to the see of Carlisle, then newly founded. It is a stone structure with its original tower, but the body of the church was rebuilt in 1723. It had a chantry founded by Bishop Strickland, by whose means water was first brought to the town. The chancel is adorned with appropriate paintings, and has portraits of Richard Plantagenet and his wife in stained glass. In the churchyard is the grave of Sir Ewain Cæsarius, an ancient hero, who is said to have vanquished the robbers who infested Inglewood Forest; the grave is 15 feet in length, with two pillar crosses, 11½ feet in height, and is called the "Giant's Grave." There is also another tomb with a cross 5½ feet in height, called the "Giant's Thumb." Besides the parish church, there is the district church of Christ Church, erected in 1850, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £200, in the patron. of the bishop. St. Catherine's Roman Catholic church, with a school-house and presbytery adjoining, was also erected in 1850. The parochial charities produce about £352 per annum, of which £166 goes to the vicar for reading prayers. There is a free grammar school, originally founded and endowed by Bishop Strickland in 1340, but refounded by Queen Elizabeth in 1564; also National, infant, and British and Foreign schools. The Independents, Presbyterians, Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, Quakers, and Baptists have each a place of worship. Penrith is the head of a Poor-law Union comprising thirty-seven parishes. The union poorhouse is situated in the Greystoke-road. The principal residences are Eden Hall, Brougham Hall, Dalemaine House, Graystoke Castle, and Carlton Hall. Market days are Tuesday and Saturday. Fairs are held on the 1st March, 24th and 26th April, and third Saturday in October for sheep, cattle, &c. Races are held in the first week in October.

PENROSE, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Ragland, Monmouth, 6 miles W. of Monmouth, its post town, and 3 N. of Ragland. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £94, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is dedicated to St. Cadocus. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum.

PENROSE, a hmlt. in the par. of Wendron, hund. of Kerrier, co. Cornwall, 2 miles S.W. of Helston. It is situated near Looe Pool, on the river Hel, and has traces of lead and tin. The principal residence is Penrose Hall.

PENRUDDOCK, a hmlt. in the par. of Greystoke, ward of Leath, co. Cumberland, 6 miles W. by S. of Penrith. It is situated in a hilly district near the river Petterill, and is a station on the Cockermouth, Keswick, and Penrith railway. In the neighbourhood coal, slate, and lime are worked. There is a place of worship for the Independents.

PENRYN, a post and market town, seaport, municipal, and parliamentary borough in the pars. of St. Gluvias and Budock, hund. of Kerrier, co. Cornwall, 26 miles S.W. of Bodmin, and 2 N.W. of Falmouth. It is a station on the Cornwall and West Cornwall railway. It is situated on the declivity of an eminence at the head of Falmouth creek, an inlet from Falmouth harbour, and consists principally of one spacious street, from which several minor streets branch off at right angles. It comprises the manors of Penryn Borough and Penryn Forryn, and was formerly held by the Osbornes, under the bishops of Exeter, who had a seat here, and under whose patronage the town first rose into importance. A college was founded by Bishop Bronscombe, in 1270, for a provost, eleven prebendaries, seven vicars, and six choristers, which continued till the Dissolution, when its revenues were valued at £210 13*s.* 2*d.* It returned two members to Parliament first in the reign of Edward VI., or according to others, in the first year of Queen Mary; but since the Reform Bill its bounds have been extended so as to include the borough of Falmouth and part of the parish of Budock. The town was garrisoned at the commencement of the civil war for Charles I.; but being attacked by the parliamentary forces, it surrendered to Sir Thomas Fairfax in 1646. It is a borough by prescription, and received its first charter of incorporation from James I., but which was further extended by James II. in the first year of his reign. The municipal revenue is about £320. Under the new Act, the government is vested in a mayor, four aldermen, and twelve town councillors, the mayor and ex-mayor being justices of the peace, aided by five borough magistrates and a town clerk. The mayor is the returning officer. The petty sessions are held on the second Thursday in every month. The port is a member of that of Falmouth; and there are warehouses on the quay for flour and grain, which are imported from Ireland, Hampshire, and the Isle of Wight, for supplying the adjoining mineral district. An extensive trade is done in the shipping of granite from quarries in the neighbourhood, chiefly for London. Ship-building is also carried on. There are gunpowder, corn, and paper mills, a woollen cloth factory, also a brewery, tan-yard, &c. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the fisheries and in the coasting trade. The houses are in general neatly built, and the streets well paved and lighted with gas. The town has an abundant supply of water from springs issuing from the neighbouring heights, one of which, in its descent, forms a cascade. The principal public buildings are the town-hall and market house, a mechanics' institute, union poorhouse, and an iron swing bridge. The adjacent country is well cultivated, and interspersed with gentlemen's seats. Several new roads have been formed to avoid the steep streets of the town. There was formerly a chapel-of-ease in the town; but it long since fell into decay, and the inhabitants frequent the parish church of St. Gluvias, which is the mother-church, and is only 100 yards distant from the town. There are National schools for both sexes. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. A free grammar school was founded by Queen Elizabeth, and endowed with a rent-charge of £6 13*s.* 4*d.*; but it is now discontinued, and the endowment applied to the support of the National school, built in 1837. Market day is Saturday. Annual cattle fairs are held on 12th May and 7th July, 8th October and 21st December.

PENSAX, a tnshp. in the par. of Lindridge, lower div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, co. Worcester, 7 miles S.W. of Bewdley, and 5 from Stourport. Lindridge is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. There are collieries which give employment to a portion of the inhabitants. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £100, in the patron. of the Vicar of Lindridge. The church, dedicated to St. James, has a tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum.

PENSBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Woodchurch, lower div. of the hund. of Wirrall, co. Chester, 4 miles N.W. of Great Neston. It is situated near the river Dee.

PENSELWOOD, or PENSCELLWOOD, a par. in the hund. of Norton-Ferris, co. Somerset, 4 miles N.E. of Wincanton, its post town, and 7 S.E. of the Bruton railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Stour, and on the London and Exeter road. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture; but some in a flax-mill, and others in the sand and green-stone quarries in the neighbourhood. At a short distance from the village, on the site of an ancient Danish camp, is a tower 120 feet in height, erected by an ancestor of Sir H. A. Hoare, Bart., to commemorate the celebrated visit of Alfred the Great in the dress of a minstrel to the tent of Guthrum, whom he afterwards defeated. The surface is in general hilly· but tolerably fertile. The soil is of a sandy and loamy nature, with a subsoil of sandstone. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £180. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a tower containing three bells. It was restored in 1849, and contains two stained-glass windows and several monuments. The register dates from 1721. There is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship. The Earl of Ilchester and Sir H. A. Hoare, Bart., are lords of the manor and principal owners of the soil. A feast is held on the first Sunday after the 5th August.

PENSFORD ST. THOMAS, a par. in the hund. of Keynsham, co. Somerset, 6 miles S. of Bristol. The parish, which is of small extent, is intersected by the river Chew. The village, which was formerly a market town, is situated partly in this and partly in the adjoining parish of Publow. The woollen cloth manufacture was formerly carried on here; but has long since declined. The inhabitants are now chiefly engaged in the adjacent collieries and copper mines. Several of the adherents of the unfortunate Duke of Monmouth were executed here by Jeffreys. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Stanton-Drew, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket, is a stone structure with a venerable tower. There are places of worship for the Independents and Wesleyans. Fairs are held on the 6th May and 8th November.

PENSHAM, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Andrew Pershore, upper div. of the hund. of Pershore, co. Worcester, 1½ mile S.W. of Pershore. It is situated on the river Avon.

PENSHER, a hmlt. in the par. of Washington, co. Durham, 6 miles S.E. of Gateshead. It is a station on the North-Eastern railway, where the Sunderland section branches off.

PENSHURST, a par. in the hund. of Somerden, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 6½ miles W. of Tunbridge Wells, its post town. It is a station on the South-Eastern railway. The village is situated at the confluence of the rivers Medway and Eden. It is chiefly agricultural; but a considerable number of the inhabitants are employed in the making of cricket bats and balls, and in the paper manufacture. The land, which is in a high state of cultivation, is partly in hop grounds. At a short distance from the village is Penshurst Place, an embattled mansion, erected at various periods, the Hall being of the time of Edward III.; but the greater portion of the structure was rebuilt in the reign of Elizabeth, in the florid Elizabethan style of architecture. It occupies the site of a much more ancient edifice, which belonged to the Penchester family at the time of the Norman Conquest. The present building is a quadrangle, surmounted by battlements, and is approached through an avenue. The king's tower was restored in 1862. The mansion contains the great hall, remarkable for its immense fireplace; Queen Elizabeth's drawing-room, a spacious ball-room, a decorated chapel, and portrait gallery, containing paintings by Holbein, Vandyck, and others. In the park is Sidney's oak, 23 feet in girth, near Longcup well; Barbara Gamage's bower, and a heronry. The mansion, after having belonged to various illustrious personages, including the Lord Mayor Poultney, the good Duke Humphrey, the Earl of Stafford, and others, was given by Edward VI. to Sir William Sidney, whose descendants, Sir Henry Sidney, Lord Deputy of Ireland, Sir Philip Sidney, the patriotic Algernon Sidney, and the charming Dorothea, celebrated by Waller under the name of "Sacharissa," were all born here. The present proprietor is Lord de L'Isle and Dudley, a lineal descendant of the Sidneys. The other seats in the parish are South Park, of Viscount Hardinge, Red Leaf, and Ford Place. At White Port in this parish the line of the South-Eastern railway passes through a short tunnel of 25 feet in diameter. Penshurst gives the inferior title of baron to the family of Smythe, Viscounts Strangford. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £1,020, and the glebe comprises 35 acres. The living is a rect.* with the cur.* of St. Peter annexed, in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £766. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a structure of the 13th century, with three chancels, and a pinnacled tower containing a clock and six bells. The interior of the church contains a private chapel, under which are the remains of Algernon Sidney, who was beheaded in 1683. There are several brasses and tombs to the same family, also effigies of a Penchester. The church has recently been restored at the expense of G. Gilbert, Esq., and several painted windows have been inserted at the expense of the Misses Sidney, to the late Lord de L'Isle; also the E. end window to the late rector, by George Gilbert, Esq. The register dates from 1600. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum, besides five almshouses, erected by the late Sir Shelley Sidney. There is a National school for both sexes. The Baptists have a place of worship. In the neighbourhood are remains of a Roman fortification.

PENSNET, a vil. in the hund. of Offlow, co. Stafford, 2 miles S.W. of Dudley, of which it is a suburb. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £250. The church is a modern structure.

PENSTHORPE, or PENTESTHORPE, a par. in the hund of Gallow, co. Norfolk, 2 miles S.E. of Fakenham, its post town. The parish, which is inconsiderable, is situated on the river Wensum. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. Three parts of the land is arable, the remainder pasture and meadow, with about 15 acres of woodland. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £170. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £50. There is no church. In the gravel pits various Roman remains have been found.

PENSTON, a vil. in the par. of Gladsmuir, co. Haddington, Scotland, 5 miles S.W. of Haddington, and 3 E. of Tranent. It is situated on rising ground a short distance from the Edinburgh and Berwick road, and in the centre of one of the largest coal districts in the country. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the collieries. Penston belongs to — Baillie, Esq., whose family have held the barony for 550 years.

PENSTROWED, a par. in the hund. of Llanidloes, co. Montgomery, 2 miles W. of Newtown, its post town, and 9 from Llanidloes. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the western bank of the river Severn, and near the Caer-Sws Roman way. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £110, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to St. George.

PENSYLVANIA, a hmlt. in the par. of Cold Ashton, co. Gloucester, 2 miles S.W. of Marshfield.

PENTECOX, a vil. in the par. of Newton, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 4 miles S.E. of Edinburgh.

PENTERRY, a par. in the upper div. of Caldicott hund., co. Monmouth, 3 miles N.W. of Chepstow, its post town, and 10 from Monmouth. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Wye. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £65, in the patron. of the chapter.

PENTEWAN, PORT, a creek to Fowey, co. Cornwall, 3 miles S. of St. Austle.

PENTHRYN, a tnshp. in the par. of Berriew, co. Montgomery, 4 miles N.W. of Montgomery.

PENTHRYN-FAWR and PENTHRYN-FECHAN, tnshps. in the par. of Llandrinio, hund. of Deythur, co. Montgomery, 6 miles N.E. of Welshpool, and 9 E. of Llanfillyn. It is situated near the confluence of the Vyrnwy with the Severn.

PENTIR, a hmlt. in the par. of Bangor, co. Carnarvon, 3 miles S.W. of Bangor. It once formed a separate parish. The living is a cur. united with Bangor.

PENTIRE, a headland near Holywell Bay, co. Cornwall, 7 miles W. of St. Colomb.

PENTIRE POINT, a headland on the Bristol Channel, co. Cornwall, 3 miles N.E. of Padstow. In the neighbourhood lead has been found.

PENTLAND, an ancient par. now joined with that of Glencross, co. Edinburgh, Scotland.

PENTLAND FRITH, the strait which separates the Orkney Isles from the mainland of Scotland. It is 24 miles in length, and from four to five leagues in breadth, extending from Duncansby Head to Dunnet Head light on the S., and from South Ronaldshay to Hog Islands on the N. It has 10 to 40 fathoms water, and forms a communication between the North Sea and the Atlantic Ocean. In the mouth of the Frith, towards the E. are situated the Pentland Skerries, two small uninhabited islands, upon one of which a lighthouse is erected, and in the middle, opposite Scalpa Flow, are Stroma and Swoma islands. The tides run E. from 5 to 10 miles an hour, causing whirlpools and eddies about the islands, the two currents, stretching from Duncan's Bay Head and St. John's Head, called respectively "The Boars of Duncan's Bay" and "The Men of Moy" being considered the most dangerous to navigation, the billows often rolling mountains high in the finest summer day. There is an anchorage in Gills Bay.

PENTLAND HILLS, a range of hills in the cos. of Peebles and Edinburgh, Scotland, extending for above 12 miles in a westerly direction, and from near the Frith of Forth on the E. to the borders of Clydesdale. The hills are chiefly of porphyry, and form three ridges, the summits near the centre ranging from 1,500 to 1,700 feet, and the highest point at Eastcairn rising 1,832 feet above sea level. Boulders of granite and gneiss lie strewn on the surface near the top, and the slopes afford excellent pasture to numerous flocks of sheep.

PENTLAND SKERRIES, a group of islets in the par. of South Ronaldshay, Orkney Islands, coast of Scotland, 6 miles S. of South Ronaldshay, and 4 N.E. of Duncansby Head. The group lie at the eastern entrance of the Pentland Frith, and the Great Skerry, which is the only one inhabited, is about a mile in length by half a mile broad. It is wholly appropriated to the pasturage of sheep and cattle, and has on it two fixed lights, put up in 1794 and visible at sea for 17 miles. The other islets are mere barren rocks.

PENTLOW, a par. in the hund. of Hinckford, co. Essex, 3½ miles E. of Clare, its post town, and 6 N.W. of Sudbury railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Stour, and is wholly agricultural. The surface is in general elevated, except a tract of low meadow land. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £510, and the glebe comprises 27 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £550. The church, dedicated to St. Gregory, is an ancient structure, with a round embattled tower of stone and flint containing five bells. On the N. side of the chancel is the mortuary chapel of the Kemp family. The parochial charities produce about £24 per annum. The present rector erected a tower in 1859 in memory of his father. It is of octangular form, and is ascended by a spiral staircase. The view from its summit embraces upwards of 46 churches.

PENTNEY, a par. in the hund. of Freebridge Lynn, co. Norfolk, 6½ miles N.W. of Swaffham, its post town, and 1¼ mile from Bilney railway station on the Lynn and Dereham line. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the N. bank of the river Nen, and consists of numerous widely detached houses. It is chiefly agricultural. The soil, formerly wet and marshy, has been greatly improved by draining the lands, for which an Act of Parliament was obtained in 1815. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture. At a place called the Isle of Eva are the ruins of a priory for Black Canons, founded in the reign of Henry II., by Robert de Vaux, one of the Norman followers of the Conqueror. At the Dissolution there were twelve canons, whose revenue was returned at £215 18*s.* 8*d.* Between the priory and the church is an ancient cross, with a lofty shaft. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £60. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, is an ancient edifice, with a square embattled tower containing one bell. The parochial charities produce about £75 per annum. The Wesleyans, General Baptists, Particular Baptists, and New Connexion Methodists have each a place of worship. At the enclosure of the parish 62 acres were allotted to the poor for fuel, and a house with garden has since been bequeathed for widows. Miss Thackeray is lady of the manor.

PENTON, a station on the North Eastern railway, co. Cumberland. It is situated near the Scottish border, at the confluence of the rivers Kershope and Liddel.

PENTON-GRAFTON, a hmlt. formerly a par. in the par. of Weyhill, hund. of Andover, co. Hants, 3 miles W. by N. of Andover.

PENTON-MEWSEY, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Andover, co. Hants, 3 miles N.W. of Andover, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £286, and the glebe comprises 40 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £315. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum. There is a free school, which was erected by voluntary contributions in 1815.

PENTONVILLE, a suburban district of London and chplry. in the par. of Clerkenwell, Finsbury div. of the hund. of Ossulstone, co. Middlesex, 1½ mile N.E. of St. Paul's. It lies between the Angel at Islington and Battle Bridge on both sides of the New-road, and occupies the site of a farm given by the Mandevilles to Clerkenwell nunnery. It was founded by the Pentons, from whom it takes its name, between 1773 and 1780, and now constitutes one of the most populous suburbs of the metropolis, having a population of near 10,000. There are situated the London Female Penitentiary, founded in 1807, the government model prison in the Caledonian-road, built in 1842 at a cost of £84,000, for 1,000 convicts, and White Conduit House. The living is a perpet. cur. with Christ Church, in the dioc. of London, val. £300, in the patron. of the Incumbent of Clerkenwell. The chapel, dedicated to St. James, was erected in 1788, by Hurst, and contains the altar-piece, by Fearon, "Christ Raising Jairus' Daughter." There is also the district church of St. Mark, situated in Myddelton-square, which is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of London, val. £535, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1828, at a cost of £16,000. There is, besides, Claremont Independent chapel, erected in 1819.

PENTRAETH, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Tyndaethwy, co. Anglesea, 5 miles N.W. of Beaumaris, its post town, and 7 from Bangor. The village is situated on the banks of a rivulet which flows into Red Wharf Bay, about 1 mile N., on the shores of which are found a rare variety of shells. There are marble and limestone quarries in the neighbourhood. The living is a perpet. cur. with the cur. of Llanbedr-Gôch annexed, in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £400, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, contains tombs of the Pantons of Plâs Gwyn. The parochial charities produce about £14 per annum, of which £4 goes to Jones's school. Annual fairs are held on the 5th May, 24th June, and 20th September.

PENTRE, a vil. in the par. of Llanfihangel Abercowin, co. Carmarthen, 2 miles N. of Laugharne.

PENTRE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Mancott, par. of Hawarden, co. Flint, 2 miles N.E. of Hawarden. It is situated on the river Dee, near the line of the Holyhead railway. The inhabitants are employed in the iron and lead mines.

PENTRE, a hmlt. in the par. of Mold, co. Flint, 1 mile E. of Flint.

PENTRE, a tnshp. in the par. of Rhuddlan, co. Flint, 2 miles from Rhuddlan.

PENTRE, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Kilgerran, co. Pembroke, 3 miles S.E. of Cardigan. It is situated near the river Teifi.

PENTRE, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Abergavenny, co. Monmouth, 1 mile N.W. of Abergavenny. It is situated under the Sugar Loaf Hill, near the confluence of the rivers Gavenny and Usk.

PENTRE-BRUNANT, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanfihangel-y-Croyddin, co. Cardigan, 2 miles from Eglwys Newydd. It is situated on the river Ystwith.

PENTRECOED, a tnshp. in the chplry. of Dudleston, par. of Ellesmere, co. Salop, 3 miles W. by N. of Ellesmere.

PENTRECWN, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandilofawr, hund. of Iskennen, co. Carmarthen. It is situated opposite Dynevor Castle, on the river Teivi.

PENTRE-EVAN, a hill near Newport, co. Pembroke. It is celebrated for a cromlech, 8 feet high by 18 feet long at the top.

PENTREFELIN, a hmlt. in the par. of Llywell, co. Brecon, 11 miles W. of Brecknock. It is situated in a hilly country near the river Usk.

PENTREGAER, a tnshp. in the par. of Oswestry, co. Salop, 2 miles from Oswestry.

PENTRE HOBYN. See PENTROBBIN, co. Flint.

PENTREVOELAS, or CAPEL-VOELAS, a par. in the hund. of Isaled, co. Denbigh, 8 miles S.E. of Llanrwst. It is situated on a branch of the river Conway, near the falls. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of flannel. In the vicinity is Castell Coch, which was reduced by Llewelyn. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £242. The church is an ancient structure. Near the ruins of Voelas Hall is a pillar to Llewelyn ab Sitsylt, killed in 1021. Annual fairs are held on the 18th March, 12th May, 14th August, and 20th November.

PENTREWERN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangerniew, co. Denbigh, 5 miles N.E. of Llanrwst.

PENTRICH, a par. in the hund. of Morleston, co. Derby, 5 miles N.E. of Belper, its post town, 2½ S.W. of Alfreton, and 3 W. of the Ambergate railway station. The village, which is considerable, and was formerly a market town, is situated on the road from Birmingham to Sheffield through Ripley, near the Cromford canal tunnel and the river Derwent. The tunnel of the Cromford canal is 2,966 yards in length, and in the neighbourhood is the reservoir of the Nottingham canal. The par. contains the chplry. of Ripley, and was formerly a demesne of the Abbey of Darleigh. A large portion of the inhabitants are employed in the Butterley iron works, established about 1793, and in the silk mills and stone-quarries. A riot, in which several houses were destroyed, occurred here in 1817. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £135. The church, dedicated to St. Matthew, is an ancient embattled edifice with a square tower containing three bells. It has several ancient monuments. There is also a district church at Ripley, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £200. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a parochial school. There are places of worship for Calvinists, Independents, and Unitarians. There are traces of a Roman camp on the common, near which passed the Icknield Street. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor.

PENTRIDGE, a par. in the hund. of Cranborne, co. Dorset, 3½ miles N.W. of Cranborne, its post town, and 3½ N.E. of Wimborne. The village, which is of small extent, is situated under Pentridge down, near Ackling Ditch. It is wholly agricultural. The par. comprises the hmlt. of East Woodyates. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £205, and the glebe comprises 49 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £214. The church, dedicated to St. Rumbold, has a spired tower containing four bells. The church was rebuilt and enlarged in 1857. The register dates from 1725. There is a school, which is partly supported by the Earl of Shaftesbury, and partly by the rector. The former is lord of the manor.

PENTROBBIN or PENTRE HOBYN, a tnshp. in the par. of Hawarden, hund. of Mold, co. Flint, 1 mile S.E. of Mold. It is situated on the river Alen, and contains Pen-y-Mynydd and four other hmlts. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the potteries and tile works.

PENTYCH, a hmlt. in the par. of Kilrhedin, co. Carmarthen, 4 miles S.W. of Newcastle-in-Emlyn.

PENTYRCH, a par. in the hund. of Miskin, co. Glamorgan, 6 miles N.W. of Cardiff, its post town, and 6 from Caerphilly. It is a station on the Taff-Vale railway. The village is situated at a bridge on the river Taff. The pass of Castle-Coch and the Great Garth, 981 feet above sea level, are in the neighbourhood. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the iron and coal works. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £113. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum.

PENTYRCH, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfair-Caereinion, hund. of Mathrafel, co. Montgomery, 10 miles N.W. of Montgomery. It is situated under Caer Einion British camp, near the Sarn Sws Roman way.

PENUCHAF, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Aberwheeler, par. of Bodfary, co. Flint, 4 miles N.E. of Denbigh. It is situated under Moel-y-gaer camp near the river Clwyd.

PENWARNE, a hmlt. in the par. of Mevagissey, co. Cornwall, 4 miles S. of St. Austle.

PENWARNE, a hmlt. in the par. of Falmouth, hund. of Kerrier, co. Cornwall, 2 miles S.W. of Falmouth. It is situated near the river Tal.

PENWERRIS, a vil. in the par. of St. Gluvias, co. Cornwall, 1 mile N.W. of Falmouth, and the like distance from Penryn. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, and in the patron. of the Vicar of St. Gluvias.

PENWHERRY, a ruined castle on the river Stinchar, co. Ayr, Scotland, 6 miles S. of Girvan.

PENWITH, a hund. in the co. of Cornwall, contains the towns of Marazion and Penzance, and the pars. of Buryan, Camborne, Crowan, St. Erth, Gulval, Gwinear, Gwithian, St. Hilary, Illogan, St. Ive's, St. Just, Lelant, St. Levan, Ludgvan, Madron, Paul, Perran-Uthnoe, Phillack, Redruth, Sancreed, Sennen, Towednack, and Zennor, comprising together an area of 101,070 acres. It gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. of Cornwall and dioc. of Exeter.

PENWORTHAM, a par. in the hund. of Leyland, co. Lancaster, 2 miles S.W. of Preston, its post town. At Farington, in this parish, the London and North-Western and the Lancashire and Yorkshire railways have each a station. The village, which is extensive, is situated on the S.W. bank of the river Ribble. It is a petty sessions town for the hundred of Leyland, the sessions being held here alternately with Chorley, Cuerdon, Leyland, and Rufford. The par. comprises the tnshps. of Farington, Longton, Howick, and Hutton. There was formerly a Benedictine priory here, founded by Warine Bussel in the reign of the Conqueror, as a cell to Evesham. Its revenue at the Dissolution was £114 16*s.* 9*d.*, when the site was given to the Fleetwoods. There are no traces of the buildings now remaining. The neighbourhood of the village is studded with villas. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the cotton mills. The soil is of a marshy description, with red loam in one part of the township, and marl in the other. One of the heaviest cuttings on the line of the North Union railway was made through Penwortham Hill, and the embankment of the Ribble valley, for the same railway, was also a work of considerable labour; the bridge carrying the line over the Ribble is a massive structure of five semi-elliptical arches, each of 120 feet span, and the road 44 feet above the level of the stream. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £106. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a square embattled tower containing six bells. The interior of the church contains some monuments of the Fleetwood and Rawstone families, also a stained window. The nave was rebuilt in 1856, at which period two aisles were added. The register chest and contents were destroyed by fire in 1857, owing to the over-heating of the flues. There are also two district churches—viz. at Farington and Longton, the livings of both which are perpet. curs., val. £148 and £120 each. The parochial charities produce about £19 per annum. The Hutton grammar school, situated in that township, is open to all the children of the parish free, and has a branch school in each township. This excellent school was founded by Christopher Hutton, of Little Hoole, in 1552, and has an income of £1,000 arising from lands, which, at the time of the bequest, realised only £4 13*s.* 0*d.* The Wesleyans have a place of worship at Middleford Green, at which place is also the workhouse for girls, being a branch of the Preston Union. Farington House, Farington Lodge, Howick Hall, Hurst Grange, Hutton Hall, Penwortham Hall, Penwortham House, Swallow House, The Oaks, The Priory, and The Whitefriars are the principal residences.

PENYARD, a ruined castle on the river Wye, in the hund. of Greytree, co. Hereford, 1 mile S.E. of Ross. It belonged to the Talbots of Goodrich, who had a mint for the coinage of "Penyard pennies."

PENYBONT, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandisilio Gogo, hund. of Moyddyn, co. Cardigan, 7 miles S.W. of Aber-Ayron. It is situated on the coast.

PEN-Y-BONT, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanbadarn-Fawr, hund. of Cefnllys, co. Radnor, 8 miles S.E. of Rhayader, and 7 W. by N. of Radnor. It is situated at the new bridge on the river Ithon. The principal residence is Pen-y-Bont Hall of the Severns. In the vicinity is Llandegley Spa.

PENYBONT-AR-OGWR, See BRIDGEND, co. Glamorgan.

PEN-Y-CLAWDD, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Ragland, co. Monmouth, 5 miles S.W. of Monmouth, its post town, and 3 from Ragland. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on the old road from Usk to Monmouth. The village consists of a few farmhouses. Stone is quarried for building purposes. The appropriate tithes, belonging to the Archdeacon and Chapter of Llandaff, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £50. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Llangoven, in the dioc. of Llandaff. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, is an ancient structure. There is a village school. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum.

PEN-Y-CLAWDD, a tnshp. in the par. of Chirk, co. Denbigh, 2 miles from Chirk. It is situated near Offa's Dyke.

PEN-Y-COED, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfwrog, co. Denbigh, adjoining Ruthin, within which borough it is situated. It is on the river Clwydd.

PEN-Y-DARREN, or PENNYDARON, a hmlt. in the par. of Merthyr-Tydfil, hund. of Caerphilly, co. Glamorgan, 2 miles from Merthyr-Tydfil. It is situated near the river Taff and Cardiff canal, and is celebrated for its extensive iron works, employing above 2,000 hands.

PENYFOED, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangwyn, co. Denbigh, 8 miles W. of Corwen.

PENYGELLI, a tnshp. in the par. of Kerry, co. Montgomery, 2 miles S.E. of Newtown.

PENYGLODFA, a tnshp. in the par. of Newtown, co. Montgomery, adjoining Newtown, and 8 miles S.W. of Montgomery. It is situated near the bridge over the Severn.

PEN-Y-GROES, a hmlt. in the hund. of Isgorfai, co. Carnarvon, 5 miles S. by E. of Carnarvon. It is a station on the Carnarvon and Nantlle railway. It is situated near Lake Nantlle, under Mynydd Mawr and Graig Goch.

PENYMES. a tnshp. in the par. of Llanwyddelan, co. Montgomery, 4 miles S.W. of Llanfair.

PENYMYNYDD, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Pentrobbin, par. of Hawarden, co. Flint, 1 mile S.E. of Mold. It is situated near the river Alen.

PENYPONT. See PEN-Y-BONT, cos. Radnor and Glamorgan.

PENYRHWEL, a hmlt. in the par. of Swansea, co. Glamorgan, adjoining Swansea.

PENYVAE, a hmlt. in the par. of Newcastle, co. Glamorgan, 2 miles from Bridgend. It is situated near the river Ogmore.

PENZANCE, a seaport, market town and municipal borough in the par. of Madron, hund. of Penwith, co. Cornwall, 44 miles S.W. of Bodmin, and 80 from Plymouth by the Cornwall and West Cornwall railway, of which it is the terminus. It is situated on the north-western shore of Mount's Bay, and is the most westerly town in England, being only 10 miles distant from Land's End. A religious house formerly stood on the site of the present pier, and is said to have given the name of Holy Headland to the town, which was afterwards called Buriton, or Castle Town. The Spaniards, in 1595, landed at the village of Mousehole, a short distance from this town, and having laid that place waste, they burnt Penzance. Fifty years later it was sacked by the parliamentary troops under Fairfax.—The trade of Penzance chiefly consists in the export of copper, tin, earthenwares, and fish; large quantities of iron, timber, coals, hemp, and tallow are imported; most of the tin procured from the mines in Cornwall is shipped at Penzance. The pilchard fishery is very extensive, employing upwards of 2,000 persons and 300 fishing boats; but has recently declined. The town of late years has very much increased; the streets for the most part are well paved and lighted with gas. The population was 9,214 in 1851, with 1,878 inhabited houses, which, in 1861, had increased to 9,414, with 1,941 inhabited houses. The first charter was granted by James I. in 1615, which was afterwards confirmed by Charles II. Under the late Municipal Reform Act, the town is divided into two wards, and is governed by a mayor, six aldermen, and eighteen councillors, with the style of "mayor, aldermen, and commonalty of the town of Penzance."—The climate is considered so mild as to be exceedingly beneficial to invalids, more particularly during the winter months. One of the chief features is the pier, upon which a large amount has at different times been expended, upwards of £30,000 having been voted within the last few years for this purpose by the corporation. The western arm of the pier, which is 600 feet long, was commenced about the year 1770. There is a lighthouse on the point of the pier 33 feet high. The present town-hall is a Grecian structure of granite, surmounted by a cupola, and was completed in 1838. It contains several spacious rooms, comprising the sessions and police offices, the museums of the Natural History and Antiquarian Societies, and the Council Chamber: in this last is a painting of "The Daughter of Herodias receiving the head of John the Baptist," and another of "The Queen and the late Prince Consort departing from St. Michael's Mount in 1846." On the basement floor immediately beneath the cupola is the butchers' market, which is well supplied. A pile of granite building is nearly completed, to the left wing of which the townhall will shortly be transferred. The centre will receive the public library, and will also contain a public hall with an organ. The right wing will become the museum of the Royal Geological Society of Cornwall, which contains a first-class collection of minerals. The market-house for poultry, fish, and butter is in Princes-street. In Parade-street is a building occupied by the public library and newsroom and savings-bank. Besides these must be mentioned the custom-house, the dispensary, in Chapel-street, the public baths on the esplanade, the gaol, the gas and water works, three banks, and the railway station. A local board of health has recently been established. Quarter sessions and weekly petty sessions are held in the townhall, as also a new county court. Penzance Poor-law Union contains nineteen parishes and townships.—The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £300, in the patron. of the Vicar of Madron. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary, is a chapel-of-ease to the parish church of Madron, which is a mile off. It was rebuilt in 1833, at an expense of about £9,000, and is in the pointed style of architecture, with a pinnacled tower containing a peal of eight bells. The E. window is of stained glass, and the ceilings are arched and painted in panels. There is also the chapel of St. Paul, built by W. Batten, Esq., at the cost of £5,000. It is built of granite, in the decorated style of the 13th century. The pulpit is carved out of a solid block of granite, and all the interior is decorated. The E. window is of stained glass. Here are also places of worship for Roman Catholics, Primitive Methodists, Wesleyans, Baptists, Bible Christians, Society of Friends, besides a Jews' synagogue. The free grammar school is supported by the corporation, and there are National and ther schools.—Sir Humphrey Davy and Lord Exmouth were natives. The former willed £100 to the grammar school, upon condition of a holiday being given on each anniversary of his birth. There are several seats in the neighbourhood. Steamers go to London and to the Scilly Islands. The Penzance Gazette is published here.—Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday are market days. Fairs are held on the 25th March, Thursday after Trinity Sunday, 8th September, and Thursday before Advent Sunday. A regatta is held during the summer.

PEOPLETON, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Pershore, co. Worcester, 3 miles N.W. of Pershore, its post town and railway station, and 8 N.W. of Worcester. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The soil consists principally of sand. There are collieries in the neighbourhood. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £200. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a tower containing three bells. It has recently been restored.

PEOVER, or PEEVER INFERIOR, a tnshp. in the par. of Great Budworth, hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 2 miles S.W. of Nether Knutsford. It is situated on the river Peover, which rises near Gawsworth, and runs 28 miles W. to the Weaver at Northwich. The village is of small extent, and wholly agricultural. Lord de Tabley is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

PEOVER, NETHER, a parochial chplry. in the par. of Great Budworth, hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 3 miles S.E. of Knutsford, its post town, and 5 W. of Chelford. The village is situated on the Peover Eye brook, and is chiefly agricultural. It comprises the tnshps. of Inferior and Nether Peover, Allostock, and Plumley. Peover is celebrated for its production of cheese. The soil is of a clayey and loamy nature on a subsoil of clay and marl. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £96. The church, dedicated to St. Oswald, has a stone tower containing a clock and six bells. The church was built in the 13th century, and the tower added in 1562. It was thoroughly restored in 1852 at an outlay of £1,300. The parochial charities produce about £96 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. Lord de Tabley and Sir Charles Shakerley, Bart., are lords of the manor.

PEOVER, SUPERIOR, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Rostherne, hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 3½ miles S.E. of Knutsford, its post town, and 2½ W. of Chelford railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the line of the Manchester railway, and is chiefly agricultural. It was formerly called Peure, and was given by the Conqueror to Ranulph. It comprises the hmlts. of Over Peover and Snelson. The soil is of a sandy and loamy nature. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £100. The church, dedicated to St. Laurence, has a square tower containing three bells. The chief portion of the church was rebuilt in 1811. The north chapel contains several monuments, including one to Sir J. Mainwaring, his wife, and fifteen children, bearing date 1515. The parochial charities produce about £80 per annum. There is a free school for both sexes. Peover Hall, the principal residence, is overgrown with ivy, and situated in a well-wooded park. H. Mainwaring, Esq., is lord of the manor.

PEPLOW, a tnshp. in the par. of Hodnet, co. Salop, 6 miles S.W. of Market Drayton.

PEPPERCOMB, a hmlt. in the par. of Parkham, co. Devon, 6 miles S.W. of Bideford.

PEPPER-HALL, a hmlt. in the chplry. of South Cowton, par. of Gilling, North Riding co. York, 5 miles E. of Richmond, and 5 N. of Northallerton. It is situated near Standard Hill, where the Battle of the Standard was fought in 1138. The principal residence is Pepper Hall, the old seat of the Ardens. The Bedale hounds meet here.

PEPPER-HARROW, or PEPER-HAROW, a par. in the first div. of the hund. of Godalming, co. Surrey, 2½ miles W. of Godalming, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Wey. The surface is well wooded, and about a third unenclosed. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £200. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, was considerably enlarged, and a tower added, in 1826, by the late Viscount Midleton. Peper-Harow Park, the residence of Viscount Midleton, contains portraits of the Brodricks, and of Charles V. by Titian.

PEPPERSTOWN, or PEPPARDSTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Middlethird, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 1 mile N.E. of Fethard, its post town. The road from Fethard to Drangan passes through the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. with Fethard £1,076, in the patron. of the bishop. Knockelly House and Brookhill are the principal residences. There are the ruins of three castles and of two churches.

PERFEDD, a hund. in the co. of Carmarthen, contains the market town of Llandovery, and the pars. of Llanddausaint or Llanthoysaint, Llanfairarybryn, Llangadock, Llansadwrn, Mothvey, and parts of Llandilofawr and Llandingat.

PERITON, a hmlt. in the par. of Minehead, co. Somerset, 1 mile S.W. of Minehead.

PERLETHORPE, or PEVERELTHORPE, a parochial chplry. in the par. of Edwinstowe, Hatfield div. of the wap. of Bassetlaw, co. Nottingham, 3 miles N. of Ollerton, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the E. side of Thoresby Park. The inhabitants are chiefly employed by the lord of the manor. The tnshp. contains the hmlt. of Thoresby. The demesne formerly belonged to Evelyn Duke of Kingston, whose eldest daughter, Lady Mary Wortley Montague, was born here. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £100. The church is situated in the park, and was rebuilt by the Pierrepoint family. It contains several windows of ancient stained glass, and over the altar is a painting by West of "Peter denying Christ." Thoresby Hall, the seat of Earl Manvers, is situated in an extensive and well-wooded park, watered by a lake on the river Medin. The mansion, which was destroyed by fire in 1745, has been rebuilt of stone with a rustic basement and a tetrastyle portico of the Ionic order. The park is well stocked with deer and game. In 1836 an Act was passed to enable Earl Manvers to endow the chapel, and to create it a separate benefice. Earl Manvers is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

PERMIZEN, a small bay on the N. coast of Cornwall, 2 miles W. of Padstow. It is situated in the Bristol Channel.

PERRAN-ARWORTHAL, a par. in the hund. of Kerrier, co. Cornwall, 5 miles S.W. of Truro, its post town, and 3 N. of Penryn. At Perranwell is a station on the Cornwall and West Cornwall railway. The village, which is considerable, is situated at the head of Carron Creek. The par. includes the hmlt. of Perranwell, near which is an extensive arsenic manufactory, the material for which is procured from the horizontal flues of the tin roasting furnaces. The manor was formerly held by the Mohuns and Pendarves. There are extensive smelting works at Bison Bridge, and powder works employing a large number of the inhabitants. There is also a manufactory for blankets and carpets, and nails are made to a considerable extent. In the neighbourhood is a mineral spring, and lead, copper, and tin ores are met with, but not generally worked. There is a tram rail which runs down from Redruth. The Carron steam works are partly within this parish, in which stream gold has been found. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £150, and the vicarial for £99. The glebe consists of five acres. The living is a vic.* annexed to that of Stithians, in the dioc. of Exeter. The church is dedicated to St. Piran. The Wesleyans and Bible Christians have each a chapel. There is a mechanics' institution. J. Bassett, Esq., is lord of the manor.

PERRAN-UTHNOE, or PERRAN-UTHOE, a par. in the hund. of Penwith, co. Cornwall, 1 mile S.E. of Marazion, its post town, and 4½ miles from Penzance. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on Mount's Bay, and is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Goldsithney, at which place was a chapel dedicated to St. James, but which, having become dilapidated, has recently been taken down. The soil is of a loamy nature, with a subsoil of killas. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the mines, of which the South Wheal Neptune copper mines, and the St. Perran tin mine, are the most considerable; the former runs for some distance under the sea. The parish is intersected by the roads from Falmouth and Truro to Penzance. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £290, and there are about 17 acres of glebe. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £320. The church dedicated to SS. Piran and Nicholas, is an ancient stone structure, with a square embattled tower containing three bells. The register dates from 1562. The Wesleyans and Wesleyan Association Methodists have each a place of worship. There is a National school for both sexes, built by Lady Carrington. Acton Castle is the principal residence. W. J. Trevelyan, Esq., is lord of the manor. An annual fair is held on the 5th August at Goldsithney for cattle, cloth, and hardware.

PERRANWELL, a hmlt. in the par. of Perran-Arworthal, hund. of Kerrier, co. Cornwall, 5 miles S.W. of Truro, and 9 from Falmouth. It is a station on the West Cornwall railway.

PERRAN-WHARF, or COVE, a vil., partly in the par. of Perran-Arworthal, and partly in that of Mylor, E. div. of the hund. of Kerrier, co. Cornwall, 5 miles S.W. of Truro, its post town. It is situated on the road from Falmouth to Truro in a vale watered by a feeder of the river Fal. It contains a large foundry for the manufacture of steam-engines, and a considerable trade is carried on in coal, lime, and slates, and in timber from Norway to Canada. A tram-road from the wharf communicates with the mines of Redruth and Gwennap. The neighbourhood is studded with villa residences.

PERRAN-ZABULOE, or PERRAN-IN-THE-SANDS, a par. in the hund. of Pyder, co. Cornwall, 5 miles N.W. of Truro, and 7 N.W. of St. Michael, or Midshall. This place is situated on the shore of the Bristol Channel, and includes the small harbours of Perran Combe and Perran Porth, principally frequented by the boats employed in the pilchard fisheries. The beach is a firm smooth sand, well adapted for sea-bathing, and is much frequented for that purpose. The par., which is of large extent, includes the chplries. of Mithian and Mount Hawk, and the hmlts. of Lambourn and Penwortha, which last formerly belonged to the Vyvians. The western portion of the parish is the most populous, and is chiefly inhabited by miners, who reside in detached cottages thickly scattered over the commons, and are employed in the tin, copper, lead, and zinc mines, with which this district abounds, particularly at Wheal Hope and Wheal St. George. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £395, and the vicarial for one of £265. The ancient church was collegiate for a dean and canons in the time of Edward the Confessor, and had the oratory or shrine of St. Piran, the patron saint of tinners, who is fabled to have crossed over the sea from Ireland on a millstone, and to which the privilege of sanctuary was attached. This ancient oratory was swallowed up by the sands, but was disentombed in 1835, when it was found to measure 25 feet by 12½, and is fully described by Trelawney in his "Lost Church found." Near the village of Lambourn is St. Piran's, or Perran's Well, to which miraculous efficacy was formerly attributed in the cure of diseases; and about 1½ mile from the well is St. Perran's Round, one of the ancient Cornish amphitheatres, where miracle plays were performed, 130 feet in diameter. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £419, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The present church, which was rebuilt in 1805, is dedicated to St. Piran, and situated near the village of Lambourn. It is a cruciform structure, with a tower, and is capable of accommodating 500 persons. There are also the district churches of Mount-Hawk and Mithian, the livings of which are both perpet. curs., val. respectively £130 and £160, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The former church is dedicated to St. Agnes. There are places of worship for Wesleyans and Baptists, also several schools. At Caerkief is a Roman camp, at Caer Don a British camp, and at Tresawen a Saxon or Danish camp, also an extensive barrow at Caregmear. A fair is held on Easter Monday.

PERRIDGE, a farm in the par. of Kenn, hund. of Exminster, co. Devon, 4 miles W. by S. of Exeter.

PERRIVALE, or GREENFORD-PARVA, a par. in the hund. of Elthorne, co. Middlesex, 3 miles N. of Brentford, and 4½ N. of Hounslow. It is a small agricultural parish situated on the river Brent, near the Paddington canal. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of London, val. £315. The church is an ancient structure with a square wooden tower. It contains several stained windows and a brass bearing date 1500; also tombs of the Lanes and Harrisons.

PERROTT, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Houndsborough, co. Somerset, 2½ miles E. of Crewkerne, its railway station and post town, and 6 S.W. of Yeovil. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Parret, which separates it from Dorsetshire. It is chiefly agricultural, but the manufacture of sail cloth and twine are carried on to a small extent. The soil consists of sand and clay. The Exeter section of the Great Western railway passes in the vicinity. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £300, and the glebe comprises 44 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £272. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, is a cruciform structure, with a tower supported by four arches and containing a clock and five bells. It contains an altar-piece by Westmacott, in alto relievo, representing the Last Supper, after Leonardo da Vinci. William Hoskins, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner. There are traces of a moated castle and drawbridge.

PERROTT, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Beaminster Forum, co. Dorset, 3½ miles S.E. of Crewkerne, its post town, and 3 N.W. of Beaminster. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Parret, and on the road from Dorchester to Crewkerne. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture and in the burning of limestone. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £225, and the glebe comprises 77 acres. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Mosterton annexed, in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £362. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice, with a square tower containing a clock and three bells. A short distance from the church was Mohun Castle, which was destroyed during Monmouth's rebellion.

PERRY-BARR, a tnshp. in the par. of Handsworth, S. div. of Offlow hund., co. Stafford, 3 miles N. of Birmingham, its post town. It is a station on the London and North Western railway. The village is situated on the river Tame, and near the Liverpool canal. At a considerable elevation in the centre of Coldfield is a beacon which can be seen for 20 miles. It is supposed to have been the spot where the Druids made their sacrifices, and a portion of enclosed land near it is still called Druid Heath. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £200. The church, dedicated to St. John, is a modern structure, built and endowed at the expense of the late John Gough, Esq. There are two free schools for both sexes, which are wholly supported at the expense of Lord Calthorpe. Near the church, on an eminence, are the old and new colleges of Oscott. The former a few years back was nearly destroyed by fire, and is now converted into an orphanage conducted by the Sisters of Mercy of Handsworth; the latter is a finishing school for the education of Roman Catholics. Perry Hall, the principal residence, is an Elizabethan mansion, rebuilt by the late John Gough, Esq. In it are preserved the MSS. of W. Gough, the uncle of the antiquary.

PERRY, EAST, a hmlt. in the par. of Graffham, hund. of Leightonstone, co. Huntingdon, 3½ miles S.E. of Kimbolton.

PERRY-HILL, a tythg. in the par. of Worplesdon, first. div. of Woking, co. Surrey, 3 miles N.W. of Guildford. The parish church is situated in this tything.

PERRYSLOUGH, a hmlt. in the hund. of Blackheath, co. Kent, 3 miles S.W. of Greenwich, and 4 S.E. of London.

PERRY STREET, a hmlt. in the par. of Chard, hund. of East Kingsbury, co. Somerset, 2 miles from Chard, and 18 S. of Bridgwater. It is situated on Blackdown.

PERRY STREET, a hmlt. in the par. of Gravesend, hund. of Toltingtrough, co. Kent, 2 miles from Gravesend, and 23 from London. It is situated on the line of the ancient Watling Street, near the ferry over the Thames to Tilbury.

PERRY STREET, a hmlt. in the hund. of Axton, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 2 miles N.W. of Dartford, and 15 S.E. of London. It is situated near the line of the ancient Watling Street, on the river Darent.

PERSHALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Eccleshall, N. div. of the hund. of Pirehill, co. Stafford 1 mile N.W. of Eccleshall.

PERSHORE, a hund. in two divs., lower and upper, co. Worcester. The former contains the pars. of Birts Morton, Bushley, Castle Morton, Chaceley, Eldersfield, Hanley Castle, Leigh, Longdon, Madresfield, Great Malvern, Mattron, Powick, Sevenstoke, Staunton, Upton-on-Severn, and part of Ripple; the latter contains the pars. of Abberton, Alderminster, Beoley, Birlingham, Broadway, Hackett Broughton, Great and Little Comberton, Dormston, Eckington, Flyford-Flavel, Grafton Flyford, Marton Hussingtree, Naunton Beauchamp, Peopleton, St. Andrew's Pershore, North Piddle, Pirton, Strensham, and Upton Snodsbury, together comprising about 97,210 acres. It gives name to a deanery in the archdeac. and dioc. of Worcester.

PERSHORE, a post and market town, partly in the par. of St. Andrew's, and partly in that of Holy Cross, upper div. of the hund. of Pershore, co. Worcester, 9 miles S.E. of Worcester, and 102 W. by N. of London. It is a station on the West Midland railway. It is situated under Aylesborough and Bredon hills, and on the western bank of the Avon, which is here navigable, and is crossed by a bridge on the S. In the Saxon times its name was spelt Persora, and subsequently Pearshore and Persore, in allusion to the numerous pear trees which grew in the vicinity. The town appears to have grown up under shelter of a monastery for secular priests founded by Oswald, nephew of Ethelred, King of Mercia, about 689, and remodelled in 984 by King Edgar as a monastery for Benedictine monks. The village and monastery were burnt in 1287, but it was rebuilt, and continued to flourish till the Reformation, when its revenues were estimated at £666 13*s*. The town returned two members to parliament in the 23rd year of Edward I., but the privilege has since been discontinued. It is a polling-place for the eastern division of the county, and is under the government of the county magistrates. The town contained in 1861 a population of 2,905, and consists of one long street about three-quarters of a mile in length. It is well paved and lighted. The surrounding country is fertile and well cultivated. The Poor-law Union of Pershore comprises 40 parishes or townships, and the union poorhouse is situated in the town. It is also the head of a superintendent registry, and of a new County Court district. Land was assigned in lieu of certain tithes in 1762 and 1802, and the impropriation belongs to the Dean and Chapter of Westminster. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. with the curs. of Holy Cross, Pinvin, Broughton, and Bricklehampton annexed, £600, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Westminster. The church consists of a choir and S. transept, the remains of a noble cruciform church. The church of the Holy Cross was formerly the conventual church of the abbey, and measured 250 feet by 120, but has long since been dilapidated, with the exception of the tower, which was restored in 1774. The Baptists have a chapel. There are National and other schools. The principal seats are Pershore Abbey and Avon Bank. Until recently there were remains of the abbey, and of an ancient gate, near which was St. Edburga's chapel. Market day is Tuesday.

PERSIE, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of Bendochy, co. Perth, Scotland. It is situated near Cupar-Angus. The par. is in the presb. of Meigle, and in the synod of Angus and Mearns, and in the patron. of the communicants. The minister has a stipend of £70. The chapel was erected about ninety years ago.

PERT, an ancient par. in the co. of Forfar, Scotland, now joined to Logie.

PERTENHALL (formerly PETER'S HALL), a par. in the hund. of Stodden, co. Bedford, 2½ miles S.W. of Kimbolton, its post town, and 8 N.E. of St. Neot's. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near Pertenhall Hoo, and is wholly agricultural. The surface is hilly, and the soil a stiff clay alternating with gravel. There is a chalybeate spring called Chadwell. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £30 7*s*. 6*d*. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £510. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, has a spired tower. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum. Wood End Cottage is the principal residence. — Tismey, Esq., is lord of the manor. Here was formerly a preceptory of the Knights Templars, of which only the site, surrounded by a moat, is now remaining.

PERTH, a post and market town, bonding port, a royal and parliamentary burgh, and the county town of co. Perth, Scotland, 22 miles W.S.W. of Dundee, 39 N.N.W. of Edinburgh, or 45 by railway, and 61 N.E. of Glasgow. It is the junction station or termini of the Dundee and Perth, the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee, the Scottish Central, and the Scottish Midland Junction, or North-Eastern railways. This ancient city, once the capital of Scotland, is supposed to have been in existence at the time when the Romans extended their arms to the banks of the Tay; who at the first sight of this river, with its grassy lawns and wooded banks, are related by tradition to have exclaimed "Ecce Tiber! Ecce Campus Martius!" From the "Itinerary" of Richard of Cirencester there appears to have been three Roman towns in the neighbourhood, called Alauna, Lindum, and Victoria, the last of which was built by Agricola on the river Tay, 28 miles from the exit of that river into the German Ocean, and was probably the same as the Bertha of the Romans, which was swept away by a flood in 1210. The Picts, after their conversion to Christianity, consecrated the church which they built here to St. John the Baptist, from which circumstance it was frequently called St. John's Town, and subsequently Pert, when it became the capital of the kingdom of Scotland, for which its central locality made it admirably adapted, and so continued till the murder of James I. in 1437. In early times it was a place of great trade, and carried on a considerable foreign commerce with the Flemings and Germans, many of whom settled here towards the close of the 13th century, and introduced the woollen and linen manufactures. Its earliest known charter is dated 1106, but it was first erected into a royal burgh in 1210 by William the Lion, and was the usual residence of the Scottish monarchs prior to the accession of the Stuart family. In it 14 parliaments and 16 church councils were held, and as the capital of the kingdom it necessarily became the scene of some of the most remarkable events in Scottish history. Among others may be mentioned its capture by Edward I. of England immediately after the defeat of Wallace at Falkirk in 1298, when the English king carried off its records; its fortification and adoption as the residence of the English king's deputies till 1311, when it was surprised by Robert Bruce and the fortifications levelled; its capture by Baliol after the battle of Duplin in 1332; its recapture by David Bruce, and recovery by the party of Baliol in 1335, at which last date it was re-fortified by Edward III. of England; its storming by the Scots under Robert, High Steward of Scotland, afterwards Robert II., assisted by the French and the Earl of Liddesdale, in 1339, when the party of Baliol was crushed; its being the scene of the assassination of

James I. in the Dominican monastery in 1437, after which event Edinburgh became the seat of government, though Perth continued to be nominally the capital till 1482; its connection with the events of the Reformation, being the place where the six martyrs were hung in 1544 by Cardinal Beaton, and where Knox preached his famous sermon in 1559; its devastation by the plague in the 16th and 17th centuries; its occupation by the Queen-regent Mary, who attempted to restore the Roman Catholic ceremonials; its capture by Argyll and Ruthven; its being the scene of the "Gowrie" conspiracy against James VI., otherwise known as the Raid of Ruthven, in 1600; its reception of Charles I. in 1632; its capture by Montrose in 1644 after his victory at Tibbermuir; its capitulation to Cromwell in 1651, who built a fort on the North Inch commanding the navigation of the Tay; its selection as a place of residence by many of the officers and soldiers of Cromwell's army, who taught the citizens of Perth to improve their modes of life by the English arts, and excited among them a spirit of industry; its occupation by Viscount Dundee in 1689, immediately before the battle of Killiecrankie, and by the Highlanders in 1715 and 1745.—From this last date the town began to improve very rapidly in wealth and population, owing to the greater security of life and property, the government of this part of Great Britain having never before been properly settled. It is now one of the handsomest edificed towns in Scotland, presenting, from whatever quarter it is approached, a striking and attractive appearance. The substantial character of its houses, built of freestone, its noble river lined with quays, and here crossed by a bridge of nine arches, 880 feet long by 22 wide; its spacious promenades or meadows called "Inches," situated to the N. and S. of the town, and the background of hills, including Moncrieff and Kinnoul hills, all combine to heighten the effect produced upon the traveller. The North Inch, the scene of the fight between the clans Chattan and Kay, as told in the "Fair Maid of Perth," comprises about 98 acres skirting the margin of the river, and is partly occupied by a curved racecourse of 950 yards. The South Inch is surrounded with avenues of trees on three of its sides, and on the fourth is lined with villas called St. Leonard's Bank, and the buildings of the railway termini. The Inch is intersected throughout its extent by the line of the Edinburgh road, which is likewise shaded with avenues of trees. The bridge of the Dundee and Perth railway crosses the river a little below the town, but so constructed as not to impede the navigation. Great exertions have been made to improve the harbour, which, however, only admits vessels of small burden. Of the massive walls flanked with towers which once surrounded the town no vestiges now remain, the whole having been modernised, and the streets laid out with considerable regularity. The principal thoroughfares of the old part of the city run at right angles to the river, and are called Mill, Hill, South, and Canal streets, intersected by other lines of street running parallel to the river. This part of the town was formerly frequently inundated by the freshets of the Tay, but the level of the ground has been raised by the accumulations of time. The streets are in general straight, convenient, well paved, and lighted with gas. The houses are substantial, and new lines of shops have now almost entirely superseded the hideous and crazy edifices which occupied the same ground less than a century ago. To the S. of the old town, and adjoining the South Inch, lies a new town wholly built since 1801, and arranged somewhat after the fashion of the new town of Edinburgh, with terraces and wide streets, as King's-place, Marshall-place, James-street, Nelson-street, and Scott-street, occupying what was formerly known as the Spey Gardens and Tay-street, extending along the margin of the river from the bridge to the South Inch. A large extension has also recently taken place in a northerly and westerly direction, the former comprising Athole-place, Athole-street, North-crescent, Melville-street, and Barossa-place, adjoining the North Inch, where an extension of building was projected in 1853. On the opposite side of the river is the suburb of Bridge end of Kinnoul. The principal public edifices are the County Buildings, erected in 1819 on the site of Gowrie House, in Tay-street, at a cost of £32,000, after designs by Smirke. The structure is of polished sandstone, with Grecian portico supported by twelve massive fluted columns; it comprises a justiciary hall 66 feet by 43, surmounted by a gallery able to accommodate 1,000 persons; the county hall, 68 feet by 40, occupying the S. wing, and containing portraits of the Duke of Athole and Lord Lynedoch, by Sir Thomas Lawrence, Sir G. Murray, by Pickersgill; also a committee room 30 feet square, and in the upper story a card room 44 feet by 30, with a portrait of the celebrated Neil Gow, by Raeburn. Behind these county buildings towards Speygate, are the city and county prisons, erected in 1819 and surrounded by a high wall. At some distance farther to the S., on the S. side of the avenue of the South Inch, stands the government prison, being the only justiciary prison in Scotland. It was originally erected in 1812, at a cost of £130,000, as a depôt for French prisoners of war, but was remodelled on the solitary system in 1841, at a cost of £28,000, and is now capable of containing 535 convicts, besides criminal lunatics and 52 juveniles. The other public buildings are the guild-hall in High-street; the city council-room; the police-office, formerly the chapel of the Blessed Virgin Mary; the Freemasons' Hall, erected on the site of the old parliament house, removed in 1818; a theatre built in 1820; lunatic asylum; spacious suite of barracks, built in 1793, at the head of Athole-street; and the Marshall Institution in George-street, near the bridge. This last is a Grecian structure surmounted by a dome; it contains halls for the public library and for the Museum of the Literary and Antiquarian Society of Perthshire. There are also monuments to Sir Walter Scott, who wrote the "Fair Maid of Perth," and to the poet Burns; the latter, erected in 1854, was sculptured by Anderson. The gas-works, which were constructed in 1824 at a cost of £20,000, are situated in Canal street. The water reservoir, constructed in 1830, is situated at the foot of Marshall Place; but the filtering bed, 300 feet in length, is formed in the upper end of Moncrieff Island, in the Tay. The buildings of the central railway termini mentioned above, near the South Inch, add greatly to the architectural adornment of the town. Here are also the "George Inn," where Queen Victoria stopped for several days in the years 1848 and 1849; the head-office of the Central Bank of Scotland, a Grecian structure, designed by D. Rhind; the head-office of the Perth Banking Company; and branches of the Bank of Scotland, Commercial, National, City of Glasgow, Royal, and British Linen Company's banks. The boundaries of Perth as a parliamentary burgh include Middle, St. Paul's, and West church parishes; also parts of East, Kinnoul, Scone, and Tibbermore parishes, and had in 1851, 1,991 houses, inhabited by a population of 23,835, which in 1861 had increased to 2,089 houses, inhabited by 25,250 persons. It returns one member to Parliament, and had in 1860 a constituency of 1,038. The municipal limits are not equally extensive, and comprised in 1851 only 1,170 houses, inhabited by 14,681 persons; but a new Act was obtained in 1856, extending the municipal police boundaries. The revenue of the borough in 1859–60 was £8,193. It was first chartered by William the Lion, and is divided into seven wards. Under the new Act, it is governed by a provost, who is sheriff and coroner, four bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and twenty-six councillors. The trades incorporations, comprising the hammermen, bakers, fleshers, tailors, shoemakers, glovers, wrights, and weavers, formerly exercised many important and exclusive privileges.—The principal manufactures now carried on are muslins, ginghams, imitation India shawls and scarfs, unions, or fabrics of mixed cotton and wool, checks and similar cotton fabrics, and flax-yarns, also boots and shoes, which last industry seems to have taken the place of the glove manufacture, for which this town was anciently famed; ship-building has been carried on to a considerable extent in several yards for upwards of twenty years, and Perth had the honour of turning out the first iron steam-vessel launched on the eastern side of Scotland. Many of the inhabitants are also engaged in the iron-foundries, bleach-works, dye-works, distilleries, breweries, saw-mills, flour-mills, rope-walks, and in coach-building, tanning, and in the salmon-fishery of the Tay, which last is still very considerable, though salmon are becoming scarcer than formerly. The authorities of the town have from time to time made great exertions for improving the navigation of the river Tay, which is much obstructed by sand-banks, even below the bridge, and obtained an Act in 1834 for constructing a harbour and wet dock, and enlarging the quays, which Act was further extended in 1856. In 1840 Perth was made an independent port, with Newport, Port-Allen, Carpour, Pitfour, and Powgavie, as its creeks or supports, and has belonging to it about fifty sailing vessels, of aggregately 4,000 tons, and five steam-vessels. The chief imports are coal, lime, salt, and manure; and from the Baltic, timber, flax, linseed, corn, bark, hides, and madder. The exports are chiefly potatoes, corn, timber, and slates. Perth likewise forms a separate excise collection, and is the headquarters of the county militia. The sheriff's court of the county and the justice court for the district are held in the town.—Perth is the seat of a presb. in the synod of Perth and Stirling. The four pars. of East Kirk, Middle Kirk, West Kirk, and St. Paul's, are all in the patron. of the town council of Perth. The ministers' stipends average between £250 and £300. The churches of the East, Middle, and West parishes are parts of a very ancient structure, originally called "The Kirk of the Holy Cross of St. John the Baptist," in which Edward III. of England killed his brother John Earl of Cornwall, for devastating the W. parts of Scotland, and in which Knox preached his celebrated sermon, which was followed by the demolition of the monasteries. The building is 207 feet long, with an ancient square tower, surmounted by a pyramidal spire, or belfry, of later date, 155 feet high. The East Kirk has a Gothic window of stained glass, and contains the tomb of James I. and his queen; the Middle Kirk occupies the space beneath the tower, which is supported by four massive pillars; while the West Kirk was almost entirely rebuilt in 1828, after designs by Gillespie. Four other churches of the Established Kirk are situated within the borough; St. Paul's, with a spire, at the W. end of High Street, St. Leonard's, in King Street, in the patron. of the heads of families; St. Stephen's, or the Gaelic church, and Kinnoul-street Kirk—the two last in the patron. of the male communicants. There are four places of worship belonging to the Free Kirk, besides one in which the service is conducted in the Gaelic language; three to the United Presbyterians, two to the Independents, and one to the Original Seceders—this last being considered very venerable as one of the four structures belonging to the fathers of the secession. The Scotch Episcopalians have two churches in the town, viz.: St. John's, in Princes-street, rebuilt in 1851 upon the site of the old chapel; and St. Ninian's, incomplete, comprising as yet only the choir, transepts, and one bay of the nave, but forming a portion of a cruciform Gothic structure, intended to serve as the cathedral of the dioc. of St. Andrew's, and also as a collegiate church and scholastic institution. The public schools include the academy, instituted in 1760, a grammar school, endowed trades' school, girls' school, with an income from endowment of £50; infant school, with an endowment of £75 per annum; school of industry for destitute boys; school of industry for females, and a ragged school farm, besides numerous other educational establishments for which Perth has long been famed. The charitable institutions include an infirmary, a dispensary, James VI.'s hospital, destroyed by Cromwell, but rebuilt in 1760 on the site of the Carthusian monastery, with an income of £700; hospital for the destitute sick, with an income from endowment of £75; clothing charity, with an income of £70; old men's charity, with an endowment of £120, besides numerous other charities.—Four weekly newspapers, the Perthshire Advertiser, Constitutional, Courier, and the Northern Warden, are published in the town; also an annual periodical called the Perthshire Register. From this place the Drummonds take the title of earl, and formerly took that of duke.—The antiquities include Roman coins, urns, antique armour, remains of a temple which once stood on the "site of the House of the Green," and the church of St. John, originally founded in the 5th century; but many of the most interesting antiquities of Perth have recently been removed, including the city walls and fosse, the royal castle, or Cromwell's citadel, the parliament house, where the early parliaments of Scotland were held; Earl Gowrie's palace, erected in 1520 by the Countess of Huntley, and known in the days of the city's pride as the Whitehall of Perth; Spey tower, one of the mural fortresses, near Speygate, long used as a prison, and memorable in history as the place where the six Protestant martyrs were confined, and from the windows of which Cardinal Bethune witnessed their execution; the city cross, bearing the royal and city arms, erected in 1668, in place of the original one, destroyed by Cromwell to furnish material for his citadel; this cross, which was 12 feet high and terminated in a spacious terrace, is said to have been of remarkably elegant design, embellished with statuary, but was unfortunately sold by the city authorities for £5 as a mere worthless obstruction to the thoroughfare of the High-street. The monasteries and monastic churches of Perth were both numerous and wealthy, as the Blackfriars, or Dominican convent founded in 1231 by Alexander II., and in which James I. was killed; the Carthusian monastery or charterhouse, founded in 1429 by James I.; the Whitefriars, or Carmelite convent, a little to the W. of the town; the Greyfriars, founded in 1460 by Lord Oliphant, the site of which was converted into the city cemetery in 1580; besides about nine other nunneries and chapels, of which but slight, if any traces are now remaining, most having been more or less demolished at the first outburst of the Reformation.—Besides the Perth races and hunt, which take place in October on a flat course of two miles on the North Inch, there are clubs for golfing, curling, and cricket, and the Perth Highland friendly society. Market days are Wednesday and Friday. Fairs are held on the first Fridays in March April, July, and September, and on the second Friday in December for cattle and horses; on the third Friday in October for cattle, butter, and cheese; and on the first Tuesday in July after Inverness fair for sheep and wool.

PERTHOLEY. See LLANTILLIO PERTHOLEY, co. Monmouth.

PERTHSHIRE, an extensive inland co. in the centre of Scotland, lying between 56° 4′ and 56° 57′ N. lat., and between 3° 4′ and 4° 50′ W. long. It lies on the Highland border, connecting the northern Highlands with the southern Lowlands, and the Highlands of the W. with the Lowlands on the E., thus comprising almost every variety of soil and climate to be found in Scotland. Its geographical boundaries are for the most part defined by natural barriers of lofty mountain ranges, forming parts of the northern and western Grampians and of the Ochill hills. On the N. and N.W. it is bounded by the counties of Aberdeen and Inverness; on the E. by Forfarshire; on the S.E. by Fifeshire, the Frith of Tay, and Kinross-shire; on the S. by Clackmannan and Stirling shires; on the S.W. by Stirling and Dumbarton shires; and on the W. by Argyllshire. The form of the county is compact, but a small section of it, comprising the parishes of Culross and Tulliallan, on the N. side of the Frith of Tay, is separated from the main body by a belt of the counties of Clackmannan and Fife, and another small detached section is almost surrounded by Stirlingshire. Its extreme length from Invergowrie on the E. to Benley on the W. is 77 miles, and its extreme breadth from the source of the Tilt on the N. to Culross on the S. is 67 miles. Its superficial extent is variously estimated between 2,588 and 5,000 square miles, but the measurement now commonly received is 2,835 square miles, or 1,814,063 acres, of which about 32,000 are lakes. In the earliest times of which we have record this county seems to have been inhabited in the eastern portion by the Vennicontes, or Vecturiones, of Ptolemy; in the S. by the Horestii mentioned by Tacitus; and in the Highlands of the W. by the Damnii Albani, whom Richard of Cirencester describes "as a people wholly secluded among lakes and mountains." It was overrun by the Romans under Agricola in A.D. 83-4, and by Severus in 206, when it was included in the Roman province Vespasiana. Of the occupation of the Romans there are still many traces, including a military road which traversed the eastern part of the county from the neighbourhood of Stirling to Orrea, near Perth, where one branch approached the coast, and the other went across the Grampius Mons to the Moray Frith; also the remains of several fortified stations or camps, as Lindum, now Ardoch in Strathearn, Alauna, probably Kier on the Stirling border; Victoria at Dealginross on the Earn, where the famous attack was made by the Caledonians on the ninth legion; Ad Hiernam, at Strageth on the Earn, also Ad Tavum, and In Medio, mentioned by Richard of Cirencester, besides other stations at Invergowrie, and at Fortingal in Glen Lyon, at which last place the prætorium is still complete. Upon the departure of the Romans this country became the seat of the Pictish kingdom of Abernethy, and afterwards passed into the possession of the Scots. In the latter part of the 10th century the Danes arrived at the mouth of the Esk with a large fleet and were marching for the sack of Perth, when they were met by the Scottish king, Kenneth III., at Loncarty, near Perth, and completely routed. In 1054 Macbeth, whose stronghold was at Dunsinane Hill, was here defeated by his competitor Malcolm, assisted by his Saxon allies. The subsequent history of this county is briefly referred to under the article PERTH, which city ranked as the capital of Scotland till after the assassination of James I. The ancient divisions of the county comprised the stewartries or subordinate territories of Athole in the N., Balquhidder in the S.W., Breadalbane in the W. and middle, Gowrie in the E., Menteith in the S., Perth in the S.E., Rannoch in the N.W., and Stormont and Strathearn in the middle, each of which was under the jurisdiction of a distinct sheriff or steward. The Act of 1748, abolishing hereditary jurisdictions, put an end to these divisions, though the names are still popularly applied to the districts, or retained in the titles of the nobility. In 1795 an Act of Parliament was passed dividing the county for special purposes into the ten districts of Auchterarder, Blairgowrie, Carse of Gowrie, Crieff, Culross, Cupar-Angus, Dunblane, Dunkeld, Perth, and Weem, but the sheriff-depute exercises rule over all the county, and appoints two substitutes, the one of whom presides at Perth and the other at Dunblane. This county is almost entirely comprehended in the basin of the Tay, except the district of Menteith in the S., which forms part of the basin of the Forth, and a small district in the S.W., which is drained by streams flowing into Loch Lomond. The great watershed of the country declines from the lofty summits of the Grampians in the N. and W. gradually towards the S. and E., where the numerous streams unite their waters in the copious flood of the Tay, which discharges a greater volume of water into the ocean than any other river of Great Britain. This monarch of British rivers, however, is so far obstructed by sandbanks in its channel, and a bar at its mouth, as to have been only navigable for vessels of 100 tons as high up as Perth, previous to 1834, when extensive works were undertaken to deepen the channel of the river, and to construct a harbour and wet docks at Perth, so as to admit vessels of 380 tons to come up to any harbours at spring tides, and vessels of 130 tons at neap tides. The navigation is also somewhat impeded by the strength of the tides, which renders the time of ascending precarious. The whole length, from its source on the border of Argyleshire to the Frith or estuary of Tay, is 105 miles, in the course of which it receives the waters of the Fillan, the Dochart, and the Lockie before entering Loch Tay. This loch is a long narrow lake, about 14 miles in length by 1 mile broad, and entirely embosomed in mountains, having Ben Lawers on its north-western bank. After leaving the loch the Tay flows through Strath Tay, receiving on its left bank the considerable rivers Lyon and Tumel, fed by numerous mountain streams, some of which form falls and rapids, and about 6 miles lower down, on the right bank, the Braan or Bran; it then flows for about 12 miles through Strathmore to its junction with the Isla, where the united streams take a southerly direction, and being swollen by the Airdle, the Shochie, and the Almond, pass Perth, a little below which town the Tay is joined by the river Earn on the right bank, bringing to it the waters of the Lednoch, Ruchil, Turret, Powaffray, Machony, Shaggie, Ruthven, May, and Farg. After its junction with the Earn the Tay gradually widens for about 20 miles, till it forms the estuary of Tay. The other rivers of Perthshire are the Forth, which flows just within the southern boundary of the county, draining the district of Menteith, so named from the Teith, a tributary of the Forth, rising just within Argyleshire border, and forming Loch Katrine, a sheet of water about 8 miles long, immortalised as the subject of Sir Walter Scott's "Lady of the Lake." The Allan and Devon are also feeders of the Forth; on the latter stream are the celebrated falls and rapids known as the Deil's Mill, the Rumbling Bridge, and the Cauldron Linn. The lakes are both numerous and of considerable size, including lochs Tay and Katrine, mentioned above; Loch Earn, at the head of the river Earn, in Breadalbane; Loch Rannoch, a long narrow sheet of water, over 9 miles in length by 1 mile broad, and abounding in trout; Loch Ericht, on the border of Inverness-shire, extending in length 14 miles from N. to S. by 1 mile in breadth; Loch Lydoch, a large sheet of water on the border of Argyleshire, the source of the river Tumel; Loch Garry, a narrow lake 3 miles long by half a mile broad, lying between Rannoch and Athole; Loch Tumel, a lake, about 2 miles from W. to E. and half a mile broad, formed by the river Tumel, in Athole; also lochs Venacher, Monteith, and Lubnaig, each about 5 miles long, in the district of Menteith, Loch Voel, in Balquhidder, besides numerous smaller lakes, as Achray, Ard, Butterstone, Chon, Cluny, Dochart, Doine, Drumellie, Freuchie, Lyon, Lows, Ordie, Tilt, Turret, &c. In all the hilly districts springs are abundant, and Pitcaithley is specially noted for its mineral waters; but in the level tracts of Monteith and the Carse of Gowrie pure water is scarce, occasioning in dry seasons considerable sickness and scarcity, while in wet seasons the same districts are almost inundated and the soil converted into a miry expanse. The rivers, which flow from the mountains in the N. and N.W. towards the Tay, run for the most part in an easterly or southerly direction, giving name to a series of straths, or broad valleys, which open in the same aspect, and to the glens, or narrow vales, through which they pass in their upper course—as Strath Tay and Strathmore, forming the valley of the Tay; Strathearn, extending almost across the centre of the county from W. to E., and forming the channel of the Earn; Strathallan, or the Vale of the Allan, in the southern part of the county, separating the Ochills from the Western Highlands; Strath-Airdle, in the north-eastern part of the county, forming the basin of the Airdle, and a branch of the Isla, which rises at the foot of Cairn Gower, in the Ben-y-Gloe mountains. Some of the smaller valleys, or glens, are those of the Beg, Shee or Ericht, Fernal, Bruar, Tilt, and Erochkie, in the N., and of the Lyon, Lochy, Dochart, Falloch, and Artney, in the W. These valleys bear but a small proportion to the aggregate area of the county, contrasting strikingly by their warmth and luxuriance with the barren summits which environ them.—About two-thirds of the whole county, from Loch Ericht, or the Moor of Rannoch, on the Aberdeen and Inverness border, south-eastward, is comprehended in the Grampian or Highland region. This district is formed of ridges of rocks rising in

Alpine grandeur one above another, with their bare and weather-worn summits almost hidden in the clouds. Among the loftiest peaks are Ben-Lawers near Loch Tay, rising 3,945, or, according to others, 4,015 feet above the sea-level; Ben More, 3,819; Ben-y-Gloe, near Glen Tilt, 3,690; Schihallian, or Schichalleon, 3,564; Ben Uammore, 3,589; Ben Scarsoch, 3,390; Ben Ledi, between Lochs Katrine and Lubnaig, 2,863 or 3,009; Ben Venue, 3,000; also Glâs Mhiel, Bruochcarravan, Ben Chualach, Ben Chonzie, and Duntchmore. The passes and other spots on the verge of the Highlands command fine views. The Ochill hills traverse the south-eastern part of the county, separating the basins of the Forth and Tay, and attain an altitude of 2,359 feet at Ben Cleuch. The Sidlaw hills traverse the eastern part adjoining Forfarshire and section of the rich district of the Carse of Gowrie from the broad plain of Strathmore, attaining an altitude of 1,500 feet at Birnham Hill. The detached hill of Dunsinane, celebrated in Scottish story as the site of the castle of Macbeth, is a spur of this range, and has an altitude of 1,114 feet. A line through the passes of Aberfoyle, Leny, Comrie, and Killiecrankie divides the lowlands from the highlands. The Carse of Gowrie, between the Sidlaws and the Frith of Tay, differs from every other part of the county, excepting a portion of Strathearn and the district of Monteith, in being nearly a dead level, highly fructiferous, and everywhere abounding with orchards and wheat-fields. Old Red sandstone is the prevailing rock in the lowlands, and mica slate in the highlands, skirted by clay, chlorite, and hornblende slates, which pass insensibly into mica slate, with occasional beds of quartz, sandstone, and greywacke, and some patches of granite, as at Rannoch Moor, which is 1,000 feet above sea-level; and at Glentilt a highly elevated range of breccia, or puddingstone, may be traced in various places, separating the primitive district from the secondary district in the S.E. of the county. A bed of limestone extends from Leny, near Callander, in a north-easterly direction towards Braemar, and coal measures underlie a large part of the Culross district, and extend from near Crieff in the direction of Dumbarton, coming up to the south-eastern skirts of the Ochills, on the Fife border. The Ochill Hills and the Sidlaws in the S.E. consist of a mixture of sedimentary and erupted rocks, the former chiefly porphyry and amygdaloid, and the Sidlaws principally sandstone and greenstone. The hill of Kunioul, near Perth, is amygdaloid interspersed with nodules of agate and cornelian. The principal minerals worked are roofing slates, of various colours, at Birnam and in other parts of the island, coal and fine clay at Fossaway and Tulliallan, ironstone at Culross, and in the coal regions W. of the Ochills, blue marble at Leny and Glentilt, sandstone at Longforgan, Auchtergaven, and Errol, and very good building-stone at Kingoodie, in the Carse of Gowrie, and at Longannat on the Forth. Limestone is burnt both for cement and manure, but both it and coal are scarce in parts of the county from the difficulty of carriage. Copper ore occurs among the southern Ochills, and lead in Breadalbane, chiefly at Tyndrum, Benledi, and Glenlyon, also nodules of sulphate of barytes in the bed of the river Shaggy, in Strathern. Peat fuel is cut in the bogs and mosses. The soils are extremely various, but may be described as till, sand, and gravel, with rich clay in the Carse of Gowrie, loam in the highland valleys, and in the upland extensive tracts of moor, bog, and moss, though these last are gradually diminishing. Only about one-third of the whole surface is under cultivation, the remainder being mountain, sheep pasture, moss, or irreclaimable waste. Some remains of the old forests are left in Breadalbane and Monteith, but the greater part of the present woods have been planted since the middle of the last century. The late Duke of Athole alone planted 27,000,000 trees, chiefly larch and spruce fir, with some oak, ash, elm, and birch. The most valuable tracts are the Carse of Gowrie, which rivals in fertility the richest land in Scotland—the lower part of Strathearn, the valley of the Tay above Perth, the district of Monteith, and the vale of the Forth. All these tracts yield abundant crops of wheat, beans, turnips, and potatoes, of which last great quantities are yearly sent to London by railway. The carse of Gowrie is also very rich in orchards, but in the midland districts fruit is but rarely cultivated, and oats and barley are the principal grain crops. There is little cultivated land in the highland districts. Mosses of various extent, depth, and firmness, according to the time they have been in formation, are scattered over the plains or flats, and not unfrequently cover the slopes of the higher hills. Many of these, formerly valueless tracts, including the famous Flanders moss in the vale of the Forth, have recently been the scene of grand georgical experiments, which have rendered the localities of Blair Drummond and Kincardine famous in the history of agriculture. All the appliances of draining, special manuring, and improved rotation of crops, have been adopted with great success by the enterprising farmers and landowners of this part of Scotland. The estates are in general entailed, and many large, but there are also numerous smaller proprietors, the total number on the new valuation rolls of 1856 being 5,064, of whom 525 were returned as qualified to be commissioners of supply. The valued rental of the county according to the old Scotch valuation in 1674 was £339,192, and the real rental under the new Valuation Act in 1856 was £680,611. Arable farms range from 50 to 500 acres, and in the lowlands, where great advances have recently been made in agriculture, are universally held on lease, commonly for 15 or 19 years, but some of the small highland occupiers are yearly tenants. The miserable farmhouses of a former period, without light or ventilation, have within the present century been almost universally superseded by substantial, slate-roofed houses of two stories, surrounded by improved farm buildings; but this is not the case in the highlands, where mean hovels are frequently to be met with. Many farms on the mutual confines of the lowland and the uplands comprise small tracts of arable ground in connection with large tracts of hill pasture or moorland; but the highland farms are mostly sheep farms for Tweeddale and Cheviot breeds with some Southdowns and Leicesters, recently introduced. There is no breed of cattle peculiar to the county, the West Highland breed being that most commonly fed on the highland pastures, but Ayrshire cows for the dairy have been successfully introduced into the lowlands. The native animals include the red deer, roe and fallow deer, fox, wild cat, badger, weasel, black cock, ptarmigan, partridge, blue hare, and the eagle.—Although Perthshire is generally considered a pastoral and agricultural county, more persons are returned as engaged in trade, commerce, and manufacture than in agriculture. The linen trade has long been established, and cotton-spinning and paper-making were introduced towards the close of the last century, the principal cotton-mills being at Deanston on the Teith, Stanley on the Tay, and Cromwell Park on the Almond; but most of the paper-mills have been abandoned. There are also flax spinning-mills, fulling mills, linseed oil-mills, several small woollen manufactories for shawls, blankets, and other woollen fabrics; extensive bleach-fields round Perth, and in Strathmore, besides a considerable number of weavers, employed by the Glasgow manufacturers, chiefly resident at Auchterarder, Crieff, and Dunblane; also leather-dressers, miners, and colliers, besides other trades, chiefly confined to the town of Perth (which see). The principal commerce is carried on at Perth and Kincardine.—The population is very unequally distributed, the Highland parishes, comprising two-thirds of its area, being very thinly peopled, while the Lowland parishes in the S.E. are comparatively densely populated. The population decreased in the decennial period between 1831 and 1841, from 142,166 to 137,457, owing chiefly to emigration, the incorporation of farms, and formation of deer forests, and has subsequently never recovered itself, having further declined from 138,660 in 1851, to 133,511 in 1861. The inhabited houses, also, in the last decennial period have declined from 22,528 to 22,056. Perthshire returns two members to parliament.

one for the county, and one for the parliamentary borough of Perth; while Culross contributes to Stirling and Tulliallan, and with four adjacent parishes have votes for Kinross. It is governed by a lord-lieutenant, vice-lieutenant, sheriff, and two substitutes, who reside respectively at Perth and Dunblane, and by about sixty deputy-lieutenants. For special purposes it is divided into ten departmental districts, as mentioned above, and is further divided into sixty-nine entire quoad sacra civilia parishes, with parts of eleven others; but these do not correspond with the present ecclesiastical parishes, which are continually being altered, both as to number and extent. The greater part of seven presbyteries in the synods of Perth, Angus, and Fife, are comprised within this county. Perth and Culross are royal and parliamentary burghs, the former being also the county and sessions town. Auchterarder, Abernethy, and Dunblane were formerly royal burghs. The ancient cities are Perth, Dunkeld, and Dunblane, the seats of bishoprics of the same name previous to the establishment of Presbyterianism. The burghs of barony are, Alyth, Abernethy, Auchterarder, Blairgowrie, Craig of Madesty, Crief, Kincardine, and Longforgan. The towns, containing upwards of 2,000 inhabitants, are, in order of population, Perth, Auchterarder, Blairgowrie, Crieff, Cupar-Angus, and Kincardine; besides about 200 smaller towns and inconsiderable villages.—The mansions in the county are numerous, including Dunkeld House, and Blaircastle, of the Duke of Athole; Taymouth Castle, of the Marquis of Breadalbane; Doune Lodge, of the Earl of Moray; Duplin Castle, of the Earl of Kinnoul; Elcho Castle, of the Earl of Wemyss; Cluny Castle, of the Earl of Airlie; Scone Palace, and Logie-Almond, of the Earl of Mansfield; Gleneagles, of the Earl of Camperdown; Strathallan Castle, of Viscount Strathallan; Drummond Castle and Stobhall, of Lord Willoughby D'Eresby; besides numerous other seats of the nobility and ancient families.—The roads are well constructed, and are kept in good condition. They include the main road from Edinburgh, by Queensferry and Dunfermline, which enters the county a few miles S. of Perth, the road from Glasgow, by Stirling, the road from Dundee, by Meginch; the road from Aberdeen, by Forfar and Brechin; the road from Inverness and the northern Highlands, by the Pass of Killiecrankie and the valleys of the Garry, Tumel, and Tay; and the road from Argyleshire, by way of the Dochart and Tay valleys; all which converge at Perth. Besides these, there are three roads leading from Stirling, through Monteith, into the western Highlands. The road-trusts are divided into the eleven districts of Aberfeldy, Auchterarder, Blairgowrie, Carse of Gowrie, Cupar-Angus, Creiff, Culross, Dunblane, Dunkeld, Perth, and Weem. Five main lines of railway—the Scottish Central; Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee; Scottish Midland Junction, or North-Eastern; the Inverness and Perth Junction; and the Dundee and Perth; all centre at Perth. The Scottish Central railway traverses the southern part of the county for about 28 miles, and has branches to Crieff and Callander. The Scottish Midland Junction railway passes through a portion of the south-eastern corner of the county, and has branch lines to Blairgowrie and to Dunkeld, at which latter place it joins the Inverness and Perth Junction; and another branch up the Almond to Methven. The eastern fork of the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee, and the Dundee and Perth lines, also traverse part of the eastern district.

PERTWOOD, a par. in the hunds. of Warminster and Dunworth, co. Wilts, 2 miles N.W. of Hindon, its post town, and 6½ S. of Warminster. The village, which consists of two or three farmhouses, is situated on Pertwood Down, and is wholly agricultural. The parish is traversed by the road between Shaftesbury and Warminster. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £70, and the glebe comprises 10 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £56. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a tower containing one bell.

PETER AND PAUL, ST., a par. in the bar. of Kilmallock, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It lies along the river Loobagh, and contains the town of Kilmallock, which see.

PETERBOROUGH, or NASSABURGH, a lib. in the co. of Northampton, containing, besides the city of Peterborough, the pars. of Bainton, Barnack, Borough-Far, Castor, with chplries. of Sutton and Upton, Etton, Eye, Glinton, Helpstone, Marholm, Maxey, Newborough, Northborough, Paston, with the chplry. of Werrington; Peakirk, St. Martin Stamford Baron; Thornhaugh, Ufford, Wansford, Whitring, and part of St. John Baptist, comprising 51,430 acres, exclusive of the city of Peterborough.

PETERBOROUGH, a market town, city, and parliamentary borough, having separate jurisdiction, and the head of the lib. of Nassaburgh, or Peterborough, co. Northampton, 40 miles N.E. of Northampton, and 81 N.W. of London by road, or 76 by the Great Northern, 102½ by the Great Eastern, and 110 by the London and North-Western lines of railway, each of which companies have important stations in the town; there are also branch lines to Blisworth and Stamford. It is an ancient and well-built city, situated on the northern bank of the river Nene, which here divides Northamptonshire from Huntingdonshire, and is crossed by a wooden bridge. In the Saxon times it was called Medeshamsted and Medeswelhamsted, from a whirlpool in the river Nene, then the Aufona, and owes its origin to the celebrated Benedictine abbey, founded in the middle of the 7th century by Peada, son of Penda, fifth king of Mercia, in atonement for having murdered his own sons, for their attachment to Christianity, prior to his own conversion. About 870 the monastery was burnt by the Danes, who had laid waste the adjoining country, and continued in a ruined state for a century, when it was restored by Ethelwold, Bishop of Winchester, under the auspices of King Edgar and of Adulph, the king's chancellor, who appropriated all his wealth to the rebuilding of the monastery, of which after its restoration he was made abbot. About this time, the name Medeshamsted was superseded by that of Burgh, otherwise Gildenburgh, from the wealth and splendour of the new structure, and subsequently was called Peter-burgh, or Peterborough, from St. Peter, to whom the church was dedicated. In the reign of William the Conqueror, Hereward-le-Wake, the last of the Anglo-Saxon warriors, who distinguished themselves by their resistance to the Normans, hearing, whilst in exile, that the Conqueror had given away his paternal lands to a Norman, set sail from Flanders, and putting himself at the head of the insurgents of the fens, attacked and plundered the abbey, and burnt the village which was rising around it. In 1116 the monastery and village were greatly injured by fire, but were gradually restored, and the present cathedral commenced by Abbot Salisbury, and further completed by Abbot Martin in 1144. At this period the town, which had previously stood on the eastern side of the monastery, was removed to the situation it now occupies, and the monastery raised to the rank of a mitred Benedictine abbey, the abbots being summoned to Parliament in the reign of Henry III. The town appears also to have rapidly risen in importance, for we find it returning two members to Parliament in the reign of Edward I. At the Dissolution, the revenue of the abbey was estimated at £1,972 7*s.* 0¾*d.*, and the conventual church made a cathedral in 1541 by Henry VIII., who selected Peterborough as the seat of one of the new bishoprics. During the civil war in the reign of Charles I., the parliamentary forces, under the command of Cromwell, destined for the siege of Croyland, were stationed in the town, where they committed numerous depredations—defacing the monuments in the cathedral, and pulling down part of the cloisters, the chapter-house, and the episcopal palace, which were sold by order of the Parliament. The Lady-chapel was shortly after taken down by the townsmen, to whom the cathedral had been granted for a parish church.—In 1790 an Act of Parliament was obtained for carrying out various local improvements, which have greatly modernised the town; and in 1834 about 60 houses of an inferior class were destroyed by fire. The streets, which are regularly laid out close upon the bank of the river, are well paved, lighted with gas, and well edificed, many of the houses being modern. The environs have many villa residences. The principal public buildings are the cathedral, to be described presently, the sessions house, and gaol, in the Norman style of architecture, erected in 1842, at a cost of £10,000, borrowed on security of the rates, and comprising the sessions court, magistrates' room, jury room, and house of correction for the liberty of Peterborough, with the governor's residence in the centre, upon the plan of the Model Prison at Pentonville, London; the corn exchange, erected in 1848, on the site of the old theatre in Church-street, is in the Italian style, containing a market room, lighted by a lantern roof, supported by stone Corinthian pillars, and having a gallery at one end; the dispensary and infirmary, rebuilt in 1845, is situated in New Town; the mechanics' institute in Wentworth-street has a good library and newsroom; the assembly rooms, in Cumbergate, are large and well lighted; there are besides a registry for wills and diocesan documents lately erected in the minster precincts, a savings-bank, public library over the S. porch of the parish church, four commercial banks, gas and water works. The bounds of the city comprise only 1,430 acres; but the borough, since the passing of the Reform Act, is co-extensive with the parish, comprising, besides the ancient city, the Minster Close, which is extra parochial, and the tnshps. of Dogsthorpe, Eastfield, Longthorpe, and Newark.—The population in 1851 was 8,673, and in 1861, 11,732, showing an increase of 3,059 in the decennial period. It has returned two members to parliament since the reign of Edward I., the chief influence being with Earl Fitzwilliam of Milton Abbey. Until recently the civil government was vested in the custos rotulorum of the liberty, assisted by seven magistrates and a high bailiff, who was returning officer, the last named being appointed by the dean and chapter, who are lords of the manor, but is now administered solely by the magistrates appointed by Earl Fitzwilliam, as lord of the hundred or liberty. The jurisdiction extends only over the parish of Peterborough, and constables and other officers are still chosen at the court leet, which is held annually. General sessions for the peace are held quarterly in the sessions court at the gaol, and petty sessions weekly on Saturday. The trade carried on at Peterborough is chiefly in corn, malt, coal, timber, lime, bricks, stone, and in the transmission of live stock and agricultural produce by the several lines of railway, which have greatly increased the commercial prosperity of the town. A large steam flour mill has been recently erected by Earl Fitzwilliam, and the works in connection with the several lines of railway are extensive. The Nene is navigable only for boats, but a general survey has lately been made with the hope of rendering it navigable for vessels of larger burden, and for the better drainage of the surrounding meadows, which are periodically inundated.—As the seat of a bishopric Peterborough ranks as a cathedral city, but consists of only one parish, that of St. John the Baptist, and the ecclesiastical district of St. Mark, the former containing a population of 11,497, and the latter one of 3,170. The ecclesiastical establishment consists of the bishop, a dean, the two archdeacons of Northampton and Leicester, six prebendaries, and four minor canons. The diocese, as originally constituted by Henry VIII., extended over Northamptonshire and Rutland, then taken out of Lincoln diocese, but it has recently been extended by the addition of Leicestershire, and now contains the archdeaconries of Northampton and Leicester, with 17 rural deaneries, and about 504 benefices. The cathedral, dedicated to St. Peter, is a cruciform structure of Norman and Gothic architecture, remarkable for its massiveness and for the magnificence of its western front, 156 feet broad, which is considered the finest example of Early English Gothic now remaining. It consists of a chancel built by Abbot Martin de Vecti in 1140; a nave semicircular at the eastern end, built by Abbot Benedict towards the close of the 12th century; side aisles built about the same period, but which have subsequently been carried out square; a great transept built by Abbot William de Vandeville in 1160—1175, who also erected a portion of the central tower, 150 feet high, which rises from four arches in the centre of the edifice and forms a lantern. At the western end of the nave are smaller transepts, over one of which is a tower supported by angular buttresses and surmounted with pinnacles, while at either extremity of the western front is a turret 156 feet high, flanked at the angles by clustered shafts and pinnacles and crowned with spires. The whole of the fitting up of the choir, which is supposed to be the oldest part of the building, is in the style of the time of Edward III., and the woodwork is of oak richly ornamented. A new choir and altar screen were erected in 1830 of carved stone, and the latter ornamented with spiral turrets. There are few monuments, shrines, or chantry chapels, most of the tombs of the bishops having been battered by the Puritans; there are, however, two monuments of interest—the tomb of Queen Catherine of Aragon, first wife of Henry VIII., and the marble slab over the doorway leading from the choir into the S. aisle, which marks the spot where the unfortunate Mary Queen of Scots was buried, previous to the removal of her remains to Westminster Abbey. On the wall immediately behind the western entrance hangs a portrait of old Scarlet the sexton, who buried the above named queens, with an appropriate epitaph commemorating the circumstance. On the western side of the cathedral is the Norman Abbey gateway, with some remains of the cloisters and ancient monastic buildings, having in the midst of them the tower gateway, leading to the bishop's palace, and from this court another gateway, built by Abbot Kirton in 1515, and rich in ornament, leading to the deanery and the ancient cemetery of the citizens, which adjoined the cathedral, but is now closed, a new burial ground having been formed, under the Extramural Burial Act, on the western side of the city. Besides the Cathedral there is a large parish church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, and situated near the centre of the city. It is a stone structure, with a square tower surmounted by pinnacles, and containing a peal of six bells and a clock, with musical chimes every third hour, changing every day in the week. The interior contains a tomb by Flaxman, and an altar-piece, the "Transfiguration," painted by Sir R. Ker Porter. The living is a vic.* val. £500, in the archdeac. of Northampton and dioc. of Peterborough, in the patron. of the bishop. There are chapels for Roman Catholics, General and Particular Baptists, Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists. The Cathedral Grammar, or Chapter school, founded by Henry VIII., and situated within the minster precincts, has an income from endowment of £100, for the free education of 20 boys, who have a preference as candidates for five scholarships and a fellowship in St. John's College, Cambridge. Another school, founded by Thomas Deacon in 1721, has an endowment of £50 per annum, besides 6 acres of land and certain premises. There are also National and infant schools, the former attended by upwards of 500 children. The charities amount to above £1,000 a year, of which the town estate produces £380; one of the charities is under the direction of a self-elected body, called feoffees. The almshouses are designed to accommodate 50 poor persons, and 17 have been recently rebuilt. A hospital for lepers was founded here in the reign of King Stephen, and dedicated to St. Leonard, and another hospital in 1180 by Abbot Benedict, who dedicated it to St. Thomas-à-Becket, whose life he wrote.—The Poor-law Union of Peterborough comprises 39 parishes or places, of which 19 are in the county of Northampton, a like number in that of Hunts, and one in that of Lincoln. It is also the seat of superintendent registry and new County Court districts. Among the eminent natives of the town were Abbot Benedict, mentioned above; Abbot John of Peterborough, an English historian of the 14th century; Bishop Chambers, the last Abbot; Gunton, the historian of the Cathedral; Sir John Hill, a popular writer of the 18th century; and Paley, the celebrated divine and moralist. The title of Earl of Peterborough, now extinct, was bestowed on the family of Mordaunt by Charles I., and was held by Charles the great Earl of Peterborough and Monmouth, in the reigns of Anne and George I.—The market days are Wednesday for live stock, and Saturday for live and dead stock and general produce. Fairs are held on the 10th July and 2nd October, the former, which is held in the town, is chiefly for timber, horses, and cattle, and the latter, which is held on the Huntingdonshire side of the river, is for horses, beasts, sheep, timber, and general purposes.

PETERCHURCH, a par. in the hund. of Webtree, co. Hereford, 12 miles W. of Hereford, its post town, and 9 N.W. of Pontrilas railway station. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on the river Dore, in the Golden Vale, and is surrounded by hills and woods. The parish is traversed by the Ross and Hay road. The surface is hilly, but fertile, producing heavy crops of wheat. The soil consists of a rich loam, with a subsoil of clay and sandstone. The land is divided between arable and pasture, with about 100 acres of woodland. There are several stone quarries, and a mineral spring called St. Peter's Well. The impropriation belongs to the Governor of Guy's Hospital, London. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £327. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient stone structure with a spired tower containing six bells. The interior of the church contains a piece of stone on which is sculptured a trout with a gold chain round its throat. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, also an almshouse for six aged females. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a place of worship. Urishay Castle is the principal residence. T. Delahay, Esq., is lord of the manor.

PETERCULTER, a par. in the district and co. of Aberdeen, Scotland. It comprises, besides the vil. of its own name, the post-office station of Countesswells. It extends in length about 7 miles from E. to W., with an average breadth of 5. It is bounded by the co. of Kincardine, and by the pars. of Drumoak, Echt, Skene, Newhills, and Banchory-Devenick. The surface is generally hilly and marshy, but the eastern district is more level, and is studded with mansions and wooded grounds. Granite is quarried to a considerable extent. The village of Peterculter is about 7 miles S.W. of Aberdeen, and is within easy access of the Murtle, Milltimber, and Cultor stations of the Deeside railway. It is situated at the confluence of the rivers Leuchar and Dee. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the paper, woollen, and snuff-mills. There is also a corn-mill. On the summit of the hill of Oldtown are traces of Norman Dykes camp, the ancient Devana. This par. is in the presb. and synod of Aberdeen. The minister has a stipend of £196. The parish church was erected in 1779. There are a Free church, a parochial school, and other schools. Culture, Binghill, Bieldside, Countesswells and Murtle, or Murthill, are the principal residences. The last named is the old seat of the Irvines, near to which is a tumulus, and several Druid stones.

PETER-DU-BOIS, ST., or ST. PETER-OF-THE-WOOD, a par. in the Isle of Guernsey, Channel Islands, 5 miles S.W. of St. Peter's Port. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated in a valley celebrated for its elm-trees, which are of a kind peculiar to the island. About two-thirds of the land are arable, and the remainder pasture. The soil produces heavy crops of wheat, barley, and parsnips. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £200, in the patron. of the governor. The church of St. Peter was erected in 1167. There is a place of worship for the Wesleyans; also endowed schools for boys and girls, of which the former was founded by Queen Elizabeth.

PETERHEAD, a par., post and market town, seaport, burgh of barony and parliamentary burgh, in the district of Buchan, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 30 miles N. by E. of Aberdeen, and 40 S. by E. of Banff. It is a station on the Formartine and Buchan section of the Great North of Scotland railway. The par., which is about 5 miles in length from N. to S., with an extreme breadth of 4 miles, includes the quoad sacra par. of East, the burgh of its own name, the post-office vil. of Boddan, and the fishing vils. of Buchan-haven, Burnhaven, and Ronheads. It is situated on the shore of the North Sea, under Buchan-Ness promontory, the most easterly land in Scotland, and the spot where the Chevalier landed in 1715. Its northern boundary is traced by the river Ugie, from which the parish was anciently called Peter Ugie, and on the other sides it adjoins the parishes of Cruden, St. Fergus, and Longside, part of which last was formerly included in this parish till 1620. The surface is an undulating plain, with a low range of hills on the western and southern border, rising at Stirling Hill to the height of 280 feet above sea-level. To the W. of the town are several hollows or deep glens, known as the How of Buchan, and on the estate of Invernettie is a conical hill, near 200 feet high, called Meethill. Off Buchan-Ness promontory lie two small islands, one covered with verdure, on which was formerly a salt pan, and the other rocky, now the site of Buchan-Ness lighthouse. The surface is in general fertile and well cultivated, with the exception of a tract of moorland. The coast is defended against the violence of the North Sea by a lofty ridge of precipitous cliffs of igneous rock, and is indented by Sandford and Peterhead bays, on which latter stands the town of Peterhead, occupying a small, flat, rocky peninsula, called Keith-Inch, on the N. side of the bay. The site of the town is still called Keith-Inch, from its having become the property of the Keith family in 1560, on the suppression of Deer Abbey, to which the parish anciently belonged, but is now the property of the Merchant Maiden Hospital in Edinburgh, having been forfeited by the Keiths. On the extremity of the peninsula stands the suburb called Keith-Inch, connected with the rest of the town by an isthmus of only 250 feet broad, having on either side the two harbours, both furnished with quays and protected by piers. The new N. harbour, formed in 1818 by Smeaton, covers about 11 acres, and the S. harbour, formed in 1773 by Telford, about 6½ acres, and cost upward of £85,000. On the S. pier is a lighthouse, put up in 1834, 21 feet high, with a fixed light visible for three miles.—The outline of the town is nearly triangular in form, having its principal thoroughfares, called Broad and Marischal streets, running on a line with the isthmus, between the harbours, joined at its lower end, near the bay, by two other lines of street forming acute angles, and diverging like boulevard along both sides of the town. These principal lines of streets are connected by several smaller streets, and terminate in the suburbs of Ronheads and Kirktown. The whole place has a substantial appearance, most of the houses being built of granite, and the streets well paved and kept. An ample supply of pure water is furnished by pipes from a copious spring about 3 miles distant, and the streets are lit with gas from works situated in Long-gate-street. The principal public building is the townhall, erected in 1788, surmounted by a spire of granite 125 feet high, the public offices occupying the third story, the second floor being appropriated for schoolrooms and the ground floor let out in shops; there are besides two public halls, occupied as reading and billiard rooms, hot and cold baths, a custom-house, six branch banks, scientific and other societies, and a market cross, put up in 1832, on occasion of the town being created a parliamentary burgh at the passing of the Reform Act. The cross is a pillar of granite of the Tuscan order, crowned with the armorial bearings of the Earls Marischal, under whom the town was founded in 1593. Peterhead is a coastguard station, and was formerly a bonding sub-port to Aberdeen, but was made independent in 1838, with the creeks of Boddan, Fraserburgh, Pittallie, or Sand-haven, and Rosehearty as subports. It has long been frequented as a sea bathing and watering place, being frequently termed the Scarborough of the N. of Scotland, which latter town it resembles not only in its situation, but in the combination of sea bathing with the use of salubrious mineral waters. For some years, however, Peterhead has been on the decline as a watering place in reference both to its mineral waters and to its bathing accommodation.—The population of the burgh in 1851 was 7,298, occupying 886 houses, which had increased in 1861 to 7,541 persons, inhabiting 1,020 houses. It contributes to return one member, with Elgin, Kintore, Inverury, Banff, and Cullen, to the imperial parliament, and had in 1856 a constituency of 235, the parliamentary limits being more extensive than those of the old burgh. Under the new municipal Reform Act it is governed by a provost, three bailies and treasurer, and seven town councillors. Its trade is considerable, chiefly coastwise, but some vessels trade to the colonies and foreign countries. The chief exports are grain, meal, butter, cheese, eggs, pork, oil, salted fish, herrings, cod, and granite, and the imports lime, wool, timber, salt, iron, groceries, and general merchandise. It is still the chief seat of the whale and seal fishery, though these have of late years somewhat declined, giving place to the herring fishery, which is productive, yielding annually nearly 50,000 barrels, and employing about 8,000 persons. There is also a salmon fishery in the Ugie. There are but few manufactures, those of woollen cloth and thread having long since declined. A few weavers are employed by the manufacturers of Aberdeen, and there are a small carding and spinning mill, a rope-walk, and dye-works. In the vicinity of the town brick-earth is dug, and granite of excellent quality is largely quarried. There are also ship and boat building yards, several breweries, and two large grain mills, situated respectively at Ravenscraig and Invernettie. Three great lines of road diverge from the town, but only one railway has yet been formed, though several lines have been projected. On the shore amber and valuable pebbles are occasionally found.—The par. is in the presb. of Deer and synod of Aberdeen, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister's stipend is £277, and unappropriated teinds £389. The parish church, built in 1803, is situated at the entrance of the town, and has a spire 118 feet high. There are besides a Free church, an United Presbyterian church, an Episcopalian chapel, situated in Merchant-street, and faced with axe-dressed granite, also places of worship belonging to the Independents, Wesleyans, and Roman Catholics. There are a parochial school, an endowed school, called "the town school," and several charitable institutions.—In the parish are the remains of the ancient castles of Ravenscraig, Boddan, and Inverugie, and the old seats of the Keiths and Marischals. Market day is on Friday. Fairs are held on the first Tuesdays after the 25th May and 18th November.

PETER-PORT, ST., or ST. PETER'S PORT, a par., seaport, market town, and the capital of Guernsey, Isle of Guernsey, Channel Islands, 28 miles from St. Helier's, and 100 S. by W. of Southampton. This place, which is built on the slope of a hill fronting the sea, on the E. side of the island, is the only town in Guernsey. Its appearance on entering the harbour is imposing, the houses rising one above another up the hill's sides, and extending for nearly a mile along the shore. It consists of the old town, comprising the town parish, the new town, and Hauteville, or the upper town, built on the slope of a hill to the S.W. of the old town. The streets of the old town are narrow, steep, and winding, but the houses are built of stone; and in the more modern portions, comprising the new town and Hauteville, both streets and houses are more regularly constructed. In the suburbs are numerous villas and detached houses. The principal public buildings are the Government House, the residence of the lieutenant-governor; the Elizabeth College, to be mentioned presently; the court-house, the new prison, the town hospital, or poorhouse, erected in 1742, and enlarged in 1810. The States library, literary and mechanics' institute, with a library of near 3 000 volumes; assembly rooms, theatre, a custom-house, several clubs, two joint-stock banks, a savings-bank, chamber of commerce, insurance offices, gas and water works, the Victoria tower near the college, erected to commemorate the visit of Queen Victoria in 1848; General Doyle's pillar, 250 feet high; and three markets, that for fish being an arcade, 200 feet long by 22 feet wide, with a double row of marble slabs, extending the whole length of the building. In the vicinity of the town is a public promenade, known as the New Ground, and laid out in walks. About half a mile to the S. of the town is Fort St. George, crowning the heights, and now used as barracks, the works of which are considered of great strength. Around the coast are fifteen martello towers; and the entrance of the harbour is further defended by a strong fort, called Castle Cornet, built on an isolated rock, half a mile off the shore, but which is accessible at low water in spring tides. The harbour, which is not sufficiently capacious for the trade of the port, is formed by two piers, measuring respectively 760 and 460 feet long, and 80 feet apart at the mouth of the harbour, which has a lighthouse 40 feet high, with a fixed light visible for 11 miles. The roadstead outside is well sheltered from the S.W. winds, and has from 12 to 25 fathoms water, except at the Great Bank, where it has only 3 fathoms, and several shoals above water. The chief shipping business is the coasting trade, which employs above 100 vessels, the exports being granite, potatoes, fruit, vinegar, bricks, and Roman cement; and the imports fish, corn, colonial produce, and general merchandise. The principal manufactories are those of tobacco and snuff, soap, candles, cordage, bricks, cement, and spirituous liquors, which last are extensively distilled for exportation. The town, which includes the par. of St. Thomas, sends six members to the legislative assembly of the island, called the "States of Deliberation," which sits at St. Peter's Port, and seventy members to the States of Election. It is also the seat of the "Royal Court," the chief court of justice in the island. The principal seats are Castle Cary, or Le Câtel, belonging to the Cary family, and the Ivy old castle at Belgrave Bay.—The living is a rect. with the cur. of St. Stephen's annexed, in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £500, in the patron. of the governor. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a Norman structure, built in 1312, with a tower, and is considered a good specimen of the French flamboyant style of architecture. Besides the parish church, there are three district churches, the livings of which vary from £200 to £300. Holy Trinity church was formerly a proprietary chapel, but has been enlarged, and has now a district assigned to it. St. James's was erected in 1817, and St. John's, or Bethele, was erected in 1835. There are places of worship for Roman Catholics, Independents, Baptists, Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, New Connexion Methodists, Society of Friends, and Plymouth Brethren, besides numerous religious and charitable institutions. Queen Elizabeth's College, or grammar school, was rebuilt in 1830, in the Tudor style of architecture, and surrounded with spacious grounds. It has the preference to three fellowships and five scholarships in Oxford University. There are besides, National and denominational schools in connection with the several places of worship, and charity schools attached to the town hospital. The markets are open every day, but the principal market days are Wednesday and Saturday.

PETERS, a tythg. in the par. of Portbury, co. Somerset, 5 miles N.W. of Bristol.

PETERSFIELD, a div. of the co. of Hants, contains the hunds. of Upper and Lower East Meon, and Upper and Lower Finch Dean, comprising about 61,690 acres.

PETERSFIELD, a post and market town, and parliamentary borough, in the lower half hund. of Finch Dean, co. Hants, 17 miles S.E. of Winchester, and 54 S.W. of London, and a station on the South-Western railway. It is situated on the old road from London to Portsmouth, and near the river Rother. It is a polling-place for the county elections, and a petty sessions town; also the seat of a new County Court and superintendent registry. The borough first returned members to parliament in the 35th year of Edward VI., from which period it returned two members, until the passing of the Reform Act, by which it was deprived of one, and the privilege of voting extended to the £10 householders of the old borough, and of the adjoining district. The new borough includes within its bounds the old borough, together with the parishes of Buriton, Foxfield, Lyss, and Steed, except the townships of North and South Ambersham; also the tythings of Ramsden, Langrish, and Oxenbourn. It was incorporated by charter of Queen Elizabeth, and is nominally governed by a mayor and commonalty; the mayor, whose office is become merely titular, being chosen at the court-leet of the lord of the manor, at which also a constable and two tythingmen are also chosen. The mayor is the returning officer. The governing magistrates of the county, who now administer the affairs of the town, meet fortnightly, on the Tuesday prior to market day. The court leet is held on the second Monday in Epiphany, annually. There is an equestrian statue to William III. standing in the centre of the market-place, erected by the Joliffes of Merstham, who also rebuilt the townhall about thirty years ago. The population of the parish in 1861 was 1,950, but of the parliamentary borough 5,655, against 5,550 in 1851, showing a small increase of 100 in the decennial period. The town is lighted with gas, and partially paved. It contains several well-built houses and shops, with two banks, a savings-bank, literary institute, gas-works, police station, and townhall. The incumbent's tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £50. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Buriton, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, with a square tower, containing six bells. The interior of the church contains monuments to the Joliffe family. The parochial charities produce about £14 per annum, exclusive of almshouses. The Petersfield Poor-law Union comprises 13 parishes or places, and the union poor-house has accommodation for 100 inmates. There are National, British, and infant schools. The Independents have a place of worship. There is an institution, designated Churcher's College, with an annual income of £600, founded in 1722, for the free education, clothing, and maintenance of 14 boys, who should be subsequently apprenticed to masters of ships "voyaging" to the East Indies, providing the premium does not exceed £30, with an extra £3 for clothes. Sir W. G. H. Joliffe, Bart., is lord of the manor. The market for corn, &c., is held every alternate Wednesday. Fairs are held on 10th July, 6th October, and 11th December.

PETERSHAM, a par. in the first div. of Kingston hund., co. Surrey, 2 miles N. of Kingston, and 12 S.W. of London. It is situated on the southern bank of the river Thames. The village, which is of small extent, may be considered a suburb of Richmond. Petersham derives its name from having belonged to the abbey of St. Peter's, Chertsey. It gives the title of viscount to the family of Stanhope, Earls of Harrington. The neighbourhood is sheltered from the N. and E. winds by Richmond Hill. A considerable part of the land is cultivated as gardens and lawns, and the remainder is in woods and parks, chiefly the property of the crown. William IV., when Duke of Clarence, had a house here, which was subsequently pulled down and the grounds thrown into Richmond Park. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Kew, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is supposed to have been erected about the commencement of the 16th century, and subsequently enlarged. It contains several tombs of great antiquity, and is the burial-place of the Duchess of Lauderdale. The register dates from 1574. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum. There is a parochial school for both sexes. Ham House is supposed to have been erected by James I. in 1610, as a residence for his son Henry Prince of Wales, and was considerably altered by Charles II. In the centre is a hall surrounded with an open balustrade of walnut wood, and embellished with military trophies. It was the place where the "Cabal" ministry met, and where the celebrated John Duke of Argyll, was born. The ceilings are painted by Verrio, and the room contains a library and many rare old paintings and portraits.

PETERSHAM, a hmlt. in the tythg. of Holt, and par. of Wimborne Minster, co. Dorset, 3 miles N.E. of Wimborne Minster. It was anciently covered with forest.

PETER, ST., a par. and member of the Cinque Port liberty of Dover, though locally in the hund. of Ringslow, or Isle of Thanet, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 2 miles S.E. of Margate, and 2½ N. of Ramsgate. It is situated on the coast near the North Foreland, and contains, besides the village of its own name, the sea-bathing places of Broadstairs and Kingsgate, besides twenty-two hamlets. The North Foreland lighthouse is in this parish, also the Ranelagh Gardens, much frequented by visitors from Margate. The value of land is considerable, the soil being suited for the growth of potatoes, artificial grapes, canary, radish, and spinach seeds, which supply the London seedsmen. The tithes have been commuted for rent-charges amounting to £1,726, of which £458 appertain to the Archbishop of Canterbury, £737 to the Dean and Chapter, and £531 to the vicar. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £560, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church of St. Peter, which was anciently a chapel-of-ease to Minster, is a Norman structure, erected in 1184, and made parochial in 1200. It has undergone frequent alterations and repairs, and in 1838 the E. window was restored. It contains three brasses of R. Culmer, the earliest bearing date 1485, also tombs of the Dewkners and others. At Broadstairs is a chapel-of-ease, erected by subscription in 1828, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £230, in the patron. of the Vicar of St. Peter's. The Baptists and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. The parochial charities produce about £125 per annum, of which £30 belongs to Lovejoy's school. There are National schools for boys and girls, also an almshouse for the aged poor, presented to the parish by Mrs. Nuckell, in 1837.

PETER'S, ST., or NORTH, a par. on the N. side of South Ronaldshay Island, Orkney Islands, coast of Scotland. It comprises St. Margaret's, Hope, with Burray and Huuda Islands, which see.

PETER'S, ST., a par. on the N. side of Stronsay Island, Orkney Islands, coast of Scotland. It comprises Whitehall and Holm-of-Midgarth, with Papa Stronsay Islands, which see.

PETER'S, ST., a par. in the bar. of Forth, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It contains part of the town of Wexford. This par. is 3 miles long by 1½ mile broad. The soil is mostly good. The road from Wexford to Fethard passes through the parish. It is an impropriate cur. in the dioc. of Ferns. See WEXFORD.

PETER'S, ST., a par. in the bar. of Uppercross, and city of Dublin, which see.

PETER'S, ST., a par. in the bar. of Athlone, co. Roscommon, Ireland, 1 mile from Athlone, its post town. The parish, which is of large extent, is situated on the river Shannon, near Loughree. It contains part of Athlone, and the villages of Bogganfin and Bellaugh. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. £192, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. See ATHLONE.

PETER'S, ST., or ST. PIERRE, a par. in the isle of Jersey, Channel Islands, 2 miles N.W. of St. Aubin, and 5 N.W. of St. Helier's. It is situated in the south-western part of the island, and includes the small village of Beaumont, built near the sea-shore. The surface, though generally level, is intersected with valleys. The greater portion of the land is arable, with some pasture and orchard. The soil is in parts sandy; but in other parts a rich black mould of great fertility. The chief agricultural produce is corn and potatoes, of which great quantities are sent to England, and apples, of which cider is made. In the north-western part of the parish is a lake, about a quarter of a mile in length, communicating with St. Ouen's Bay, which bounds the parish on the W. At the upper end of St. Peter's valley is a mineral spring. There are several water and steam corn-mills. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £150, in the patron. of the governor. The church is a Norman structure with a lofty tower. There are places of worship for Independents and Wesleyans. The free grammar school of St. Anastase has an income from endowment of £60, with preference to several scholarships at Oxford University.

PETERSTONE, a chplry. in the par. of Coychurch, hund. of Newcastle, co. Glamorgan, 16 miles from Cardiff, its post town, and 6 N.E. of Bridgend. It is a station on the South Wales section of the Great Western railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Ogmore, under Mynydd-y-Rhiw mountain, and designated Llanbedr-ar-Vynydd. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Coychurch, in the dioc. of Llandaff. The church is dedicated to St. Peter.

PETERSTONE, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Wentlooge, co. Monmouth, 6 miles S.W. of Newport, its post town, and the same distance from Cardiff. The village, which is small, is situated on the Bristol Channel. The impropriate tithes, belonging to the Dean and Chapter of Bristol, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £130, and those of the perpetual curate for one of £25. The appropriate glebe comprises 63 acres. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £57, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Bristol. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient edifice, with a lofty tower supported by buttresses. It was erected at the expense of Fitzhamon's daughter Maud.

PETERSTONE-SUPER-ELY, a par. in the hund. of Dinas-Powis, co. Glamorgan, 7 miles from Cowbridge, its post town, and 6 W. of Cardiff. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Ely, and contains the ruins of one of Fitzhamon's castles. The neighbourhood abounds with limestone. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £228. The church is dedicated to St. Peter.

PETERSTOW, a par. in the lower div. of Wormelow hund., co. Hereford, 2½ miles N.W. of Ross, its post town and railway station, and 12 S. of Hereford. The village, which is small, is situated on the old road from Ross to Hereford. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil consists of a red loam, upon a subsoil of clay and rock. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £403, and the glebe comprises 18 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £290. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, with a spired tower containing four bells. It was erected in 1066, and is in a good state of preservation. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. There is a free school for both sexes, entirely supported by the Rev. J. Jebb. The governors of Guy's Hospital are lords of the manor.

PETERTAVY, or TAVY ST. PETER, a par. in the hund. of Roborough, co. Devon, 3 miles N.E. of Tavistock, and 17 N. of Plymouth. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Tavy, and near the high road from Plymouth to Okehampton. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The par. contains the hmlt. of Willsworthy, where was formerly an old chantry. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient stone structure, with a square embattled and pinnacled tower containing five bells. There are girls' and infant schools, also a place of worship for the Wesleyans. The Duke of Bedford is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

PETHAM, a par. in the hund. of Bridge, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 5½ miles S.W. of Canterbury, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated at the base of Chartham Down. It is bounded on the E. by Stane-Street way from Canterbury to Hythe. Petham was given by a Saxon prince, named Haldene, to Christ Church, Canterbury, in 1036, from which see it eventually came into the possession of the crown. In the neighbourhood are traces of entrenchments, supposed to have been thrown up by the Britons after being driven from their position in the woods by the Romans. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The land is partly in hop grounds. The impropriate tithes, belonging to the lay rector, have been commuted for £460, the impropriate tithes, belonging to the Archbishop of Canterbury, as rector of Swarling district, have been commuted for £30 7*s.* 6*d.*, and the vicarial tithes for £440. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Waltham, in the dioc. of Canterbury. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a tower containing six bells. The parochial charities produce about £93 per annum, including Tillard's £90 for the poor. There is a National school for both sexes. A court-baron is held.

PETHERICK, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Pyder, co. Cornwall, 2½ miles S.E. of Padstow, its post town, and 5 N. of St. Colomb Major. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the shore of the Bristol Channel, and at the bridge over the river Alan, which is navigable for barges. The road between Wadebridge and Padstow passes through the parish. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is of a loamy nature, with a subsoil of clay. The par. includes the hmlt. of Tregonnen. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £203, with 34 acres of glebe. The church, dedicated to St. Petrock Minor, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower mantled with ivy. It has recently undergone restoration, and the interior was beautified in 1831 at the expense of the rector. It is situated in a hollow, near the ruins of two chapels. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. The almshouse, for two widows, was built and endowed by Mr. Carthew. There is a day school and a Sunday-school in connection with the parsonage. John Paynter, Esq., is lord of the manor. A fair for cattle is held on the 14th July.

PETHERTON, NORTH, a hund. in the co. of Somerset, contains the town of Bridgwater and the pars. of Bawdrip, Chedzoy, Chilton Trinity, Durston, St. Michael Church, Pawlett, North Petherton, Thurloxton, and part of Wembdon, comprising an area of 23,150 acres, exclusive of Bridgwater.

PETHERTON, NORTH, a par. in the above hund., co. Somerset, 3 miles S.W. of Bridgwater, its post town, and 8 N.E. of Taunton. The parish, which is of large extent, is traversed by the Bristol and Exeter railway, the Bridgwater and Taunton canal, and the navigable river Parret. The par. includes Petherton Limit, and three other tythgs., also the chplries. of North Newton and Northmoor Green, with six hmlts. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. Petty sessions are held monthly at the George Inn. The village, which was formerly a market town, consists of a well-built street on the road from Bridgwater to Taunton. The impropriation belongs to the landowners. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £1,018 16*s.*, and the vicarial for £896 16*s., also £70 payable to the perpetual curate of Newton Chapel, and £3 to the Vicar of Lyng. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £832. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower containing a clock and six bells. The register dates from 1558. There are also two district churches, viz. at Newton North and Northmoor Green, the livings of which are perpet. curs., val. £70 and £100 respectively. The parochial charities produce about £55 per annum, of which £46 goes to Sir T. Wroth's school. There are British and National schools for both sexes. There are reading rooms, a police station, and a cemetery. Maunsell Grange is the principal residence. Sir A. F. A. Slade, Bart., is lord of the manor. There are two fairs, for cattle and pedlary, held on May 1st and the Monday prior to the 13th November.

PETHERTON, SOUTH, a hund. in the co. of Somerset, contains the pars. of Barrington, Chaffcombe, Chillington, Cricket St. Thomas, Cudworth, Dinnington, Dowlish Wake, St. Giles Knowle, Lopen, Niden, South Petherton, Seavington, Shepton-Beauchamp, and Whit-Staunton, comprising an area of 14,680 acres.

PETHERTON, SOUTH, a par., post and market town in the above hund., co. Somerset, 5 miles E. of Ilminster, 5 N.W. of Crewkerne, and 3 S.W. of Martock station on the Yeovil branch of the Bristol and Exeter railway. It is situated at the bridge over the river Parret, or Pedder, from which the parish takes its name, and on which are several corn-mills. It contains the tythgs. of Compton-Durvill, South Harp, and Over Stratton. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of coarse linen, dowlas, sail-cloth, and kid gloves. The soil consists of clay and loam upon a subsoil of marlstone. The town, which is ancient, is stated by Camden to have been the residence of Ina, King of the West Saxons. It comprises three principal strects, which uniting form a triangle. Courts-leet for the manor and hundred are held in October. The tithes have been commuted for rent-charges amounting to £1,328, of which £155 is payable to the Dean and Chapter, £623 to the impropriators, and £550 to the vicar. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £475, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Bristol. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is a cruciform structure with a tower containing a clock and six bells. The interior of the church contains two brasses of the Earl and Countess of Bridgwater, bearing date 1420. The church was restored in 1861. The register dates from 1574. The parochial charities produce about £64 10*s.* per annum. There is an endowed National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. The Wesleyans, Independents, and Bible Christians have each a place of worship. A large earthen vessel full of Roman coins was dug up in 1720 near the line of the old Roman Fosse Way, which traversed the parish, and other antiquities have at different times been discovered in the vicinity. William Parsons Peter, Esq., is lord of the manor. Market day is Saturday. A fair is held on July 6th for sheep and lambs.

PETHERWIN, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Black Torrington, co. Devon, 5 miles N.W. of Launceston, its post town. The village, which is of considerable extent, situated on a branch of the river Tamar, and is wholly agricultural. The glebe comprises 150 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £135. The church, dedicated to St. Paternus, has a square tower. The interior of the church contains several monuments to the Herring family. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Reformed Wesleyans have two places of worship each, and Bible Christians one.

PETHERWIN, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of East, co. Cornwall, 2 miles S.W. of Launceston, its post town. The village, which is large, is chiefly agricultural. Blue slate and dark limestone abound. There are also traces of copper, lead, and silver. The par. contains the hmlt. of Trecorgo. The South Petherwin hounds hunt here. The great tithes of South Petherwin have been commuted for a rent-charge of £313, and the vicarial for one of £250 10*s., and the glebe comprises 9 acres. The living is a vic. with the cur. of Trewen annexed, in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £349, in the patron. of the University of Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Paternus, is an ancient stone structure, and has a square and pinnacled tower containing six bells. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans, Bible Christians, and Baptists have each a place of worship. Trebersey is the principal residence. Fairs are held on the second Tuesdays in May and October for toys and pedlery.

PETROCKSTOW, a par. in the hund. of Shebbear, co. Devon, 4 miles N.W. of Hatherleigh, its post town, and 14 W. of Eggesford railway station. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on the Hatherleigh and Torrington road. The soil consists of dun, upon a subsoil of clay. At Berrymoor is a saline spring, used for medicinal purposes. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £271, and the glebe comprises 49 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £255. The church, dedicated to St. Petrock, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains monuments of the Rolle family. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, erected at the expense of Lord Clinton in 1842. The Wesleyans and Bible Christians have each a place of worship. Lord Clinton is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

PETROX, ST., a par. in the hund. of Coleridge, co. Devon. See DARTMOUTH.

PETROX, ST., or LLAN PEDROG, a par. in the hund. of Castlemartin, co. Pembroke, 2 miles S.W. of Pembroke. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The living is a rect. united with that of Stackpole Elidor. The church, dedicated to St. Petrock, has recently been thoroughly restored and beautified by the late Earl Cawdor.

PETSOE-END, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Newport, co. Bucks, 2½ miles S. by E. of Olney. This was anciently a distinct parish, but the church, dedicated to St. James, having fallen to decay, the living was united with that of Okeney, of which parish it now forms a hamlet.

PETT, a par. in the hund. of Guestling, rape of Hastings, co. Sussex, 4½ miles N.E. of Hastings, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the coast on the Royal Military canal. The parish is bounded on the S.E. by the English Channel. The view from Chick Hill is diversified, and in clear weather the French coast is visible. In the vicinity of Pett Level whole trees have been dug up in a perfect state, which have probably lain dormant since 1250, when a large portion of the land became inundated and destroyed by the sea. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The land is partly in pasture and partly arable, with some hop grounds, and about 33 acres of wood. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £460. The church, dedicated to SS. Mary and Peter, has a chancel containing numerous monuments to the Wynch family. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum, which goes towards medical advice for the poor. There is a National school for both sexes.

PETTAUGH, a par. in the hund. of Thredling, co. Suffolk, 3 miles from Stonham, its post town, and 7 N.E. of Needham Market. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Deben, and is wholly agricultural. The surface is undulating and the soil clayey. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £190, and the glebe comprises 18 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £123. The church, dedicated to St. Catherine, is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing a clock and three bells. The interior of the church has a brass of J. Fastolfe, bearing date 1549. Lord Henniker, John Tollemache, and O. Baker, Esqs., are lords of the manor.

PETTERIL-CROOKS, a tnshp. in the par. of Hesket-in-the-Forest, Leath ward, co. Cumberland, 9 miles N.W. of Penrith. It takes its name from a stream which rises in Greystoke Park, and falls into the river Eden. The principal residences are Petteril-Green and Petteril Bank.

PETTIGOE, a post-office vil., partly in the par. of Drumkeeran and bar. of Lurg, co. Fermanagh, and partly in the par. of Templecarne and bar. of Tirhugh, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 11 miles S.E. of Donegal, and 123 from Dublin. It is situated on the little river Termon, and on the road from Enniskillen to Donegal. It contains the parish church of Templecarne, also Presbyterian and Roman Catholic chapels, and a dispensary, which last is within the Donegal Poor-law Union. It is an improving place, with a large traffic towards Lough Derg. Petty sessions are held in the village. A fair is held once a month.

PETTINAIN, a par. in the upper ward, co. Lanark, Scotland. It extends in length about 3 miles from N.E. to S.W., with an extreme breadth of 2½ miles, and is bounded by the pars. of Carstairs, Carnwarth, Libberton, Covington, Carmichael, and Lanark. The surface is uneven, the chief summits being Swaites Hill, Cairngryffe, and Westraw Hill, which last attains an altitude of 1,000 feet. The soil is of various qualities in the low grounds, but that of the uplands is moorish. The village of Pettinain is about 4 miles E. of Lanark. It is traversed by the Caledonian railway, and is within easy access of the Carstairs, Carnwath, and Thankerton stations. It is situated on the river Clyde, under Pettinain Hill. On the moor are traces of a camp of 6 acres, where urns have been found, and near it are traces of two other camps, also part of an ancient cross. This par. is in the presb. of Lanark and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The minister has a stipend of £162. The parish church was rebuilt about the latter end of the 17th century, and was restored in 1820. Westraw House was the residence of the last Earl of Hyndford.

PETTISTREE a par. in the hund. of Wilford, co. Suffolk, 1 mile S.W. of Wickham-Market, its post town, and 4 miles S.E. of Woodbridge. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Deben, and is wholly agricultural. The par. comprises the hmlt. of Bing, which appears once to have been of considerable importance, as a claim was made in the 14th of Edward I. of a right to hold a market every Thursday. The impropriate tithes belonging to the Blue-coat School at Ipswich have been commuted for a rent-charge of £220, and the vicarial for one of £96 10*s.*, with 1 acre of glebe. The living is a vic. annexed with that of Lowdham, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient flint edifice. The interior contains a brass of F. Bacon, bearing date 1580. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. Lowdham Hall was formerly the seat of a family of the same name.

PETTON, a par. in the Baschurch div. of the hund. of Pimhill, co. Salop, 6 miles S.W. of Wem, its post town, 3 N.E. of Baschurch railway station, and 6 S. by E. of Ellesmere. The parish, which is inconsiderable, is situated on the western side of the road between Shrewsbury and Ellesmere. It is wholly agricultural, but is celebrated for the size and growth of its timber. The Ellesmere canal passes about 2 miles distant. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £160. The church, which is situated on a wooded hill, is a brick edifice, with a turret containing one bell. It was rebuilt in 1727. It contains a carved oak pulpit, with the date 1635. Petton Hall, situated in a well-wooded park, is the principal residence. In the park is a moat, still entire, with the remains of a drawbridge, and at a little distance is a mound, where many curious coins have been discovered.

PETTON, a quarter in the par. of Bampton, co. Devon, near Bampton.

PETTRIDGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Brenchley, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 6 miles S.E. of Tunbridge.

PETTY, or PETTIE, a par. in the cos. of Inverness and Nairn, Scotland. It comprises a vil. of its own name, and the vils. of Stuartown and Connage, and part of that of Campbelton. It extends in length about 9 miles from N.E. to S.W., with a varying breadth of between 2 to 3 miles. It is bounded by the Moray Frith, as also by the parishes of Inverness, Croy, and Ardersur. The surface is moderately even. A large portion of the land has been reclaimed, and is now in a state of cultivation. The soil is of a light nature, but fertile. The prevailing rock is the Old Red sandstone. The parish is traversed by the road from Inverness to Elgin, as also by the Inverness and Nairn railway, and is within easy access of the Culloden, Dalcross, and Fort-George stations. The village of Petty is about 7 miles N.E. of Inverness. It is situated on Loch Beauly, near Culloden Moor. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the fisheries. This par. is in the presb. of Inverness and synod of Moray. The minister has a stipend of £246. The parish church was erected in 1839, on the site of one dedicated to St. Columba, and has tombs of the Mackintoshes, of whom was Sir James, the historian. There are a Free church, a parochial school, and two other schools. There are two moot hills, or Kistvaens, in this parish. Castle-Stuart, Gollanfield, and Flemington are the principal residences.

PETTYCUR, a small harbour on the coast of Fife, co. Scotland, near Kinghorn. It is situated at the ferry to Leith on the Frith of Forth.

PETWORTH, a par., post, and market town in the hund. of Rotherbridge, rape of Arundel, co. Sussex, 12 miles from Arundel, 14 N. by E. of Chichester, and 49 S. by W. of London. It is a station on the Mid Sussex railway. It is situated on an eminence adjoining the high road from Chichester to London, and near the navigable river Rother, which is crossed by a bridge at Coultershall, in this parish. The par. comprises the hmlt. of Byworth. It is a polling-place for the county elections, and a petty sessions town. Petworth is mentioned in Domesday Survey as Peteorde, and came through the D'Albinis and Percys, Earls of Northumberland, to the Wyndhams. The town is well lit with gas, and excellently supplied with water. It consists of several irregularly laid out streets of well-built houses. In the centre of the town is the market and court-house, a stone building, with a bust of William III. in a niche at one end, put up at the close of the last century by the late Earl of Egremont. Within the building are held the petty sessions, on the first and third Saturday in the month, also the Epiphany and Easter quarter sessions for West Sussex. The other public buildings are the house of correction for West Sussex, new county court, gas-works, police station, Petworth union workhouse, subscription reading room, working man's institute, a branch office of the London and County Bank, a savings-bank and penny bank. At a short distance from the town is Petworth House, situated in an extensive and well-wooded park of 12 miles in circumference. It stands near the site of the old baronial castle, and was rebuilt by the third Earl of Egremont. The present structure consists of three stories, the front measuring 324 feet in length, with an altitude of 62 feet to the parapet, and each of the stories contains 21 windows. The interior contains a collection of paintings by Vandyck, and other celebrated artists, also a collection of carvings by Gibbons and Ritson, and a gallery of statuary and sculptures of the antique, with many of the works of Flaxman, Westmacott, Rysbrach, Nollekens, and modern artists, including the last work and chef-d'œuvre of Flaxman. The park is watered by an extensive lake, and has superior breeds of deer, sheep and cattle reared by the last earl. This mansion has been frequently honoured with royal visits: in 1551 Edward VI. was entertained here for several days; in 1703 Charles, King of Spain, and afterwards emperor, paid a visit to the Duke and Duchess of Somerset; and in 1814 the late Earl of Egremont had the honour of entertaining George IV., then Prince Regent, accompanied by the Emperor Alexander of Russia, the Grand Duchess of Oldenburgh, Frederick, King of Prussia, and the Prince of Wurtemberg, with their respective suites. The park and mansion may be viewed by the public on applying at the lodge.—The neighbourhood abounds in chalk, with fuller's earth. About half the land is arable, and the remainder nearly evenly divided between pasture and woodland, with a small extent of common.—The incumbent's tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £850, and the glebe comprises 157 acres, valued at £400; the Rector of Duncton also receives £350 out of the tithes. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £856. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a square tower crowned with a spire 180 feet in height. It was repaired by the late Earl of Egremont, at a cost of £16,000, when the greater portion of the tower was rebuilt, and the spire designed by Sir Charles Barry. It has three painted windows, recently inserted, and contains several old effigies and tombs of the Percys and Wyndhams. The register dates from 1559. There are various charities, producing about £1,341 per annum. The Somerset Hospital, for 22 poor widows, who each have an annuity of £20, was erected and endowed in 1746 by Charles Duke of Somerset. There are also other almshouses, built and endowed in 1618 by T. Thompson, for 12 poor persons belonging to the parish, who receive an annuity of £10 each, and an almshouse for 4 aged men. There are schools for both sexes, endowed by the late Earl of Egremont; also a girls' school at Byworth, and an infant school, erected and endowed by Lord Leconfield in 1862. Besides the above schools, there are Sunday and Dissenting schools. The Independents and Calvinists have each a place of worship.—Lord Leconfield is lord of the manor. Market day is Saturday. Fairs are held on 1st May, 4th September, and 20th November.

PEVENSEY RAPE, in the co. of Sussex, contains the hunds. of Alciston, Bishopstone, Burleigh-Arches, Danehill Horsted, Dill, Eastbourne, East Grinstead, Flexborough, Hartfield Longbridge, Loxfield-Dorset, Loxfield Pelham, Pevensey Lowey, Ringmer, Rotherfield, Rushmonden, Shiplake, Totnore, and Willingdon, comprising an area of 228,990 acres. Pevensey Lowey in the above rape contains the pars. of Pevensey and Westham, comprising an area of 7,780 acres.

PEVENSEY, or PEMSEY, a par. in the above rape, co. Sussex, 5½ miles N.W. of Eastbourne, its post town, and 5 S.W. of Hailsham. It is a station on the Hastings section of the Brighton and South Coast railway. Pevensey is at present only a small village, situated on the rivulet Ashburn, which runs into Pevensey Bay in the Channel. It is a decayed market town, and a member of the Cinque Port of Hastings. It is supposed to occupy the site of the Anderida Portus of the Romans, on the Ermine Street, and was the Pewenesea or Pefensea of the Saxons, to which the sea once reached. The town was ravaged by Earl Godwin, and is the place where William the Conqueror landed in 1066, who then proceeded to, and fortified, Hastings Castle, preparatory to the conflict which took place at Battle, 8 miles distant. On the summit of a hill are the ruins of a castle of Roman origin, which was given by the Conqueror to his half-brother, Earl Robert, ancestor of the Earls of Mortaigne, who restored the castle. It subsequently reverted to the crown, and was by Henry I. bestowed on Gilbert de Aquila, and afterwards came to John of Gaunt, the Pelhams, Comptons, and Cavendishes. The ruins of the castle consist chiefly of massive walls, built of Roman bricks placed herring-bone-wise, and of a gateway or moated keep flanked by round towers, which from their magnitude show this to have been a fortress of considerable strength. In the reign of Henry IV., the Duke of York was for some time confined within the walls of this castle, as was also Queen Joan of Navarre, the last wife of Henry IV., and James I. of Scotland, for nearly eighteen years. The towers were formerly approached by a drawbridge. Pevensey Bay affords excellent accommodation to shipping, and is defended by numerous martello towers, which extend along the bay from Bexhill to beyond Langney, or Pevensey Point, off which is Pevensey Shoal with only from 2 to 4 fathoms water, besides several other shoals outside. The decline of Pevensey from the importance it once possessed has been, like several other places in this neighbourhood, principally owing to the receding of the sea, from which it is now a considerable distance, being only accessible to small boats. The town has still a corporation, consisting of a bailiff, jurats, and commonalty. General sessions for the liberty are held quarterly, and over the prison, which is a small building, is the townhall. The surface of the parish is level, and was formerly much subject to inundation, but has recently been improved by drainage. The tract over which the sea formerly flowed, now called Pevensey Level, comprises some of the richest fattening pastures for cattle in England. It is also noted for its production of Southdown mutton. Pevensey gives the title of viscount to the Earl of Sheffield. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £1,153, and there are 80 acres of appropriate glebe, valued at £200, and 10 acres of vicarial glebe valued at £25 per annum. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £948, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure with a low square tower, also a spire on the N. side. A large portion of the chancel, which is overgrown with ivy, and contains a monument to John Wheatley, Esq., is not used. The parochial charities produce about £100 per annum, which goes to the support of the almshouses. Andrew Borde, a jocular physician of Henry VIII., and who is said to have given origin to the appellation of "Merry Andrew," was born in this parish. In 1840, on removing some earth within the area of the castle, numerous brass coins extending in a series over the reigns of six or seven Roman emperors were discovered. A cattle market is held every alternate Thursday, commencing from the latter end of June until the beginning of October.

PEVERELL POINT, a headland on Swanage Bay, coast of Dorset, 5 miles S.E. of Corfe Castle. The Saxon fleet commanded by Alfred the Great gained a victory here over the Danes in 877.

PEVINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Calehill, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 4 miles W. by S. of Charing. The village, which comprises only a few farmhouses, may be considered a hamlet of Pluckley, to which it was ecclesiastically united in 1583. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Pluckley, in the dioc. of Canterbury. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is in ruins.

PEWIT, an islet near Horsey Island, co. Essex, 5 miles S.W. of Harwich.

PEWSEY, a par., post and small market town, in the hund. of Kinwardstone, co. Wilts, 7 miles S.W. of Marlborough, and 12 E. of Devizes. It is a station on the Berks and Hants section of the Great Western railway. It is a petty sessions town situated on the river Avon, near the Kennet and Avon canal, and contains several well-built houses and shops. The petty sessions for the division are held on the 2nd Friday in every month at the Phœnix Inn, in which building the corn market is also held. The inhabitants of the village are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £1,200, and the glebe comprises 131 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £1,038. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient structure with a square pinnacled tower containing six bells. The church has recently undergone thorough restoration, the expense being defrayed by the parishioners. The chancel contains a monument of Charles II.'s time. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a place of worship. The union poorhouse has accommodation for 200 paupers. The Poor-law Union comprises 23 parishes or places.

PEWSEY. See PUSEY, co. Berks.

PEWSHAM, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Chippenham, co. Wilts, 1½ mile S.E. of Chippenham.

PEXHALL, a hmlt. in the par. of Prestbury, hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 3 miles W. of Macclesfield. It forms a tnshp. in conjunction with Henbury.

PEYTON, a chplry. in the par. and hund. of Bampton, co. Devon, 4 miles N.E. of Bampton.

PHARAY, a par. and island in the district of the North Isles of Orkney, co. Orkney and Shetland, coast of Scotland. It is in conjunction with Eday parish.

PHARAY, NORTH, an island in the par. of Stronsay and Eday, Orkney and Shetland Isles, coast of Scotland. It is situated near Holm of Pharay. It extends about 2 miles in length by half a mile in breadth. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the cod and herring fisheries.

PHARAY, SOUTH, an island in the par. of Walls and Flota, Orkney and Shetland Isles, coast of Scotland, 1 mile W. of Hoy Island in Scalpa Flow. It is a quoad sacra par. in conjunction with the par. of Walls. It extends about 2 miles in length, by about 1 mile in breadth.

PHIBSBOROUGH, a vil. in the par. of Grangegorman, co. Dublin, Ireland, 1 mile N.W. of Dublin. It is situated on the banks of the Royal canal, and comprises part of Phœnix Park. See DUBLIN.

PHILADELPHIA, a vil. in the par. of Tynemouth, co. Northumberland, 2 miles from Shields. The inhabitants are principally engaged in the collieries.

PHILADELPHIA, a vil. in the tnshp. of Nether

Hallam, par. of Sheffield, West Riding co. York, 2 miles W. of Sheffield.

PHILIPHAUGH, a demesne in the par. and co. of Selkirk, Scotland, 1 mile W. of Selkirk. It is situated at the confluence of the rivers Ettrick and Yarrow, and is the spot where Leslie surprised and defeated the Royalists under Montrose in 1645.

PHILIPSTOWN, LOWER, a bar. in King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is bounded by co. Westmeath, and by the bars. of Warrenstown, Coolestown, Geashill, Ballycowan, and Upper Philipstown. It is 7 miles long, by 5 broad, and contains the town of Philipstown; also the pars. of Ballycommon, Croghan, Kilclonpert, Killaderry, and part of Ballyburly.

PHILIPSTOWN, UPPER, a bar. in King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, adjoining the above, and otherwise bounded by Coolestown, Queen's County, and Geashill. It is 9 miles long, by 5 broad, and contains the par. of Clonyhurk, and parts of Ballykean and Geashill.

PHILIPSTOWN, a post and market town in the par. of Killaderry, in the bar. of Lower Philipstown, King's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 50 W.S.W. of Dublin. It is situated on the road from Portarlington to Tyrrel's-Pass, and on the river Philipstown, a tributary to the Figile. The Grand canal passes at a little distance from the village. The great Bog of Allen, which is in the vicinity, adds to the dreariness of this locality. The town, or rather village, consists chiefly of one street. It was formerly a parliamentary borough, returning two members previous to the Union. The assizes were then held here, but have subsequently been removed to Tullamore. It was named in honour of Philip II. of Spain, after being taken from the O'Connors in 1546, under whom it was called Dingan. It received its charter of incorporation in the time of Queen Elizabeth, and was sacked by James II.'s forces. It contains the parish church of Killaderry, a Roman Catholic chapel, sessions-house, gaol, barracks, and a dispensary, which last is within the Tullamore poor-law union. Forth or Fort Castle, which stands in the vicinity, was built by Sir W. Brabazon, after the expulsion of the O'Connors, and was for a few days the residence of Philip II., when visiting the town. Viscount Molesworth takes the title of baron from this place. Market day is on Thursday. Fairs are held on 3rd January, 13th March, 15th May, 14th June, 17th August, 18th October, and 3rd December.

PHILIPSTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Ardee, co. Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Louth. Ardee is its post town. This par. is 3 miles long, and its greatest breadth is 1¼ mile. The surface, which lies along the bank of the river Glyde, consists of a good soil. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. with Charlestown, £365, in the patron. of the primate. Here are a Roman Catholic chapel, and three or four daily schools. Thomastown and Rathneeston House are the principal residences.

PHILIPSTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Upper Dundalk, co. Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Dundalk, its post town. It is 2½ miles in length, and its extreme breadth is 1 mile. The soil is good, and the road from Dundalk to Crossmaglen traverses the parish. It is bounded on the N. by the river Castletown. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. with Baronstown, £348, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Christ Church. The church was erected in 1798 by the late Board of First Fruits, and by private contributors. There are large mills in operation in this parish.

PHILIPSTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Ferrard, co. Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N. of Drogheda. It is not ecclesiastically recognised as a separate parish. It is small, comprising only 268 acres.

PHILLACK, or ST. FELACK, a par. in the hund. of Penwith, co. Cornwall, near Camborne, and 8 miles W. by S. of Redruth. This par., which is of considerable extent, is situated on the shore of St. Bride's Bay, in the Bristol Channel, and includes the port of Hayle at the mouth of the small river of the same name, the vil. of Hayle Copper House, and several hmlts. The substratum is rich in mineral wealth, the prevailing rock being porphyry. The great Wheal Alfred, and other extensive copper mines, were formerly worked with profit, but none are at present productive, except the North Wheal Alfred. In the northern part of the parish the surface is overspread with sand and shell hills, supposed to have been drifted from the coast of St. Ive's Bay in the 12th century. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the coasting trade, and in the working and export of minerals. There are an extensive iron-foundry for the manufacture of steam-engines, a smelting-house for tin at Angarrick, and copper smelting-works at Hayle. A canal has been formed from the smelting-works to the port, and a railroad from Hayle to Redruth. The tithes have been commuted for £620. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. with the rect.* of Gwithian and the cur. of St. John's, Hayle, annexed, £550. The church, dedicated to St. Felix, was rebuilt, with the exception of the tower, in 1856. There was formerly a chapel-of-ease at the northern extremity of the Towan, of which only the site remains. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. There are National and Sunday schools for boys and girls. An ancient cemetery was discovered some years ago adjoining the present churchyard, where several stone graves, containing skeletons in a perfect state of preservation, with stone basins and some stags' horns were met with. There were formerly castles at Castle Kayle and Hayle Bar Riviere. The feast of the saint is kept on the Sunday nearest to the 23rd of November.

PHILLEIGH. See FILLEY, co. Cornwall.

PHILLYHOLME, a tythg. in the par. of Hawkchurch, hund. of Uggscombe, co. Dorset, 3 miles N.E. of Axminster.

PHILPSTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Abercorn, co. Linlithgow, Scotland, 4 miles E. of Linlithgow. It is situated on the line of the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway.

PHOSIDE, a hmlt. and lib. in the chplry. of Hayfield, par. of Glossop, co. Derby, 5 miles N.W. of Chapel-en-le-Frith.

PHOUL-A-PHOUCA, or THE DEVIL'S POOL, a fall of the river Liffey, situated 4 miles S.W. of Blessington, between the cos. of Wicklow and Kildare, Ireland. Its height is 150 feet, and its breadth 40. The road to New Ross is carried across the chasm by means of a bridge.

PICARDY, a hmlt. in the par. of Erith, hund. of Lessness, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 6 miles E. of Woolwich. It is situated near Belvedere.

PICCADILLY, a vil. in the tnshp. of Sharples, co. Lancaster, 2 miles N. of Bolton-le-Moors.

PICKBURN-WITH-BRODSWORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Brodsworth, N. div. of the wap. of Strafforth, West Riding co. York, 4 miles N.W. of Doncaster.

PICKEDFIELD, a hmlt. in the par. of Enford, co. Wilts, 4 miles N.W. of Hungerford. It is situated near the river Kennet and Knyghton Camp, and has a large gunpowder depôt, established in 1803.

PICKED-POST AND PICKED-POST GATE, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Ringwood, co. Hants, 3 miles E. of Ringwood railway station. It is situated on the road to Southampton, near the New Forest, and occupies the ridge of a considerable elevation.

PICKENHAM, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of South Greenhoe, co. Norfolk, 3½ miles S.E. of Swaffham, its railway station and post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated in a valley on the river Wissey, and is wholly agricultural. The soil consists of a light loam. About two-thirds of the land are arable, and the remainder chiefly meadow and pasture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £471 10s., and the glebe comprises 110 acres. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Houghton-on-the-Hill, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £430. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a square tower containing one bell. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum. There is a parochial school for both sexes recently erected. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship.

PICKENHAM, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of South Greenhoe, co. Norfolk, 4 miles S.E. of Swaffham, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Wissey, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is a light loam, alternating with sand, upon a gravelly subsoil. The land is partly in common, but the greater part is arable. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £303 12*s.*, and the glebe comprises 62 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £344. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a circular tower containing one bell. The interior of the church contains monuments of the Shute family, and remains of the mortuary chapel of Sir Henry Hobart, Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas in the reign of Charles I. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. Pickenham Hall, the principal residence, is in a well-wooded park. E. A. Applethwaite, Esq., is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

PICKERING, a par., post and market town in the wap. of Pickering Lythe, North Riding co. York, 10¾ miles from Malton, and 26 to the N.E. of York. It is a station on the Rillington and Whitby branch of the North-Eastern railway. It is situated in a vale near the moors, on a stream called Pickering Beck, which flows to the river Derwent. The par., which extends 20 miles in length by 3 in breadth, includes the following tnshps. :—Goatland, Pickering Marishes, Newton, and Kingthorpe. The town, which is long and straggling, is situated on a declivity, and is of great antiquity, having been founded, according to tradition, by Peridurus, a British king, 270 years before the commencement of the Christian era. It returned members to parliament in Edward I.'s time, and had a castle of great strength, in which Richard II. was imprisoned after his deposition. It is a petty sessions town, the magistrates meeting once a month at the Black and White Swan Inns alternately. It is also the head of an honour in the Duchy of Lancaster, having jurisdiction throughout the Lythe and wapentake, which are coextensive, including 2 market towns and 46 townships. The board of guardians meet every alternate Monday at the workhouse, and manor courts are held twice annually. There are two banks, a savings-bank, mechanics' institute, &c. The staple trade of the town is in agricultural produce. There are also two foundries, and an agricultural implement manufactory, which together employ many hands. On the moor at Rawcliffe Hill are extensive Roman encampments, where urns have been discovered, and in the vicinity are numerous ancient barrows. The Kildhead Spring is about half a mile distant from the town, and forms the source of the river Castar, upon the banks of which, and upon the Old Beck stream, are several flour mills. From Castle Hill a view is obtained of the fertile vale of Pickering, bounded on one side by the barren mountainous district called Black or Blake Moore, which furnishes materials for making brooms. The impropriations belong to the Dean of York. The living is a vic.* with the perpet. cur. of Newton annexed, in the dioc. of York, val. £230, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient edifice with a tower surmounted by a lofty spire. The church contains effigies and monuments of great antiquity. There is also a district church at Goatland, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £58, and a chapel-of-ease at Newton, in this parish. The parochial charities produce about £110 per annum. There is a grammar school, also an endowed school. The Independents, Wesleyans, Society of Friends, Primitive Methodists, and New Connexion Methodists have each a place of worship. There is a school belonging to the Wesleyans, of recent erection. Meetings are held once in every three years by the Pickering Lythe and Ryedale Agricultural Society. On a hill at the N. of the town are the ruins of the castle mentioned above, which belonged to the Saxon earl, Morcar, and after the Conquest to the Dacres, John of Gaunt, and other persons of distinction. It was restored in the 14th century, and was visited by Richard III. During the great civil war of Charles I. it was besieged by the parliamentary forces, and was eventually dismantled by the Roundheads. Market day is Monday. Fairs for sheep, &c., are held on the second Monday in every month, and on the Monday prior to the 14th February, 13th May, 25th September, and the 23rd November.

PICKERING LYTHE, a wap. in the North Riding co. York, contains the town of Scarborough, and the pars. of Allerstone, Brompton, Cayton, Ebberston, Ellerburn, Hutton Bushell, Kirkby-Misperton, Levisham, Middleton, Pickering, Scalby, Seamer, Thornton Dale, Wykeham, and parts of Filey and Sinnington, comprising an area of 142,570 acres, and belonging to the Duchy of Lancaster.

PICKHILL, a tnshp. in the par. of Bangor, hund. of Bromfield, co. Denbigh, 4 miles S.E. of Wrexham. It is situated on the river Dee.

PICKHILL, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Carlton-Highdale, par. of Coverham, North Riding co. York, 6 miles S.W. of Leyburn. It is situated in the moors.

PICKHILL, a par. in the waps. of Hallikeld and Allertonshire, North Riding co. York, 6 miles N.W. of Thirsk, its post town, and 2 from the Sinderby station on the North-Eastern line of railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Swale, and is chiefly agricultural. The par. comprises the tnshps. of Holm, Ainderby-Quernhow, How, Sinderby, Pickhill, and Swainby. There are traces of a Saxon camp, and some fields called the Roman fields. The surface is undulating, and the soil consists partly of clay and partly of a sandy loam. The glebe comprises 21 acres in this parish and 13 in Wensley. The impropriation belongs to the Master and Fellows of Trinity College, Cambridge. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £152, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower. The parochial charities produce about £52 per annum. There is a school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. William Rutson, Esq., is lord of the manor.

PICKLEBRIDGE, a station on the Leeds, Bradford, and Halifax Junction railway.

PICKLESCOTT, a tnshp. in the par. of Smethcott, co. Salop, 4 miles N.W. of Church-Stretton.

PICKMERE, a tnshp. in the par. of Great Budworth, hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 3½ miles N.E. of Northwich, and 3 E. of Great Budworth. It is situated on a small feeder of the river Weaver, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is of a clayey nature, upon a subsoil of gravel. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

PICKSTOCK, a tnshp. in the pars. of Chetwynd and Edgmond, co. Salop, 3 miles N.W. of Newport. It is situated on the river Mees, near Pickstock Grange.

PICKTHORN, a tnshp. in the par. of Stottesden, co. Salop, 6 miles S.W. of Bridgnorth.

PICKTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Plemonstall, lower div. of Broxton hund., co. Chester, 4¾ miles N.E. of Chester, and 3 S.W. of Mullington.

PICKTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkleavington, W. div. of Langbaurgh lib., North Riding co. York, 6 miles S.W. of Stokesley, and 4 S.W. of Yarm. It is a station on the North Yorkshire and Cleveland section of the North-Eastern line of railway.

PICK-UP-BANK, a tnshp. in the par. of Whalley, co. Lancaster, 4 miles W. of Haslingden. It is in conjunction with Yate.

PICKWELL, a par. in the hunds. of Gartree and East Goscote, co. Leicester, 6 miles from Oakham, its post town, and 5¾ S.E. of Melton-Mowbray. The village, which is situated on the S. side of the road from Melton to Bedford, is small, and chiefly agricultural. The surface is varied with hill and dale. A large portion of the land is devoted to grazing. The soil consists of clay, with a mixture of gravelly loam, and near the village of a light red earth. Fossils have been found. The par. comprises the hmlt. of Leesthorpe. The glebe comprises about 60 acres of good land. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £512. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a square tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum, bequeathed by Lady Hicks, afterwards Lady Campbell, in 1651. There is a National school, built in 1835. Dr. William Cave, author of "Lives of the Apostles," and chaplain to Charles II., was a native of this parish; born in 1637 and died 1713. The Earl of Gainsborough is lord of the manor.

PICKWICK, a tythg. in the par. of Corsham, co. Wilts, 1 mile N.W. of Corsham.

PICKWORTH, a par. in the wap. of Aveland, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 3 miles W. of Falkingham, its post town, and 8 N. of Corby railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. A large portion of the land is in pasture. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure, with a spired tower containing two bells. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum.

PICKWORTH, a par. in the hund. of East, co. Rutland, 5½ miles N.W. of Stamford, its post town, and 11 N.E. of Oakham. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. Pickworth was once a place of importance, and the seat of the Geneyes, Goodrichs, and other families. A portion of the land is in wood. The soil is principally of an inferior quality. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Great Casterton, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church, dedicated to All Saints, was rebuilt in 1823 on the site of the old one, the steeple of which was used to make Wakerley bridge in 1728. Of the old church only one arch still exists.

PICTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Lanasaph, co. Flint, 5 miles N.W. of Holywell. It contains Glanrafon.

PICTON. See PICKTON, cos. Chester and York.

PICTON CASTLE, the seat of the late Lord Milford, on the river Cleddau, co. Pembroke, 6 miles S.W. of Narberth. It is situated at the head of Milford Haven, and is surrounded by well-wooded grounds, with Castle Lake camp.

PIDDINGHOE, a par. in the hund. of Holmstrow, rape of Lewes, co. Sussex, 6 miles S.E. of Lewes, and 1 mile N. of Newhaven, its post town and railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Ouse or Lewes, near the coast of the English Channel. It is built in a secluded spot, and is wholly agricultural. The neighbourhood abounds in chalk. The impropriate tithes belong to the Earl of Chichester. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £157. The church has a circular tower, crowned with a shingled spire. The register dates from 1540. Lord Sheffield is lord of the manor.

PIDDINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Wymersley, co. Northampton, 5¾ miles S.E. of Northampton, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near Salcey Forest, and is chiefly agricultural. The par. contains the hmlt. of Hackleton, situated on the road from Northampton to London. The soil is a stiff clay. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the making of shoes and lace. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Horton, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower containing five bells. The church, which was erected about 1500, has been recently restored. The parochial charities produce about £27 per annum. There is a National school. The Wesleyans and the Baptists have each a place of worship, the latter is situated at Hackleton. The principal residence is Hackleton Hall, containing a collection of pictures. About 1781, the remains of a Roman building and a tesselated pavement were discovered.

PIDDINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Bullingdon, though locally in that of Ploughley, co. Oxford, 5½ miles S.E. of Bicester, 2½ N.W. of Brill, and 12 N.E. of Oxford. Thame is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated under Muzwell, or Musvill, Hill. It is wholly agricultural, and is subject to occasional floods. The land is divided between arable and pasture. The soil is chiefly of clay. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £173, in the patron. of the parishioners. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient edifice, with a tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is a parochial school for both sexes.

PIDDLEHINTON, a par. and lib. in the Dorchester div. of co. Dorset, 5 miles N.E. of Dorchester. The village, which is small and wholly agricultural, lies in a valley surrounded by the downs, and watered by the small river Piddle, or Trent, which rises at Piddletrenthide, and falls into Poole harbour below Wareham. The rich lands along the river are cultivated in water-meadows and orchards. There are numerous large dairy farms, supplying butter and cheese to the London market, and sheep are extensively fed on the uplands. The manor anciently belonged to a monastery in France, but upon the suppression of alien priories it became escheated to the crown, and was given by Henry VI. to Eton College. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £373, and the glebe comprises 47 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £265, in the patron. of Eton College. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was built about the commencement of the 15th century. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum.

PIDDLE, LITTLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Piddletown, co. Dorset, 6 miles N.E. of Dorchester.

PIDDLE, NORTH, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Pershore, co. Worcester, 7 miles E. of Worcester, its post town, 5 N. by E. of Pershore, and 3 from Spetchley railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Piddle and the road from Worcester to Alcester. The inhabitants are wholly agricultural. The above-mentioned river rises beyond Inkberrow, and flows 12 miles E. and S. to the river Avon, below Wyre Piddle. Land was assigned in 1813 in lieu of tithes. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £140. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient edifice with a wooden lanthern.

PIDDLETOWN, a hund. in the co. of Dorset, contains the pars. of Athelampstone, Burlestone, Piddletown, Tincleton, Tolpuddle, and part of Milborne St. Andrew, comprising an area of 11,430 acres.

PIDDLETOWN, or PUDDLESTOWN, a par. and town in the above hund., co. Dorset, 5 miles N.E. of Dorchester, its post town. The par., which is extensive, is bounded on the N. by the river Piddle, or Trent, and contains Little Piddleton and nine other hmlts. The town, which formerly had a market, contains some good houses and shops. There are remains of an ancient cross near Heedless William's Pond. The road from London to Exeter passes through the parish. The great tithes, belonging to the Earl of Orford, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £908, and the vicarial for one of £520; there are about 12 acres of glebe. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £438. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has an embattled tower. The church was decorated and enlarged in 1505. It contains a figured font, some old effigies, and two brasses of the Martyn family, bearing date 1524. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. There are National and infant schools. The Independents have a place of worship. Cattle fairs are held on Easter Tuesday and on 29th October.

PIDDLETRENTHIDE, a lib. in the Cerne div. of co. Dorset, contains the pars. of Mintern Magna and Piddletrenthide, comprising an area of 7,201 acres.

PIDDLETRENTHIDE, a par. in the above lib., co. Dorset, 8 miles N. by E. of Dorchester, its post town, and 3 E. of Cerne. The village, which is of small extent, is situated at the head of the river Trent, or Piddle, and is chiefly agricultural. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £420, and the vicarial for £88; the glebe comprises 8 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £211, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Winchester. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient edifice, with a lofty embattled tower containing five bells. The register dates from 1650. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum, which goes to Harding's school, which is further supported by the Bridge family. There is also a day and a Sunday school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The Manor House is the principal residence.

PIDLEY-CUM-FENTON, a par. in the hund. of Hurstingstone, co. Huntingdon, 7½ miles N.E. of Huntingdon, its post town, 5½ N. of St. Ives, and 2 N.W. of Somersham. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Fenton, or Penton. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £478. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Somersham, in the dioc. of Ely. The church is dedicated to All Saints. There is a school, partially endowed by Richard Brocklesby in 1713.

PIECOMBE. See PYECOMBE, co. Sussex.

PIEL, or PEEL OF FOULDREY, an islet in the chplry. of Walney, par. of Dalton-in-Furness, co. Lancaster, 5 miles S. by W. of Dalton. It is situated in Morecambe Bay, near Walney Island, and has the remains of an old castle of the Abbots of Furness. Lambert Simnel and his adherents landed here in 1487. There is a line of railway from Piel Pier to Broughton.

PIERCETOWN, or LECKNOW, a par. in the bars. of Lower and Upper Duleek, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S. of Duleek. Slane is its post town. The soil is good, and the road from Duleek to Ratoath passes through the N.W. part of the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Kilmoor, £308, in the patron. of the primate and the crown alternately. The church is in ruins. The chief seat is Snugborough. An abbey is said to have been founded here in the middle of the 8th century.

PIERCETOWN, a par. in the bar. of Rathconrath, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles N. of Ballymore, its post town. It is 4 miles long, and its greatest breadth is over 2 miles. The surface comprises a proportion of bog and middling land. It is drained towards the N. and N.E. by the streams Inny and Blackwater, and is traversed by the road from Ballymore to Rathowen. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Almoricia, £169, in the patron. of the crown. The church is in ruins. Here are a Roman Catholic chapel and two day schools. Ballinacarra is the neighbouring seat. Limestone is the prevailing rock.

PIERRE AU VRACH, a rock near the Passage du Singe, Channel Islands, 2 miles S.W. of Alderney.

PIERRE, ST., a par. in the upper half div. of the hund. of Caldicott, co. Monmouth, 2½ miles S.W. of Chepstow. The village, which contains only a few farmhouses, is situated at the ferry over the Severn to New Passage. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £119, and the glebe comprises about 1 acre. The living is a rect. annexed with that of Sudbrook to the rect.* of Portscuett, in the dioc. of Llandaff. The church, which is an ancient edifice, contains a pillar monument to A. St. Pierre, of St. Pierre House.

PIERRE, ST. See PETER-PORT, ST., Guernsey, Channel Islands.

PIERRE, ST., GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of East Grinstead, co. Surrey, 4 miles N.E. of East Grinstead. It is situated on the river Medway.

PIERSE-BRIDGE, PIERCEBRIDGE, or PRIEST-BRIDGE, a tnshp. in the par. of Gainford, S.W. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, 5 miles N.W. of Darlington. It is a station on the Barnard Castle and South Durham and Lancashire Union branch of the North-Eastern railway. The village is situated on the river Tees, which is here crossed by a stone bridge, said to have been built by two priests, from which circumstance the place derives its name. It occupies the site of the Roman station Magæ, on Watling Street, where many coins and other remains have been discovered. A battle was fought here in 1644, under the Marquis of Newcastle. A chapel was founded at the bridge by King Baliol, of which there are still some remains.

PIERSONS-GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Brenchley, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 6 miles S.E. of Tunbridge.

PIERWALL, or NORTH KIRK, a vil. in the par. of North Orkney Isles, coast of Scotland. It is situated on the N. side of Westray Island.

PIGBURN, a hmlt. in the par. of Brodsworth, N. div. of Strafforth wap., West Riding co. York, 5 miles N.W. of Doncaster. The races occur here in October.

PIGDON, a tnshp. in the par. of Mitford, W. div. of Morpeth ward, co. Northumberland, 3 miles N.W. of Morpeth, and 2 N.W. of Mitford.

PIGHTLESTHORNE, or PIGLESTHORNE. See PITSTONE, co. Bucks.

PIKELEY, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Allerton and par. of Bradford, West Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of Bradford.

PILATE COOL. See COOL PILATE, co. Chester.

PILGWENLLY, a district in the borough of Newport, co. Monmouth, near Newport.

PILHAM-WITH-GILBY, a par. in the wap. of Corringham, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 5 miles N.E. of Gainsborough, its post town, and half a mile from Bilston railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Manchester and Lincolnshire railway, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is in general a cold clay, and a hard blue stone is quarried, The parish was enclosed in 1763, when 150 acres of land and a rent-charge of £12 were assigned in lieu of tithes. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £230. The church is dedicated to All Saints.

PILKINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Oldham-cum-Prestwich, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 5 miles N.W. of Manchester, and 4 S.W. of Bury. It is a populous district, containing the hmlts. of Unsworth, Stand, Outwood, and Whitefield, and the poorhouse for the Salford union. A large portion of the inhabitants are employed in the silk and cotton mills. A free grammar school was founded in 1688 by Henry Siddall, which has an income from land of £50. There are two other endowed schools.

PILL, several rivulets of this name in Ireland. The only one of any note is that which rises near Ballagh Hill, and falls into Bannow Bay on the coast of Wexford. It formed part of the English boundary in Queen Elizabeth's time.

PILLAR FELL, a mountain in the co. of Cumberland, 3 miles N.W. of Westwater. It attains an elevation of near 3,000 feet.

PILLATON, a par. in the middle div. of the hund. of East, co. Cornwall, 4 miles S.E. of Callington, its post town, and 5 N.W. of St. German's. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Lynher, and is wholly agricultural. It is mentioned in Domesday Book as Piletot, and was held at that time by Robert Earl of Mortaigne, from whom it came to the Inkpens, Dillingtons, and Corytons. The parish is bounded on the E. by the river Tamar, which separates it from the county of Devon. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £203. The church is a modern edifice with a square turreted tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains tombs of the Coryton family of Pentilie Castle. There is a National school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school in connection with the church. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Pentilie Castle is the principal residence. A fair for cattle and pleasure is held on Whit-Tuesday.

PILLATON, a lib. in the tnshp. of Penkridge, co. Stafford, 1 mile S.E. of Penkridge.

PILLERTON-HERSEY, a par. in the Brailes div. of Kington hund., co. Warwick, 3 miles S.W. of Kington, its post town, and 10 from Banbury. The village, which is small, is situated to the westward of a lofty range of hills called Edge Hills, where the famous battle was fought. The old Roman Fosse Way intersects the parish. The soil is a mixture of clay and sand upon a substratum of limestone and blue stone. An Enclosure Act was obtained in 1794, under which the tithes have been commuted for land and a money payment. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Pillerton-Priors annexed, in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £120. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice with a square tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum, which is expended in coals to the poor every Christmas. There is a National school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The Rev. H. Mills is lord of the manor.

PILLERTON-PRIORS, a par. in the Brailes div. of Kington hund., co. Warwick, 4 miles W. by S. of Kington. It was formerly a separate parish, but is now in conjunction with that of Pillerton-Hersey, from which it is distant about 1 mile to the S. The road from Banbury to Stratford-on-Avon and also the Roman Fosse Way traverse the parish. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. Pillerton-Priors formerly belonged to Kenilworth Priory, from which circumstance it received the adjunct to its name. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Pillerton-Hersey, in the dioc. of Worcester. The church of St. Mary Magdalene was destroyed by fire in 1666, since which time the inhabitants frequent the church of Pillerton-Hersey. The churchyard contains many tombstones of great antiquity, among which are several to the Gardner family. The parochial charities consist in the interest of £30, the bequest of Thomas Gardner, which is expended in coals for the poor on New Year's Day. The North Warwickshire hounds meet here.

PILLESDON. See PILSDON, co. Dorset.

PILLETH, or PWLL-LLAITH, a par. in the hund. of Cefnllys, co. Radnor, 4 miles N.W. of Presteigne, and the same distance from Knighton. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Lug, where Glendower took Mortimer and many other prisoners in 1482. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £59, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £113, part of which goes to Child's free school.

PILLEY, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Tankersley, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S. of Barnsley.

PILLEY-WITH-WARBORNE, a tythg. in the par. of Boldre, co. Hants, 2 miles N. of Lymington.

PILLING, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Garstang, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 6 miles N.W. of Garstang. Preston is its post town. The township, which is extensive, is situated near Lancaster Bay, and is wholly agricultural. Peat is dug at Pilling Moss, which partly burst in 1745. The village is straggling. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £124. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, was formerly situated at some distance from the village, but was rebuilt in 1731. The present edifice is a commodious structure. There is an endowed National school, founded by Robert Carter in 1710. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

PILL PRIORY, a ruin in the par. of Hubberston, co. Pembroke, at the head of Hubberston Creek. It was founded by Adam de la Roche, and after the Dissolution was given to the Grevilles.

PILL ST. GEORGE, a hmlt. and chplry. in the par. of Easton-in-Gordano, hund. of Portbury, co. Somerset, 5 miles N.W. of Bristol. It is situated on the river Avon, and is the pilot station for the port of Bristol. The modern village is built at a short distance from the Roman station Ad Sabrinam, on the Via Julia, or Fosse Way, which passes through the chapelry. There are places of worship for Independents, Baptists, and Wesleyans.

PILLTOWN, a post and market vil. and small seaport in the par. of Fiddown, in the bar. of Iverk, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 20 miles S.S.W. of Kilkenny, and 108 from Dublin. It is situated on the road from Waterford to Clonmel, at the junction of the small stream Pill with the river Suir. The town consists principally of modern buildings. In the vicinity is the demesne of Besborough, the seat of the Ponsonby family, to whom the place is indebted for many of its improvements. The village contains the parish of Fiddown, a Roman Catholic chapel, market house, and chief police station. There is also a quay and a dockyard. A considerable coasting trade is carried on. The dispensary here is within the Carrick-on-Suir poor-law union. A collection of Irish antiquities is in the possession of Mr. Antony.

PILMOUR, a junction station of the North-Eastern railway, where the Boroughbridge line branches off.

PILNING, a station on the Bristol and South Wales Union section of the Great Western railway, near New Passage Ferry, over the Severn, co. Gloucester.

PILNOUR WATER, a stream of the co. of Kirkcudbright, Scotland. It rises near New Bridge of Dee, and falls into the river Cree.

PILSDON, or PILLESDON, a par. in the hund. of Whitchurch-Canonicorum, co. Dorset, 5 miles S.W. of Beaminster, its post town, and 7 N. of Bridport. The village, which is of small extent and wholly agricultural, is situated on the road from Axminster to Beaminster. At a short distance from the village is Pilsdon Pen Hill, 934 feet in height, with an oval triple-trenched camp, the top of which serves as a landmark. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £68 10*s.*, and the glebe comprises 21 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £104. The church, which is of great antiquity, was almost rebuilt in 1830. There is a parochial school for both sexes.

PILSGATE, a hmlt. in the par. of Barnack, lib. of Nassaburgh, co. Northampton, 1 mile from Barnack, and 2 miles S.E. of Stamford. The tithes have been commuted for corn rents under an Enclosure Act obtained in the 39th year of George III.

PILSLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Edensor, hund. of High Peak, co. Derby, 2 miles N.E. of Bakewell.

PILSLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of North Wingfield, hund. of Scarsdale, co. Derby, 4 miles N. of Alfreton.

PILSLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Chesterfield, hund. of Scarsdale, co. Derby, 6 miles S.E. of Chesterfield.

PILSWORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Middleton, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 2½ miles S.E. of Bury, and 5 W. of Rochdale.

PILTANTON WATER, a stream of the co. of Wigtown, Scotland, rises at Leswalt, and falls into Luce Bay at Glenluce.

PILTON, a par. chiefly in the hund. of Whitstone, but partly in that of Glaston-Twelve-Hides, co. Somerset, 3 miles S.W. of Shepton-Mallet, its post town, and 5 S.E. of Wells. The village, which is irregularly built, is situated on the Fosse Way, and on the turnpike road leading to Glastonbury. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The par. comprises the hmlts. of East and West Compton, Ham, and Westholme, and was a grange to Glastonbury Abbey. This parish is celebrated for its cheese, which is chiefly made in the hamlets of East and West Compton; cider is also made in large quantities, and there is an extensive brewery of long standing. A large portion of the land is in pasture, with some good arable interspersed. There are quarries of good building-stone. The appropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £245, and the vicarial for £185. The glebe comprises 29 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £300, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, or, according to others, to St. John the Baptist, has a square embattled tower containing six bells. Part of it was built in the reign of Edward III., but other portions are of later date. The church has an E. window, and contains a piscina, a carved pulpit with canopy bearing date 1618, and monuments and brasses of great antiquity. The chancel has been recently restored. There is also a district church at North-Wootton, the living of which is a perpet. cur.* with the cur. of Worminster annexed, val. £300, in the patron. of the vicar. There are various charities of small amount. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Bible Christians have each a place of worship. Westholme, Burford, Perridge House, and Springfield House are the principal residences. W. H. P. G. Langton, Esq., is the lord of the manor. A fair is held on the Monday following the 10th September.

PILTON, a par. and town in the hund. of Braunton, co. Devon. It is connected with Barnstaple, its post town, by a bridge over the river Taw 800 feet in length, and by a causeway leading to the village, which is still very considerable, and was formerly a market town, under a charter obtained in 1345. A part of the par., including the hmlt. of Bradiford, is situated within the parliamentary borough of Barnstaple. It had formerly a priory cell to Malmesbury Abbey, founded by King Athelstane, and valued at the Dissolution at £56 12*s.* 8*d., also a hospital, established in the 12th century for a prior and brother, and which is still in existence. The woollen trade and lace manufacture are carried on to a small extent. The parish is intersected by the road from Barnstaple to Ilfracombe, and has river navigation to Bideford Bar. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £105. The church is dedicated to St. Margaret. The interior contains a stone pulpit, screen, and several monuments. The parochial charities produce about £99 per annum, of which £12 goes to St. Margaret's Hospital. There are a National school supported by subscription, and several endowed almshouses. The market and fair have been discontinued.

PILTON, a par. in the hund. of Navisford, co. Northampton, 2¾ miles S.W. of Oundle, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the navigable river Nen, and near the Peterborough railway. It is wholly agricultural. There are some quarries of oölite stone. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £160, and the glebe comprises 3½ acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £160. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower and spire. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum, exclusive of some almshouses.

PILTON, a par. in the hund. of Wrangdike, co. Rutland, 4½ miles N.E. of Uppingham, its post town, and 2 W. of Luffenham railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Chater, and is wholly agricultural. The surface is undulating, and is watered by several small streams, which rise in this parish. The soil is a strong clay, intermixed with limestone, in the southern portion of the parish. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £84 10*s.*, and the glebe comprises 18 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £101. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has a turret containing two bells. The church was thoroughly restored in 1852. The Hon. Gilbert Heathcote is lord of the manor, and sole landowner.

PILTON GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Penrice, co. Glamorgan, 10 miles S.W. of Swansea.

PIMHILL, a hund. in the co. of Salop, contains the divs. of Baschurch and Ellesmere, comprising an area of 59,030 acres.

PIMLICO, a parochial district, formerly a chplry., in the par. of St. George, Hanover-square, borough and city of Westminster, co. Middlesex, 3 miles W. by S. of St. Paul's. It was constituted a separate ecclesiastical district by an order in council in July, 1830. It is bounded on the E. by St. James's and the Green Parks, and belongs to the Grosvenor family. Though of comparatively recent origin, it is one of the finest quarters of the metropolis, and the site of Buckingham Palace, the town residence of her Majesty the Queen; so called, because the palace occupies the site of a house, built in 1703, by John Sheffield, Duke of Buckingham, in the Mulberry Gardens. The palace was rebuilt by Nash, and altered by Barry, in 1849. The entrance is through a triumphal arch, of Italian marble, executed with much skill, and equalling in its dimensions and general effect the arch of Constantine at Rome. Considerable alterations have recently been made in this part of the town, by pulling down Stafford-row, building new stables for the Queen's stud, and widening the road in front. Among the streets and squares, Grosvenor-place, Wilton-crescent, Wilton-place, Eaton-place, Eaton-square, Chester-square, Ebury-square, Eccleston-square, and Belgrave-square, deserve special notice, the last being the largest square in London. Here are situated St. George's Hospital, founded in 1733, and subsequently rebuilt near the Wellington statue, in Grosvenor-place, where are also the Lock Hospital, St. Peter's Grammar-school in Eaton-square, St. Michael's schools, erected in 1848, Ebury proprietary school, Tattersall's well-known betting and auction-rooms in Grosvenor-place, and the police station of the B division of metropolitan police. There are several churches and chapels, including St. Peter's, St. Michael's in Chester-square, and Buckingham Palace chapel; also Belgrave proprietary chapel, in Halkin-street; Charlotte chapel, in Charlotte-street; the Lock chapel, in Grosvenor-place; Eaton chapel and Ebury chapel, near Chelsea; and the College of St. Barnabas, erected in 1849, with chapels and schools attached. Here are also the Grosvenor basin and canal, communicating with the Thames, the banks of which are lined with wharfs for coal, stone, and timber. See articles LONDON and WESTMINSTER.

PIMPERNE, a hund. in the North Blandford div. of the co. of Dorset; contains the pars. of Bryanstone, Durweston, Neville, Fifehead, Hammoon, Haselbury-Bryan, Langton-Long, Blandford, Pimperne, Steepleton-Iwerne, Stourpain, Tarrant-Hinton, Tarrant-Keynston, Tarrant-Launceston, Tarrant-Rawston, and Winterbourne; comprising an area of 25,810 acres.

PIMPERNE, a par. in the above hund., North Blandford div. of the co. of Dorset, 2¼ miles N.E. of Blandford-Forum, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near Pimperne Down, and is wholly agricultural. Here was formerly a large maze, 1 acre in extent, which was destroyed in 1730. Many barrows exist in the neighbourhood. The tithes were commuted for corn-rents under an Enclosure Act in 1809. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £450. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has an enriched Norman doorway and arch. It contains a font of great antiquity. There is a free school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Lord Portman is lord of the manor.

PINCHBECK, a par. in the wap. of Elloe, parts of Holland, co. Lincoln, 2 miles N. of Spalding, its railway station and post town, and 95 from London. The parish, which is of large extent, is situated near the Great Northern railway and the river Welland. The par. includes Digby's Wash, and is intersected by the road from Louth and Boston to London. In the neighbourhood are extensive scratching-mills, which employ a large number of persons. The land is partly in common, with a large portion of fen, which was enclosed under an Act of Parliament at the commencement of the present century. The impropriation belongs to the Master and Fellows of Emanuel College, Cambridge. Land has been allotted to the vicar in lieu of tithes. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £700. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, contains five bells. It was thoroughly restored in 1855. There is also a district church at West Pinchbeck, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £150. The parochial charities produce about £96 per annum, of which £14 goes to Hotchkin's boys', and £13 to Mitchell's girls' schools. The Wesleyans, Independents, Baptists, and Primitive Methodists, have each a place of worship. A coin of Commodus was discovered here in 1742.

PINCHINGTHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Guisborough, E. div. of the lib. of Langbaurgh, North Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of Guisborough, and 5 N.E. of Stokesley. It is a station on the Stockton and Darlington railway. It is a small but increasing village, much of its present prosperity being due to the discovery of ironstone in the neighbouring hills. The soil is a strong clay, and the lands are in good cultivation.

PINDEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Horton-Kirby, hund. of Axton, and lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 3 miles S. of Dartford.

PINDEN OAKS, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Worsbrough, par. of Darfield, West Riding co. York, 2 miles S. of Barnsley. It is situated near the Dearne and Dove branch canal. The inhabitants are engaged in the neighbouring coal and iron-mines.

PINEHAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Whitfield, hund. of Bewsborough, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 3 miles N. of Dover.

PINFOLD, a tythg. in the par. of Sherborne, co. Dorset, 2 miles from Sherborne.

PINHOE, a par. in the hund. of Wonford, co. Devon, 2½ miles N.E. of Exeter, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road from Exeter to Bristol, and is chiefly agricultural. It was burnt by the Danes in 1001, after their victory over Ethelred. There is a prospect from Beacon Hill, on the summit of which are several residences. The soil consists for the most part of clay intermixed with sand. The rectorial tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £235, and the vicarial for one of £265. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £227, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone structure, with an embattled tower containing four bells. The interior of the church contains a carved pulpit and oak screen. In the churchyard is a large cross, resting on a pedestal. The parochial charities produce about £42 per annum. Bishop Conybeare was a native of this parish. Lord Poltimore is lord of the manor.

PINKIE HOUSE, a demesne in the par. of Inveresk, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 1 mile from Musselburgh, and 6 miles E. of Edinburgh. It is situated near the mouth of the river Esk, above the Frith of Forth, and came from the Abbots of Dunfermline to the Setons in the reign of James VI., and now belongs to Sir A. Hope, Bart. It was here that the Duke of Somerset defeated the Scots in 1547.

PINKNEYS GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Bray, co. Berks, 2 miles N.W. of Maidenhead.

PINLEY, or PINDLEY, a tnshp. in the pars. of Clavendon and Rowington, Henley div. of the hund. of Barlichway, co. Warwick, 4 miles E. of Henley-in-Arden, and 4 W. of Warwick. It is situated near Pinley Green, and adjoins the village of Whitley. At a farmhouse in the neighbourhood are the ruins of a Benedictine nunnery, founded by R. de Pilardinton, in the reign of Henry I. Its revenue at the Dissolution was valued at £27 14*s.* 7*d.*

PINNALS, an ext. par. lib. in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 1½ mile N. of Atherstone.

PINNER, a par. and post town in the hund. of Gore, co. Middlesex, 2¾ miles N.W. of Harrow, and 12½ from London. It is a station on the London and Birmingham railway. The village is situated near a feeder of the Colne river, and on the high road to Buckinghamshire. It was formerly part of Harrow, and had a weekly market by grant of Edward III., under the Archbishops of Canterbury, who had a moated seat at Headstone. The land is partly in common, with pasture. The impropriation belongs to the Dean and Canons of Christ Church, Oxford. The living is a perpet. cur.* with the cur. of All Saints annexed, in the dioc. of London, val. £100, in the patron. of the Vicar of Harrow. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a flint structure, erected in 1321. It contains an octangular font, and tombs of lawyers Clitherow and Shower of Pinner Hill. The parochial charities produce about £41 per annum. Miss Howard's college for widows of navy and army officers and clergymen is situated in the village, and is of recent erection. Here is also the commercial travellers' school, founded in 1846, and opened by his late Royal Highness the Prince Consort in 1855. It is entirely supported by voluntary contributions. Pinner Place was formerly the seat of J. Z. Holwell, Governor of Bengal, who died here in 1798, having been one of the survivors confined in the Black Hole of Calcutta.

PINNOCK, ST. a par. in the hund. of West, co. Cornwall, 4 miles S.W. of Liskeard, its post town, and 6 E. of Lostwithiel. The village, which is small and chiefly agricultural, is situated on the great western road from Plymouth to Truro and Falmouth. There is a silver and lead mine at Herotsfoot, which, after having been abandoned for some years, has recently been re-opened. Stone of good quality for building is quarried. The soil is light, and rather barren, resting upon a subsoil of rock. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £285, and the glebe consists of about 30 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £285. The church is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing four bells. There are chapels for Bible Christians and Calvinistic Methodists, also a free school and a Sunday-school, the last in connexion with the church.

PINNOCK-WITH-HYDE, a tnshp. and hmlt. in the par. of Didbrook, lower div. of Kiftsgate hund., co. Gloucester, 4 miles E. of Winchcomb. It was formerly a distinct parish, but has now only three or four farmhouses. The living is a rect. annexed to the vic. of Didbrook, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol. There is no church.

PINVIN, a chplry. in the par. of St. Andrew, upper div. of the hund. of Pershore, co. Worcester, 1½ mile N. of Pershore, its post town, and 4 miles S.W. of Spetchley railway station. It is a station on the Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Avon, and is wholly agricultural. The soil consists principally of clay. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1775. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of St. Andrew, in the dioc. of Worcester. The church is an ancient structure, with a tower containing one bell.

PINXTON, a par. in the hund. of Scarsdale, co. Derby, 3¾ miles S.E. of Alfreton, its post town, and 6 S.W. of Mansfield. It has a station on the Erwash Valley railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated at the conjunction of the Erwash and Cromford canals, near which a considerable village, called New Pinxton, has arisen. There are extensive collieries, also a nail manufactory. The land is chiefly in pasture. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £228, and the glebe comprises 40 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £293. The church, dedicated to St. Helena, has an ancient tower. The interior of the church contains tablets of the Coke family. The church stands on an eminence in the centre of the parish. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a parochial school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have two places of worship. Brook Hill Hall, the principal residence, is situated in the midst of pleasure grounds. D'Ewes Coke, Esq., is lord of the manor.

PIODE, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandebie, co. Carmarthen, 4 miles S. of Llandilofawr.

PIPE-CUM-LYDE, a par. in the hund. of Grimsworth, co. Hereford, 2½ miles N. of Hereford, its post-town, and 1½ mile from the river Lugg. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the turnpike road leading from Hereford to Leominster and Shrewsbury. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The land is partly in hop grounds. The soil is of a clayey and gravelly nature. Stone is quarried for building purposes. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £150, and the vicarial for £240; the appropriate glebe comprises 42 acres. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £260, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient stone structure with a square tower, crowned with a wooden spire, and containing four bells. The interior of the church contains several marble monuments. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a free school, entirely supported by the vicar.

PIPEHILL. a tnshp. in the par. of St. Michael, city of Lichfield, S. div. of the hund. of Offlow, co. Stafford, 2 miles S.W. of Lichfield.

PIPERHALL, a hmlt. in the par. of Kingarth, co. Bute, Scotland, 5 miles S. of Rothesay.

PIPEWELL, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Rothwell, co. Northampton, 6 miles N.W. of Kettering. Here was formerly a Cistercian Abbey, founded in 1143 by William de Boutevylein, which at the Dissolution had a revenue of £347 8*s*.

PIPTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Glasbury, hund. of Talgarth, co. Brecknock, 4 miles S.W. of Hay.

PIRBRIGHT, or PURBRIGHT, a par. in the first div. of Woking hund., co. Surrey, 6 miles N.W. of Guildford, its post town, and 6 S.W. of Woking railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the Basingstoke canal, and on the line of the South Western railway, both of which pass through the parish. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture, with a considerable extent of woodland and common. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £380. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £103. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure, with a small spired tower containing six bells. There is a stained E. window in the chancel, which is of recent erection. There is a parochial school. Henry Halsey, Esq., is lord of the manor.

PIREHILL, NORTH, a hund. in the co. of Stafford, contains the towns of Newcastle-under-Lyme, Hanley, Tunstall, and Lane End, and the pars. of Adbaston, Ashley, Audley, Betley, Biddulph, Bucknall-cum-Bagnall, Burslem, Eccleshall, Keele, Madeley, Maer, Norton-on-the-Moors, High Offley, Standon, Stoke-upon-Trent, Swinnerton, Trentham, Whitmore, Wolstanton and parts of Bartholmley, Drayton-in-Hales, and Muckleston, comprising an area of 115,880 acres, exclusive of Newcastle.

PIREHILL, SOUTH, a hund. in the co. of Stafford, contains the pars. of Barlaston, Blithfield, Abbot's Bromley, Chebsey, Colton, Colwich, Creswell, Ellenhall, Gayton, Ingestrie, Milwich, Routon, Sandon, Seighford, Stone, Stowe, Tixall, Weston-on-Trent, Yarlett, and part of St. Mary and St. Chad, comprising an area of 86,870 acres.

PIRTON, or PERITON, a par. in the hund. of Hitchin, co. Herts, 3½ miles N.W. of Hitchin, its post town and railway station, and 5½ S.W. of Shefford. The village, which is of ancient date, is situated about two miles distant from the London road leading to Bedford, and is chiefly agricultural. It is mentioned as Peritone in Domesday Survey, at which time it was held by Ralph de Limesi, who founded a castle here, which subsequently came to the Odingsels and Clintons. Numerous skeletons, intermixed with urns and fragments of coarse pottery, have been found at Dane's field. The bodies appeared to have been placed regularly, a yard asunder, with the head towards the E. The manufacture of straw-plait is carried on by most of the female population. The tithes were commuted for land and a money payment under an Enclosure Act in 1811; the glebe consists of 154 acres, valued at £200 per annum. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £250. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a tower containing five bells. The original structure was founded by Ralph de Limesi, but it was rebuilt in the 15th century. The chancel of the church is entirely separated from the body of the edifice. The register dates from 1560. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum, besides two poor's cottages. There is a National School for both sexes.

PIRTON, a hund. in the co. of Oxford, contains the pars. of Pirton, Pishill, Shirburn, Stoke-Talmage, Watlington, South Weston, Wheatfield, and part of Ibstone, comprising an area of 14,190 acres.

PIRTON, a par. in the above hund., co. Oxford, 5 miles S.W. of Tetsworth, its post town, and half a mile N.E. of Watlington. It is traversed by the Roman way Icknield Street, and is mentioned in Domesday Book as Peritone, at which time it was held by Hugh Lupus. It comprises the hmlts. of Clare, Golder, Portways, Standhill, Upper Assendon, and Christmas Common. The village, which is extensive, is chiefly agricultural. A large portion of the land is heathy. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £238, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a square wooden tower containing five bells. The interior contains some old monuments. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum, realised from poor's land. There are almshouses for four men and six women, founded and endowed by Sir Francis Stonor in 1820. The manor house, which is still the principal residence, was once the residence of the famous John Hampden. There is an ancient Roman Catholic chapel at Assendon in good preservation. The Earl of Macclesfield, and Hugh Hamersley, Esq., are lords of the manor.

PIRTON, a par. in the upper div. of the hund. of Pershore, co. Worcester, 5 miles S.E. of Worcester, its post town, 5 N.W. of Pershore, and 1 mile from Wadborough railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated in a valley, and is entirely agricultural. The Birmingham and Gloucester railway passes through the parish. The surface is hilly, and the soil a stone brash. Under an Enclosure Act, obtained in 1763, the tithes were commuted for 142 acres of land. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Croome d'Abitot, in the dioc. of Worcester. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. There is a free school, which is entirely supported by the Earl of Coventry, who is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

PIRTON-WITH-TRESCOTT, a prebend in the par. of Tettenhall-Regis, N. div. of Seisdon hund., co. Stafford, 4 miles S.W. of Wolverhampton.

PISFORD, or PITSFORD, a par. in the hund. of Spelhoe, co. Northampton, 5 miles N. of Northampton, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the brow of a hill, near Pisford Bridge. The surface is gently undulating, and the soil a strong red mould. A peculiar kind of white sand and limestone abounds. The par. is watered by numerous springs, and includes the hmlt. of Moulton Grange. The road from Northampton to Harborough intersects the parish. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The tithes have been commuted for 200 acres of glebe, valued at £300 per annum. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £379. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a rich Norman doorway. It contains a font of great antiquity. The living was formerly held by the father of Bishop Skinner, who was born here. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a National school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. There is a tumulus near the London road, called Longman's or Lyman's Hill; also a small ancient encampment, called Borough Dykes. Captain Richard Howard Vyse is lord of the manor.

PISHILL, or CUSS-HILL, a par. in the hund. of Pirton, co. Oxford, 6 miles N.W. of Henley-on-Thames, and 5 from Watlington. The village, which is of small extent, is situated under the Chiltern hills, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Oxford. The church is situated on an eminence, and contains tombs of the Stonors of Stonor Park. There is a free school at Assendon, erected at the expense of Lord Camoys, who is lord of the manor and sole landowner. Stonor Park, the mansion of Lord Camoys, is situated on an eminence, with a prospect of the surrounding country. The park is well wooded, and abounds in deer. There are almshouses founded by Sir F. Stonner.

PISTILL, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Dinlaen, co. Carnarvon, 5 miles N.W. of Pwllheli, its post town, and 19 from Carnarvon. It is situated on Carnarvon Bay, under Rivel mountain and Vortigern's grave. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Edern, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church is an ancient structure. There is a place of worship for Dissenters.

PISTILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandebie, co. Carmarthen, 4 miles S. of Llandilofawr.

PISTILL-MAUR, a fall of the river Clydach, co. Brecon, near Llangattock.

PISTILL-RHAIADR, a fall of the river Rhaiadr, co. Denbigh.

PISTILL-Y-CAYNE AND PISTILL-Y-MAWD-

DACH, falls of the river Mawddach, about 5 miles N. of Dolgelly, co. Merioneth.

PITCAIRN, or PITCAIRNGREEN, a vil. in the par. of Redgorton, co. Perth, Scotland, 4½ miles N.W. of Perth. It is situated on the river Almond. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the bleaching-works of Pitcairnfield.

PITCAIRN, NEW, a vil. in the par. of Dunning, co. Perth, Scotland, half a mile S. of Dunning. It was formerly a parish, and has Pitcairn House, the seat of the Pitcairns.

PITCAITHLY, a hmlt. in the par. of Dunbarney, co. Perth, Scotland, 5 miles S. of Perth. It is near Bridge of Earn, much celebrated for its mineral springs.

PITCAPLE, a station on the Great North of Scotland railway, about 1 mile from Inveramsey, co. Aberdeen, Scotland.

PITCHCOMBE, a par. in the middle div. of Dudstone hund., co. Gloucester, 2 miles S.W. of Stroud, its railway station and post town, and 1½ mile S.W. of Painswick. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the high road from Stroud, which here branches off in one direction to Cheltenham, and in another to Gloucester. The soil is of a loamy nature, with a stony subsoil. The surface is hilly, and the land nearly evenly divided between arable and pasture. The rectorial tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £48, and the impropriate tithes for £5. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Harescomb, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol. The church is a modern edifice, with a tower containing one bell. It was rebuilt in 1819 on the site of the old one, erected in 1327, at a short distance from the village. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. The Independents have a place of worship.

PITCHCOTT, a par. in the hund. of Ashendon, co. Bucks, 7 miles N.W. of Aylesbury, its post town, and 2 W. of Whitchurch. The village, which consists of a few farmhouses, is situated on rising ground, commanding extensive views of the surrounding country. There is a mineral spring in the neighbourhood, also remains of an ancient castle. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £310. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, has a square tower containing three bells.

PITCHFORD, a par. in the hund. of Condover, co. Salop, 5½ miles S.E. of Shrewsbury, its post town, and 1½ mile S.E. of the Condover railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Reagbrook, a branch of the river Severn, and on the road from Shrewsbury to Acton-Burnell. It is a petty sessions town. On the surface of a well near the village petroleum is obtained, from which circumstance the village takes its name, the oil having a strong pitchy smell. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £206. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure of rustic appearance. It contains four alabaster monuments of the Otley family; also the effigies of a Knight Templar, carved in oak, and supposed to represent Baron de Pitchford, a crusader, who was interred here. The mansion of Pitchford, for many centuries the residence of the Otleys, from whom it descended to the late Earl of Liverpool, is one of the best specimens remaining of the black and white timbered houses.

PITCHLEY, or PYTCHLEY, a par. in the hund. of Orlingbury, co. Northampton, 3 miles S.W. of Kettering, its post town, and 5 N.W. of Wellingborough. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural, but some of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of shoes, and others in that of lace. The surface is watered by several brooks, which fall into a branch of the river Nene. The soil is fertile, resting upon a substratum of limestone, which is quarried for building and burning into lime. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £99, in the patron. of the Bishop of Lichfield. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient edifice, with an embattled tower containing a clock and five bells. The parochial charities produce about £27 per annum, of which £23 goes to Aylworth's free school. A Sunday-school is held at the church. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. There are two agricultural societies, distinguished as the Horticultural and the Provident Benefit Societies. Pitchley Hall, now a ruin, was formerly the seat of the Knightleys, and was held by the Pytchley Hunt, which has removed to Brixworth. Lewis Lloyd, Esq., of Overstone, in Northamptonshire, is lord of the manor.

PITCOMBE, a par. in the hund. of Bruton, co. Somerset, 1½ mile S.W. of Bruton, its post town and railway station, on the Wilts, Somerset, and Weymouth line, and 5 miles from Wincanton. The village, which is of small extent, is situated between sloping hills, from which circumstance it takes its name. The parish is traversed by the Dorset Central railway, also by a branch of the river Brue, and by the road from Bruton to Castle Cary. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The surface forms gently sloping hills, intersected with coombs or hollows. The soil is of a sandy nature, but in the more elevated parts it consists of a stone brash with a subsoil of white rock. The par. comprises the hmlts. of Cole, Discove, and Hadspen. In the neighbouring meadows the banks of the fishponds formerly belonging to Glastonbury Abbey may be traced. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £85. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, has a tower at the W. end containing three bells. It was rebuilt, with the exception of its tower, in 1858. In the churchyard is an ancient stone cross. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held.

PITCOX, a vil. in the par. of Stenton, co. Haddington, Scotland, 4 miles S.E. of Dunbar.

PITFIRRAN, the seat of the Halkets, co. Fife, Scotland, 2 miles W. by S. of Dunfermline.

PITFOLD, a tythg. in the par. of Frensham, hund. of Farnham, co. Surrey, 2½ miles S.E. of Frensham, and 3 W. of Haslemere. It is situated near Hindhead Common, and is joined with Charl or Churl to form a tything. There is a paper mill, and a chapel-of-ease has been recently erected.

PITLESSIE, a vil. in the par. of Cults, co. Fife, Scotland, 3 miles S.W. of Cupar, and 2 N.E. of Kettle. It is situated on the road from Cupar to Kircaldy, at a short distance from the right bank of the river Eden. There are a Free church, United Presbyterian church, parochial school, Free Church school, and a library of recent formation designated the Wilkie Library. Fairs are held on the second Tuesday in May and the third Wednesday in October (old style).

PITLOCHRY, a vil. in the par. of Moulin, co. Perth, Scotland, 1 mile S. of Moulin, and 12 miles N.W. of Dunkeld. It is a station on the Inverness and Perth and Aberdeen Junction railway. It is situated on the river Tumel, and on the road from Perth to Inverness. The village contains several shops, mills, two banks, and other institutions. Fairs for sheep are held on the Friday after the second Wednesday in August, and for cattle and horses on the Saturday prior to the first Wednesday in May, and on the third Wednesday in October (old style).

PITMIDDIE, a vil. in the par. of Kinnaird, co. Perth, Scotland, 8 miles N.E. of Perth. It is situated in the Carse of Gowrie.

PITMINSTER, a par. in the hund. of Taunton, co. Somerset, 4 miles N.W. of Taunton, its post town and railway station. The village, which is of large extent, is situated on the road from Taunton to Honiton, under Black Down Hill. The soil is of a loamy nature, and there are extensive quarries of flint used for building. The par. comprises Blogdon, Leigh, and four other tythings. There are a tannery and two maltings in the parish. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £300, and the vicarial for £535. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £550. The church, dedicated to SS. Andrew and Mary, is a stone structure of the 15th century, with a spired tower containing five bells. The church contains monuments to the Collis family. The register dates from 1541. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. The Independents have a place of worship. The neighbourhood is studded with residences. Robert Mattock, Esq., is lord of the manor. At Blogdon, in this parish, a fair for cattle is held in the last week in August.

PITMUDIE, a hmlt. in the par. of Lentrathen, co. Forfar, Scotland, 6 miles N.W. of Kerriemuir.

PITNAPIES, a vil. in the par. of Newtyle, co. Forfar, Scotland.

PITNEY, a hund. in the co. of Somerset, contains the pars. of Langport-Eastover, Muchelney, and Pitney, comprising an area of 3,690 acres.

PITNEY, a par. in the above hund., co. Somerset, 2½ miles E. of Langport, its post town and railway station, and 3 W. of Somerton. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the high road from Castle Cary to Wells, near the river Parret. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is of a clayey nature, with a subsoil of limestone. The foundations of a Roman villa have been discovered in the neighbourhood, covering about 1½ acre of ground, and the remains of the mosaics show its former splendour. White and blue lias stone are quarried for building purposes and for pavements. The tithes were commuted for corn-rents under an Enclosure Act in 1807, and the glebe comprises 15 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £180. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient stone edifice, with a tower containing four bells. The church contains an hour-glass stand, formerly used by the Puritans, also an ancient holy-water stoop, used by the Roman Catholics. The register dates from 1623. There is a small National school. The Duke of Devonshire and W. Uttermare, Esq., are lords of the manor.

PITRODIE, a vil. in the par. of Kilspindie, co. Perth, Scotland, 6 miles N.E. of Perth. It is situated near a glen where Wallace concealed himself.

PITSCOTTIE, a vil. in the par. of Ceres, co. Fife, Scotland, 2 miles S.E. of Cupar.

PITSEA, a par. in the hund. of Barstable, co. Essex, 6 miles S.E. of Billericay, and 4 S.W. of Rayleigh, its post town. It is a station on the London, Tilbury, and Southend railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near a creek of the Thames, and is chiefly agricultural. It is of ancient date, and belonged at the Conquest to Ulueva, the wife of Phin. The river winds round the southern extremity of the parish, so as to form a small peninsula. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £420. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a tiled roof, and a tower surmounted by a shingled spire containing three bells.

PITSFORD. See PISFORD, co. Northampton.

PITSLIGO, a par. in the district of Buchan, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 4 miles W. of Fraserburgh. It comprises the post-office station of its own name, also the vil. of Rosehearty, under the fishing stations of Pitullie and Sandhaven. It extends in length about 4 miles from E. to W., with an extreme breadth of 2½ miles. It is bounded by the Moray Frith, and by the pars. of Fraserburgh, Tyrie, and Aberdour. The surface is moderately flat, the greatest altitude occurring near the centre of the parish, where it rises 300 feet above sea level. The land is in general fertile. The parish is traversed by the road from Fraserburgh to Banff. It is situated on the Moray Frith, and formed part of Aberdour till 1634. On the coast are the ruins of Pitsligo castle, once the residence of the lords of Pitsligo; also the ruins of Pitullie castle, built by the Saltouns, from whom it eventually passed to the Comyns, who enlarged it. Danish cairns also exist, 60 feet in diameter at base and 30 in height. This par. is in the presb. of Deer, and synod of Aberdeen, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £191. The parish church was erected in 1836. There is a Free church, and at Rosehearty is an United Presbyterian church. There are parochial and several other schools.

PITSLIGO, NEW, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of Tyrie, district of Buchan, co. Aberdeen. It extends in length about 6 miles, with an extreme breadth of 5 miles. It was separated from Tyre in 1729, enlarged in 1835, and reconstituted by the court of teinds in 1853. The town of New Pitsligo is about 6 miles N. of New Deer, and 11 S.W. of Fraserburgh. It is situated on the declivity of Tirlundie Hill, and consists of two main streets, one of which is a mile in length. There are a branch office of the Union Bank, a savings-bank, gasworks, and a public library. The church has a belfry, erected in 1853. There are a Scottish Episcopalian chapel, a Free Church preaching station, and three public schools. Fairs are held in February, May, August, and October.

PITSMOOR, a hmlt. in the par. of Sheffield, wap. of Strafforth and Tickhill, West Riding co. York, 1 mile from Sheffield, of which it is a suburb. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £300, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church is a modern structure.

PITSTONE, or PIGHTLESTHORNE, a par. in the hund. of Cottesloe, co. Bucks, 1 mile S. of Ivinghoe, and 9 miles from Aylesbury. Tring is its post town. The village, which is considerable, is situated near the Aylesbury branch of the Grand Junction canal, and on the line of the North-Western railway. The par. extends 7 miles in length, but its breadth does not exceed 1 mile. It comprises the hmlts. of Friesden and Nettleden. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The land is partly in common, but the greater portion of it has been recently enclosed. The surface is undulating and well wooded. The soil is clay, but of various quality. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £66. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower containing three bells. There is also a district church at Nettleden, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £58. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum. There are an evening and a straw-plaiting school, also a Sunday-school. Ashbridge House is the principal residence; it was erected in 1832 on the site of the old college of Bonhommes, at which Edward I. held a parliament. Earl Brownlow is lord of the manor.

PITT, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Tiverton, co. Devon, near Tiverton.

PITT and PITTACRE, hmlts. in the par. of Old Cleeve, co. Somerset, 2 miles S.W. of Watchet.

PITTENCRIEF, a vil. in the par. of Dunfermline, co. Fife, Scotland, 1 mile from Dunfermline, of which it is a suburb.

PITTENWEEM, a par., seaport, royal and parliamentary burgh, in the district of St. Andrew's, co. Fife, Scotland, 1 mile W. by S. of Anstruther, and 10 miles S. by E. of St. Andrew's. It is situated on the S.E. coast of Fifeshire along the northern shore of the Frith of Forth, and adjoins the pars. of Abercrombie, Carnbee, and Anstruther-Wester. It extends in length from W. to E. to about 1½ mile, by a breadth of half a mile. Its surface is level and fertile, with underlying rocks of the carboniferous formation, comprising chiefly mountain limestone and workable seams of coal. The town, which arose under shelter of the priory founded here in the 12th century, as a cell to the abbey of St. Andrew's, was for many years a burgh of barony, holding of its priors, but in 1542 it was constituted a royal burgh, and it afterwards received several charters, all of which were confirmed by Act of Parliament in 1633. It stands on the road from Elie to Crail, close to the sea-shore, and is a station on the Leven and East of Fife branch of the North British railway. It contained in 1851 a population of 1,473, with 268 houses, which had increased in 1861 to 1,671 persons inhabiting 281 houses. The bounds of the royal and parliamentary burghs are coextensive; the former is governed by a provost, 2 bailies, a treasurer, and 7 common councillors, and the latter returns one member to parliament, in conjunction with the two Anstruthers, Crail, Cupar, Kilrenny, and St. Andrew's. The corporation revenue is about £1,000, and the constituency in 1856 was 46. The town consists chiefly of three streets, fronting the harbour, and running E. and W., and several intersecting lanes. The streets, both in the old and new parts of the town, contain many well-built houses and shops, and are well paved and lighted with gas. There are several grain mills, and formerly no fewer than 30 breweries; but these latter are now entirely removed. The principal public buildings are the townhall, with a small prison attached, the churches mentioned below, and a branch office of the Western Bank of Scotland. The harbour, which consists of an outer harbour and an inner basin, is a creek of the port of Kirkcaldy. It has a number of sloops, schooners, and fishing vessels belonging to it, and does a good export trade in potatoes and grain, though the export of coal has for some years been abandoned. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the extensive fisheries of the coast, the average value of herrings caught annually being £12,000, and of white fish £3,500. The par. is in the presb. of St. Andrew's and synod of Fife. The minister's stipend is £166. The parish church, situated in the middle of the High-street, is an ancient structure, supposed to have belonged to the priory of Canons Regular founded in the 12th century. The priory buildings, portions of which are still standing, formerly communicated, by a subterranean passage, with a large cave, in which is a well of fresh water close to the sea-beach; this passage is now closed up, but the cave still exists. There are besides an United Presbyterian church, an Episcopalian chapel, and four non-parochial schools.

PITTHEVELISS, a hmlt. in the par. of East Church, co. Perth, Scotland, half a mile from Perth, within which city it is included.

PITTINGTON, or PITTINGTON HALLGARTH, a par. in the S. div. of Easington ward, co. Durham, 4 miles N.E. of Durham, its post town. It is a station on the North-Eastern railway. It is situated on the river Wear, and contains the tnshp. of Sherburn, and the vils. of Hetton-on-the-Hill, Hallgarth, and Littletown. There are limestone quarries, also numerous rich collieries belonging to the Marchioness of Londonderry, and others to the Earl of Durham, which are the means of employing a large number of the inhabitants. In the neighbourhood are the ruins of a house, which formerly belonged to the priors of Durham. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £620, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing three bells. It was restored in 1855, and had formerly two chantries in honour of SS. Mary and Katherine. In the churchyard are a Saxon cross, and the effigies of a cross-legged knight. There is also a district church at Shadforth, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £420. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a National school, erected and endowed by the Marchioness of Londonderry. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. A literary institute was established here in 1848.

PITTLEWORTH, a chplry. in the par. of Broughton, co. Hants, 3 miles S.W. of Stockbridge. There was formerly a chapel, now in ruins.

PITTON, a chplry. and tnshp. in the par. and hund. of Alderbury, co. Wilts, 3 miles N.E. of Salisbury, its post town. The township, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The living is a cur., annexed to the vic.* of Alderbury, in the dioc. of Sarum. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure. The charities consist of Fox's hospital, founded in 1688 for 12 persons, and for teaching 20 children. There is a National school.

PITTS, a hmlt. in the par. of Bishopstone, co. Wilts, 4 miles S.W. of Salisbury.

PITULLIE, a vil. in the par. of Pitsligo, district of Buchan, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 3 miles W. of Fraserburgh, and 2 E. of Rosehearty. It has a good harbour, and on the coast are ruins of the old seat of the Saltouns and Comyns. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the fisheries.

PIXLEY, a par. in the hund. of Radlow, co. Hereford, 4 miles N.W. of Ledbury, its post town. The parish is inconsiderable and wholly agricultural. The land is partly in hop grounds. The surface is generally level, and the soil a stiff clay. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £122, and the glebe comprises 7 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £102. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. The parochial charities amount to about £1 a-year.

PLADDA, an island in the Frith of Clyde, co. Bute, Scotland, three-quarters of a mile S. of Arran. It is chiefly trap rock and mountain limestone, and has on it two lighthouses, put up in 1790, the one with a fixed light visible for 16 miles, and the other for 13 miles.

PLAIDY, a station on the Banff, Macduff, and Turriff branch of the Great North of Scotland railway, 5 miles from Turriff.

PLAINMELLOR, a tnshp. in the par. of Haltwhistle, W. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 2 miles S.E. of Haltwhistle. The tnshp. is large, containing the hmlt. of Ramshaw. The village is situated under Plainmellor Fell, at the bridge over the river South Tyne, which bounds the township on the N. It is wholly agricultural. Unthank Hall is the principal residence. D. Dixon, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

PLAISTOW, or PLASTOW, a ward in the par. of West Ham, hund. of Becontree, co. Essex, 4½ miles N.E. of Whitechapel church, London. It is a station on the London and Tilbury railway, and the Great Eastern has a station on the Barking road, being a branch line to North Woolwich. Plaistow is a suburb of London, and became an ecclesiastical district in 1844. The ward is bounded on the S. by the Thames, and on the W. by Bow Creek. There is an iron bridge constructed over the river Lea in 1810, at which foot passengers pay a halfpenny toll. In the vicinity of Plaistow Marsh are the Victoria Docks, covering an area of 100 acres, with an entrance lock, 325 feet in length by 80 in breadth, and capable of accommodating ships of great burthen. There is also a branch of her Majesty's customhouse, the Victoria Dock Company transacting their business within the same building. About a third of the land is occupied by houses and gardens, and the remainder is chiefly marshy pasture. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of London, val. £300, in the patron. of the Vicar of West Ham. The church was erected in 1830 at an outlay of £4,800, towards which the Parliamentary Commissioners contributed £2,300. There are National and British schools for children of both sexes, and for infants. The Independents and Society of Friends have places of worship. There are also a temporary iron church and National schools.

PLAISTOW, or PLASTOW, a hmlt. in the par. of Kirdford, hund. of Rotherbridge, rape of Arundel, co. Sussex, 3 miles N. of Kirdford, and 5 N.E. of Petworth. The village, which is of large extent, is situated near the Arun and Wye canal. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic.* of Kirdford, in the dioc. of Chichester. The church is an ancient edifice.

PLAITFORD, a par. in the hund. of Alderbury, co. Wilts, 6 miles W. of Romsey, its post town, and 11 S.E. of Salisbury. The village, which is small and straggling, is situated near the northern frontier of the New Forest, on the road from Salisbury to Southampton. It is wholly agricultural. The land is partly in common and heath. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £170, and there are 4 acres of glebe. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the rect. of West Grimstead, in the dioc. of Sarum. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There is a National school. A little to the N.W. of the church is a square enclosure moated round, where a monastery is said to have stood.

PLARDWICK, a hmlt. in the par. of Gnosall, co. Stafford, 6 miles W. of Stafford.

PLAS, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangwyfan, co. Denbigh, 4 miles E. of Denbigh.

PLAS, a tnshp. in the par. of Nantglyn, co. Denbigh, 4 miles S.W. of Denbigh.

PLAS, a prefix to the names of various ancient seats, castles, and camps in all parts of Wales.

PLASHETTS AND TYNEHEAD, a tnshp. in the par. of Falstone, N.W. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 10 miles N.W. of Bellingham. At Plashetts is a station, on the Border Counties branch of the North British railway. The township, which is extensive, is situated on the river North Tyne. The surface is of a hilly nature, abounding in game. The houses are much scattered, and the inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the collieries. The township extends to the border of Scotland. The Duke of Northumberland is lord of the manor.

PLASTOW. See PLAISTOW, cos. Essex and Sussex.

PLATT, a chplry. in the par. and hund. of Wrotham, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 5 miles N.E. of Sevenoaks, its post town. It is situated under the chalk hills, near the line of the London and South Eastern railway. The land is partly in hop grounds. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £400, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. A National school for both sexes was erected here in 1845.

PLATT-BRIDGE, a station on the Manchester and Wigan section of the London and North Western railway, about 1½ mile from Wigan.

PLAWSKETTS. See PLASHETTS, co. Northumberland.

PLAWSWORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Chester-le-street, middle div. of Chester ward, co. Durham, 2⅔ miles S. of Chester-le-Street, and 3½ N. of Durham. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Durham and Newcastle road. The tnshp. includes the hmlt. of Nettleworth, at which place is a coal mine. The Methodists of the New Connexion have a place of worship, with a Sunday-school adjoining. South Hill is the principal residence.

PLAXTOL, a chplry. in the par. and hund. of Wrotham, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 4 miles E. of Sevenoaks, its post town, 6 N. of Tunbridge, and 5 S.W. of Wrotham. It is situated under the chalk hills, near the line of the South Eastern railway. The living is a perpet. cur.,* val. £400, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is an ancient edifice.

PLAYDEN, a par. in the hund. of Goldspur, rape of Hastings, co. Sussex, three-quarters of a mile N. of Rye, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated at the confluence of the military canal, with the river Rother, and is included within the parliamentary borough of Rye. It had anciently a cell to Westminster Abbey, called St. Bartholomew's hospital. A portion of the land is in hop grounds. The surface is varied with hill and dale, and from the village, which appears once to have been more extensive than at present, a view is commanded of the sea and the surrounding country. The living is a rect. annexed to that of East Guildford, in the dioc. of Chichester. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is situated on Playden-height, with a central tower between the nave and chancel, surmounted by a lofty shingled spire, which serves as a landmark at sea. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum.

PLAYFORD, a par. in the hund. of Carlford, co. Suffolk, 5 miles N.E. of Ipswich, its post town, and 4 S.W. of Woodbridge. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Deben, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is of a productive nature. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £79. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower containing three bells. The church contains a brass of Sir J. Felbrigg, bearing date 1400. In the churchyard is an obelisk, erected in 1857 to Mr. Clarkson, the strenuous and successful opposer of the slave trade. There are day and Sunday schools. Playford Hall, the principal residence, is an ancient moated mansion. The Marquis of Bristol is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

PLEALEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Pontesbury, co. Salop, 5 miles S.W. of Shrewsbury. At Plealey Road is a station on the Shrewsbury and Minsterley branch of the London and North-Western railway.

PLEAN, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of St. Ninian's, co. Stirling, Scotland, 5 miles S.E. of Sterling.

PLEAN MUIR, a vil. in the par. of St. Ninian's, co. Stirling, 4 miles S. by E. of Stirling. It is situated near the "Links of Forth," and has an extensive colliery.

PLEASINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Blackburn, lower div. of the hund. of Blackburn, co. Lancaster, 2½ miles S.W. of Blackburn. It is a station on the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. The village, which is of small extent and irregularly built, is situated on a height. The inhabitants are wholly engaged in agriculture. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, called Pleasington Priory, and dedicated to SS. Mary and John; it was erected at an outlay of £20,000, defrayed by the late John Francis Butler, Esq., and was opened in 1819. There is an endowed free school. Pleasington Hall and Feniscowles Hall are the principal residences. J. B. Bowden, Esq., is lord of the manor.

PLEASLEY, a par. and tnshp. in the hund. of Scarsdale, co. Derby, 3 miles N.W. of Mansfield, its post town, and 9 S.E. of Chesterfield. It is situated on the road from Nottingham to Chesterfield, and on the river Meden. The land is chiefly arable, but there are 300 acres of woodland and plantation. The soil is good, upon a substratum of limestone. The par. comprises the vils. of Stoney Houghton, and Shirebrook. The village, which appears once to have been of more importance than at present, is a decayed market town, the cross still standing, and has a mechanics' institute and library. There are two extensive cotton mills at Pleasley Vale, which employ a large number of hands. In the park adjoining the cotton-mills is a large enclosure, with a double vallum and entrenchment, two sides of which are secured by natural precipices, and is evidently a Saxon work. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £493. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone edifice, with a cracked tower, caused by the shock of an earthquake, which was felt over a great part of the midland counties on 17th March, 1816. In the churchyard is a yewtree of great antiquity. There is also a district church at Shirebrook, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £90. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. There is a village school for both sexes; also a Sunday-school. The Methodists meet in the Sunday-school. Fairs are held on the 6th May and 29th October.

PLEASLEY HILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Mansfield, N. div. of Broxtow wap., co. Nottingham. It is situated near the Mansfield cotton-works, and has on it a double-ditched camp.

PLEBERSTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Gowran, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S.E. of Thomastown. It is about 1½ mile in length, and the same in breadth. The surface, which lies along the river Nore, consists of a very fair soil. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Ossory, united to the benefice of Burnchurch, joint val. £700, in the patron. of the crown. Coolmore House is the chief seat.

PLEDGDON, a hmlt. in the par. of Henham, hund. of Clavering, co. Essex, 1⅔ mile S.E. of Henham, 3 miles E. by N. of Stansted-Mount Fitchet, and 6 N.E. of Bishop Stortford. It is situated on rising ground, and was a village in Edward the Confessor's time.

PLEDWICK, a hmlt. in the par. of Sandall Magna, West Riding co. York, 2 miles S.E. of Wakefield.

PLEMONSTALL, or PLEMSTALL, a par. in the lower div. of the hund. of Broxton, co. Chester, 4 miles N.E. of Chester, its post town. It is situated on a branch of the river Mersey, and contains the tnshps. of Hoole, Mickle Trafford, Bridge Trafford, and Pickton. During the siege of Chester in the parliamentary war of the 17th century, Trafford was held for the king by Sir William Brereton. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £360, and the glebe comprises 23½ acres. The living is a don. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £389. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, the tower of which was rebuilt in 1826. The church stands in the township of Mickle Trafford. There is a National school for both sexes.

PLENDERLEITH, an ancient par. in the co. of Roxburgh, Scotland, now joined to Oxnam.

PLESHEY, or PLAISY, a par. in the hund. of Dunmow, co. Essex, 7 miles N.W. of Chelmsford, its post town, and 7 S.E. of Dunmow. It is situated on a branch of the river Chelmer, and has traces of a Roman camp 1 mile in circumference. The village, which consists principally of one long street, is surrounded by an entrenchment, in which are also the ruins of the castle of the high constables of England, who resided here from the first institution of their office till nearly four centuries after the Norman conquest. Among the eminent persons who held the castle were William de Magnaville, the Bohuns, Thomas Duke of Gloucester, Sir J. Gates, &c. The only remains of the castle now existing are the foundations of the oval keep, 890 feet in circumference, and the bridge, of singular construction, across the moat. The great Duke of Gloucester was arrested here in 1397 by Richard II., and murdered at Calais. Holland, Duke of Exeter, was also taken here, and beheaded by the populace in 1400. Many antiquities have been found within and around the ruins. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil consists of a chalky clay, intermixed with flints and chalk fossils. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £95. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, was rebuilt by Bishop Compton in 1708. About forty years later, a chancel was erected by Samuel Tufnell, Esq., who also restored the ancient tower. There are some ancient tombs, and several monuments to the Tufnell family. The original structure was a cruciform building, which, together with the college for priests, was founded by Thomas of Woodstock, Duke of Gloucester, sixth son of Edward III., in 1393. All that now remains are the old tombs and the Roman bricks in the tower. The revenue of the college at the Dissolution was estimated at £143 12*s.* 7*d.* The register dates from 1656. The charities consist of church lands, producing about £9 per annum. The manor belongs to the Duchy of Lancaster.

PLESSEY-WITH-SHOTTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Stannington, co. Northumberland, 9 miles N. of Newcastle, and 6 S. by E. of Morpeth. It is a station on the North-Eastern railway.

PLINLYMMON, a mountain ridge on the border of cos. Cardigan and Montgomery, 8 miles S.E. of Machynlleth, and 9 N.W. of Llanidloes. It is a barren slaty ridge, 2,463 feet high, commanding a broken view over St. George's Channel, Cader Idris, and part of Herefordshire. Properly speaking, it consists of three summits, forming the centre of a large group of mountains spreading into subordinate chains. From near the summit spring the five rivers of the Rheidiol, the Llyffnant, a tributary of the Dyfi, the Wye, the Ystwith, and the Severn, which last has its source at "the Well." The best ascent is from Dyffryn Castell, on the Rhayader and Aberystwith road, but it should not be attempted without a guide, on account of the dangerous bogs that exist. Copper is obtained at Bryntaigh.

PLOCTON, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of Lochalsh, cos. Ross and Cromarty, Scotland, 5 miles S. of Strome Castle. There are a government and a Free church.

PLOMESGATE, a hund. in the co. of Suffolk, contains the pars. of Aldeburgh, Benhall, Blaxhall, Bruisyard, Chillesford, Cransford, Earnham, Friston, Great Glemham, Little Glemham, Hazlewood, Iken, Orford, Parham, Rendham, Saxmundham, Snape, Sternfield, Stratford St. Andrew, Sudbourne, Swefling, Tunstall, and Wantisden; comprising an area of 41,390 acres.

PLOUGHLEY, a hund. in the co. of Oxford, contains the pars. of Ardley, Bicester, Bletchingdon, Bucknell, Charlton-on-Otmoor, Chesterton, Cottesford, Finmere, Fringford, Fritwell, Goddington, Hampton-Gay, Hampton-Poyle, Hardwicke, Heath, Upper and Lower Heyford, Islip, Kirtlington, Launton, Lillingstone-Lovell, Middleton-Stoney, Mixbury, Newton-Purcell, Noke, Oddington, Shelswell, Somerton, Souldern, Stoke-Lyne, Tusmore, Wendlebury, Weston-on-the-Green, and parts of Stowe and Stratton-Audley, comprising an area of 59,520 acres.

PLOVER SCAR, a rock in the estuary of the river Lune, co. Lancaster. A lighthouse was erected on it in 1847.

PLOWDON, a tnshp. in the par. of North Lydbury, co. Salop, 3 miles S.E. of Bishop's Castle. It is in conjunction with Eyton.

PLOWLAND, a hmlt. in the par. of Welwick, East Riding co. York, 2 miles S.E. of Patrington.

PLUCK, a hmlt. in the bar. of Raphoe, co. Donegal, Scotland, 3 miles S.E. of Letterkenny.

PLUCKLEY, a par. in the hund. of Calehill, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 6 miles E. of Ashford, its post town, 3 S.W. of Charing, and 19 S.W. of Canterbury. It is a station on the South-Eastern railway. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The par. comprises the old par. of Pevington, and the hmlts. of Malmains, Shurland, &c. The land is partly in hop grounds. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £700, and the glebe comprises 34 acres. The living is a rect.* with that of Pevington annexed, in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £595, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, was built by the Pluckleys in the reign of Henry II., and has a tower containing six bells. The interior of the church contains tombs, and three brasses, of the Derings of Surrenden-Dering, bearing date from 1490. The register dates from 1566. The charities produce about £17 a-year. There is a National school for both sexes. A fair is held on Whit-Tuesday for toys and pedlery, also a fair for cattle and swine on 6th December.

PLUMBLAND, a par. in the ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 6 miles N. by E. of Cockermouth. It is situated near the line of the Maryport and Carlisle railway, and is bounded on the N. and W. by the river Ellen, a trout stream. The village, which is small, is chiefly agricultural. Above half the land is arable, the remainder meadow and pasture, with about 40 acres of woodland. The parish abounds in coal, freestone, and limestone, which last is extensively quarried for burning into lime. The glebe comprises 72 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £375. The church, dedicated to St. Cuthbert, is a plain structure, recently repaired and improved. The parochial charities produce about £90 per annum, chiefly the endowment of Captain John Sibson's free school, founded in 1759. The school-house was erected in 1800.

PLUMBLEY, or PLUMBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Great Budworth, hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 2 miles S.W. of Knutsford. It is a station on the Northwich, Knutsford, and Altrincham section of the Cheshire Midland railway. It is situated near the river Weaver. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Lord de Tabley is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

PLUMPTON. a par. in the hund. of Green's-Norton, co. Northampton, 7 miles W. of Towcester, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The surface is undulating and well wooded. The soil is clay, intermixed with limestone and gravel. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, and in the patron. of Jesus College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, has a pinnacled tower containing one bell. The charities produce about £1 per annum. A Sunday-school is held at the church.

PLUMPTON, a par. in the hund. of Street, rape of Lewes, co. Sussex, 2¾ miles from Cook's-Bridge, and 4½ N.W. of Lewes. It is a station on the Keymer branch of the London, Brighton, and South Coast railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the road from Lewes to Ditchland, under the South Downs, which here rise bold and precipitous. The inhabitants are wholly agricultural. There is a view at Plumpton Plains, embracing the Sussex coast, with a great part of Hampshire to the S., and parts of Sussex, Surrey, and Kent to the N. The land is partly in common, with an abundance of chalk. On Plumpton Plains, between Ditchling and Lewes, Sir Simon de Montfort drew up his army, previously to the battle of Lewes.

The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £221. The church has a tower at the W. end. The register dates from 1558. The parochial charities consist of some poor's cottages. It is traditionally asserted the first carp in England were placed in the moat at Plumpton Place. The Earl of Chichester is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

PLUMPTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkham, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 3 miles W. of Kirkham. It is situated near Fleetwood, and is joined to Westby. J. T. Clifton, Esq., is lord of the manor.

PLUMPTON, or PLOMPTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Spofforth, upper div. of Claro wap., West Riding co. York, 2 miles S. of Knaresborough, and 2¼ N.W. of Spofforth. It contains the village of Plumpton Square, and was formerly held by the Percys and Plumptons, of Plumpton Hall, till about the middle of the 18th century, when the last descendant of the Plumptons sold the estate to the Lascelles, of Goldsborough, ancestors of the Earl of Harewood, its present proprietor. The hall is now occupied as a farmhouse.

PLUMPTON-HEAD, a hmlt. in the par. of Penrith, ward of Leath, co. Cumberland, 3 miles N.W. of Penrith. It is situated on the line of the Carlisle railway, and near the small river Petterill.

PLUMPTON-STREET, a tnshp. in the par. of Hesket-in-the-Forest, ward of Leath, co. Cumberland, 6 miles N. by W. of Penrith. It is situated near Plumpton Head, on the Roman way from Ambleside to Carlisle, and was one of the haunts of Robin Hood.

PLUMPTON-WALL, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Lazonby, ward of Leath, co. Cumberland, 5 miles N.W. of Penrith, its post town. It is a station on the Lancaster and Carlisle railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Petterill, near the Roman camp at Bremetenracum, or Voreda. At Old Penrith, on the Roman way from Ambleside to Carlisle, a Roman altar was found, and at Castle Steads an inscribed stone with a bust. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is of a gravelly description, with a subsoil of gravel and sand. The land is almost wholly arable. The chplry. includes the hmlt. of Salkeld Gate, on the road to Carlisle. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £49. The church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, is situated in the hmlt. of Salkeld-Gate. There is an endowed school for both sexes, the endowment consisting of the interest of £100, bequeathed by John Scott, of Penrith, who died in 1759. There are several lords of the manor, among whom are the Duke of Devonshire and the Earl of Lonsdale.

PLUMPTON WOOD, a chplry. in the par. of St. Michael-on-Wyre, co. Lancaster, 4 miles N.W. of Preston, its post town, and 3 S.W. of Garstang. It is situated on the line of the Lancaster railway and canal, near the river Wyre, the mouth of which forms a harbour. The union poorhouse is situated here. The village, which is considerable, contains many new houses. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £140, in the patron. of the Vicar of St. Michael-on-Wyre. The parochial charities produce about £37 per annum, of which £23 goes to Catforth school.

PLUMSTEAD, a par. in the hund. of Lessness, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 1 mile E. of Woolwich, its post town, and 10 S. by E. of London. It is a station on the North Kent railway. The parish to the northward is bounded by the river Thames, of which there is a view from the common. Plumstead was formerly a market town, and possessed a charter for holding fairs, now disused. It was given in 960 by King Edgar to Canterbury priory, and was also held by Tostan, son of Earl Godwin, and after the Norman conquest by Bishop Odo. Upon the dissolution of monasteries in the reign of Henry VIII. it came to the Boughtons, and afterwards to J. Michel, who gave it to Queen's College, Oxford, in 1736. During the period of Henry VIII.'s reign, a considerable portion of the Plumstead and Erith marshes were flooded, and so continued until James I.'s time. The village, which is an increasing suburb of the metropolis, is well paved, lighted with gas, and abundantly supplied with good water. It contains numerous shops, and the country in its vicinity is studded with villas. The land is in some parts of a hilly nature, and in others flat and marshy. There are brick and tile kilns, also sand and chalk pits, near the common. There are powder magazines in the marshes adjoining the Thames. Sugar moulds are also made. A considerable portion of the land is in market gardens. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of London, val. £701. The parish church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure with a tower, and of late years has undergone considerable improvements. The church of St. Margaret is situated on Plumstead Common, and is of recent erection. There is a district church at Shooter's Hill. The parochial charities produce about £106 per annum, of which £46 goes to Cole's Sunday-school. There are National and infant schools, also places of worship for Dissenters. About 1½ mile E. of the parish church are the remains of Lessness Abbey, founded by Richard Lucy in 1178, who was buried here. The manor belongs to Christ's Hospital, London.

PLUMSTEAD, a par. in the hund. of North Erpingham, co. Norfolk, 4 miles S.E. of Holt, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. About two-thirds of the land are arable, and the remainder heath, wood, and plantation. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £190, and the glebe comprises 11½ acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £182, in the patron. of the Duchy of Lancaster. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a square embattled tower containing 1 bell. John Thomas Mott, Esq., is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

PLUMSTEAD, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Blofield, co. Norfolk, 5 miles E. of Norwich, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, was anciently called Grimmar. It is situated near the Yarmouth section of the Great Eastern railway. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The impropriate tithes, belonging to the Dean and Chapter of Norwich, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £488, and the glebe comprises 19½ acres. There is also a rent-charge of £14 payable to the Rector of Little Plumstead. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £70, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a square embattled tower erected in 1711. The parochial charities produce about £22 per annum, arising from 30 acres of land allotted to the poor at the enclosure of the parish. There is a National school.

PLUMSTEAD, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Blofield, co. Norfolk, 5 miles N.E. of Norwich, its post town. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The greater part of the land is arable, and the remainder pasture and woodland. The surface is level and the soil productive. The hall is surrounded by tastefully laid out grounds containing a sheet of water. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £468, and the glebe comprises 51 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to SS. Gervase and Protasius, has a circular tower and Saxon porch. The interior of the church contains some monuments, and has an E. window of painted glass inserted at the expense of the Rev. C. Penrice. There is a parochial school. The parochial charities produce about £48 per annum, chiefly the rent of 34 acres of land allotted to the poor for fuel at the enclosure of the parish.

PLUMTREE, a par. in the N. div. of the wap. of Rushcliffe, co. Nottingham, 5½ miles S.E. of Nottingham, its post town, and 14½ N.W. of Melton Mowbray. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the high road from Nottingham to Melton Mowbray, and is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlts. of Clipston and Normanton-on-the-Wolds. Limestone is abundant. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1805. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £1,113. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a square tower containing 3 bells. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

PLUMTREE, a hmlt. in the par. of Harworth, co. Notts, 1 mile S.W. of Bawtry.

PLUNGAR, a par. in the hund. of Framland, co. Leicester, 10½ miles N.E. of Melton-Mowbray, 6 S.E. of Birmingham, and 5 S.W. of Bottesford railway station. Grantham is its post town. The parish, which is of small extent, is situated on the Grantham and Nottingham canal, and is wholly agricultural. The surface is level, and the soil a stiff clay. The impropriation belongs to the Duke of Rutland. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £124. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, has a square embattled and pinnacled tower containing a clock. The church was restored in 1829. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum. This parish has the privilege of sending 14 children to Barkstone free school. There is an infant school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The Duke of Rutland is lord of the manor.

PLUSCARDINE, a priory in the co. of Elgin, Scotland, 4 miles S.W. of Elgin. It was founded by Alexander II. in 1230 for Cistercian monks, and was subsequently made a cell to Dunfermline. The ruins, which comprise the cruciform church embellished with wall paintings, the octagonal chapterhouse, and the cloisters, 114 feet long, now used as a chapel, are situated in a glen belonging to the Earl of Fife.

PLUSH, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Buckland-Newton, Cerne div. of co. Dorset, 3 miles S.E. of Buckland-Newton, and 4 N.E. of Cerne-Abbas. The village, which is small, is chiefly agricultural. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Buckland-Newton, in the dioc. of Sarum. The church is a chapel-of-ease to the vicarage of Buckland.

PLYM, a small river of the co. of Devon, rises near Sheepstor in Dartmoor, and falls into the Channel at Plymouth Sound.

PLYMOUTH, a fortified seaport, market town, a garrison, sessions, and polling town, excise collection, coastguard station, and a municipal and parliamentary borough in the hund. of Roborough, co. Devon, 42 miles S.W. of Exeter by road, or 53 by the South Devon railway, and 216 from London. It stands at the head of Plymouth Sound, between the Plym and the Hamoaze. Before the Norman conquest there was but a small village called Tamerweorth, on the spot where Plymouth now stands. The name was afterwards changed to Sutton, and was at various times known as Sutton Priors, being held by Plympton Priory, and Sutton Valletort, when at a later period it was held by the family of that name. Its present name first occurs in the reign of Henry VI., who granted the town a charter, and walled it in, in 1438, in consequence of its having been attacked by the French in 1336, 1350, 1377, and 1403, and in the first mentioned year totally destroyed and plundered. The Black Prince embarked here in 1355 on his way to France, and landed here with King John of France, whom he had taken prisoner at Poictiers. Many of the naval commanders in the reign of Elizabeth—Hawkins, Drake, Sir Richard Grenville, and others belonged to Devonshire, and, consequently, Plymouth was the starting point of many expeditions; of that against the Armada; and later, of the attack on Cadiz. Charles I. visited the town in 1625; but at the commencement of the war it was garrisoned in the interest of the Parliament, and the siege laid by Prince Maurice was raised by Essex. At a later time it was unsuccessfully attacked by the king, and by Sir Richard Grenville. Other sovereigns who have visited Plymouth are Charles II., George III., and the present queen.—Plymouth stands between the Catwater and the Hamoaze, two arms of the sea which run from the corners of the Sound to the mouths of the Plym and Tamar. There are also two smaller inlets, Sutton Pool and Mill Bay; the former on the W. and the latter on the E. side of the town. Between the Sound and the larger portion of the town is the Hoe, a promenade of a quarter of a mile long. Many of the streets in the older part of the town are built on a declivity, and are narrow and irregular at its extremity. The more modern part, however, consists of commodious houses. The guildhall contains, besides the rooms necessary for the town business, the central watchhouse and a prison, which is now disused, as a new one has been erected outside the town. Other buildings worthy of notice are the custom-house, the exchange, built in 1813, and the chamber of commerce. The market-place is in the centre of the town, and consists of covered markets for butter, fish, poultry, and vegetables, and ranges of stalls for other provisions and manufactured goods, with an open space occupied by hawkers of earthenware, &c., covering in all about three acres. There are entrances from Cornwall-street, East-street, and Drake-street, near the former of which the corn-market is held. Cattle markets are held on Tuesday and Thursday in the Tavistock-road, and wholesale fish markets daily at Sutton Pool, Southside, and the Barbican. The post-office is in Whimple-street, and the electric telegraph office in the Union-road.—Plymouth harbour is formed by the Hamoaze, or estuary of the Tamar, and the Catwater, or estuary of the Plym, which, with other smaller arms, unite to form Plymouth Sound, which is about 3 miles in length, and 3 miles across at the opening. The Hamoaze is a station for ships of war, and has moorings for 100 sail, while the Catwater is used for merchant vessels, of which it will accommodate at least 1,000 sail, and is provided with wet and dry docks. Sutton Pool is also used for merchant ships, and Mill Bay, on the other side of the town, for steam vessels. There is a pier in Sutton Pool. The port includes, besides the above harbours, the coast as far as Yealm Mouth with pilotage to Stoke Point on the E., and Love Bay on the W. The interior of the harbour is protected from the S. winds, to which it was much exposed, by the Breakwater which lies in the centre of the Sound, between Cawsand Bay and Staddon Point. This construction was planned in imitation of a coral reef by Rennie, a well-known engineer, and Whidbey, a master in the royal navy. It consists of a straight bar of 1,000 yards, with ends inclining towards the shore at an angle of 120°, of about 350 yards each. The base is about 70 yards in width, and the top about 10 yards. The height above highwater mark, is 2 feet at the ends and 3 at the centre. It contains 3,670,440 tons of loose limestone, and is faced with 2½ millions of cubic feet of granite and other stone, much of which has come from Orestone quarry. It was commenced in August, 1812, and has been only recently finished. A lighthouse, 63 feet in height, was added in 1841 at the W. end, with a lantern visible for 9 miles, and at the other end is a stone, in long. 4° 8′ 21″W., for rating chronometers by. The cost of the work has been about £1,700,000. Its success has been completely proved in many violent storms.—The chief points, &c., round the Sound are as follows:—On the E. side Renny, Mewstone, and Shagstone rocks, off Wembury Point; Tinker, or Shovel Shoals in the Sedley Channel; Staddon Point and pier in Bovisand Bay, where there is a reservoir of water for the supply of shipping containing 12,000 tons; the Duke and Leek shoals; Mount Batten Tower; the Winter Cobbler, and Mallard shoals; and the Asia rock, under the Hoe, where the Dutton was wrecked. On the W. side, past the Hamoaze, are Devil's Point; Redding Point; Mount Edgcumbe, with a dangerous passage called the Bridge, between it and Drake's Island; the New and Scotch shoals off Ravenness; Cawsand Bay pilot station; the Knap and Panther shoals, opposite the breakwater; Dragstone Rock, off Penlee Point; and Rame Head, 9 miles S.S.W. of which are the Hand Deeps and Eddystone lighthouse.—The harbour is defended by a battery on St. Nicholas, or Drake's island: by the citadel; and on Staddon Heights, the highlands on the E. of the Sound, are being erected very extensive fortifications, which extend thence round the whole of the three towns, at an average distance of about 3 miles, ending at Tregarth, on the eastern extremity. The citadel was built in 1670, on the site of a more ancient fortress, and was visited by Charles II. during its erection. It is entered from the town by two gateways with drawbridges, the sides on the E., W., and N. being surrounded by a ditch, with a counterscarp and covered way. It consists of five bastions, and has embrasures for 120 guns. The ramparts are about three-quarters of a mile in circumference, as the fort contains an esplanade for parade as well as barracks, magazines, and a chapel. The dock-yard and victualling yard are in Devonport, and the naval and military hospitals and marine barracks in Stonehouse. Many of the inhabitants of Plymouth are engaged in the government works, and others in the manufacture of sail-cloth, soap, glass, starch, artificial manure and cement, sugar refining and distilling. The merchant service and the navy also employ a large number. Trade is carried on with all parts of the English coast, with America, Mauritius, the West Indies, the Baltic, Africa, the Mediterranean, &c. The coast trade is chiefly in fish to London, wool to Hull, lead to Bristol and London, and manganese to Scotland. Steamers leave regularly for almost every port in the United Kingdom, and emigrant ships, the depôt for which is at Sutton Harbour, are continually sailing for Canada, Australia, and New Zealand. The African mail steamers leave monthly for Madeira, Sierra Leone, &c.—Plymouth is divided, for municipal purposes, into six wards by the new Act, instead of four, as formerly. They are as follows:—St. Andrew's, Charles, Drake, Frankfort, Sutton, and Vintry. The local government is carried on by a mayor, who is returning officer, 12 aldermen, thirty-six councillors, a recorder, town-clerk, &c., with the style of "mayor and commonalty of the borough of Plymouth." The property of the corporation consists of manor rents, granted by Edward IV., several houses and mills in Plymouth, the Royal hotel, the theatre, and the Leat, or water supply from Dartmoor, which was constructed by Sir Francis Drake. The endowed grammar school is also under their control, and they have the management of the police staff, and the lighting and cleansing of the town. During the reigns of Edward I. and Edward II., Plymouth, which was then called Sutton, returned one member to parliament, but none were returned after the reign of the latter, till the time of Henry VI., when the number was increased to two, and it has since remained the same. The bounds of the municipal and parliamentary borough are co-extensive. The population in 1851 was 72,096, with 12,825 inhabited houses, and in 1861 the number of persons was 94,799, and houses 15,819, showing an increase of 22,703 persons in the ten years. The management of the poor is conducted by a board of guardians, instituted by Act of Parliament in 1708. There is a new workhouse on the N.E. of the town adjoining the borough prisons, built in 1851 at a cost of £9,500. Plymouth superior registry includes only the borough, the new County Court district includes also Plympton, East Stonehouse, Stoke Damerel, St. Germans, and the Hamoaze, Catwater, and the Sound, and the excise district comprises Plymouth, Ashburton, Newton, Totness, Brixton, Dartmouth, Kingsbridge, Modbury, Plympton, Saltash, Looe, Liskeard, Callington, and Tavistock. Plymouth is the headquarters of the western military district, and of the South Devon militia. The earldom of Plymouth was held by Charles Fitzcharles, natural son of Charles II., from 1675 to 1680, and in 1682 was given to Thomas Hickman Windsor.—The livings in Plymouth belong to the archdeac. of Totnes and the dioc. of Exeter. They are as follows:—St. Andrew, a vic.,* val. £920, with Pennycross cur. The church is ancient, with a square embattled tower, and was repaired in 1825. King Charles the Martyr, a vic., val. £612, with Compton Gifford cur. The church was begun at the commencement of the Civil War, but was not finished till the Restoration. St. Andrew and Holy Trinity, perpet. curs.,* vals. £115 and £114, in the patron. of the vicar. Christ Church, cur. in the same patron., val. £80. St. Peter, St. James, and Sutton-on-Plym, curs., in the patron. of the crown and bishop, vals. £300, £300, and £150. Plymouth was anciently a prebend to Plympton Collegiate church, and its church belonged to the priory there. At the Reformation the impropriate tithes and advowson were given to the corporation of Plymouth. The Baptists, Independents, Wesleyans, Presbyterians, Unitarians, Society of Friends, and Jews have places of worship here. In the middle ages there were houses of white and grey friars, and a leper hospital in Plymouth. The grammar school, which gives a gratuitous education to 12 sons of householders, was founded in 1573 by Queen Elizabeth. The new grammar school was founded in 1822, and in 1851 had 70 pupils. Other schools are, the greycoat school, Hele's redboy's school, Lanyon's bluecoat school, Lady Rogers's girls' school, the Household of Faith Sunday schools, National and British schools, and others connected with the various places of worship. There is also a Dissenting theological college, called Western College, founded in 1752. The Athenæum contains a museum and library belonging to the Plymouth literary and scientific institution. The Public and Cottonian library possesses a valuable collection of drawings by old masters, besides a large library, and also possesses a newsroom. There is a government school of art, a mechanics' institute, a natural history society, medical and law libraries, and a commercial newsroom. The theatre and assembly rooms were built by the corporation in 1811, adjacent to the Royal hotel. The charitable institutions are, the South Devon and East Cornwall hospital, the dispensary, the female orphan asylum, the eye infirmary, the Merchant Seamen's hospital, the "old church twelves," New Church and Jory's almshouses.—The most celebrated natives of the town were, Hawkins, who commenced the English slave trade (1520-95); Glanville, the author of a book on witchcraft (1636-80); Sir R. Hawkins, the traveller (1620); Bacon, Crane, and Quick, divines; Northcott, Haydon, Prout, Eastlake, and Lethbridge, painters; and Foulston, the architect.—Plymouth is connected with London by the Great Western railway as far as Bristol, the Bristol and Exeter as far as Exeter, and thence by the South Devon line, which terminates at Plymouth. The Devon and Cornwall railway has also its terminus at Plymouth, crossing the Hamoaze at Saltash. The newspapers published in Plymouth are, the Mercury (Liberal), and the Western News, both daily papers, and the Herald, weekly.—A weekly market on Thursdays was first granted to Plymouth by Henry III., with a three days' fair at the feast of St. John, and later in the same reign a market on Wednesday, with a three days' fair at Ascension. At present the market days are Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. Fairs are held in April and November, the latter being originally a cloth fair. Races are held in May and August in Chelson Meadow, near Earl Morley's seat at Saltram, on an oval flat course of 1½ mile. The regatta, under the management of the Royal Western Yacht Club, is held about the end of July. The late Prince Consort was the patron of the club, the headquarters of which are at Millbay. A new club-house is just being finished, overlooking the Hoe.

PLYMOUTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Merthyr Tydfil, hund. of Caerphilly, co. Glamorgan, 2 miles from Merthyr, and 22 N. by W. of Cardiff. It is situated in the valley of the Taff, and has large coal and iron works.

PLYMOUTH-DOCK. See DEVONPORT, co. Devon.

PLYMPTON, a hund. in the co. of Devon, contains the pars. of Brixton, Plympton St. Mary and Earls Plymstock, Revelstoke, Shaugh-Prior, Wembury, and Yealmpton, comprising an area of 32,230 acres.

PLYMPTON EARLS, or PLYMPTON ST. MAURICE, a par. and small market town locally in the above hund., but having separate jurisdiction, in the co. of Devon, 5½ miles S. of Plymouth, 39 S.W. of Exeter, and about half a mile from its station on the South Devon railway. This place, which is noticed in Domesday Survey as a royal demesne under the title of Terra Regis, and became the head of an ancient barony shortly after the Norman conquest, is situated about a mile to the S.E. of the river Plym, from which it derives its name.

It returned two members to parliament till disfranchised by the Reform Act, and was constituted one of the stannary towns in the reign of Edward III. The land is in an excellent state of cultivation, the soil being rich and fertile, on a subsoil of clay. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in mining and others in agriculture. The place, though small, consists of well-built houses, and is surrounded by orchards and gardens. It was incorporated under a charter granted by Baldwyn de Rivers, Earl of Devon, in 1241, the government being invested in a mayor, recorder, bailiff, and eight aldermen, who had the privilege of holding courts of quarter sessions for determining offences not capital. The jurisdiction extends over part of the adjoining parish of Plympton St. Mary. The guildhall was built in 1696, has a piazza in front, with granite pillars and circular arches. The post office is situated in the hamlet of Ridgeway, about a quarter of a mile from the town. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £100, in the patron. of the Dean and Canons of Windsor. The church, dedicated to St. Maurice, is an ancient structure with a tower containing six bells. The church was erected on the site of a chantry chapel appendant to Plympton St. Mary Priory, 1457. The parochial charities produce about £189 per annum. There is a grammar school, founded and endowed by Elizeus Hele, with an estate now producing about £200 per annum. The Independents have a place of worship. Sir Joshua Reynolds was a native of this parish, and was educated at the grammar school, of which his father was then master. On the N. side of the town are the ruins of the ancient castle once held by Rich. de Rivers or Redvers, afterwards Earl of Devon, to whom Henry I. gave the barony. The ruins occupy a quadrangular area surrounded with a fosse, and skirted on the E. by a steep conical mount, on the summit of which is a small fragment of the keep. Plympton House is now a lunatic asylum, with accommodation for 100 inmates. The principal residence is Whitehall, the seat of C. H. Buller, Esq. Paul Orry Trebey, Esq., is lord of the manor. A cattle market is held on the first Monday in every month, and fairs on 27th February, 5th April, 14th August, and 31st October.

PLYMPTON ST. MARY, a par. and post town in the hund. of Plympton, co. Devon, 5 miles from Plymouth, half a mile N.W. of Plympton Earls, and 1 N.W. of the South Devon railway. The par., which is extensive, includes the hmlts. of Underwood, Ridgeway, Colebrook, Hemerdon, Sparkwill, and Lee Mill Bridge. The village is situated on the river Plym, from which it derives its name, and is chiefly agricultural. The soil is rich and productive, with a subsoil of clay. Copper, lead, and tin mines exist, but are not at present worked. Good slates and ravine stone are extensively quarried at Cann quarry, on the river Plym, and transported by means of a canal and railroad, communicating with the Plymouth and Dartmoor railway to London and Brighton. The parish is intersected by the London road through Exeter to Plymouth, and the river Plym flows at one extremity, the Erm at the other, and the Tory through its centre. The impropriate tithes, which now yield about £2,000 per annum, were given by Edward VI. to the Dean and Canons of Windsor. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £150, in the patron. of the Dean and Canons of Windsor. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, and which stands within the cemetery of the priory, is an ancient structure with a tower containing six bells. In the chancel are three sedilia and a piscina of early date, and in the N. and S. aisles are ancient effigies and tombs of the Strodes of Newnham, the Courtenays, and others, also several tablets. The parochial charities produce about £39 per annum, of which £36 was left for a lepers' hospital, founded in Edward III.'s time, but now appropriated to the relief of the lunatics. There is a National school for both sexes. There are places of worship for Dissenters. In the neighbourhood of the churchyard are traces of a college for Black canons, founded by the Saxon kings, but refounded in 1121 for canons regular of the order of St. Augustine, by Bishop Warlewast. The priory continued to flourish till the Dissolution, when its revenues were estimated at £912 12*s.* 8*d.*, and the site afterwards given to the Champernownes. There are numerous gentlemen's seats in this parish, as Saltram House, Newnham Park, Chaddlewood House, Hemerdon House, Goodemoor House, and Blackland House. The Poor-law Union of Plympton St. Mary comprises 19 parishes or places. The union poorhouse until recently occupied the site of the ancient hospital for lepers, now called the Maudlyn lands. Lord Morley is lord of the manor.

PLYMSTOCK, a par. in the hund. of Plympton, co. Devon, 3 miles S.E. of Plymouth, its post town. The par., which is extensive, is situated on the river Plym, near the edge of the Catwater and Plymouth Sound, and includes the flourishing village of Oreston, and the hmlts. of Turnchapel and Elburton. It is intersected by the Totnes and Exeter road. The surface is hilly, and the soil a light loam resting on limestone. The land is well cultivated, about two-thirds being arable and the remainder pasture and woodland. It was a post of considerable importance during the civil war between Charles I. and his parliament, and was once the headquarters of the Royalists in 1642. The manor passed from Childe the Hunter to the monks of Tavistock, who outwitted the Plymstock men at Guile-bridge, on the river Tamar. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in shipbuilding, and many are employed in the limestone quarries for which this neighbourhood is celebrated. At Oreston is the great marble quarry from which the material was obtained for the construction of the Plymouth Breakwater. There are wet docks at Turnchapel sufficiently capacious for the reception of frigates, and extensive building yards adjoining. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £188, in the patron. of the Dean and Canons of Windsor, to whom the impropriation belongs. The church is dedicated to St. Mary and All Saints. In the interior is part of a screen and several monuments to the Harris family. There is also a district church at Hooe, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £79. The church stands on the site of an ancient chapel dedicated to St. Catherine. The parochial charities produce about £81 per annum, £10 of which goes to Harris's almshouse, founded in 1617. There is a National school. The Independents have a chapel at Plymstock, and at Oreston, Turnchapel, and Elburton, in this parish are places of worship for the Calvinistic Methodists and Wesleyans. Plymouth Breakwater is a little over 2 miles from the Hoe. There is a coastguard station at Bovisland, also waterworks and a watchtower called "Mount Batten." The ships outward bound take in water at this place. Radford, the old seat of the Harris family, is believed to have been the residence of Sir Walter Raleigh after his arrival at Plymouth in 1618, and Stoddescombe was the birthplace of Dr. Forster a writer on divinity. The Duke of Bedford is lord of the manor.

PLYMTREE, a par. in the hund. of Hayridge, co. Devon, 4 miles S.E. of Collumpton, its railway station and post town, and 8 S.E. of Honiton. The village, which is small, and chiefly agricultural, is situated on the river Clyst, which rises in this parish. The soil is of a loamy nature. The roads between Cullompton and Exeter, and Cullompton and Honiton, skirt the parish on either side. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £285, in the patron. of Oriel College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary the Virgin, is an ancient stone edifice with a tower containing five bells. The interior of the church contains an ancient gilt wooden screen, and an octagonal stone font. On the W. front of the tower is a stone statue of the Virgin and Child under a canopy. The parochial charities produce about £29 per annum. The Independents have a place of worship. Hayne House is the principal residence. The Rev. William Blake is lord of the manor.

POBBLEBRIEN, a bar. in the co. of Limerick. See PUBBLEBRIEN.

POCKLEY, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Helmsley-Blackmoor, wap. of Ryedale, North Riding co. York, 3 miles N.E. of Helmsley, its post town, and 5 W. of Kirby Moorside. The village, which is of small extent and wholly agricultural, is situated on a branch of the river Rye. The soil consists of limestone and clay. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic.* of Helmsley, in the dioc. of York. The church, dedicated to St. John, is a modern edifice.

POCKLINGTON, a par. and market town in the Wilton Beacon div. of the wap. of Harthill, East Riding co. York, 14 miles S.E. of York, 27 N.W. of Hull, and 32 from Scarborough. It is a station on the Beverley branch of the North Eastern railway. It is situated in a level country, about 2 miles from the Wolds, and the Pocklington canal connects it with the river Derwent. The par. comprises the tnshps. of Ousethorpe, Pocklington, and Yapham-with-Meltonby. The town is a polling-place for the East Riding of Yorkshire, and a petty sessions town, the latter being held by the county magistrates at the police station in Great George-street on the first Saturday in each month. In 1851 it contained a population of 2,546, which, in 1861, had increased to 2,671, with 600 inhabited houses. The inhabitants are for the most part employed in agricultural pursuits, and in rope-making, brickmaking, brewing, and malting. There are besides corn mills, iron foundries, and agricultural implement manufactories which materially contribute to the industrial wealth of the town. The living is a vic. with the curs. of Meltonby, Yapham and Ousethorpe annexed, in the dioc. of York, val. £400, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure with a lofty tower at the W. end, surmounted by pinnacles and containing a peal of six bells. It was erected in 1252, but underwent a complete restoration and alteration some few years ago. The chancel is the most ancient part of the edifice, and has several carved stalls. It contains a stained-glass E. window, illustrative of the life of Christ, another to the memory of the Loftus family, and a third to the Ellis family, all executed by Wailes, of Newcastle; also several mural monuments. The Roman Catholics, Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. The free grammar school was originally founded by Dr. John Dowman or Dolman, in the early part of the reign of Henry VIII., and the appointment of head-master vested in the master and fellows of St. John's College, Cambridge, who with the churchwardens appoint the usher. These two officers are called the "Corporation of Master and Usher of the free Grammar School of Pocklington." Through the indefatigable perseverance of the present and late head-masters many of the ancient rights of this excellent school have been regained, and its revenue increased from £100 to £1,500 per annum, with five exhibitions at St. John's College, Cambridge. The school buildings have been materially improved and renovated, and there are now about 40 scholars. Wilberforce received the early part of his education at this school. A National school for boys, girls, and infants was erected in 1854 at a cost of £1,450, including the site. The Wesleyans have also a school. The town is well supplied with water and lighted by gas. The market-place is commodious. The canal, which was completed in 1816, belongs to the North-Eastern railway company, and joins the river Derwent at East Collingwith. It is about 9 miles in length, and is of immense benefit to the town of Pocklington in a commercial point of view. Pocklington Poor-law Union contains 47 parishes and townships. The union workhouse was erected in 1852 at a cost of nearly £2,000. A library and reading-room was established in Waterloo-buildings in 1852, and there are two buildings called the Odd-fellows' Hall and Music Hall, where public meetings, lectures, &c., are held. Petty sessions for the Wilton Beacon division of the wapentake of Harthill are held on the first Saturday in every month, and a county court is held monthly. Courts leet, baron, and copyhold are held annually by the Hon. Captain Arthur Duncombe, M.P., who is lord of the manor. The poor-law guardians meet twice a month at the union workhouse. Pocklington is also the seat of a superintendent registry. Market day is Saturday. Fares are held on 7th March, 6th May, 5th August, 8th November, chiefly for cattle and sheep, and a statute fair for hiring servants on the 9th November.

POCKTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of St. James, city of Norwich, co. Norfolk.

POCKTHORPE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Nafferton, East Riding co. York, 3 miles N.E. of Great Driffield. It is situated near the Driffield canal. The making of malt is carried on.

PODEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Church-Honeybourne, upper div. of the hund. of Blackenhurst, co. Worcester, 5 miles E. of Evesham.

PODIMORE MILTON. See MILTON-PODIMORE, co. Somerset.

PODINGTON. See PUTTON, co. Dorset.

PODMORE, a tnshp. in the par. of Eccleshall, N. div. of the hund. of Pirehill, co. Stafford, 5 miles N.W. of Eccleshall.

POE, or FAIRY WATER, a stream of the co. of Tyrone, Ireland, rises near Castlederg, and falls into the Strule near Omagh.

POINTINGTON, or POYNTINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Horethorne, co. Somerset, 2½ miles N. by E. of Sherborne, its post town, and 4 S.E. of Marston railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The soil consists of a rich loam upon a subsoil of marl and rock. The river Yeo rises in this parish, which is traversed by the road from Sherborne to Wincanton. The Blackmoor Vale harriers meet on Pointington Downs. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £200, and there are 26 acres of glebe with some land leased out upon the Downs. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £247. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient edifice with a square tower. It is in a bad state of repair, and contains several effigies and tombs of great antiquity, some of which are greatly obliterated. Some mural paintings were discovered on the pillars by the rector in 1848, but have since been destroyed. The register dates from 1618. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a school for both sexes, erected and supported at the expense of the rector; a Sunday-school is held within the schoolroom. The Manor House, formerly the seat of the Malets, contains some ruins of great antiquity. Lord Willoughby de Broke is lord of the manor and owner of the soil.

POINTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Semperingham, wap. of Aveland, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 3 miles S.E. of Falkingham, its post town, and 8 N.E. of Bourn. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Semperingham, in the dioc. of Lincoln.

POINTON, or POIGNTON. See POYNTON, co. Chester.

POINTZPASS, or POYNTZPASS, a post-office vil. partly in the par. of Aghaderg, co. Armagh, and partly in the par. of Ballymore, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 12 miles E.S.E. of Armagh, and 72 from Dublin. It is a station on the Dublin and Belfast railway. It is situated on the Newry canal, and consists of one chief street. It contains the parish church, a Roman Catholic chapel, National school, and a dispensary, which last is within the Newry poor-law union. This place takes its name from Sir T. Poyntz, who vanquished a force of Tyrone's men here. Part of the fortress which once commanded the pass was remaining until recently. Drumbanagher Castle, Acton House, and Acton Lodge, are all in the vicinity. Fairs are held monthly, on Saturday.

POISONS, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Lawrence, Isle of Thanet, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, near Ramsgate.

POKESWELL. See POXWELL, co. Dorset.

POLBOY, a hmlt. in the par. of Kilclooney, bar. of Clonmacnowen, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 2 miles S.S.E. of Ballinasloe. It stands on the Grand canal, near the river Suck, and near the Bog of Polboy. An aqueduct has been erected here, and in the vicinity are remains of a religious house.

POLDERS, a hmlt. in the par. of Woodnesborough, hund. of Eastry, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent.

POLEASH, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Lawrence, Isle of Thanet, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, near Ramsgate.

POLEBROOK, a hund. in the co. of Northampton, contains the pars. of Barnewell St. Andrew, Benefield, Hemington, Oundle, Polebrook, Warmington, and parts of Luddington, Thurning, and Winwick, comprising an area of 19,840 acres.

POLEBROOK, a par. in the above hund., co. Northampton, 2½ miles S.E. of Oundle, its post town. The village, which is of small extent and wholly agricultural, is situated about a mile distant from the navigable river Nene. The par. contains the hmlts. of Armston and Kingsthorpe. Limestone is quarried for burning into lime and for road metal. There are about 30 acres of glebe and a farm of nearly 300 acres assigned in lieu of tithes, under an Enclosure Act in 1790. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £222, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a tower and spire at the W. end. The charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a free school for both sexes.

POLEGATE, a junction station on the Brighton and South Coast railway, co. Sussex, 3 miles S.W. of Hailsham, where the branch lines to Hailsham and Eastbourne turn off.

POLES, a hmlt. in the bar. of Lower Kells, co. Meath, Ireland, 4 miles N. by W. of Nobber.

POLES, a seat in the par. of Ware, hund. of Braughin, co. Herts, 1 mile N. of Ware, and 3 miles N.E. of Hertford.

POLESWORTH, a par. and market town in the Tamworth div. of Hemlingford hund., co. Warwick, 4½ miles S.E. of Tamworth, its post town, and 4 N.W. of Atherstone. It is a station on the North-Western railway. The parish, which is extensive, is situated on the Coventry canal and on the river Anker. It comprises the chplry. of Warton, and hmlts. of Dordon, Freasley, Hall End, and Quarry Hill, also the manors of Pooley and Bramcote. Polesworth formerly had a Benedictine nunnery, of which ruins still exist; it was founded by King Egbert, whose daughter Editha was abbess, to whom on her canonisation it was dedicated. At the Conquest the nuns were dispossessed, and retired to their cell at Oldbury; but in the time of Stephen they returned to this place, and from Henry III. received the grant of a weekly market and an annual fair. At the Dissolution its revenue amounted to £109 6*s.* 6*d.* There are several extensive collieries, stone quarries, and clay pits, which employ a large number of the inhabitants. The market, which had fallen into disuse, has recently been renewed. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £502, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Editha, is an ancient structure, with a square embattled tower containing five bells. There is also a district church at Warton, erected in 1841, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £122. The parochial charities produce about £874 per annum, chiefly arising from the bequest of Sir F. Nethersole, of which £454 goes to the vicar, and £401 to the free schools. There are also National and infant schools. The Independents and Baptists have each a place of worship. Pooley Hall and Bramcote Hall are the principal residences. Sir George Chetwynd, Bart., is lord of the manor, and chief landowner.

POLEWE. See Poolewe, co. Ross, Scotland.

POLGAVIE, a hmlt. in the par. of Inchture, co. Perth, Scotland, 8 miles W. by S. of Dundee. It is situated on the Frith of Tay.

POLGRAIN, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Michael, Carhayes, co. Cornwall, 3 miles S.E. of Tregoney.

POLGOOTH, an extensive tin mine in the par. of St. Austle, co. Cornwall, 2 miles S.W. of St. Austle.

POLHAMPTON, a tythg. in the par. of Overton, co. Hants, 4 miles N.E. of Whitchurch.

POLING, a hund. in the co. of Sussex, contains the pars. of Angmering, Burpham, Ferring, Goring, Little Hampton, Kingston, Leominster, Poling, East Preston, Rustington, and North Stoke, comprising an area of 17,740 acres.

POLING, a par. in the above hund., rape of Arundel, co. Sussex, 3 miles S.E. of Arundel, its post town, and 1½ mile N.W. of Angmering railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the South Coast railway, and is wholly agricultural. Poling formerly had a preceptory of the Knights Templars, which at the Dissolution was granted to the college of Arundel. About half the land is arable, and the remainder pasture and woodland. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £220, and the glebe comprises 2 acres. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £220, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is an ancient edifice with a square tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains the brass of a priest, bearing date 1460. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a National school.

POLKERRIS, a coastguard station in the par. of Fowey, or Foy, hund. of East Powder, co. Cornwall, 2 miles W. by N. of Fowey. It is situated on the coast of the Channel, under Brown Willy Hill, and is a subport to Fowey.

POLLACAPPUL, a lough in the par. of Ballinahinch, co. Galway, Ireland, near Kylemore Lough.

POLLACK, a tythg. in the par. of South Stoneham, hund. of Mainsbridge, co. Hants, 2 miles N.E. of Southampton.

POLLARDS-LANDS, a tythg. in the par. of St. Andrew-Auckland, N.W. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, near Bishop's Auckland.

POLLARDSTOWN, a par. in the bar. of East Offaly, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles W. of Newbridge. Kildare is its post town. It is about 1½ mile in length, and a little less in breadth. The soil is of medium quality. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Kildare, val. with Thomastown, £167. There is a day-school, but no church.

POLLEY STREET. See Detling, co. Kent.

POLLGLASS, a hmlt. in the bar. of Ballymoe, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles E. of Glennamaddy.

POLLICOT, a hmlt. in the par. of Asherdon, co. Bucks, 4 miles N. of Thame.

POLLINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Snaith, lower div. of the wap. of Osgoldcross, West Riding co. York, 2½ miles S.W. of Snaith, its post town. It is situated on the Goole canal, and gives title of baron and viscount to the Earl of Mexborough, of Methley, who is lord of the manor. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. £120. The church is modern. There is a place of worship for Independents.

POLLOCKSHAWS, a post town and burgh of barony in the par. of Eastwood, co. Renfrew, Scotland, 2½ miles S. by W. of Glasgow, and 6 E. by S. of Paisley. It is a station on the Glasgow and Barrhead railway. The town, which was erected into a burgh of barony by royal charter in 1813, is situated in a valley at the confluence of the Auldhouse-burn with the river White Cart, here crossed by an ancient stone bridge, which has recently been repaired and widened. It consists of several streets irregularly laid out, but containing many good houses and shops. It is a thriving place, exhibiting much animation in manufacturing and mercantile pursuits. The principal public buildings are the town-hall, surmounted by a tower, the churches, a mechanics' institution, public library, and branch offices of the Western bank, City of Glasgow bank, and four insurance agencies. It is governed by a provost, bailie, treasurer, town-clerk, and dean of guilds, besides six common councillors. The revenue of the burgh is about £35. Justice of the peace courts are held in the townhall on the first Tuesday of each month, and sheriff small-debt courts on the second Friday in February, April, June, August, October, and December. The inhabitants are principally employed in cotton-spinning, hand and power loom silk and cotton weaving, fancy dyeing, bleaching, and calico-printing, all of which are extensively carried on except the last, which was formerly of greater importance than at present. The parish church of Eastwood is situated in the S.W. suburb, and in another part of the town is the Auldhouse chapel-of-ease, erected in 1840. There are also two Free churches, an United Presbyterian church, an Original Secession church, and a Roman Catholic chapel. In the burial-ground, about a mile from the town, is a monument recently erected to Wodrow, the historian. There are a burgh, an industrial, and several denominational schools, also a trades' friendly society, clerical association, and several other charitable institutions.

POLLOCKSHIELDS, or SHIELDS, a vil. in the par. of Govan, co. Lanark, Scotland, three-quarters of a mile W. of Port-Eglinton, in Gorbals. The village, which is of recent formation, is situated close to the Glasgow and Johnstone canal and the Glasgow and Paisley railway, on which latter it is a station.

POLLRONE, a par. in the bar. of Iverk, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Pilltown. Suirville is its post town. It is 5 miles long by 1 mile broad. The surface is drained by the river Suir towards the S. It consists of a very fair soil. It is traversed by the road from Clonmel to Waterford. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with two others, £216. The church is in ruins. There is a Roman Catholic chapel in the neighbourhood. There are two or three day-schools, and a Sunday-school. Pollrone House is the principal seat in the vicinity.

POLMADIE, a hmlt. in the par. of Govan, co. Renfrew, Scotland.

POLMONT, a par. in the co. of Stirling, Scotland. It includes, besides the vil. of its own name, those of Redding and Bennetstone. It extends in length about 6 miles from N.E. to S.W., with an extreme breadth of 2½ miles. It is bounded by the Frith of Forth, the co. of Linlithgow, and the pars. of Muiravonside, Slamannan, Falkirk, and Bothkennar. The surface is moderately even, the greatest altitude being only 553 feet, from which there is an extensive prospect. The land, which is chiefly carse, is fertile, and enclosed and planted. Within the limits of the parish are several mines and quarries, also brick and tile kilns, which together employ a large number of the inhabitants. The parish is traversed by the road from Edinburgh to Falkirk, by the Union canal, and by the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway, which last has a junction station here, where the Grangemouth branch turns off. The village of Polmont is about 3 miles E. of Falkirk. It is situated on the Frith of Forth, near the Linlithgow border, between the river Avon and Grange Burn. The parish is also crossed by the Antonine wall. In the vicinity are several mineral springs. This par. is in the presb. of Linlithgow and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of £270. The parish church was erected in 1741. There are a Free church, parochial school, and library, also several other schools. Polmont gives title of baron to the Duke of Hamilton.

POLMONTY, a feeder of the Barrow, co. Wexford, Ireland.

POLNOON, or POINON, a ruined castle in the par. of Eaglesham, upper ward, co. Renfrew, Scotland, 10 miles S.E. of Paisley. It is situated in the vale of the White Cart, and was built by Sir John Montgomery with the poind money, or ransom of Hotspur, whom he made prisoner at Otterborne in 1388.

POLPERRO, a seaport and market town, partly in the par. of Llansalloes and partly in that of Talland, hund. of West, co. Cornwall, 5 miles E. of Fowey, 3 W. by S. of West Looe, and 9 S. by W. of Liskeard. It is a small fishing town and coastguard station situated on the slopes of two rocky hills, divided by a ravine through which flows a small rivulet to the English Channel. It has a fishing harbour, capable of admitting vessels of 150 tons burthen. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the fisheries and in the coasting trade; the imports being coal, culm, and limestone, and the exports grain and fish, including large quantities of whiting, turbot, plaice, dace, pipers, and pilchards. A rare lancelot fish, known to naturalists as the "comphioxus lanceolatus," was rediscovered here in 1835 by Mr. Crouch. There was formerly a chapel-of-ease, dedicated to St. Peter, on the western hill above the town, but now in ruins. There are places of worship for Independents and Wesleyans, also Kendall's school, with an endowment of £15 per annum. A pleasure fair is held on 10th July and two following days.

POLRUAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Lanteglos-by-Fowey, co. Cornwall, 1 mile S.E. of Fowey. It is situated at the mouth of the river Fowey, and is a coastguard station. Polruan was formerly a borough, returning members to parliament.

POLSHAM, a tythg. in the par. of Devizes, co. Wilts, near Devizes.

POLSHAM, a hmlt. in the hund. of Well-Forum, co. Somerset, 3 miles from Wells, and 16 S.W. of Bath. It is a station on the Wells branch of the Somerset and Dorset railway.

POLSILLAGH, a vil. in the par. of Kilmoylan, bar. of Clare, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 7 miles N. of Athenry. It is situated in a boggy and barren district, near the road from Athenry to Tuam.

POLSTEAD, a par. in the hund. of Babergh, co. Suffolk, 3 miles N.E. of Nayland, 9 N. of Colchester, and 5 S.W. of Hadleigh railway station. Stoke is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a small stream of the river Stour, and is wholly agricultural. The Red Barn, the scene of the tragic death of Maria Martin, still exists, but the Corders have entirely left the place. There is a corn-mill worked by the stream. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £880, and the glebe comprises 17 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £627, in the patron. of St. John's College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, and situated on an eminence in Polstead Park, is an ancient structure, with a spired tower containing six bells. The interior of the church contains two brasses, that of a priest bearing date 1460. There is a parochial school for both sexes, which is supported by the rector and by voluntary contributions. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship. C. Tyrell, Esq., is lord of the manor. A fair, lasting for two days, is held on Polstead Green on the Wednesday following 16th July.

POLSTOW, a hmlt. in the par. of Heavitree, hund. of Wonford, co. Devon, half a mile from Exeter, within which borough it is included. There are remains of a priory, founded here in 1146 by Baldwin de Rivers.

POLTIMORE, a par. in the hund. of Wonford, co. Devon, 5 miles N.E. of Exeter, its post town, and 4 from the Hill railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Clist, a branch of the Esk, and on the Exeter turnpike road. The par. includes the hmlt. of Ratsloe. The surface is level, and in some parts subject to inundation. The soil is clay and sand. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. There are mines of manganese. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £297, and the glebe comprises 65 acres. The living is a rect.* annexed to that of Huxham, in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £589. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient cruciform structure, with a tower containing six bells. The church was restored in 1830. It contains a carved oak screen, and monuments of the Bampfyldes, by whom the church was built in 1390. The parochial charities produce about £24 per annum, of which £19 goes to Bampfylde's almshouses. There is a school for both sexes, supported at the expense of Lady Poltimore. Poltimore House is the seat of Lord Poltimore, who is lord of the manor and principal landowner, and who takes hence the title of baron. A pleasure fair is held in September.

POLTON-STREET, a vil. in the par. of Cockpen, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 8 miles S.E. of Edinburgh.

POLWARTH, a par. in the co. of Berwick, Scotland. It comprises the vil. of the same name. It extends in length about 3 miles from E. to W., with an extreme breadth of 2 miles, and is bounded by the pars. of Langton Fogo, Greenlaw, and Longformacres. The surface is hilly in some parts, the greatest altitude being at Kyles Hill, about 1,100 feet above sea-level. The soil in the uplands is of a moorish character, but in other parts it is chiefly sandy. The parish is traversed by the road from Greenlaw to Dunse. The village of Polwarth is about 3 miles S.W. of Dunse. It is situated near the river Blackadder, and on the road between Greenlaw and Dunse, and formerly belonged to the Sinclairs and Homes. This par. is in the presb. of Dunse and synod of Merse and Teviotdale. The minister has a stipend of £201. The parish church was erected in 1703. Traces of the original church still exist. There is a parochial school.

POMEROY, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Dungannon, co. Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 15 miles E. of Omagh, and 105 from Dublin. It is a station of the Ulster and Omagh Junction railway. The par. is 7 miles long by 3 broad. The interior consists of a good light soil, and is traversed by the road from Dungannon to Omagh. The whole surface was formerly covered with forest. Part of the parish is mountainous, and comprises some extent of bog. The village is situated on the road from Dungannon to Newtown-Stewart. It contains a police station, and petty sessions are held at intervals. The dispensary is within the Cookstown poor-law union. This place was granted to Sir A. Chichester by James I. Pomeroy House and Mulnagore House are the principal residences of the district. Ruins of two castles are seen among the hills. Quartz, basalt, iron, and granite occur. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. £487, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is nearly a century old. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Donaghmore. There is likewise a Presbyterian chapel. There are several day and Sunday schools. Fairs are held on 1st June and 31st October, and on the second Tuesday in each month.

POMFRET. See PONTEFRACT, co. York.

PONDER'S END, a hmlt. in the par. of Enfield, hund. of Edmonton, co. Middlesex, 11 miles N.E. of London. It is a station on the Cambridge section of the Great Eastern railway. The Lea navigation passes within 1 mile of the village. There is a modern church, erected at a cost of £4,000, partly defrayed by the Parliamentary Commissioners.

PONDISFORD, or POUNDSFORD, a tythg. in the par. of Pitminster, co. Somerset, 3 miles S. of Taunton.

PONDS, a vil. in the par. of Rathfarnham, bar. of Rathdown, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, about a quarter of a mile S.E. of Rathfarnham. A convent formerly stood here.

POND-STREET, a hmlt. in the par. of Hampstead, co. Middlesex, 4 miles N.W. of St. Paul's, London.

PONSNOOTH, or PONSANOOTH, a hmlt. in the pars. of Gluvias and Stithians, hund. of East Kerrier, co. Cornwall, 3 miles N.W. of Penryn, and 6 from Truro. It is situated on the road from Falmouth and Redruth to Penryn. The inhabitants are partly employed in the woollen manufacture, and others in the Kennal gunpowder mills in the vicinity. There are places of worship for Wesleyans and Bible Christians, also a village school.

PONSONBY, a par. in the ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 1 mile from Calder Bridge, its post town, 4½ miles S. by E. of Egremont, and 2 from the station at Sellafield, on the Whitehaven and Furness Junction line of railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Calder, and is wholly agricultural. The soil consists principally of a loamy mould, and is very productive. Freestone abounds. On an eminence at Infell are remains of a Roman camp. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £113. The church is an ancient structure with a spired tower. It has an E. window filled with ancient stained glass, brought from Dalegarth Hall, and bearing the arms of the Stanleys. There is a brass to Frances Patryckson, the daughter of Sir Thomas Wyat, bearing date 1578, and several monuments of the Stanleys. The register dates from 1723. The church is situated in the park, near the centre of the parish. The Hall was erected in 1786, and situated in a well-wooded park. It has a prospect over the sea to Wales, &c. The interior contains relics of the Austhwaites, of Dalegarth, among which is a carved bedstead, made in 1345. E. Stanley, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

PONT-AR-COTHY, a hmlt. in the par. and co. of Carmarthen, 4 miles N.E. of Carmarthen. It is situated on the river Cothi.

PONT-AR-DAWE, a hmlt. in the par. of Killybebyll, hund. of Neath, co. Glamorgan, 4 miles N. of Neath, and 8 from Swansea. It is a station on the Swansea Vale railway. The river Tawe is here crossed by a one-arched bridge of 80 feet span.

PONT-AR-DULAIS, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandilofawr, co. Carmarthen, 9 miles S.E. of Carmarthen. It is a station on the Llanelly and Vale of Towey railway. It is situated near the confluence of the rivers Lougher and Dulais, and is much frequented as a fishing station.

PONTBLYDDYN, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Leeswood, par. of Mold, co. Flint, 2 miles S.E. of Mold.

PONTEFRACT, or POMFRET, a par., market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the upper div. of the wap. of Osgoldcross, West Riding co. York, 9 miles from Wakefield, 23 S. by W. of York, and 176 N. by W. of London. It is a station on the western section of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway, by which it is connected with the Great Northern and North-Eastern lines. The town is situated on a hill not far from the confluence of the rivers Aire and Don, and about 3 miles from the Aire and Calder canal. It is a place of great antiquity, and appears to have arisen from the ruins of the Roman station Legiolium, now Castleford, which is in the vicinity. It was called by the Saxons Kirkby, but after the Conquest obtained the name of "Pontfract" (Pons fractus), from the breaking down of the bridge over the river Aire by the Northumbrian insurgents in 1070, to arrest the progress of William the Conqueror, who was in pursuit, with a formidable army. The castle was originally built by Alric, or Ælfric, the Saxon, but having fallen into decay, was rebuilt by Hildebert de Lacy, to whom at the time of the Conquest William granted the honour and manor of Pontefract, and by whose family it was held until the early part of the 14th century, when it came into the possession, through marriage, of Thomas Earl of Lancaster, uncle to Edward II. The history of Pontefract Castle, is, perhaps, one of the most interesting on record, as having been the scene of more stirring and important historical events than any other similar edifice in England. This same Earl of Lancaster was taken prisoner, with many other barons, and beheaded for procuring the death of Gaveston. It was here that Richard II. was imprisoned, and "hacked to death," that Archbishop Scrope was beheaded in 1405, and that Richard III. put to death Anthony Woodville, Earl Rivers, Lord Grey, and others, to pave the way the more readily to his accession to the throne. It was also the place of confinement of the Duke of Orleans, taken prisoner at Agincourt, and was occasionally visited by Edward IV., Henry VII., and Henry VIII. It was taken by the celebrated Robert Aske, at the head of the "Pilgrims of Grace." During the civil wars of the reign of Charles I. Pontefract Castle was more than once besieged by both the royalists and parliamentarians, and was finally taken and dismantled by Major-General Lambert in 1649. The keep, which originally covered 7 acres, is the only portion now remaining. The population of Pontefract in 1851 was 5,100, with 1,069 inhabited houses, which in 1861 had increased to 5,346, with 1,122 inhabited houses; the parliamentary limits, however, are much more extensive, including in 1851 a population of 11,515, which had increased in 1861 to 11,736. —The town is chiefly noted for its extensive nursery-grounds, the growing of liquorice, and the manufacture of the far-famed Pontefract liquorice cake. There are also hat manufactories, extensive malting and brewing establishments, large potteries, brick and tile works, corn-mills, iron and brass foundries, and several coal-mines, in the immediate vicinity. The town consists mainly of one long street, crossed by several side streets. It is well paved, drained, and lighted with gas, and has a good supply of water. It was first chartered by Richard III., and is governed by the mayor, four aldermen, and twelve councillors, with the style and title of "the mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of the borough or town of Pontefract." It returns two members to parliament, the mayor being the returning officer. The principal public buildings are the townhall, erected at the joint expense of the county and the corporation; the market-house, a neat structure of stone, built in 1859; the union workhouse, a mechanics' institute, theatre, dispensary, two commercial banks, and savings-bank. From the castle hill is an extensive prospect over the vale of the Aire, and northwards, as far as York Minster. In the immediate vicinity of the town are extensive market gardens and nurseries.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £258. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is an ancient Norman structure, frequently restored, and is now the parish church, having been made parochial by Act of Parliament in 1790. The living of All Saints, which was originally the parish church, is a perpet. cur.,* val. £300, in the patron. of the Archbishop of York. The church of All Saints is the oldest building in the town, and is now in ruins, with the exception of the transept, which was restored some years ago for Divine worship. There are also chapels-of-ease at Carleton and East Hardwick, the latter recently repaired at the expense of the Rev. Bernard Greenwood, the chaplain. In addition to these churches are the district churches of Knottingley and East Knottingley, the livings of which are perpet. curs.,* varying in val. from £150 to £129. There is also a Roman Catholic church, built of stone, about 1750, and enlarged in 1856. The Wesleyans, Independents, Primitive Methodists, and Quakers, have each a place of worship. The free grammar school, founded in the reign of Edward VI., has three exhibitions at University College, Oxford. There are likewise National, Sunday, Roman Catholic, and British schools, besides several denominational schools, and many private schools. The endowed hospitals and almshouses are numerous, some of very ancient date, as Knolle's almshouses, erected in Richard II.'s reign, Bedehouse and Perfect's, Watkinson's, St. Nicholas, Cowper's, Trinity, and Frank's.—The general sessions of the peace for the West Riding are held annually at Pontefract; a county court is likewise held in the town. Archbishop Bramhall, and Lund, "a barber poet," were natives. Johnson, the antiquary, was a resident; and it gives title of Earl Pomfret to the Fermors. Races take place about 1 mile to the W. of the town at the end of July, and there is a good race-stand in the park. The Badsworth hounds are kept within a short distance, and attract many sporting country people to Pontefract. In the park, at a little distance from the town, are traces of the ancient road Watling Street, and vestiges of a Roman camp, but these have been partially obliterated by the recent enclosure of the waste lands. Two newspapers have been established, the Pontefract Telegraph, and the Pontefract Chronicle.—Market day is Saturday. Fairs are held on the Saturday before Palm Sunday, 5th May, 5th October, and first Saturday in December. A statute fair is held on the Thursday nearest 5th November.

PONTEFRACT-PARK, an ext. par. place in the upper div. of the wap. of Osgoldcross, West Riding co. York, 1 mile N. of Pontefract.

PONTELAND, or PONT ISLAND, a par. in the W. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 7 miles N.W. of Newcastle, its post town, and 6 E. of Stamfordham. The parish, which is extensive, is situated on the W. bank of the river Pont, from which it takes its name, and is intersected by the river Blythe. It contains the tnshps. of Berwick Hill, High and Little Callerton, Coldcoats, and eight others. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is of a loamy description, well adapted for wheat; and there are extensive portions of rich pasture. It was at this place that Alexander of Scotland made peace with the English in 1244; and the town and castle were subsequently burnt by the Scots previously to the battle of Otterburn. The Bertrams, Erringtons, and Silvertops, formerly possessed the parish, which was originally much more extensive than at present, including the township of Dinnington, which is now a separate parish. There are collieries and stone-quarries. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £2,067 10*s.*, with a glebe of 85 acres, and the vicarial tithes for £296 4*s., with a glebe of 143 acres. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Durham, val. £520, in the patron. of Merton College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was formerly collegiate. It is a cruciform structure, with a square tower, surmounted by a low spire containing one bell. The interior of the church contains arms and tombs of the Goftons of Eland, Horsleys of Milburn Grange, Ogles of Kirkby, Carrs of Dunston, and other families. A memorial window has been recently inserted at the expense of Miss Bates, of Milbourne Hall. There is an endowed free school for both sexes, founded by Richard Coates in 1719. The Wesleyans and Scottish Presbyterians have each a place of worship. The Castle ward union poorhouse is situated in this parish. The board of guardians meet in the board-room every alternate Monday. Admiral Mitford is lord of the manor. Races take place annually.

PONTESBURY, a div. in the hund of Ford, co. Salop, contains the pars. of Pontesbury and Habberley.

PONTESBURY, a par. in the Pontesbury div. of the hund. of Ford, co. Salop, 7½ miles S.W. of Shrewsbury, its post town, and 15½ N.E. of Montgomery. It is a station on the Shrewsbury and Minsterley branch of the London and North-Western railway. The parish, which is extensive, is situated on a branch of the river Severn, and on the high road to Bishop's Castle. It comprises Cruckton, Longdon, Pontesford, Asterley, and 17 other tnshps. The village of Pontesbury, which is very considerable, is a polling and petty sessions town. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the coal, lime, and lead mills. On Pontesbury hills are traces of a British encampment, also of a Roman well; and near the village Roman tiles, and other antiquities, have been discovered. The living is a rect.* in three portions, in the dioc. of Hereford. The first portion is valued at £800; the second portion is also a rect.* with the cur. of Cructon annexed, val. £735, in the patron. of Queen's College, Oxford; and the third portion, also a rect.,* val. £473. The church, dedicated to St. George, was formerly collegiate, including a dean and three prebendaries. It has a tower containing five bells, and was rebuilt in 1828. There is a district church at Longden, the living of which is a don. cur., val. £75. There is also a chapel-of-ease at Cructon. The parochial charities produce about £22 per annum. There are two schools for both sexes, one of which is situated at Lea Cross. The Independents and Baptists have each a place of worship.

PONTESFORD, a tnshp. in the par. and hund. of Pontesbury, co. Salop, 1 mile S.E. of Pontesbury, and 6 miles S.W. of Shrewsbury.

PONTFADOG, a hmlt. in the par. of Llangollen, hund. of Chirk, co. Denbigh, 2 miles from Llangollen, and 19 S.E. of Denbigh. It is situated near the river Dee and the Ellesmere canal. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Llangollen.

PONTFAEN, a par. in the hund. of Kemess, co. Pembroke, 5 miles from Fishguard, and 4 S.W. of Newport. The village is of small extent. Pontfaen House is an ancient mansion, formerly the seat of the Laugharne family. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £72. The church is dedicated to St. Bernard.

PONTFATHEW, a vil. in the tnshp. of Gwyddalfynydd, par. of Towyn, co. Merioneth, 2 miles from Towyn.

PONTISBRIGHT. See CHAPEL, co. Essex.

PONTLLANYCHAIARN, a vil. in the par. of Llanbadarn-Fawr, co. Cardigan, 2 miles E. of Aberystwith. It is situated in the township of Lower Llanbadarn-y-Croyddin, near the river Ystwith and Sarn Helen Way.

PONT-NEDD-FYCHAN, or PONT-NEATH-VAUGHAN, a hmlt. on the borders of cos. Glamorgan and Brecon, 11 miles N.E. of Neath. It is situated in a wild and mountainous country at the head of the vale of Neath. At a short distance from the village are the Hepste, Melite, Purthen, Llech, and Sychryd falls, also Porth-yr-Ogof Cave, Bwa Maen rock, and a logan stone.

PONTNEWYDD, a hmlt. in the par. of Trevethan, co. Monmouth, 3 miles from Pontypool, and 5 from Newport. It is a station on the Hereford, Abergavenny, and Newport section of the West Midland railway. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the tin works. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £150. The church is a modern structure.

PONTON MAGNA, or PAUNTON, GREAT, a par. in the soke of Grantham, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 4 miles S. of Grantham, its post town, and 4 N.W. of Colsterworth. It is a station on the Great Northern railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Witham and on the Great North road. It is about 1 mile from the ancient Ermine Street, and is conjectured by some to have been the Ad-Pontem of Antoninus—many coins, tesselated pavements, and other relics of Roman origin having been discovered. The inhabitants are wholly engaged in agriculture. There are several quarries of good building-stone. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £463, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to the Holy Cross, has a pinnacled tower and spire containing five bells. It was erected in 1519 by a merchant named Anthony Ellys. The parochial charities produce about £53 per annum, which goes towards Archer's school, founded in 1717. The Earl of Dysart is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

PONTON PARVA, or PAUNTON, LITTLE, a par. in the wap. of Winnibriggs, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 3 miles S. of Grantham, its railway station and post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Great North road, near the bank of the river Witham, and is wholly agricultural. Limestone and freestone are quarried. The tithes were commuted for land and corn rents under an Enclosure Act in 1811, and there are 26 acres of glebe. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £336. The church, dedicated to St. Guthlac, is a very ancient structure, and partly pulled down in 1657. The Hall is a stone edifice situated in the midst of pleasure-grounds. C. Turnor, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

PONTOP, a vil. in the tnshp. of Collierley and par. of Lanchester, co. Durham, 9 miles S.W. of Gateshead, and 12 N.W. of Durham. It is situated under Pontop Pike, which rises 1,018 feet in height.

PONTRHYDYRUN, a station on the Eastern Valleys branch of the Monmouthshire railway, 2 miles from Pontypool.

PONTRILAS, a hmlt. in the par. of Ewyas Harold, hund. of Webtree, 10 miles S.W. of Hereford. It is a station on the Hereford, Abergavenny, and Newport section of the West Midland railway. The principal residence is Pontrilas Court, in the valley of the river Monnow.

PONT-Y-FEREM, a vil. in the hmlt. of Cilcarw and par. of Llangendeirne, co. Carmarthen, 5 miles S.E. of Carmarthen.

PONTYPOOL, a tnshp., post and market town in the par. of Trevethan, upper div. of the hund. of Abergavenny, co. Monmouth, 8 miles from Newport, 10 from Abergavenny, and 18 S.W. of Monmouth. It is a station on the Taff Vale Extension line, which branches off from the West Midland section of the Great Western railway at Pontypool Road, about 2 miles distant from the town. It is situated among the hills on the river Avon Llwyd, near the Brecon and Monmouthshire canal, and at the base of the bold elevation of Mynydd-Maen. It is supposed to have arisen out of the ancient village of Trevethan, and is now a busy manufacturing place. The town, which is large, but irregularly laid out, is a polling-place for the county elections, and a petty sessions town. In the reign of Charles II., Thomas Allgood introduced the manufacture of japanned wares, in imitation of those brought from Japan, and his son invented a new process of polishing iron, called, from its having been first practised here, "Pont-y-Pool ware;" but these manufactures have since been transferred to Birmingham. The prosperity of the town was further secured by the Hanburys, who first made tinned and sheet iron here in the 17th century. The town of late years has greatly increased in importance, and now contains many well-built houses and shops. The principal public buildings are the townhall, an Italian structure recently presented to the inhabitants by C. Hanbury Leigh, Esq., of Pontypool Park; a theological college, savings-bank, two commercial branch banks, a brewery, gas works, iron mills for making tin plates, and several extensive forges. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the neighbouring collieries, iron mines, and lime works with which this district abounds. There are tramroads leading from the works in various directions. In the vicinity are the hamlets of Pont-y-Moyle, Trostnant, Trefeddyn, and Varteage, at which last are situated the furnaces of the British Mining Company. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £85, in the patron. of the Vicar of Llanover. The church, dedicated to St. James, is a very ancient stone structure with a small chapel of the Hanburys. There are places of worship belonging to the Roman Catholics, Baptists, Wesleyans, Independents, and Society of Friends, also National and other schools. The principal residence is Pont-y-Pool Park, situated on rising ground on the right of the town, from which it is divided by the river Avon Llwyd. The views from its grounds are varied and extensive. The mansion contains paintings by Murillo and other eminent masters. The Pontypool Poor-law Union comprises 22 pars. or tnshps. It is also the head of new County Court and superintendent registry districts. A court-leet is held annually for the lords of the manors of Wensland and Brynwyn, at which the stewards preside. Market day is Saturday. Fairs are held on the 2nd April, 22nd April, 5th July, and 10th October, for the sale of horses, cattle, and cheese.

PONT-Y-PRID. See NEWBRIDGE, co. Glamorgan.

POOL, a vil. in the par. of Muckart, co. Perth, Scotland, 2½ miles W. of Crook-of-Devon. It is situated on the road from Clackmannan to Perth.

POOL, or WELSHPOOL, a par. in the borough of Pool, co. Montgomery. See WELSHPOOL.

POOL, a tnshp. in the par. of Brotherton, and partly within the lib. of St. Peter's, West Riding co. York, 4 miles N.E. of Pontefract, and 1½ mile N.E. of Ferrybridge. It is joined to Byrome, and includes the park.

POOL, a hund. in the co. of Montgomery, contains the par. of Llanfechan and parts of Guilsfield, Llansaintffraid, and Meifod.

POOLANAS, or LOWER LOUGH, a small lake in the Vale of Glendalough, bar. of North Ballinacor, co. Wicklow, Ireland.

POOL BAY, a fishing station in the South Shetland Islands, coast of Scotland, 4 miles N. of Sumburgh Head.

POOLBEG LIGHTS, two lighthouses at the end of South Wall, in Dublin Bay, co. Dublin, Ireland. They were put up in 1768, and are visible at sea for 12 miles.

POOLDOODY, a fishing creek on the E. side of Ballyvaughan Bay, co. Clare, Ireland.

POOLE, a seaport, market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, and a county in itself, but locally situated in the hund. of Cogdean, co. Dorset, 23 miles E. of Dorchester, and 106 S.W. of London by road or 123 miles by the South-Western railway, on which it is a station. The Dorset and Somerset Central railway affords direct communication between the Bristol and English channels at Poole. A powerful steam-vessel commenced running between this port and Cherbourg in 1865, forming the most direct means of communication between Bristol, Birmingham, and the whole of the N. of England, and Spain, the Mediterranean, and S. and W. of France. It was inaugurated by international banquets at Cherbourg and Poole in June and September, 1865. It is a very ancient place, and is supposed to have been frequented as a port by the Romans, as traces of a Roman road are met with between it and Winchester. After the Norman conquest it was included in the manor of Canford, and was held by William Longespee, who conferred on it its first charter, with authority to elect a portreeve. It subsequently passed to the Plantagenets, Lacys, Montacutes, and other noble families, and is now the property of the Guests of Dowlais, Sir Ivor Bertie Guest, Bart., being the present lord of the manor. Poole first came into notice in the reign of Edward III., who made use of it as a magazine during his wars with France, and to whom it furnished four ships for the siege of Calais. Henry VI. and succeeding monarchs conferred important privileges on it, but it appears to have declined, and Leland speaks of it as a poor fishing village in his time. In the reign of Elizabeth it enjoyed a profitable trade with Spain, which was interrupted by the declaration of war with that country, but when peace was restored, the Queen granted two additional charters to the town, confirming all its ancient privileges, and making Poole a county of itself. It was garrisoned by the parliamentarian troops during the civil wars of Charles I., but was the object of many severe contests, always siding against the king, for which reason Charles II., when he came to the throne, destroyed all the fortifications that had been there erected. In 1665 it was devastated by the plague.—The town stands on what may be termed a peninsula, on the N. side of Poole harbour. It is well built, and consists of the old and new towns; the former, which lies to the W., has a mean appearance, but the latter contains several good streets, the principal of which run N. and S. The streets are lighted with gas, and the town is well supplied with water. The population in 1851 was 9,255, with 1,903 inhabited houses, which in 1861 had increased to 9,759 with 2,034 inhabited houses. It has returned two members to parliament from the reign of Henry VI., and since the passing of the Reform Bill includes the hamlet of Hamworthy and the townships of Longfleet and Parkstone in the parish of Canford Magna. It is now divided into two wards, and governed by the mayor, who is the returning officer and admiral of the port, six aldermen and eighteen councillors, with the title of "mayor, bailiffs, burgesses, and commonalty of the town of Poole." A sheriff is elected annually. The principal public buildings are the guildhall, erected in the middle of the last century, at the expense of the town members, the town-house and harbour office, temperance, Masonic and Odd Fellows' halls, gaol, the custom-house, rebuilt in 1813, union workhouse, vegetable and fish markets, gas and water works, the latter just completed under an Act of Parliament obtained in 1863, a public library situated at the lower end of High-street and erected in 1830, a steam flour-mill, three commercial banks, a savings-bank, and a wooden bridge to Hamworthy; also literary and mechanics' institutes. The new suburbs of Upper and Lower Parkstone, which extend in the direction of Bournemouth, contain many villa residences, commanding views of the English channel, Poole harbour, and the isles of Purbeck and Wight. The harbour is lined with quays and warehouses, close to which ships of considerable tonnage have the advantage of lying afloat at low water. Another advantage which this harbour enjoys is its position with respect to the Solent; instead of twice a day, the tide comes up four times a day, flowing 6 hours, ebbing and flowing 1¼ hour, and then ebbing 3 hours. The entrance to the harbour is a quarter of a mile wide, and a channel from two to six fathoms deep leads up to the town. There are two fixed lights, which were erected in 1849 for guiding vessels entering the harbour at night, and may be seen 6 miles off; one is 16 feet high, the other 38 feet. There is a good fishery of herrings, plaice, and other fish; and excellent wild-fowl sport in winter. The Newfoundland trade, which was formerly the chief trade of the port, is nearly extinct, but a large and increasing business is done in connection with the coasting and foreign trades. Ship-building is carried on to a considerable extent, and some of the swiftest yachts have been built here. The manufacture of cordage, sailcloth, and other articles necessary for the use of shipping, is extensively carried on. There are six rather extensive potteries, and Purbeck clay for the Staffordshire potteries is shipped in the harbour to the amount of 150,000 tons annually. These works, together with the corn and timber trade and fisheries, and a large iron foundry for agricultural instruments, afford employment to many hands.—The living is a perpet. cur. in the archdeac. of Dorset and dioc. of Sarum, val. £307. The church, dedicated to St. James, was rebuilt about 1820, at a cost of nearly £13,000. The E. window of stained glass and the carved mahogany altar-piece are fine specimens of workmanship. Hardy, the Nonconformist minister, lies buried here, as does also W. Thompson, who, in William III.'s reign, assisted only by a man and a boy in a small sloop, captured an armed French privateer with 16 men off Cherbourg, after two hours' hard fighting. There are also the district churches of St. Paul, Parkstone, and Longfleet, and the church of Ham, rebuilt on the site of a very ancient chapel destroyed in the civil wars. The Independents, Wesleyans, Baptists, Primitive Methodists, Unitarians, Society of Friends, and Roman Catholics, have places of worship. There was anciently a friary here. There is an endowed free grammar school, also British, Sunday, and National schools. There are several almshouses, some of very ancient date, those in Church-street having been erected in the early part of the 15th century. The union poorhouse is situated at Longfleet, in the parish of Canford Magna, the Poole Poor-law Union comprising seven parishes besides that of St. James's, Poole. It is also the seat of New County Court and superintendent registry districts. A court of quarter sessions and a county court are held in the town.—Many relics of antiquity are to be seen in Poole, including the town cellars near the quay, an ancient wall and gate in Clement's Alley, of the period of Richard III., and in the Isle of Purbeck sepulchral barrows and early earthworks on the hills, with the far-famed Agglestone, supposed to be a Druidical sacrificial stone weighing upwards of 400 tons. R. Gibbon, a divine, and Sir P. Thompson, the antiquary, were natives. One weekly newspaper, the Poole and South-Western Herald, is published here on Thursday. Market days are Mondays and Thursdays. Fairs are held on the 1st May and 2nd November, each lasting eight days.

POOLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Acton, hund. of Nantwich, co. Chester, 2 miles N. of Nantwich. It is a small straggling village, situated near the Chester canal. Its chief attraction is Poole Hall, formerly the seat of the Leycester family.

POOLE, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Otley, upper div. of the wap. of Skyrack, West Riding co. York, 3 miles E. of Otley, its post town, and 1 mile from Arthington railway station, on the North Eastern line. The village, which is of small extent, is situate at the bridge over the river Wharfe, of which Poole Bank Hill commands a prospect. A large portion of the inhabitants are chiefly employed in spinning and in paper-making, the latter being carried on to a considerable extent. There are a corn-mill, two paper-mills, and a scribbling and fulling mill. The soil is of a rich description with a subsoil of clay. There are some quarries of good building-stone. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £69, in the patron. of the Vicar of Otley. The church is a stone edifice of recent erection, with a campanile turret containing one bell. A Sunday-school is held at the church. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. John Pulleine, Esq., is lord of the manor.

POOLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Sourton, co. Devon, 4 miles S.W. of Okehampton. It is situated under Dartmoor.

POOLE-KEYNES, a par. in the hund. of Malmesbury, co. Wilts, 6 miles S. of Cirencester, its post town, and 2 S.E. of Tetbury-road station, on the Great Western railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the line of the Cheltenham railway and the river Thomas, about a mile from its source. It is wholly agricultural, and in some places forest marble is found. The buildings are generally of stone. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £367, in the patron. of the Duchy of Lancaster. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a square tower; it was rebuilt in 1778 on the site of an older one. There is a National school. Robert Gordon, Esq., is lord of the manor.

POOLE LODGE, and PRATLEYS LODGE, ext. par. places in the par. of Shipton-under-Wychwood, co. Oxford, 4 miles N.W. of Witney. They are situated in Wychwood Forest.

POOLE, NETHER, a tnshp. in the par. of Eastham, higher div. of the hund. of Wirrall, co. Chester, 2½ miles N. of the Sutton station on the Birkenhead, Lancashire, and Cheshire Junction railway, and 8 N. of Chester. It is situated on the river Mersey. Poole Hall is an ancient stone mansion, formerly the residence of the Poole family.

POOLE, OVER, a tnshp. in the par. of Eastham, higher div. of the hund. of Wirrall, co. Chester, adjoins Nether Poole.

POOLEWE, or POLEWE, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of Gairloch, co. Ross, Scotland, 45 miles W. by N. of Dingwall. It is situated in the Highlands, between lochs Ewe and Mare, the latter studded with numerous islands. It extends near 20 miles in length by 12 in breadth, and is traversed by the river Minch. The surface is mountainous, and interspersed with forest and lakes. The land is chiefly highland pasture and waste. The inhabitants are Gaelic-speaking, and many are engaged in the cod and herring fisheries. A steam-boat keeps up constant communication with Stornoway across the Minch. The par. is in the presb. of Glenelg, and in the patron. of the crown. The church was built in 1828. There are also a Free Church preaching station and schools.

POOLEY, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of High Barton, par. of Barton, West ward, co. Westmoreland, 4½ miles S.W. of Penrith. It is situated at the foot of the lake Ulleswater, and on the river Eamont, which flows out of the lake, and is here crossed by a bridge of three arches, uniting at this point Westmoreland and Cumberland.

POOLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Polesworth, co. Warwick, 4 miles N.W. of Atherstone. It is situated on the Coventry canal. The Manor House, built in the reign of Henry VIII., formerly belonged to the Marmions of Tamworth and to the Cokayns.

POOLMERICK, a hmlt. in the par. of Chepstow, upper div. of the hund. of Caldicott, co. Monmouth, 1½ mile S.W. of Chepstow, and 11 miles S. of Monmouth. It is situated about 3 miles from the mouth of the river Wye. The principal seat is Poolmerick.

POOLNASHERRY BAY, a creek near the estuary of the river Shannon, co. Clare, Ireland, 3 miles W. of Kilrush.

POOL, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Coleridge, co. Devon, 4½ miles S.E. of Kingsbridge, its post town. It is situated on Salcombe Creek, and includes the hmlts. of North Poole and Frogmoor. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £376, and there are 45½ acres of glebe. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £486. The church is dedicated to St. Cyriac. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum.

POOLVASH, a hmlt. in the par. of Kirk Male, Isle of Man, 2 miles W. of Castletown, and 12 S.W. of Douglas. There is a saline spring, also a quarry of marble.

POOR HOLE, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Peter's, hund. of Ringslow, and lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 2 miles S.E. of Margate.

POORSTOCK, a lib. in the Bridport div. of co. Dorset, contains a part of the par. of Poorstock, comprising an area of 3,680 acres.

POORSTOCK, or POWERSTOCK, a par. chiefly in the above lib., but partly in the hund. of Eggerton, Bridport div. of co. Dorset, 4 miles N.E. of Bridport, its post town, and 5 S.E. of Beaminster. The par. comprises the tythgs. of West Milton, Mappercombe, South Poorton-cum-Loscombe, and Witherston. It was formerly a market town by grant of Edward III. The village is small, and chiefly agricultural. On Eggerton Hill, at the extreme end of the Roman road from Dorchester, are traces of two Roman camps, and at Castle Hill foundations of a castle, built by King Athelstane, who occasionally resided here. There are quarries of freestone and paving stone. The appropriate tithes, belonging to the Dean and Chapter of Salisbury, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £303, and the vicarial for £230. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of West Milton annexed, in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £195, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was originally built in the reign of Henry VII., and though the greater portion of it has been recently rebuilt, it still retains its chancel arch and S. doorway. In the chancel are six windows of stained glass. The alterations were effected at an outlay of about £2,200. There is also a chapel-of-ease at West Milton. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is an excellent parochial school, erected on a site presented by Mr. Shepperd, of Milton.

POORTON, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Beaminster-Forum, co. Dorset, 4 miles S.E. of Beaminster, its post town, and 5 N.E. of Bridport. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The par. comprises the hmlt. of Loscombe. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £79, and the glebe comprises about 2 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £75. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is of great antiquity, and was enlarged some years back. The Duke of Cleveland is lord of the manor.

POORTON, SOUTH, a tythg. in the par. of Poorstock, hund. of Eggerton, co. Dorset.

POPELEY GATE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Gomersall, par. of Birstal, West Riding co. York, 3½ miles N.W. of Dewsbury.

POPHAM, a par. in the lower half of Bermondspit hund., Basingstoke div., co. Hants, 2 miles E. of Mitcheldever, its post town, and 7 S.W. of Basingstoke. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. Popham was formerly the seat of a family of the same name. The London and South-Western railway passes a little to the W. of the village, through two tunnels, each of 200 yards in length, and has a station at Andover Road. The living is a cur. annexed to the perpet. cur. of Woodmancott, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. Catherine, is an ancient edifice, and was once the chapel adjoining the Earl of Popham's mansion. There is a National school. Lord Ashburton is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

POPLAR, a par. and populous suburban district in the Tower div. of the hund. of Ossulstone and borough of the Tower Hamlets, co. Middlesex, 3½ miles S.E. of St. Paul's, London. It is connected with the metropolis by the London and Blackwall, and by the North-Western and Docks Junction lines of railway, which last communicates with the North London and Great Eastern lines. It also has constant communication with all parts of London by omnibus and steam-boat. It is situated at the south-eastern extremity of the county, on the N. bank of the Thames, here joined by the river Lea. The surface is low, but not marshy, lying principally between the Limehouse and Blackwall reaches of the Thames, which bound it on the E., S., and W.; while on the N. it is bounded by the parishes of Bromley and Limehouse. It includes the West India Docks, Blackwall, and the Isle of Dogs, having been separated from Stepney, and created into a distinct parish by Act of Parliament in 1817. It was given by William of Wykeham to the Abbey of St. Mary de Grace at Tower Hill, and formed part of the estates of Charles I. when Prince of Wales. In former times it abounded in poplar trees, for the growth of which its situation near the river was highly favourable, and from which circumstance it derives its name. The greater part of the land is now built over, the parish having more than doubled its population in the last twenty years, viz. from 20,346 in 1841 to 43,529 in 1861, of which latter number the recently formed ecclesiastical district of Christ Church contains 8,579. The inhabitants are chiefly connected with the shipping interest, or are employed in the docks, in Green's and other extensive shipbuilding yards, and in the various factories and warehouses on the river. The place is partly paved, well lighted with gas, and amply supplied with water by the East London waterworks. It contains the K police station, a hospital, union poorhouse, a savings-bank, an institute for the promotion of literature and science, situated in the East India-road, and the town-hall, erected on the removal of a more ancient edifice which stood in the highway. The most distinguishing feature, however, of Poplar are the extensive docks which run across the Isle of Dogs and fill 204 acres, having been formed near the commencement of the present century, at a cost of nearly £1,250,000; the import West India Dock covers 30 acres, and is surrounded with warehouses for sugar, coffee, rum, dyewoods, and other colonial products; the export dock is less capacious, covering 24 acres, but has basins at both ends near Limehouse and Blackwall opening to the Thames. At a short distance from these are the timber dock, the south dock or canal made in 1799 at a cost of about £140,000, and the East India Docks which were constructed under the superintendence of Rennie in 1806, and comprise import and export docks scarcely less capacious than the West India Docks [see BLACKWALL]. There are also extensive works connected with Seaward's steam factories, Smith's wire-rope works, Green's and other extensive shipbuilding yards, iron-foundries, chain-cable factories, ropewalks, pearl ash works, and various other important establishments connected with the shipping trade.—The Borough-English custom prevails within this manor. The Poplar Poor-law Union comprises the pars. of Bow, Bromley, and Poplar. It is also the head of a superintendent registry district, but is divided between the Bow and Whitechapel new county court districts. The quay of the Trinity Board is at the mouth of the river Lea, in the district of Blackwall. It was here that Sir Richard Steele had his laboratory and studied alchemy. George Green, the eminent shipbuilder, who died in 1849, was a munificent benefactor to this parish, having appropriated more than £10,000 to the establishment of schools and other charitable uses; he founded the free school, sailors' home and chapel, the Blackwall free school, and the East India-road school for infants.—The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of London, val. £632, in the patron. of Brasenose College, Oxford. The parish church, dedicated to All Saints, and which stands on the S. side of the East India-road, in the centre of a cemetery, is a Grecian structure, with a steeple of the composite order rising 161 feet from the ground. It was built by C. Hollin in 1823, at a cost of £35,000, defrayed by the parishioners. The interior is ornamented. There are also the new district church, called Christ Church, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £300, in the patron. of the bishop, and the chplry. of Blackwall, val. £500, attached to the hospital founded by the late East India Company. The latter church, dedicated to St. Mary, was founded in 1654, but was almost entirely rebuilt in 1776 by the East India Company, and is surrounded by a burial-ground, in which are tombs of the Dethicks of Poplar House; of R. Ainsworth, the compiler of the Latin Dictionary; of George Steevens, the commentator on Shakspeare, who was born here in 1736, and has a monument with epitaph by Hayley; of Dr. Ridley, minister of Poplar, who died here in 1774, with epitaph by Bishop Lowth; and of his son, Rev. James Ridley, author of "Tales of the Genii." In the East India-road is the Seamen's chapel, erected at the expense of the late George Green; also another chapel in course of construction. There are places of worship for Roman Catholics, Baptists, Independents, and Wesleyans, the last named being erected in 1848, by William Bath, at a cost of near £7,500. The local charities produce about £400 per annum, besides a share in some of those at Stepney, including the endowments of the East India Company's almshouses and Johnson's shipwrights' almshouses. There are a free school, instituted in 1816, which has an income from endowment of £250, also National schools, partly endowed, an infant school in the East India-road, built in 1828, a Roman Catholic school, and a school for Irish Protestants.

POPPLETON, NETHER, a par. in York Ainsty, East Riding co. York, 4 miles N.W. of York, its post town. It is a station on the York, Knaresborough, and Harrogate section of the North-Eastern railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Ouse, and is chiefly agricultural. The soil consists of sand and clay. The line of the Great Northern railway here crosses the river Ouse on a bridge of three semi-elliptical arches, 30 feet above the bed of that river. The par. includes part of the chplry. of Upper Poppleton. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. £155, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing two bells. The interior of the church has several monuments of ancient date, also a stained E. window. The register dates from the 15th century. There is a Church of England school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. Andrew Montague, Esq., is lord of the manor.

POPPLETON, UPPER or OVER, a chplry. in the pars. of Poppleton Nether and St. Mary Bishophill Junior, York Ainsty, East Riding co. York, 4½ miles N.W. of York, its post town. It is a station on the York and Harrogate section of the North-Eastern railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the York and Boroughbridge turnpike road, and is wholly agricultural. The tithes were commuted for land under an Enclosure Act in 1769. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Copmanthorpe, in the dioc. of York. The church is an ancient structure with a turret containing one bell. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. A. Montague, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

POPTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Pwllcrochan, co. Pembroke, 1 mile S. of Milford. It is situated on the shore of Milford Haven. A large fort has been lately completed on Popton Point, and comprises an immense powder-magazine and barracks for 8 artillery officers and 200 to 300 men.

PORCHESTER, or PORTCHESTER, a par. in the hund. of Portsdown, co. Hants, 2 miles S.E. of Fareham, its post town, and 7½ from Portsmouth. It is a station on the London and South-Western railway. It is situated at the top of Portsmouth harbour under Portsdown Hill, and was the Roman Portus Magnus or Caer Peris of the Britons. A castle of great strength was erected on the old Roman works by the Saxons, who named it Port-ceastre, and which was rebuilt soon after the Norman conquest, and was held by Queen Margaret in the reign of Edward I. It subsequently came through the Nortons to Thistlethwayte of Southwick, and gives title of baron to the Earl of Carnarvon. The walls of the castle, which stands on a neck of land projecting a considerable way into Portsmouth harbour, are from 8 to 12 feet in thickness and 18 feet high, enclosing a quadrangular area of nearly 5 acres, and are defended by numerous towers, and surrounded by a broad and deep moat. The entrance to the outer area, now laid out as public gardens, is through massive Norman towers on the E. and W. sides, and in front is the keep, a strong square structure with four towers, the largest being at the north-western angle. Many of the rooms, which are very spacious, are vaulted with stone. Previously to the destruction of the harbour, through the retiring of the sea, this place was the principal station of the British navy, now removed to Portsmouth. The village, called by way of distinction Porchester Street, extends for about a mile on the road to Fareham. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The land, which was once forest, is now chiefly arable, except about 200 acres of downs. A Nelson column stands on a hill. The impropriate tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £320, and the vicarial for one of £180, besides 11 acres of glebe. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £223. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient and cruciform structure, with a low central tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains numerous monuments, among which is one to Sir Thomas Cornwallis, groom-porter to Queen Elizabeth and James I. The chancel, which is small, has an E. window of three lights. The building was originally situated within the castle walls, and has been partially destroyed, but the W. front is still in good preservation. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, entirely supported by Thomas Thistlethwayte, Esq., who is lord of the manor. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship.

PORGUS, a sandbank off Linney Head, co. Pembroke. It has from 5 to 10 fathoms water.

PORINGLAND, GREAT or EAST, a par. in the hund. of Henstead, co. Norfolk, 4½ miles S.E. of Norwich, and 5 S.E. of Swainsthorpe station on the Great Eastern railway. The village, which is small, is situated on the road from Norwich to Bungay. The tithes have been commuted for corn-rents under an Enclosure Act, and the glebe comprises 18 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £274. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to All Saints. The register commences in 1560. The parochial charities produce about £37 per annum. The Earl of Rosebery is lord of the manor.

PORINGLAND, LITTLE or WEST, a par. in the hund. of Henstead, co. Norfolk, 5¾ miles S. by E. of Norwich. It is a small village united to that of Great Poringland, and is wholly agricultural. The land is chiefly arable. The living is a rect.* annexed to that of Howe, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church of St. Michael has long since been demolished.

PORKINGTON, LOWER and UPPER, tnshps. in the par. of Selattyn, co. Salop, 1 mile N.W. of Oswestry.

PORLOCK, a par., post town, and small seaport, in the hund. of Carhampton, co. Somerset, 6 miles W. of Minehead, and 8 W. of Dunster. This place, which derives its name from the Saxon portlocan, "an enclosed harbour," is a decayed market town, situated among the cliffs of Porlock Bay, in the Bristol Channel. The par. contains the hmlts. of Porlock Weir, West Porlock, Yearnor, and Bossington. It was once the seat of the West Saxon kings, and was invaded by Danish pirates in 918. In 1052 it was burnt by Harold, the son of Earl Godwin, who sailed here from Ireland with nine ships, and vestiges of whose camp are still remaining. The town comprises two streets, composed of straggling and small houses. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the fisheries, and others in the coasting trade. The soil is of a sandy nature upon a subsoil of hard stone. The surface is diversified by lofty hills, winding valleys, and deep glens. Coal and lime are largely imported from Wales. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £339, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Dubritius, is an ancient structure 90 feet in length, with a wooden spired tower containing a clock and five bells. The interior of the church contains a tomb and effigies of the Rogers family. The church has recently undergone a complete restoration, including new roof, seats, &c. The parochial charities consist of a bequest by Henry Rogers, producing 18*s.* per month, which is distributed among 12 poor persons who have not received parochial relief. There are a day and Sunday Church of England school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Ashby Combe is the principal residence. Colonel Blathwayt is lord of the manor. Fairs are held on the Thursdays prior to the 9th October, 12th May, and 12th November, chiefly for cattle and sheep; the October fair being the largest.

PORLOCK-WEIR, a hmlt. in the par. of Porlock, hund. of Carhampton, co. Somerset, 1½ mile W. of Porlock.

PORLOCK, WEST, a hmlt. in the par. of Porlock, hund. of Carhampton, co. Somerset, 1 mile W. of Porlock.

PORT, a par. in the bar. of Ferrard, co. Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles E. of Dunleer, its post town. The surface consists of a good soil, and is traversed by the road from Dunany to Drogheda, on which stands the village. It has a coast line of about 1 mile in extent. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Armagh, val., with Rathdrummin, £248, in the patron. of the crown. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, also a day school. Seafield is the principal residence.

PORT, a vil. in the par. of Inver, bar. of Bannagh, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 5 miles W.S.W. of Mount Charles. It is situated on the W. side of Inverbay. Fairs are held on 14th March, 12th May, 26th June, 26th August, 5th November, and 15th December.

PORTACHUILLA, a vil. in the island of Clare, bar. of Murrisk, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. It is chiefly occupied by fishermen. Ruins of a monastery formerly existed here.

PORTACLOY, a harbour on the coast of co. Mayo, Ireland, 1 mile E. of Benwee, and 10 N. by W. of Belmullet. It is a coastguard station.

PORTADOWN, a quoad sacra par. in the bar. of West O'Neilland, co. Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing part of the quoad civilia par. of Drumcree, and the principal part of the town of Portadown (as under). The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Armagh, and in the patron. of the Incumbent of Drumcree. There is a church erected in 1826, also a Methodist meeting-house, and one or two day schools.

PORTADOWN, a small post and market town in the pars. of Legoe and Drumcree, bars. of East and West O'Neilland, co. Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 10 miles N. of Armagh, and 82 from Dublin. It is a station on the Portadown and Omagh junction railway. It is situated on the banks of the river Bann, which is here spanned by a bridge, and on the road from Armagh to Belfast. The town is a busy place. The surrounding district is well cultivated, and has numerous villa residences. It contains the parish church, two chapels, a market-house, two branch banks, several schools, and a dispensary, which last is within the Lurgan Poor-law Union. Small vessels can approach the town by way of the river, and the Newry canal passes at a short distance. A considerable cotton and linen trade is carried on. Here is a chief police station, and petty sessions are held at intervals. This town was the site of a stronghold of the M'Canns, and was founded by the Obyn family by gift of Charles I. The Duke of Manchester is the present proprietor. Saturday is market day. Fairs are held on Easter and Whit Mondays, and on the 3rd Saturday in every month.

PORTAFERRY, a small post and market town and seaport in the par. of Ballyphilip, bar. of Ards, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 8 miles N.E. of Downpatrick, and 103 from Dublin. It is situated on the narrow neck of Lough Strangford, at Strangford ferry. The town consists of three principal streets diverging from a square. It contains the parish church, and several other places of worship. The Nugent family are the present proprietors of the town, into whose possession it came through the Savages and De Courcys. The ruins of the ancient castle form an interesting object at Portaferry demesne. The town was attacked by the rebels in 1798. There are police and coastguard stations, and petty sessions are held in the town. The coasting trade is considerable. Saturday is market day. Fairs are held on 1st January and 13th February, and on the first Tuesdays after 12th May and 13th November.

PORT-ALLAN, a creek on Wigtown Bay, co. Wigtown, Scotland, 2 miles E. of Whithorn.

PORT-ALLAN, a creek on the Frith of Tay, in the par. of Errol, co. Perth, Scotland, 6 miles E. of Perth.

PORTARLINGTON, a post and market town and parliamentary borough, partly in the par. of Clonyhurk, bar. of Upper Philipstown, King's County, and partly in the par. of Lea, bar. of Portnahinch, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 10 miles S.S.E. of Philipstown, and 44 from Dublin. It is a station on the Great Southern and Western railway. It is situated on the banks of the river Barrow, near a branch of the Grand canal, and the road from Dublin to Birr. The main street terminates in a square, with several other streets diverging from various points. The principal buildings are the market-house, the two churches, a Roman Catholic chapel, schools, a savings-bank, loan, and a dispensary. The river is spanned by two bridges. The late Duke of Wellington, and his brother, the Marquis of Wellesley, were educated in this town. There are manufactories of tobacco, leather, soap, and candles, but the general trade is limited. It sends one member to parliament, and had two representatives before the Union. It is governed under a charter, granted by Charles II. to Lord Arlington, under its ancient name Coltodry. It was afterwards purchased by Sir P. Trant, and having again reverted to the crown, was granted to General Rouvigny by Williiam III. Under its new proprietor it became the home of numerous French and Flemish Protestants. The Dawson family of Emo take the title of earl from this town. Wednesday and Saturday are market days. Fairs are held on 5th January, 1st March, Easter Monday, 22nd May, 4th July, 1st September, 12th October, and 23rd November.

PORT-ASKAIG, a creek on the Sound of Islay, co. Argyll, Scotland. It is situated under a range of hills on the N.E. side of the Isle of Islay, and has a ferry to Jura.

PORTAVENTA, an inlet in the par. of Ardnamurchan, co. Inverness, Scotland, situated near the coast.

PORT BANNATYNE, a vil. in the par. of Rothesay, co. Bute, Scotland, 2 miles N. of Rothesay. It is situated near Kames Bay and castle. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the fisheries.

PORTBURY, a hund. in the co. of Somerset, contains the par. of Abbots Leigh, Bourton, Clapton, Clevedon, Easton-in-Gordano, Nailsea, Portbury, Portishead, Tickenham, Walton, Weston-in-Gordano, and Wraxall, comprising an area of 23,980 acres.

PORTBURY, a par. in the above hund., co. Somerset, 7 miles N.W. of Bristol, its post town. It is situated under the hills near Wansdyke, at a short distance S. of the navigable river Avon. The par. contains Caswell, Hamgreen, and 11 other tythgs. The village, which is small, and wholly agricultural, is intersected by the road between Bristol and Portishead. An Act for the construction of a pier, with approaches, was obtained in 1841. Stone is quarried for road-making, and for building purposes. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £400, in the patron. of the Bishop of Worcester. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing five bells. The church has some niches. In the churchyard are two trees, one of which measures 19 feet in diameter. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum. There is a parochial school for both sexes; also an infant school, in which a Sunday-school is held. Portbury was formerly a British or Roman station on the road to Portishead, whence was a passage to Caerleon, called by the Romans Isca Silurum. There was also an Austin cell to Bromere Priory, of which there are still traces. In the vicinity Roman coins, remains of buildings, and other antiquities, have been discovered. Sir William Abdy, Bart., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

PORT-CARLISLE, a creek at the mouth of the river Eden, co. Cumberland, 5 miles N.W. of Carlisle. It is a station on the Carlisle and Silloth and Port-Carlisle branch of the North British railway.

PORTCASSEGG, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Arvans, upper div. of Ragland hund., co. Monmouth, 3 miles N.W. of Chepstow. It is situated near the river Wye.

PORT-CHARLOTTE, a vil. in the par. of Kilchoman-in-Islay, co. Argyll, Scotland, 15 miles S.W. of Port-Askaig. It is situated on Loch Indal. There is a distillery. The Independents have a chapel.

PORT CLARENCE, a hmlt. in the par. of Billingham, ward of Stockton, co. Durham, 4 miles N. by E. of Stockton. It is a station on the West Hartlepool railway.

PORT-COON, a creek on the coast of co. Antrim, Ireland, 1 mile S.W. of the Giant's Causeway. It is celebrated for an extensive sea cavern in the basaltic rock above 300 feet in length.

PORT-CROMMELLIN, a creek in the bar. of Lower Glenarm, coast of co. Antrim, Ireland. It is situated in Cushendall Bay, about 33 miles N. of Belfast.

PORTDIANA, a vil. in the par. of Agherton, within the lib. of Coleraine, co. Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, near Coleraine.

PORT-DINORWIG, a small harbour in the par. of Llanfairis-Gaer, co. Carnarvon, 2 miles N.E. of Carnarvon. It is a station on the Bangor and Carnarvon branch of the Chester and Holyhead railway. It is situated in the Menai Straits, and has a small pier, where slates are shipped from the neighbouring quarries.

PORT-DOWNIE, a hmlt. in the par. of Falkirk, co. Stirling, Scotland, 2 miles W. of Falkirk. It is situated at the junction of the Union with the Forth of Clyde canals.

PORT-DUNDAS, a vil. in the city of Glasgow, co. Lanark, Scotland. It is situated on the Clyde, at the end of the Forth, and Clyde, and Monkland canals. It was named after Lord Dundas.

PORTEASIE, a vil. in the par. of Rathven, co. Banff, Scotland, 4 miles S.W. of Cullen, and 2 E. of Buckie. It was founded in 1727. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the fisheries.

PORT-EAST, or CHAPEL POINT, a hmlt. in the par. of Gorran, co. Cornwall, 8 miles S. of St. Austell. There was formerly a chapel, now in ruins.

PORT-EDGAR, a creek on the Frith of Forth, co. Linlithgow, Scotland, 1 mile W. of Queensferry.

PORT-ELLEN, or PORT-ELLINOR, a vil. in the par. of Kildalton-in-Islay, co. Argyll, Scotland, 11 miles S.E. of Bowmore. It is situated opposite the island of Gigha, near Mull of Islay. It has a quay, constructed in 1826, and improved in 1832. The harbour has a fixed light, erected in 1833, and seen at a distance of 11 miles. Fishing and agriculture are the chief employments of the inhabitants. There is a distillery.

PORT ELLIOT, the seat of the Earl of St. Germans, in the par. of St. Germans, hund. of East, co. Cornwall, 1 mile from St. Germans, and 18 miles S. of Launceston. It is situated on the river Tidi, near Lynher creek, and includes part of the old priory founded by King Athelstan. In the mansion are preserved "Bel and the Dragon," by Rembrandt, also portraits of Locke, Hampden, Rubens, and several of the Elliots by Reynolds.

PORT ELPHINSTONE, a vil. in the par. of Kintore and district of Garioch, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 4 miles S. of Inverury.

PORT-ERIN, or PORT-IRON, a vil. on a bay of the same name, Isle of Man, 2 miles N. of Spanish Head.

PORT-ERIN, or PORTRAN, an ancient par. in the co. of Roscommon, Scotland, now joined to Roscommon.

PORTEVAD, a small harbour in Ballysadere Bay, co. Sligo, Ireland, 4 miles N. by W. of Ballysadere. It is a coastguard station.

PORT-EYNON, or PORTH-ENION, a par. in the hund. of Swansea, co. Glamorgan, 13 miles S.W. of Swansea, its post town, and 13 from Penrhys. It is situated on Porth-Eynion Bay, near Porth-Eynion Point, and contains the vil. of Overton. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the oyster fishery and in the lime works. It was once infested by smugglers. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £121. The church is dedicated to St. Cadocus. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum.

PORTFIELD, a vil. in the par. of Oving, hund. of Box, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 2 miles E. of Chichester.

PORTFIELD, a tythg. in the par. of Curry-Rivell, hund. of Abdick, co. Somerset, 2 miles S.W. of Langport.

PORTFIELD-WITH-FURZY-PARK, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Haverfordwest, co. Pembroke, near Haverfordwest.

PORTGATE, a tnshp. in the par. of St. John-Lee, S. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 3 miles N. of Corbridge, and 5 N.E. of Hexham railway station. It is situated at the spot where the Roman way Watling Street passed through Hadrian's Wall, hence the origin of its present name. There are collieries; also remains of a border tower, near which the Devil's Causeway branches from Watling Street. Rowland Errington, Esq., is lord of the manor and owner of all the land.

PORT-GAVORN, a small seaport in the par. of Endellion, hund. of Trigg, co. Cornwall, half a mile E. of Port-Isaac. It is situated on the coast of the Bristol Channel. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the shipping of slate from the Delabole quarry, and in the importation of coal from Wales. The pilchard fishery was formerly very productive.

PORT-GLASGOW, a par., market town, and seaport, a royal and parliamentary burgh in lower ward, co. Renfrew, Scotland, 2½ miles S.E. of Greenock, 13 N.W. of Renfrew, and 20 W. by N. of Glasgow. It is a station on the Glasgow and Greenock railway, which is here carried across the beach on a viaduct. The par., which includes the quoad sacra par. of Newark, is situated on the N. coast of Renfrewshire, extending along the S. bank of the Frith of Clyde, and formerly formed part of the par. of Kilmalcolm. It is about a mile square, and is bounded by the pars. of Greenock and Kilmalcolm, and by the river Clyde, which is here about 2 miles broad at high water, but the greater part of its bed is left dry at low water. It was anciently the property of the Maxwells, but was purchased in 1668 by the Corporation of Glasgow to form a harbour on the Upper Frith for the extension of the commerce of that city, vessels of large tonnage not being then able to ascend so far as Glasgow. It was constituted a separate parish in 1695, when a charter was obtained from the crown erecting the new town into a free port and a burgh of barony. In 1710 it was constituted the principal custom-house port of the Clyde, and in 1775 was first chartered by Act of Parliament, and incorporated with the village of Newark, then a burgh of barony under the Hamiltons of Wishaw. This town continued to make rapid progress, and two tidal harbours were formed, with quays, docks, and every appliance for commerce, including a graving dock, the oldest in Scotland, having been originally built in 1761, though subsequently much improved at a great expense. The powers of the corporation were enlarged by a statute passed in 1803, which also provided for the erection of a new court-house, a gaol, and other public buildings. Quays have recently been added fronting the Clyde for the accommodation of steamers, and the bay of Newark, which lies to the E. of the town, converted into a wet dock, covering 12 acres, at a cost of £40,000. Although the importance of the place has somewhat declined since the Clyde was deepened, and ships go straight to Glasgow, its trade is still considerable, both coastwise and to foreign ports. The custom-house district extends along the S. bank of the Clyde from Greenock to Blantyre.—The streets are regular, broad, and well paved, and the houses in general lofty. The principal public buildings are the town-house with court-hall and prisons, forming a Grecian structure with a spire 150 feet high, built in 1815, at a cost of £12,000; also a spacious custom-house, market-house, theatre, public library, and three commercial banks—viz. branches of the Royal, Union, and Western banks, besides ten insurance agencies, and six shipping agencies. On the W. quay is a lighthouse with a fixed light. The only noticeable edifice out of the town is Newark Castle, the old seat of the Maxwells, having upon it the inscription, "The Blissinge of God be Herein, anno 1597." Immediately behind the town the surface rises steeply in two successive ridges of hill to an altitude of about 400 feet, the steep slopes being covered with wood and verdure. The principal countries with which commerce is carried on, exclusive of the coasting trade, are British North America, from which nearly 30,000 tons of timber are annually imported, the West Indies, the United States, the Levant, and the East Indies. The articles of export consist of iron, steel, coals, textile fabrics of linen, silk, and cotton, hardware and cutlery, haberdashery, machinery, and numerous other manufactured articles.—The principal manufactures carried on in the town are sailcloth, ropes, anchors, chain cables, and a sugar refinery. There are large ship-building yards, with appliances for the construction of large sailing vessels and steamers. The population of the burgh in 1851 was 6,986, inhabiting 418 houses; which had increased in 1861 to 7,214, inhabiting 438 houses. The revenue of the burgh is about £3,500. Under the New Municipal Reform Act of 1833, the burgh is governed by a provost, two bailies, and nine councillors. It is contributory to Kilmarnock in returning one member to the imperial parliament, and in 1856 had a constituency of 212. The magistrates exercise summary jurisdiction in all civil matters, and a justice of peace court meets every alternate Monday.—The par. is in the presb. of Greenock and synod of Glasgow and Ayr, in the patron. of the town council of Glasgow. The minister's stipend is £200. The parish church was built in 1823. There are also a district church for the quoad sacra parish of Newark, a Free church, an United Presbyterian church, an Episcopalian chapel, erected in 1856, at a cost of £4,000, and a Roman Catholic chapel. The principal schools are Beaton's, the new academy, the town school, and eight other schools. Market day is on Friday. A fair is held on the third Tuesday in July.

PORTGLENONE, a small post and market town, partly in the par. of Ahogill, co. Antrim, and partly in that of Tamlaght O'Crilly, co. Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Ahogill, and 96 N. of Dublin. It is situated on the river Bann, and on the road from Randalstown to Kilrea. The town consists of one principal street, formed of very tolerably built houses. A bridge spans the Bann. There is a police station, where petty sessions are held. A fair trade is done in carrying on the river, and a little linen weaving. Fairs are held on the first Tuesday in each month and on the 25th May.

PORT-GORDON, a vil. in the par. of Rathven, co. Banff, Scotland, 8 miles N.W. of Keith. It is situated on the Moray Frith, near Port Tannachie. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the fisheries.

PORT-GOWER, a vil. in the par. of Loth, co. Sutherland, Scotland, 2 miles S.W. of Helmsdale. It was founded by the late Duke of Sutherland. The inhabitants are engaged in the fisheries.

PORT-GUIN, or QUIN, a small seaport in the par. of Endellion, hund. of Trigg, co. Cornwall, 8 miles N.W. of Camelford. It is situated on the coast of the Bristol Channel, and was formerly a large fishing village. The only trade is at present in the importation of coal.

PORTH, the prefix to the names of many small creeks on the coast of Wales, as Porthamel, on the Menai Straits.

PORTHALL, a station on the Dundalk and Londonderry section of the Irish North-Western railway. It is the next station to Strabane.

PORTHCAWL, a small harbour on the Bristol Channel, co. Glamorgan, 5½ miles W. by S. of Bridgend. It is the terminus of the Llynvi Valley rail, which brings down coal and iron to the pier to be shipped. The harbour has from 12 to 20 fathoms water.

PORTHDYNLLAEN, or PORTH-YN-LLEYN, a vil. in the par. of Nevin, hund. of Dinllaen, co. Carnarvon, 2 miles W. of Nevin, and 19 S.W. of Carnarvon. It is a sub-port to Carnarvon, having a sheltered harbour in Carnarvon Bay. The Road has anchorage in 1 to 2 fathoms water, and inside Porthdynllaen Point 4 to 5 fathoms. It was proposed as a mail packet station for Ireland, but was rejected, the entrance being partially obstructed by the Carrig Chwislen rock in front.

PORTHILLY, a vil. in the par. of St. Minver, hund. of Trigg, co. Cornwall, 2 miles from Padstow, and 9 N. by W. of Bodmin. It is situated on a creek in the Bristol Channel, and is a coastguard station. There is a small ancient chapel.

PORTHKERRY, or PORT-CERI, a par. in the hund. of Dinas-Powis, co. Glamorgan, 9 miles from Cowbridge, its post town, and the same distance S.W. of Cardiff. It is a small seaport situated on the Bristol Channel, and formerly belonged to the St. Johns, of Bletsoe. Limestone is abundant. The living is a rect.* annexed to that of Barry in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £289. The church is dedicated to St. Curig, and has a cross of great antiquity.

PORTHLEVEN, a vil. and fishing cove in the par. of Sithney, hund. of Kerrier, co. Cornwall, 3 miles W. of Helston. It is situated on the northern shore of Mount's Bay in the English Channel. It has a small harbour capable of admitting vessels of 200 tons, which land coals and timber, the chief imports of the place. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £160, in the patron. of the Vicar of Sithney. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, was erected in 1841.

PORTH-LOE, a vil. in the par. of Veryan, hund. of West Powder, co. Cornwall, 3 miles S. of Trigony, and 8 S. by E. of Truro. It is situated on Veryan Bay in the English Channel.

PORTHMEAR, or CHARLESTOWN, a maritime vil. and sub-port to Fowey, in the par. of St. Austell, co. Cornwall, 2 miles S.E. of St. Austell. It is situated on St. Austell's Bay, and serves as the shipping-place for that port. The harbour, which was formed in 1790 by Charles Rashleigh, Esq., is accessible for large vessels, and is defended by a battery of heavy cannon. It consists of an inner and outer basin, with commodious docks and a pier. There are long-established yards for building and repairing ships, iron founderies, rope walks, and works for the manufacture of naphtha. Great quantities of china-clay, artificially prepared from granite, together with lime and other mineral produce, are annually exported. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the Charlestown tin and copper mines, and others in the fisheries, particularly that of pilchards, which was formerly more productive than at present. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £130, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. On Gwallon Downs, recently enclosed, are traces of a British camp and several barrows.

PORT-HOPETOUN, a small suburb in Edinburgh, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, half a mile S.W. of Edinburgh. It is situated near the basin of the Union canal.

PORTH-Y-OGOF, an extensive cavern in the limestone rocks in co. Brecon, near the Hepste falls, and through which that river runs.

PORTHYRYD, a vil. in the par. of Llanybyther, co. Carmarthen, 4 miles S.W. of Lampeter.

PORTINCROSS, or PENCROSS, a ruined castle on the cliffs near Fairlie Head, co. Ayr, Scotland. It was once a royal seat of the Stuart kings.

PORTINGSCALE, or COLEDALE, a tnshp. in the par. of Crosthwaite, ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 2 miles W. of Keswick. It is situated at the foot of Derwentwater, with a prospect of that and the adjacent lakes.

PORTINGTEN and CAVIL, a tnshp. in the par. of Eastrington, wap. of Howdenshire, East Riding co. York, 3 miles N.E. of Howden. It is situated near the line of the Hull railway.

PORT-ISAAC, a vil. and small seaport in the par. of Endellion, hund. of Trigg, co. Cornwall, 7 miles W. by N. of Camelford. It is situated on the coast of the Bristol Channel, and is a sub-port to Padstow. It has a small coasting trade, the business being chiefly in the shipping of corn and the importation of coal from Wales. The pilchard fishery, which was formerly extensively carried on, has declined. In the vicinity antimony is found. There are places of worship for Baptists and Wesleyans.

PORTISHAM, a par. in the hund. of Uggscombe, Dorchester div. of co. Dorset, 8 miles S.W. of Dorchester, its post town, and 2 N.E. of Abbotsbury. The par. contains the hmlts. of Corfe Gate, Shilvington, and Waddon. The village is small and chiefly agricultural. At Ridge Hill is Hellstone cromlech, the largest in this county, and having on the N.W. an avenue leading to it. The top stone measures 10½ feet by 6, and rests upon nine upright stones with a barrow near it; there is also another cromlech at Blackdown. Relics of great antiquity have been discovered at Corton. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £74. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure with a square embattled tower, crowned by pinnacles and containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum, the bequest of Charles Masterman in 1771. There is a free school at Coryates, supported by voluntary contributions. Earl Fitzhardinge is lord of the manor.

PORTISHEAD, or PORTSHEAD, a par. and post town in the hund. of Portbury, co. Somerset, 10 miles N.W. of Bristol, and 5 from the Clevedon railway station. The village, which is large, is situated under the hills at the Severn's mouth, and near the end of Wansdyke. At Portishead Point, opposite King's Road, where ships of war on the station usually anchor, is a battery. The par. includes the hmlt. of North Weston. It is a bathing place, and has excellent bathing accommodation. A steamer runs to and from Bristol daily during the summer months. A large portion of the inhabitants are engaged in agriculture. In the neighbourhood are the traces of a camp 1,200 feet by 600, successively occupied by the Romans, Britons, and Danes, and which Fairfax took from the royalists in 1645. Limestone, flagstone, and firestone are worked, and coal is supposed to exist. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £628 12*s., and the glebe comprises 30 acres. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £729. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure with a tower containing six bells. The register dates from 1570. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, also an infant school in which a Sunday-school is held. The Wesleyans, Independents, and Society of Friends have each a place of worship. The ancient boundary, called Wansdyke, terminates here.

PORT KERRY. See KERRY, co. Montgomery.

PORTLAND, ISLE OF, a par. and separate lib. in the Dorchester div., co. Dorset, 5 miles S. of Weymouth by road, or 3 by water, steamboats running every half hour during the summer months. This place, which was called by the Saxons Port, whence its present name, is situated in the English Channel, in 50° 31′ 24″ N. lat. and 2° 26′ 45″ W. long., nearly midway between Portsmouth and Plymouth, forming the western boundary of Weymouth Bay. It is rather a peninsula than an island, being attached to the mainland by a ridge of shingle, called the Chesil Bank, about 10 miles in length. It is about 4 miles long by half to 1½ mile broad, and 9 miles in circumference, rising to an elevation of 458 feet, at the highest point of the island, where stand the remains of a Roman or Danish camp. On the side opposite to Weymouth is the only landing-place on the island, the rest of the coast being surrounded by inaccessible cliffs, which are 300 feet high in some parts, terminating at the southern extremity in the point called Portland Bill, or the Vindelia Promontorium of Antonine, in N. lat. 50° 30′ 35″, within sight of which the Spanish Armada was defeated in 1588, and Van Tromp beaten by Blake in 1653. The island was ravaged by the Danes in the 8th and 9th centuries, and was seized by Earl Godwin in 1052. The French made an attempt to land here in 1404, and in 1646 the old castle, built by Henry VIII., was taken by stratagem by the Earl of Carnarvon at the head of a party of royalists. It was anciently the property of the Bishops of Winchester, and was subsequently held under the crown by Queen Catherine, Anne of Denmark, the Stewards of Mottington, the Rev. John Manning, and since the accession of Queen Victoria the castle has been granted officially to Captain C. A. Manning, as lieutenant of the island and resident magistrate. The castle contains some paintings, and is mounted with 12 and 24-pounders in time of war. On the top of a hill, at a place called the Grove, is the convict prison, constructed chiefly of wood and iron, with accommodation for 1,500 convicts, who are chiefly employed on the construction of a breakwater in Portland-roads, which, when completed, will extend for above 2½ miles into the sea, with six fathoms water, so as to form a roadstead at the north-eastern corner of the island, of 4 miles in extent, sheltered from all winds, and capable of containing a fleet of 60 sail. On the cliffs, near Cave Hole, a pit 50 feet square, are two lighthouses, the upper one, put up in 1817, with 14 lights and reflectors, being upon the revolving principle, visible for 20 miles, and 198 feet above sea level; the lower, put up in 1789, is built in the form of a cone, with a fixed light visible for 16 miles, and 131 feet high, having a gallery from which may be seen that dangerous sea called the Race, caused by the meeting of the tides and the shambles reef with only 11 feet of water in one part where the Abergavenny struck in 1805.—The population is at present (1866) somewhat over 5,000, but at least half this number are non-residents, being engaged on the government works, in the army, or convicts. The inhabitants are a tall, hardy race of people, chiefly employed in the stone-quarries, which were first brought into notice in the reign of James I. They live in scattered villages or hamlets, as Castleton, Chiswell, Church Hope, Easton, Fortune's Well, Maidenwell, Mallams, Reform, Southwell, Wakeham, Weston, and Yeates. The only article of export is stone, of which 45,000 tons are annually shipped, some of the stones varying from 5 to 14 tons each. A short line of railway runs from the quarries to the pier, where the ships lie to receive their lading. The stone is a variety of upper oölite called "roach" or Portland, varying from 137 to 146 lbs. per cubic foot. Of this stone are built the banqueting-hall at Whitehall, St. Paul's Cathedral, the Monument, the Goldsmith's-hall, and the Reform Club, and many other public buildings in the metropolis. In the quarries are found numerous fossils, petrified trees, shells, coal-stone, and sugar-candy stone. Below the beds of stone, which are from 7 to 16 feet thick and extend over nearly the whole island, is a layer of bluish clay, and above a "dirt bed" with shelly chert, slaty limestone, and rough capstone. The soil is in general fertile, though shallow, and affords good pasture for a small choice breed of island sheep. Wood is scarce, and cow-dung mixed with stubble is used for fuel. Water, which is obtained from wells, is good and plentiful, and there is a small mill stream. Land slips took place here in 1734 and 1792. The native plant "arum maculatum" or cuckoo pint, is used as arrowroot, and a delicious little bird, the wheat-ear, is taken in great numbers. The custom of gavel-kind prevails in the island, which forms a liberty of itself.—The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £200, in the patron. of the Bishop of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. George, contains some ancient monuments. There is besides the district church of St. John, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £60, in the patron. of Hyndman's Trustees. The church, which was erected in 1839, is a Gothic structure with a square tower. The Wesleyans, Independents, and Bible Christians have each a place of worship. There is a free school supported by the county members, also National and British schools. There is a dispensary under the patronage of her Majesty, also several good inns in the island, including the new hotel at Castleton and the Portland Arms, where King George III. was in the habit of dining, and where is preserved a specimen of a fossil tree 20 feet in height. On the cliffs, near Pennsylvania House, built by the late Governor Penn, are the ruins of Bow and Arrow Castle, built by William Rufus, and taken by the followers of the Empress Maud in 1192. The family of Bentinck take from this place the title of Duke of Portland.

PORTLAND TOWN, a suburban district in the par. and borough of Marylebone, co. Middlesex, 3 miles W. by N. of St. Paul's, London. It is situated on the farther side of the Regent's Park. There is a church built by Daukes in 1849, and dedicated to St. Stephen.

PORTLAW, a small post town in the par. of Clonegam, bar. of Upperthird, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 8 miles N.W. of Waterford, and 83 S.W. of Dublin. It has a station on the Waterford and Limerick railway. It stands near the river Suir on a small stream called the Cloddagh. The town, since the introduction of cotton mills, has risen from a poor village to a prosperous town. Petty sessions are held here at intervals. Fairs are held on 28th May, 26th August, and Easter Monday.

PORTLEMOUTH EAST, a par. in the hund. of Coleridge, co. Devon, 5 miles S.E. of Kingsbridge, its post town. It is situated on the E. shore of Salcombe bay, near the mouth of the creek, and contains the hmlts. of Holset and Rickham. A ferry-boat plies between here and Salcombe. The village is very small and chiefly agricultural, except a few fishermen. It commands a sea view. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £324. The church is an old structure with a tower. It contains a carved wooden screen.

PORTLICH, a vil. in the par. of Kilmuir Easter, cos. Ross and Cromarty, Scotland, 7 miles S. of Tain. It is situated on Cromarty Frith.

PORT-LOGAN, a creek on the W. coast of co. Wigtown, Scotland, 4 miles N. by W. of Kirkmaiden.

PORTLOMAN, a par. in the bar. of Corkaree, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. Mullingar is its post town. It lies along the W. shore of Lough Owel. The soil is rich. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with another, £136, in the patron. of the bishop. Here are a church and a day school. Portloman House is the only residence. A monastery anciently stood here.

PORT-LORGAN, a creek in the bar. of Inishowen, co. Donegal, Ireland, near Malin Head.

PORTMADOC, a vil. in the par. of Ynys-cynhaiarn, co. Carnarvon, 1 mile S.E. of Tremadoc. It is a sub-port to Carnarvon, and has daily communication by coach with Pen-y-Groes railway station on the Carnarvon and Nantlle railway. The village, which contains a commercial inn, is situated at the mouth of the river Traeth Mawr. It is much frequented in the season for sea bathing.

PORTMAGEE, a small vil. and fishing harbour in the par. of Killemlagh, bar. of Iveragh, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, near Bray Head.

PORTMAHOMACK, a vil. in the par. of Tarbat, cos. Ross and Cromarty, Scotland, 9 miles E. by N. of Tain. It is situated on Dornoch Frith, under Tarbatness, and is a sub-port to Inverness. There is a pier of about 400 feet, extending along the shore of the harbour, which is low and sandy.

PORTMARNOCK, a par. in the bar. of Coolock, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. Cloghran is its post town. It is a station on the Dublin and Drogheda line. The greater proportion of the soil is good. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. £112, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church was a gift from the late Board of First Fruits in 1788. There is a day school. Portmarnock House is one among the several seats in this parish. Near the village stands Robs-Wall, a small castle, built some three centuries ago, by the chieftain MacRoebuck of the De Birminghams.

PORT MARY, a creek in the par. of Rerwick, co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 5 miles S.E. of Kirkcudbright. It was here that Mary Queen of Scots embarked in her flight to England.

PORT MARY, or PORT ST. MARY, a vil. in the par. of Rushen, Isle of Man, 4 miles S.W. of Castletown. It is situated on Balvash Bay, near Spanish Head, and has a lighthouse, put up in 1812. The inhabitants are principally employed in the fisheries, and in the limestone quarries.

PORTMOAK, a par. in the co. of Kinross, Scotland, 4 miles E. of Kinross, and 28 from Edinburgh. It is situated on the Fife border, under West Lomond and Benartie hills, and takes its name from St. Moak, in honour of whom a priory for Culdees was founded on the banks of Loch Leven in the 9th century by Ungus, a Pictish king. The par. includes the vils. of Kinnesswood and Scotland-wells. The surface comprises mountains, rich meadows, and thriving plantations, lying around Loch Leven. The arable land lies chiefly about the eastern extremity of the lake, and on the banks of the river Leven, which issues from it, while the remainder of the parish is hilly pasture. The prevailing rocks are limestone and sandstone. The soil is light, early, and very productive, and the climate healthy. Limestone is extensively quarried at Bishop's Hill, and there are freestone and muirstone quarries in different parts of the parish. The river Leven is crossed by a bridge, but the roads are not well kept. A portion of Loch Leven, which is about 12 miles in circumference, is in this parish, and abounds with fish and aquatic fowl. On St. Serf's Island in this lake, which comprises about 48 acres of good pasture, are the ruins of the ancient priory of Loch Leven, dedicated to St. Servanus, and was annexed in the 12th century to the priory of St. Andrew's by David I. The castle of Loch Leven, anciently a royal residence, stands on another island in the lake, and was formerly a place of great strength. In 1335 it sustained a siege by Sir John de Stirling, and the English partisans of Edward Baliol; and in the 16th century was the place of confinement of Mary Queen of Scots, after she had separated from Bothwell, and was made captive by the confederate lords at the battle of Pinkie. It is now the property of the ancient family of Douglas, Earls of Morton, to whom it gives the title of Baron Douglas in England. After his victory at Inver-Keithing, Oliver Cromwell halted here on his way to Perth, and lodged in the house of Kirkness, the seat of the Earls of Morton. This par. is in the presb. of Kirkcaldy and synod of Fife. The minister has a stipend of £250. The living was once held by Ebenezer Erskine. The church was built in 1659. There are also a Free church, and several other places of worship. To the E. of the village are the ruins of the old castle of Arnott. Andrew Winton, prior of Loch Leven, in the reign of James I. of Scotland, and who wrote "The Loch Leven Chronicle," in Scotch metre, John Douglas, the first Protestant archbishop of St. Andrew's, and M. Bruce, were natives of this parish.

PORT-MONTEITH. See MONTEITH, PORT OF, co. Perth, Scotland.

PORTMORE, a small lough in the co. of Antrim, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Crumlin. On its banks are the ruins of Portmore Castle, built by Lord Conway in the reign of Charles I.

PORTMORE, a creek in the bar. of Inishowen, co. Donegal, Ireland, near Malin Head.

PORTMUCK, a harbour in Magee Island, bar. of Lower Belfast, co. Antrim, Ireland.

PORTNABLAS AND PORTNACROSS, two small harbours on the coast of co. Donegal, Ireland.

PORTNACURRACH, or PORTA-MUNICH, a creek on the coast of the island of Iona, in the par. of Kilfinichen, co. Argyle, Scotland. It is asserted by tradition to have been the landing-place of St. Columb, and is marked by a mound or barrow, 50 feet long.

PORTNAFRANKAGH, a creek on the coast of the co. of Mayo, Ireland, 5 miles W. by N. of Belmullet.

PORTNAHAVEN, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of Kilchoman, Isle of Islay, co. Argyle, Scotland. It is situated on the W. side of the island, near Lochs Indaal and Gruinast, under Rhinns Point, and has a lighthouse. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the cod and herring fisheries, and in the breeding of black cattle.

PORTNAHINCH, a bar. in Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is bounded by King's County and co. Kildare, and by the bars. of Stradbally and East Maryborough. This bar. contains the pars. of Ardea, Coolbanacher, and Lea; also the town of Portarlington, and part of that of Mountmellick.

PORTNAHINCH, a vil. in the bar. of Portnahinch, Queen's County, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Portarlington. It is situated on the river Barrow, and gives name to the barony.

PORTNASCULLY, a par. in the bar. of Iverk, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. Waterford is its post town. It is 2 miles long by 1 mile broad. The surface is flat, and consists of a good soil. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with Pollrone, £216. The church is in ruins. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, and Sunday and day schools. In the vicinity are the ruins of Corluddy Castle.

PORTNASHANGAN, a par. in the bar. of Corkaree, co. Westmeath, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Mullingar. The village, in which petty sessions are held, is situated on Lough Hoyle. The land is chiefly arable. There are several stone-quarries. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Portloman. The principal seats are Ballinagall and Mountmurray.

PORTNASON, a vil. in the par. of Innismacsaint, in the bar. of Tirhugh, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is a poor place.

PORTNASPAGNA, a bay on the N. coast of the co. of Antrim, Ireland, near the Giant's Causeway. It takes its name from several of the vessels belonging to the Spanish Armada having been driven ashore here.

PORTNATRUM, a bay on the N. coast of the co. of Antrim, Ireland, between Benbane and Bengore Heads.

PORTNATU AND PORTNEAN, two small bays on the coast of the co. of Antrim, Ireland, near Portrush.

PORTNESSOCK, a creek in the par. of Kirkmaiden, co. Wigtown, Scotland, 5 miles N.W. of the Mull of Galloway. It is situated on the North Channel, and is a sub-port to Stranraer.

PORTNOCKIE, a vil. in the par. of Rathven, co. Banff, Scotland, 2 miles N.W. of Cullen. It is situated on the Moray Frith.

PORTNOFFER, a creek on the N. shore of the co. of Antrim, Ireland, between the Giant's Causeway and Portnaspagna.

PORTNOO, or PORTHNOE, a small harbour in the bar. of Boylagh, co. Donegal, Ireland. It has a pier, chiefly used by fishing-boats.

PORTOBELLO, a vil. in the par. of St. Peter, in the bar. of Uppercross, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 1 mile S.W. of the castle in Dublin, of which it is a suburb. It is situated on the banks of the Grand canal, and contains the barracks.

PORTO-BELLO, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Bilston, par. and borough of Wolverhampton, co. Stafford, 1 mile of Bilston, and 16 miles S. of Stafford. It is a station on the Birmingham and Wolverhampton section of the London and North-Western railway. It is situated on a branch of the river Tame, near the Grand Junction canal.

PORTO BELLO, a hmlt. in the par. of Watlington, hund. of Pirton, co. Oxford, 2 miles E. of Watlington, and 16 S.E. of Oxford.

PORTO BELLO, a hmlt. in the par. of Shipston-upon-Stour, upper div. of the hund. of Oswaldslow, co. Worcester, 2 miles S.W. of Shipston-upon-Stour, and 17 S.W. of Warwick. It is situated in a fertile country in the vale of the river Stour.

PORTO-BELLO, a quoad sacra par., municipal and parliamentary borough in the pars. of Duddingston and South Leith, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 3 miles E. by N. of Edinburgh, of which it may be considered a marine suburb. It is a station on the North British railway. It is a place of recent origin and name, having previously formed part of the "Figget Lands," which, previous to the year 1763, were a mere waste, covered for the most part with furze or whins, and were commonly let for 200 merks, Scots, to one of the Duddingston tenants. Porto-Bello hut was the first house raised in the midst of the original waste about 1742, and derived its appellation from the Spanish American town of that name, at the capture of which its proprietor had been present as a sailor. The place grew rapidly into importance, and besides the ordinary houses, originally designed for the workmen engaged in the neighbouring brick, pottery, and tile works at Brickfield, a number of edifices sprung up, overlooking the Frith of Forth, for the accommodation of the numerous families who resorted here for sea-bathing, and for which the smoothness of the adjacent sandy beach, the purity of the atmosphere, and the propinquity of the great London road, rendered it particularly eligible. The par., which is only 1 mile in length by about half a mile in breadth, includes the vil. of Joppa. The soil is a mixture of clay and sand, originally barren, but converted by artificial means into very productive land, the greater part of which is now built over. A considerable number of the working population are employed in the adjacent collieries and salt-works. The town contains nearly 4,000 inhabitants, and includes a market-house, commercial bank, assembly rooms, baths; also extensive manufactories for soap, glass, and pottery, which last are situated on the Figget Burn, a small stream which falls into the Frith. It is a coastguard station, and a creek to the port of Preston Pans. Since the passing of the Reform Act it is a contributory burgh to Leith. It is governed under the late Municipal Reform Act by a provost, two bailies, and nine common councillors. The par. is in the presb. of Edinburgh and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale, and in the patron. of the male communicants. The minister has a stipend of £190. The church was built in 1815. There are several other churches and schools.

PORTON, a chplry. in the par. of Idmiston, hund. of Alderbury, co. Wilts, 6 miles N.E. of Salisbury, its post town, and 5 S.E. of Amesbury. It is a station on the South-Western railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Avon, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Idmiston, in the dioc. of Sarum. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice, with a wooden belfry.

PORT-ON-CRAIG. See FERRY-PORT-ON-CRAIG, co. Fife.

PORT-PATRICK, a par., burgh of barony, seaport and sea-bathing place, in the district of The Rhyns, co. Wigtown, Scotland, 21 miles from Donaghadee, on the opposite coast of Ireland, 30 W. of Wigtown, and 130 S. by W. of Edinburgh. It is a station on the Glasgow and South-Western and Portpatrick line of railway. The parish, which was formerly called Port Montgomery, from a noble family of that name who at one time possessed large estates on both sides of the Irish Channel, is about 4½ miles square. The surface is rugged and hilly, the highest eminence being Cairnpiot Hill, which has an elevation of about 800 feet above sea level. The land for the greater part is moorland, abounding in mosses and peat, but has been considerably improved of late years. The town, which is situate with a southerly exposure to the Irish Channel and sheltered on the N. by a semicircle of small hills, is much frequented during the summer season for sea bathing. It is a sub-port to Stranraer, and ever since 1662 has been a mail packet station for Donaghadee on the north-eastern coast of Ireland, across the North Channel. It is not now of so much importance as before the application of steam to ocean transit. The principal trade carried on is the importation of black cattle and horses from Ireland, and the exportation of fish, particularly cod, which employs a large number of boats. There is a good quay with a reflecting light 37 feet high, put up in 1790. The town and harbour were much improved through the exertions of the late Sir James Hunter Blair, Bart., and have been further secured by a new pier built by Rennie at a cost of above £160,000. The harbour has from 8 to 17 feet water. The par. is in the presb. of Stranraer and synod of Galloway. The church was built in 1629. There are a Free church and several other places of worship. About half a mile to the S. of the village stands Dunskey Castle, overhanging the brink of a precipice which projects into the Irish Sea, and near it the modern seat of the Blairs. In June, 1850, the Orion steamer struck on Barnough rock, when about 100 lives were lost.

PORT-QUIN. See PORT-GUIN, co. Cornwall.

PORTRAINE, a par. in the bar. of Nethercross, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S.E. of Lusk. Swords is its post town. It includes the island of Lambay, and has a coast open to St. George's Channel. It is situated in a flat district, and has a poor soil. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Donabate, £93, in the patron. of the archbishop. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, also two day schools. Portraine House stands on the site of the ancient castle. A nunnery also stood here. Red sandstone, greenstone, grauwacke, limestone conglomerate, and slate are found.

PORTREATH, a vil. and small seaport in the par. of Illogan, co. Cornwall, 4 miles N.W. of Redruth. This place, formerly called Basset's Cove, is situated on the shore of the Bristol Channel, and is a sub-port to St. Ives. It has a harbour and pier made by the Bassets of Tehidy in 1760, which has subsequently been greatly lengthened and improved. Extensive basins and a tramroad extending from the Gwennap and other mines in the vicinity to the shipping place, were formed some years since by a trading company. The principal business is the exportation of copper ore to the smelting furnaces in Wales, and in the importation of coal. The inlet is defended by two batteries. The cliffs on this part of the coast are lofty and bold. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect.* of Illogan, in the dioc. of Exeter. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans, also a school supported by subscription.

PORTREE, or PORT A ROI, a par. in the Isle of Skye, co. Inverness, Scotland, 12½ miles N. of Sconcer, its post town. It derives its name from the circumstance of James V. of Scotland, who visited the islands, anchoring in this port. The shores of the harbour are protected by rugged cliffs rising nearly perpendicularly on either side of the mouth of the harbour, which is large and has a quay regularly visited by Glasgow steamers. In the rocks are many large caves, particularly towards the N., where the hills rise to a great height. The parish, which was only a chapelry of Snizort till 1726, is about 19 miles in length by 13 in breadth. It includes the islands of Fladda, Rasay, and Rona, with Lochs Portree, Sligachan, and Inord on the coast, and several freshwater lakes inland, the largest of which are Lochs Fad and Leachan, the superfluous waters from which last are discharged over a precipice forming a cascade. The village is large and contains a court-house, gaol, two commercial banks, and a good inn. A considerable export trade is carried on in cattle and salmon. Near the village on the cliffs is an old castle, formerly the seat of the lairds of Rasay, and in other parts of the parish two ruined chapels, several Danish forts, earthworks, caves, &c. The surface is hilly, especially on the E. side of the island, where the coast is rugged, but in other parts it is diversified with valleys and plains. The most remarkable hill is Ait-Suidhe-Thuin, or Fingal's Seat. The soil is better adapted for pasture than tillage, but some spots are in good cultivation. The principal heritors are Lord Macdonald and the Macleods of Rasay, of which latter family was the celebrated Lady Flora Macdonald, who entertained Dr. Johnson at the family seat of Kingsborough. This par. is in the presb. of Skye and synod of Glenelg, and in the patron. of the crown. The church was built shortly after the erection of the parish in 1726. There are also a Free church and four other places of worship. Large cattle fairs are held on the last Wednesdays in May and June, each continuing for four days.

PORTROE, a post-office vil. in the par. of Castletownarra, bar. of Owney and Arra, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles N.W. of Nenagh. It is situated on the road from Portumna to Killaloe. It contains a police station, a Roman Catholic chapel, and a dispensary, which last is within the Nenagh poor-law union. Fairs are held on 26th February, 22nd March, 14th May, 23rd July, and 11th November.

PORTRUSH, a small post town and seaport in the par. of Ballywillie, bar. of Lower Dunluce, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 5 miles W. of Bushmills. It is a station on the Belfast and Northern Counties railway. It is a sub-port to Coleraine. The town stands at the extremity of a peninsula very near the basaltic formation known as the Skerries. It is the resort of numerous visitors in the bathing season. The Giant's Causeway is about 6 miles distant. There is a commodious harbour and pier. A considerable coasting and export trade is carried on.

PORTSALLAGH, a small harbour on the coast of co. Donegal, Ireland, 1 mile S. of Inishowen Head, and 4 miles N.E. of Moville.

PORTSBURGH, EASTER AND WESTER, in the borough of Edinburgh, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, adjoining Edinburgh, of which they form extensive suburbs, and are under the government of a baron bailie, and two bailies.

PORTSCUETT or PORTSKEWIT, a par. in the upper div. of Caldicott hund., co. Monmouth, 4 miles S.W. of Chepstow, its post town, and 11 from Usk. It is a station on the South Wales railway. The village, which is small and wholly agricultural, is situated near the Black Rock Inn ferry, on the river Severn, formerly called the New Passage. The land is nearly evenly divided between arable and meadow. There are traces of an ancient chapel. Near the bank of the Severn are vestiges of a treble-ditched Roman camp at Sudbrook on the Via Julia, part of which has been swept away by the river. The ancient road from this station to the great camp at Caerwent passed through this parish. The living is a rect.* with those of St. Pierre and Sudbrook annexed, val. £405, in the dioc. of Llandaff. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

PORTSDOWN, a hund. in the co. of Hants, contains the town of Portsmouth, and the pars. of Bedhampton, Boarhunt, Farlington, Porchester, Portsea, Portsmouth, Great Salterns, Southwick, Waterloo, Widley, and Wymering, comprising an area of 16,800 acres, exclusive of Portsmouth and Portsea.

PORTSDOWN, a hill, forming one of the summits of a ridge between Havant and Fareham, co. Hants, 4 miles N. of Portsmouth. On its summit is the Nelson column, erected in 1805, shortly after the battle of Trafalgar, and on its sides several holes or pits, some of which have recently been filled up in connection with the extensive fortifications at present being constructed for the defence of Portsmouth harbour. The view from this ridge takes in Porchester Castle, Portsmouth and Langston harbours, part of the Isle of Wight, Chichester Cathedral, and towards the N. the heights of Bere Forest. A fair is held at the Running Walk on the 26th of July and two following days.

PORTSEA, a par. and fortified town, including the royal dockyard, on a flat island of the same name, locally in Portsdown hund., and borough of Portsmouth, co. Hants, adjoining Portsmouth, and 69 miles from London by road, or 90 by the South-Western and 95 by the Brighton and South Coast railways. The par. comprises the town of Portsea, the towns and vils. of Southsea, Halfway houses or Landport, Milton, Somers Town, Kingston, Stamshaw, and Buckland, all within Portsea guild. See PORTSMOUTH.

PORTSEATON, a vil. in the par. of Tranent, co. Haddington, Scotland, 2 miles N.E. of Prestonpans, and 1 mile from the port of Cockenzie on the Frith of Forth. It is a small fishing village founded by the Seatons, who had a castle here, which was destroyed by the English army in 1544.

PORTSHOLME MEADOW, a level field adjoining the town of Huntingdon, co. Hunts, where the races are held. It is situated on the river Ouse, and once belonged to the Protector Cromwell.

PORTSKERRAY, a vil. in the par. of Reay, co. Sutherland, Scotland, 3 miles E. of Strathy. It is situated on a bay of the same name.

PORTSLADE, a par. in the hund. of Fishergate, rape of Lewis, co. Sussex, 3 miles N.E. of New Shoreham, its post town, and 5 S.E. of Steyning. It is a station on the Brighton and South Coast railway. The village, which is of considerable extent, is situated at the base of the southern slope of the South Downs. The parish is bounded on the S. by the English Channel, and intersected by the road from Brighton to Portsmouth. Copperas Gap, a portion of Portslade, is about 3 miles W. of Brighton, on the Brighton and Shoreham road, near the railway station. The population and property of Portslade has greatly increased of late years, owing to the formation of a canal and basin which is connected with the harbour of Shoreham. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the coal and general trade of Brighton and its vicinity. The appropriate tithes, belonging to the Archbishop of Canterbury, have been commuted for a rent-charge of £237 9*s.*, with a glebe of 11 acres, and the vicarial tithes for one of £142 14*s., with a glebe of 15½ acres. The living is a vic. with the cur. of St. Andrew's annexed, in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £171. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has an embattled tower, and was enlarged some period back. There is a National school. John Borrer, Esq., is lord of the manor.

PORTSMOUTH, a municipal and parliamentary borough, seaport, market, and garrison town in Portsdown hund., in the southern div. of the co. of Hants, 26 miles S.E. of Southampton, and 28 S. by E. of Winchester. The borough includes Portsmouth, Portsea, Landport, Southsea, and Kingston, all of which are situated on Portsea Island, between Portsmouth harbour on the W., and Langston harbour on the E. It lies in 50° 48′ N. lat., and 1° 6′ W. long., being 94 miles S.S.W. from London by the South-Western railway, and 70 by road. The Saxon name of the locality was Llongporth, but as early as the time of Henry I. it was known as Portesmuth. The Saxon chief, Porta, landed here in 501, and was defeated by King Arthur. Robert, Duke of Normandy, attacked the town in the reign of Henry I., when it had already assumed some importance as a naval station, which it never lost. The fleets of both Richard I. and Henry III. met here before their invasion of France, and it became subsequently the chief station for the royal navies, being scarcely second in importance to Southampton. The return of members to parliament dates from the reign of Edward I. In 1337 the French burnt the town, but it was soon rebuilt and fortified. Edward IV. added two towers at the mouth of the harbour, with a strong chain, which could be fastened between them, to prevent the passage of ships. This was used as recently as 1779, when there was some danger of the harbour being attacked by the French and Spanish fleet. The fortifications were continued by Richard III., by Henry VII., who founded the dockyard, and by Henry VIII., who completed them, and built Southsea, Calshot, and other castles along the S. coast. They have been since extended to meet modern requirements, and additional forts are in course of erection on Portsdown Hill and at Spithead, commanding the harbour. The celebrated ship, the Henri Grace à Dieu, was built in the dockyards, by Henry VIII.; and the Mary Rose, another of his fleet, was capsized in 1546, while preparing, with other ships, to attack the French fleet, under Viscount Annebaut. The Duke of Buckingham was stabbed at the "Spotted Dog," now

11, High-street, when on his way to the succour of Rochelle. During the civil wars Portsmouth was occupied by Waller for the parliament. Charles II. met his bride, Catharine of Braganza, and was married here in 1662. The fortifications and dockyards have been inspected by nearly every sovereign since the time of Charles, and by the sovereigns of the Holy Alliance in 1814. Napoleon embarked here on his way to St. Helena. The principal naval events connected with Portsmouth have been Anson's voyage round the world, 1740; Byng's execution, 1756; the loss of the Royal George, 1782; Howe's return, after his victory, June 1, 1794, when George III. visited the fleet; Lord St. Vincent's return after his victory, 1799; Nelson's last embarkation, Sept. 14, 1805; and Lord Exmouth's expedition to Algiers, 1816. Portsea Island, on which Portsmouth stands, is separated from the main land by a narrow inlet at its northern extremity. Portsmouth harbour, which is on the W. side of it, is entered by a narrow creek at the S., defended by Southsea Castle and Monckton Fort. The narrowest part is at Portsmouth Point, a little higher, where the width is only 220 yards. The basin of the harbour measures about 3 miles each way, and contains three channels, leading to Porchester, Fareham, and the N. of Portsea Island. The depth is sufficient to accommodate men-of-war of all sizes, even at low tide. The jurisdiction of the town of Portsmouth extends from Southampton Water over the harbour, and also Langston harbour; Spithead, St. Helen's Bay, in the Isle of Wight, as far E. as Emsworth channel.—The town of Portsmouth is quadrangular in shape, covering about 1,100 acres. Most of the streets are narrow and mean looking, but well paved and lighted, and supplied with water from Portsdown Hill. The best houses and the chief public buildings are in the High-street.—Portsea, which lies on the N. of Portsmouth, has been built within the last century on what was then called Portsmouth Common. Its present name was given to it by Act of Parliament in 1792, and the town was built entirely in consequence of the requirements of the navy during the American war. The ground on which it stands was granted by Queen Ethelfleda to Winchester College. Most of the streets are narrow, and badly built. Both towns are enclosed by fortifications, consisting of bastioned ramparts, surrounded by a deep moat, which is crossed by drawbridges. The ramparts, which are 1½ mile in circumference, are planted with rows of elms, and form a pleasant walk. The Saluting Battery looks over Spithead and the Isle of Wight. The ordinary garrison consists of three infantry regiments, but a thorough defence of the fortifications would require 20,000 men. The royal dockyard at Portsea covers a space of 120 acres, and is the largest in the kingdom. The frontage on the harbour is nearly three quarters of a mile. It contains stores of every requisite for the navy, factories for sails, ropes, and blocks, copper-sheathing foundry, anchor forge, wood and iron mills, joiners' shops, &c. A basin of 33,000 square yards, with four dry docks; a double dock for frigates; six building slips; a basin for steamers, 3,000 feet in length, opened by the Queen in 1848; a graving-dock, and one or two other smaller ones. The dockyard also includes the Royal Naval College, and school of architecture, a chapel, guard and pay-houses, offices of the ordnance and engineers' services, an observatory, and the residences of the admiral and port admiral. Beyond the Common Hard, where timber is kept for seasoning, is the gun-wharf and ordnance stores, and an armoury for small arms used in the navy. The troops in garrison are distributed between the Anglesea, the Clarence, the Cambridge, and the Colewort barracks, used for troops of the line, and those in Broad-street for the artillery. There are also two barracks, the Tipner and Hilsea at Landport, for artillery, near the Lion Gate, Portsea. The principal public buildings in Portsmouth are the lieutenant-governor's house in High-street, the townhall, the county court, the convict prison near the dockyard, the new market-house, the custom-house at Point, the United Service club, the theatre, and the bridge over the Camber.—The chief imports of Portsmouth are coal from the N. of England, cattle and sheep from the Isle of Wight and the W., corn, &c., from Ireland, eggs from France, and timber from the Baltic, and wine. The trade of the town is chiefly connected with the government establishments. Very many hands are employed in the manufacture of naval and military outfits. There are also several large breweries.—The borough of Portsmouth is divided into six wards—St. Thomas's, St. George's, St. John's, All Saints', St. Paul's, and St. Mary's. The first charter of incorporation was granted by Henry I. The local government is now administered by a mayor, 14 aldermen, 42 councillors, a recorder, coroner, &c., with the style of the "mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of the borough of Portsmouth." Two members are returned by the borough to the House of Commons. The excise district, of which Portsmouth is the head, includes Portsmouth, Petersfield, Hambledon, Farnham, Guildford, Godalming, Haslemere, Midhurst, Petworth, Chichester, Havant, Fareham, Gosport, and Tichfield. The new County Court district includes the superior registries of Fareham, Portsea, Havant, and Alverstoke. Portsmouth is the headquarters of the S.W. military district. Courts of quarter sessions and daily petty sessions are held in the sessions-room over the gaol.—Portsmouth is comprised within the deanery of Droxford, and the archdeac. and dioc. of Winchester. The livings are as follows:—St. Thomas à Becket is a vic.* val. £555, in the patron. of Winchester College. The church was built by the Prior of Southwick in 1210, but only a small part of the original building remains. Its shape is cruciform, 110 feet in length, with a cupola and lantern 120 feet high, at the W. end, on the top of which is a gilt ship, 6 feet long, for a vane. It contains the tomb of the Duke of Buckingham, who was assassinated here in the reign of Charles I.; and in the registry there is the entry of the marriage of Charles II. in 1662. St. Mary's is a cur., val. £30, in the patron. of the vicar. The chapel of the Domus Dei hospital, founded by Bishop de Rupibus in the reign of John, which stands on the Grand Parade, has been converted into a garrison chapel. St. Mary's, the parish church of Portsea, is a vic.,* val. £696, in the patron. of Winchester College. The tower dates from the time of Edward III., but the remainder was rebuilt in 1847. The burial-ground covers 8 acres, and many of the crew of the Royal George are interred there. St. George's, val. £45, All Saints, val. £310, and Trinity, val. £300, are perpet. curs.,* in the patron. of the vicar. St. John's is a perpet. cur.,* val. £300, in the patron. of the pewholders. There is also a chapel in the dockyard. St. James's Landport, St. John's, St. Paul's, St. Luke's, St. Jude's, All Saints, St. Bartholomew's and St. James's, Milton, are perpet. curs., varying in val. from £45 to £650. Other places of worship are numerous. The Roman Catholics have one chapel, the Baptists eight, the Independents four, the Wesleyans three, and the Bible Christians, Unifarians, and Jews, one each. There is a free grammar school at Portsmouth, founded by Dr. Smith in 1732, the Benefit Society's at Portsea, a seamen's orphan school, nine National schools, one Roman Catholic, one at the workhouse, and more than 300 other schools of various descriptions, in addition to numerous Sunday-schools.—There is a theatre in Portsmouth, and rooms at Southsea, known as the King's Rooms. The old cemetery and the Portsmouth and Gosport hospital are at Mile End, Landport. There are at Portsea a dispensary, an eye and ear infirmary, a female penitentiary, and a poorhouse. The Bank of England has a branch at Portsmouth; and there is also a savings-bank in the town.—The only celebrated man who was a native of Portsmouth was Jonas Hanway, founder of the marine society. The newspapers published are the Portsmouth Times, the Hampshire Telegraph, South Hants Gazette, and the Hampshire Guardian. The duchy of Portsmouth was conferred by Charles II. on Louise de Querouaille, one of his mistresses, in 1673, but the title expired with her. The earldom was granted to John Wallop in 1743, and the same family still holds it, though under the name of Fellowes, which was assumed by the late earl in 1853. The London, Brighton, and South Coast, the Mid-Sussex, the London and South-Western, and the London direct railways, all run into Portsmouth, using the same station at Landport as their terminus. Steamers ply from Portsmouth to the Isle of Wight, Plymouth, Southampton, London, and Dublin. Portsmouth is connected with Gosport by a floating steam-bridge, which crosses the harbour every half hour.—Markets are held on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. A fair, called the Free Mart, was formerly held from the 10th to the 24th July, in the High-street, but it was abolished in 1848. A regatta is held in July or August.

PORTSOY, a quoad sacra par., seaport, and burgh of barony in the par. of Fordyce, co. Banff, Scotland, 5 miles W. of Banff, and 171 N. of Edinburgh. It is a station on the Banffshire branch of the Great North of Scotland railway. It is a considerable trading and fishing village, situate at the bottom of a bay of the same name, on the Moray Frith. It became a burgh of barony under the Grants, and is governed by a bailie. Part of the inhabitants are engaged in the coasting-trade, and there is a manufacture of thread. The village, which has a population of near 2,000, contains a post-office, two commercial branch banks, and several schools. There are quarries of a species of jasper, called Portsoy marble, also of a flesh-coloured granite, which contains a scarce variety of felspar, equal in brilliancy to the Labrador spar. Asbestos, rock cork, soapstone, puddingstone, graphite, lime crystals, and many other minerals are found. The par. is in the presb. of Fordyce and synod of Aberdeen. The minister has a stipend of £120. There is a school, supported by the Society for the Propagation of Christian Knowledge, also two other schools, one of which is partially endowed. A regular weekly market is held here.

PORTSTEWART, a post-office vil. in the par. of Agherton, within the libs. of Coleraine, co. Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles N.N.W. of Coleraine. It is a station on the Belfast and Northern Counties railway. It is situated at the mouth of the river Bann, and is a bathing-place and fishing station. The parish church is situated in the village.

PORTSWOOD AND HIGHFIELD, a tythg. in the par. of South Stoneham, borough of Southampton, co. Hants, 2 miles N.E. of Southampton, its post town, and of which it is a suburb. It is a station on the London and South-Western railway. It is an increasing and flourishing district. There are many villas in the neighbourhood. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £270, in the patron. of the bishop. Christ Church has a spired tower containing two bells. It was erected in 1847, at an outlay of £4,000, and a further sum of £1,000 was expended in 1856 upon its enlargement. There is a National school for both sexes, erected in 1848, which has since been enlarged. The Independents have a place of worship at Highfield, and the Baptists one at Bevois Hill.

PORTUMNA, a small post and market town in the par. of Lickmolassey, bar. of Longford, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 39 miles S.E. of Galway, and 112 from Dublin. It is situated near the head of Lough Derg, on the river Shannon. Not many years ago this spot was an assemblage of wretched dwellings, but is now an improving place, containing a church, a Roman Catholic chapel, a brewery, mills, &c. The corn trade is briskly carried on. There is a chief police station, and petty sessions are held at intervals. There are still some remains of a friary, which was founded here in the 15th century, also ruins of De Burgh's Castle, in which a council was held by the Earl of Strafford in 1634. The Marquis of Clanricarde is the proprietor of the town through the Mortimer and De Burgh families, who held it by grant of Henry III. Saturday is market day. Fairs are held on 15th February, 6th May, 15th August, 17th October, and 15th November.

PORTURLIN, a creek on the coast of co. Mayo, Ireland, near Benwee Head. It is a coastguard station.

PORTWOOD, a ward in the par. of Stockport, hund. of Macclesfield and borough of Stockport, co. Chester, 2 miles from Stockport. It is situated on the river Mersey. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately.

PORTYARROCK, a creek between Wigtown and Luce bays, co. Wigtown, Scotland, near Barrow Head.

POSBURY, a chplry. in the par. and hund. of Crediton, co. Devon, 9 miles N.W. of Exeter, and 2 from Crediton. It is situated in a hollow near the river Creedy. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter. The church is dedicated to St. Luke.

POSENHALL, an ext. par. place in the borough of Wenlock, co. Salop, 1 mile S.W. of Broseley.

POSLINGFORD, a par. in the hund. of Risbridge, co. Suffolk, 2 miles N.E. of Clare, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Stour, and is wholly agricultural. In the neighbourhood are the ruins known as Chipley Abbey, now converted into a farm dwelling. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £100. The church was reseated in 1852, and has been lately restored. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum. S. Wear, Esq., is lord of the manor.

POSTCOMBE, a chplry. in the par. and hund. of Lewknor, co. Oxford, 2 miles S.E. of Tetsworth.

POSTERN, a tnshp. in the par. of Duffield, hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 4 miles N. of Derby. It is joined with Shottle to form a township.

POSTLING, a par. in the hund. of Hayne, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 4 miles N.W. of Hythe, its post town, and 2 N.W. of Westenhanger railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated at the foot of the chalk hills, near the South-Eastern railway, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £246, in the patron of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to SS. Mary and Rhadegund, is an ancient edifice with a spired tower containing three bells. It is situated in a low and swampy spot, and has recently undergone extensive repairs. The living was once held by the father of Basil Kennet, author of "Roman Antiquities," who was born here in 1674. The East Kent hounds meet at Postling Lees. William Deedes, Esq., of Saltwood, is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

POSTLIP, a hmlt. in the par. of Winchcomb, co. Gloucester, 2 miles S.W. of Winchcomb. It is situated under Cleeve Down, in the Cotswolds.

POSTON, LOWER, a tnshp. in the par. of Munslow, co. Salop, 5 miles N.E. of Ludlow.

POSTWICK, a par. in the hund. of Blofield, co. Norfolk, 4 miles S.E. of Norwich, its post town, and 2 W. of the Brundall railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated in a dale near the river Yare, or Wensum, which is navigable from Norwich to Yarmouth. The parish, which is wholly agricultural, is intersected by the road to Norwich, and by the line of the Yarmouth railway. There is a considerable extent of marsh. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £475, and the glebe comprises 46 acres. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £561. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a lofty square tower. The register dates from 1570. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum. The Earl of Rosebery is lord of the manor, and, with the exception of the detached marshes near Yarmouth, is owner of all the soil.

POTCOTE, a hmlt. in the pars. of Green's Norton and Cold Higham, co. Northampton, 3 miles N.W. of Towcester.

POTHERIDGE, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Black Torrington, co. Devon, 2 miles W. of Hatherleigh. It is situated in the vale of the river Torridge, which rises near the Tamar's head. General Monk was born here in 1608.

POTING-WITH-WINSERINGS, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Melbecks, par. of Grinton, North Riding co. York, 2 miles E. of Muker. It is situated on the river Etherow.

POTSGROVE, a par. in the hund. of Manshead, co. Bedford, 3 miles S.E. of Woburn, its post town. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* annexed to that of Battlesden, in the dioc. of Ely. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a square embattled tower. On the windows are paintings of great antiquity. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum.

POTT, a tnshp. in the par. of Masham, North Riding co. York, 2 miles S.W. of Masham. It is in conjunction with Ilton.

POTTER-BROMPTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Ganton, wap. of Dickering, East Riding co. York, 1 mile W. of Ganton, and 12 miles N. of Great Driffield.

POTTERCHA, a hmlt. in the bar. of Upper Kells, co. Meath, Ireland, 15 miles N.W. of Trim.

POTTER-HANWORTH, a par. in the second div. of Langoe wap., parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 6 miles S.E. of Lincoln, its post town. It is a small village, and wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Booths. Land was assigned in lieu of tithes, on certain conditions, under an Enclosure Act in 1774. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £665, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, was partly rebuilt at the expense of the late Rev. H. A. Arson. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. Eleven boys of this parish have the privilege of a free education at Christ's Hospital Blue-coat school. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship.

POTTER-HEIGHAM. See HEIGHAM-POTTER, co. Norfolk.

POTTERIES, THE, a populous district in the N.W. div. of Staffordshire, comprising the greater part of the par. of Stoke-upon-Trent, with the towns of Burslem, Hanley, Hilton, Lane End, Longport, Tunstal, Trent Vale, Wellington, and several adjoining hmlts. It extends about 8 miles in length by 2 wide, with a population of 70,000, and was created a borough by the Reform Bill. [See STOKE-UPON-TRENT.] The district abounds with coal, potters' clay, and iron ore, and is one vast factory, being covered with the furnaces, ovens, and chimneys of the banks or pottery works, which were originated by Mr. Wedgwood, whose seat was at Etruria.

POTTERIES, THE, a hmlt. in the par. of Prescot, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 8 miles E. of Liverpool. So named from the potteries established here.

POTTERIES, THE, a hmlt. in the par. of Cranham, co. Gloucester, 2 miles N.E. of Painswick.

POTTERNE AND CANNINGS, a hund. in the co. of Wilts, containing the town of Devizes, and the pars. of Bishop's Canning, Bromham, Highway, West Lavington, Potterne, and Rowde, comprising an area of 26,700 acres, exclusive of Devizes.

POTTERNE, a par. in the above hund., co. Wilts, 2 miles S.W. of Devizes, its post town, and 21 N. of Salisbury. The village, which is large, but chiefly agricultural, is situated near Potterne Butts. It consists of one principal street, extending N. and S. along the turnpike road from Devizes to Market Lavington and Sarum, and is about 2 miles distant from the Kennet and Avon canal. The land is undulating, diversified with plantations and well-cultivated fields. The par. includes the tythgs. of Marston and Worton. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £879, and the vicarial for £726; and there are about 23 acres of glebe. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £601, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient cruciform structure, with a square embattled and pinnacled tower containing six bells. The church has a carved pulpit, and the interior was thoroughly restored in 1833. There is also a chapel-of-ease for the hamlets of Worton and Marston. The register dates from 1557. The parochial charities produce about £44 per annum. There is an endowed National school. There are two places of worship for the Wesleyans, and one for the Baptists. In the neighbourhood is an ancient building, designated the "Porch," recently the "White Horse Inn," but originally the mansion of some noble family. The Bishop of Salisbury is lord of the manor.

POTTER-NEWTON, a tnshp. in the par., borough, and town of Leeds, West Riding co. York, 2½ miles N.W. of Leeds. The tnshp. which is extensive, contains the suburbs of New Leeds, and part of Buslingthorp, and the hmlts. of Gipton, Harehills, and Squire Pastures.

POTTER'S-BAR, a hmlt. in the pars. of Monken-Hadley and South Mimms, co. Middlesex, 4 miles N.E. of Barnet, and 3 N. by E. of Chipping-Barnet. It is a station on the Great Northern railway. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of London, val. £170, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. John, was built at the expense of G. Byng, Esq.

POTTER'S HILL, a vil. in the tnshp. and par. of Ecclesfield, wap. of Strafforth, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N. of Sheffield.

POTTER'S-MARSTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Barwell, hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester.

POTTERSPURY, a par. in the hund. of Cleley, co. Northampton, 3 miles N.W. of Stony-Stratford, its post town, and 5½ S.E. of Towcester. The village, which is extensive, is situated near Salcey Forest, on the Roman way Watling Street, and on the Grand Junction canal. There is an extensive pottery work, giving employment to a large number of hands. There is a cemetery with chapel at the S.E. end of the village; its site, including the chapel, was the gift of the Duke of Grafton. The par. comprises the hmlt. of Yardley-Gobion, and part of Old Stratford. The hundred derives its name from Cleley Well, which is in this parish. The Poor-law Union of Potterspury comprises 15 parishes or townships, 11 of which are in the county of Northampton, and 4 in that of Buckingham. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £116. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has a square tower, containing a clock and five bells. The church has lately been restored. There is a National school, which is endowed with an annuity of £30 by the Duke of Grafton for the free education of 50 boys. The Independents have a place of worship. The Duke of Grafton is lord of the manor and impropriator of the great tithes.

POTTER'S RIVULET, a stream of the co. of Wicklow, Ireland, rises in the bar. of Arklow, and falls into Brittas Bay near Mizen Head.

POTTER'S-STREET, a hmlt. in the hund. of Waltham, co. Essex, 3 miles N. by E. of Epping, and 10 S.W. of Chelmsford. It is situated on the border of Epping Forest.

POTTERTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Barwick-in-Elmett, West Riding co. York, 8 miles N.E. of Leeds, and 7 W. by S. of Tadcaster.

POTTO, a tnshp. in the par. of Whorlton, W. div. of Langbaurgh lib., North Riding co. York, 5 miles S.W. of Stokesley. It is a station on the North Yorkshire and Cleveland branch of the North-Eastern railway. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. There is a school founded in 1736 by Isabella Harker.

POTTON, a par., post and market town, in the hund. of Biggleswade, co. Bedford, 4 miles N.E. of Biggleswade, 11½ E. of Bedford, and 2½ E. of its station on the Great Northern railway. It is situated at the foot of a hill on the old road from Oxford to Cambridge, and was given to the Burgoynes by John of Gaunt. The town was nearly consumed by fire in 1783. It chiefly consists of one long street, and is abundantly supplied with water from numerous rivulets. The market-house is crowned with a turret containing a remarkable clock, the gift of Lord Torrington, with four dials, the time being indicated by the hour hand only. The manufacture of straw-plait is carried on to a considerable extent, and lace was formerly made here, but has recently declined. There is a steam corn and flour mill. The Cambridgeshire hounds meet at Potton-Wood. The road from St. Ives, which joins the great North road at Biggleswade, passes through the parish. The land, which is principally arable, is tolerably fertile. The soil of one half of the parish is clay, and of the other a light loam mixed with sand. Sandstone is quarried, chiefly for building fence walls. In the neighbourhood are several mansions. About 300 acres of land and a money payment were assigned in lieu of tithes under an Enclosure Act in 1814. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £516, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a square embattled tower containing five bells. The church is situated on rising ground not far from the town. The parochial charities produce about £103 per annum. There are free schools for both sexes; also Sunday-schools. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Baptists have each a place of worship. William H. Whitbread, Esq., is lord of the manor. Market day is on Saturday, chiefly for corn and straw-plait. Fairs for horses and cattle are held on the third Tuesday in January (old style), for sheep on the last Tuesday in April, for fruit on the first Tuesday in July, and for cattle on the Tuesday next prior to the 29th October (old style), also a statute fair for the hiring of servants on the Monday three weeks prior to Old Michaelmas.

POTTON, GREAT and LITTLE, islands in the pars. of Great and Little Wakering, co. Essex, 5 miles E. of Rochford. They are situated near Wallasea Island.

